THE ENDOWED SCHOOLS COMMISSION.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE.

FIRST PUBLIC SITTING—WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2, 1879; 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

April 2, 1879.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—THE EARL OF ROSS, Chairman; LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; LORD JUSTICE FITZGERON; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., B.P.; WILLIAM WILSON, Esq., M.P.; and ANDREW SEARLES HART, Esq., LL.D., with JAMES CREED MERRITT, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

REV. WILLIAM PRIDE MOORE, M.A., Head Master of the Royal School, Cavan, examined.

Rev. William
Pride Moore,
M.A.

1. CHAIRMAN.—What is the nature of the evidence which you wish to give in reference to the Cavan school?—I desire to mention that the salary which was promised to me and given by two patents under the Crown, has been reduced and no reason assigned for it, except latterly I have heard one of the reasons—namely, the reduction of the income of the estate. I mentioned to Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, that the income originally, when the estates were handed over to the Royal School Commissioners, was about £1,600 a year; and it has now, I hear, been reduced to half that sum. I have no means of knowing precisely to what extent it is reduced.

2. When were you appointed master of the school?—I was appointed in 1835, by patent from William IV., which was renewed under Queen Victoria. The patent gives the same emoluments that any of the masters have had before.

3. What was your income?—£500 a year to the master, and £100 to an assistant.

4. When was the amount altered?—£100 a year was taken from me almost immediately after my appointment; which was peculiarly cruel, because I had intended to go to the profession of the Bar, and had attended all my terms. I had been urged by the Commissioners of Education, to look for this situation; and it is the only instance in which the school has been given to a layman.

5. Did you take any steps in reference to your income?—I memorialised over and over again. The Government took an interest in the matter, and the Commissioners professed to say that, as soon as the income of the estate permitted it, my income would be restored.

6. It remained at £300?—It began at £350, and had been reduced to £200; and again at the last Commission another £100 a year was taken from me.

7. About 1857?—About that.

8. Has your school been reduced in size?—It never was a large school. It has been always very small, but was never reduced as low as some other schools. At one time Anagh was reduced to two boarders; but there was no reduction in the master's salary. Other schools also have been reduced from time to time. Cavan is particularly unfavourably placed for a school. The town is one of the smallest in Ireland, and there are scarcely any Protestant shopkeepers in it. As a proof that I have not neglected my duties there, I may mention that previous to the sitting of the Endowed Schools Commission, the inhabitants of Cavan sent a memorial to Lord Clarendon in reference to the school. [Memorial from the inhabitants of Cavan to Lord Clarendon. Vide Appendix No. 1.]

9. What is the class of education as compared with the other Royal schools?—The same precisely.

10. What are the charges?—They have been raised to forty-eight guineas for boarders, and for day boys from six to eight guineas.

11. Where do your boarders principally come from?—Some from Droghda, I have one from India. They come from different places.

12. But they principally come from a distance?—There are none from the county almost. There are very few resident gentry in the county, and their sons are all sent to England. One of my pupils was one of those officers that met their death in South Africa—Major Smith, of the Artillery. Two of my pupils are resident magistrates in Ireland. Another is now, perhaps, the most eminent preacher in London. I mention these as illustrations that the education received from us is the same as in the other Royal schools and the principal schools in England.

13. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERON.—When was the present building of the Cavan school completed?—In 1815.

14. Have there been any additions made to it since?—Nothing, but repairs.

15. What condition of repair is it in now?—In perfect repair. I keep it every year in whatever repair is required at no moderate a figure as possible—from £50 to £30 a year.

16. Are the repairs carried out under the direction of the Commissioners of Christ-church?—I give them a requisition for what is required, with a specification, and when the work is performed I have to certify that it is done in a workmanlike manner.

17. Have you ever found any difficulty in getting repairs you wanted done through the Board?—Never.

18. Do they send anyone to see how the school is kept up?—They appointed a visitor, the Rev. Mr. Gray, F.R.C.D., to go round all the Royal schools about two years ago.

19. Was any report made by him that was afterwards sent to you?—There was a report made by him; but it was not sent to me.

20. Do you know the result?—The result was some trifling repairs with regard to some of the premises.

21. Before that, when last had there been any visitation?—The visitation in connexion with the Endowed Schools Commission.

22. In 1857?—Yes, about that time.

23. Since that visit was there any visitation of your school except that of Mr. Gray?—None.

24. Are you in the habit of sending, or are you required to send, an annual report of the condition of your school to the Commissioners?—Every year a report was sent to their secretary, the late Dr. Kyle.

25. What was the nature of these reports?—Merely as to the date of the appointment of masters, the salaries paid, the number of pupils, the books they studied, the scale of proficiency, and the hours of work in the school.

Rev. William
Pirie Moore,
M.A.

26. Was any action taken upon any report of yours?—None that I know of.

27. What number of pupils are in the school at present?—Fourteen boarders, and about the same number of day boys.

28. What is the largest number you have had during the time you have been there?—I think altogether both day boys and boarders have never exceeded thirty-three or thirty-four.

29. What number of boarders have you accommodation for?—There is accommodation for perhaps forty or fifty.

30. Thus the school as a boarding establishment is not more than one-third full?—Not more.

31. What number would you have accommodation for as day boys?—As far as the buildings are concerned about fifty.

32. Is there any supply of day boys from the neighbourhood?—None whatever.

33. More than the number you have?—I have at school nearly every boy I could have. As an illustration, I may mention that a Presbyterian clergyman in the neighbourhood about four or five years ago thought he could increase his small income by establishing a school, and taking pupils at terms a little lower than mine. He had some eight or ten pupils; but he could not even keep up that number, and he was obliged to discontinue his school. With regard to free boys, the Commissioners always required that I should mention the number of them in my return. I have done everything in my power to get free boys. I have written to the local clergy, asking if they knew any boy in their parish of promising ability that could be benefited by classical education, and fitted for any of the professions, as I would be happy to receive him as a free boy. Nevertheless, I never had more than two or three free boys. I made every effort to get them; but they are not in the country.

34. Are there you speak of exclusively day boys?—Exclusively day boys; that is one of the things I complain of. In other schools twenty guineas a year have been allowed for boys on the foundation. I think that is the meaning of the expression "free"—that the master should be paid and the boy free.

35. What are the denominations of the scholars attending your school?—All Protestants: Church of Ireland, Methodists or Presbyterians. I have had Roman Catholics at different times, but not lately; because there was a magnificent Roman Catholic school established at Cavan at a cost, as I have heard, of £50,000 a few years ago.

36. Is that in your neighbourhood?—Within a mile of the town.

37. Do you happen to know approximately the numbers attending that school?—The numbers are very large; I could not tell exactly.

38. Is it a boarding school as well as a day school?—A boarding school. They come from a distance and pay high prices.

39. Is it a flourishing institution?—It is a flourishing institution. It is a very handsome establishment, manned at a very high figure, and is well attended by boys, some of whom, I believe, come from a very great distance.

40. Is it a primary school or a classical school?—It is a classical school. In fact, there will be a great number of candidates from it for the intermediate examinations.

41. With regard to your boarders, tell us approximately where they come from?—There is one of them from the South of India; another from England from a friend of mine there; and some from Dublin (two or three from Rathfriland); and some from the neighbourhood.

42. These from the neighbourhood come for local reasons. Have the rest come to the school through your own connexion?—From no local connexion, but from a wish to be under my care and charge.

43. Your present charge is forty-eight guineas?—Forty-eight guineas a year; but that is the outside charge. I take boys considerably less; for instance, I have taken boys from the Clergy Sons' School. They used to give only thirty; they now give forty guineas.

44. Are you under any restrictions in reference to the amount of the charges?—They are entirely fixed by myself, but I am required to give an account to the Board of Education, which I have always done. I take it for granted if I charged anything exorbitant they would call me over the coals for it.

45. Have they interfered in any way in reference to your charges?—They made a representation about two or three years ago—it was sent to all the schools, and was not specially intended for me—that the outside charge for day boys should be ten guineas.

46. And your charge over been ten guineas?—Well, ten guineas has been the highest charge, but most of them are six-guinea pupils. I wished to get in as many as I could from the neighbourhood, even of the farming class.

47. Have you ever been supplied by the Commissioners with any information as to the property belonging to the school?—Never.

48. Have you asked or made inquiry as to what the property is?—Never; I would not be allowed to interfere.

49. Do you know where the estate is situated?—Yes, close to the town of Cavan. I know the property perfectly. There are five or six townlands remaining out of the original endowment. I need not tell you that a great deal of the property there, as in other places, has been flicked away.

50. Do you know the extent of the townlands remaining?—Six hundred Irish acres in round numbers.

51. Do you know anything about the letting or how the estate is situated?—The estate is favourably situated close to the county town. Some of it comes up close to the town.

52. Can you give us any information as to how it is let or managed, or whether the full income is derived from it? I only ask you as a resident in the neighbourhood?—As a resident in the neighbourhood, I think it is a very much undervalued.

53. Who has the actual management of the property?—The agent, Mr. Deane, is the sole person. He resides at Ballymacnall, about fifteen miles from Cavan.

54. Have you ever known any control to be exercised by the Commissioners over this property in the way of personal visitation or inspection by themselves or anyone coming from them, except the agent?—I am not aware that they ever inspected the property. I never heard of any person deputed to do so, though living on the spot myself.

55. Are there any exhibitions or money prizes available for the scholars of Cavan school?—There are scholarships in the University. Five of £25 a year.

56. That is to say one in each year of £25, tenable for five years?—Yes.

57. Are those full?—No; there is one full at present and one only just vacated.

58. Within the last ten years how many of these exhibitions have been held?—About four I think.

59. Have all been full at the same time?—No, never.

60. What is the largest number of exhibitions you ever had filled from the school at the same time?—Three I think was the highest. The course of examination for the exhibition is very severe, and very few boys are competent to take it, having regard to the small number I have, and the very small charges to most of the boys, besides the great anxiety of their parents to have them forced into college or business as fast as they possibly can. To the very last examination three of my pupils went up, and they went up two years younger than they should have done, but I could not keep them any longer—their parents would not leave them.

61. Did none of them obtain it?—None. The oldest boy among them was only seventeen. Most of the candidates from the other schools were thirteen and twenty. Twenty is the highest age at which they are allowed to compete.

62. Have there been boys entering Trinity College from Owen School every year or approximately every year?—No.

63. What number entered last year?—Three.

64. And the year before?—Only one, a free boy. Many of the boys are not intended to go to College at all.

65. Are any of your boys going to the Queen's College?—I do not know of any of my boys going to the Queen's College.

66. Have you had any scholars that have gone to either Oxford or Cambridge?—Two I recollect at the present moment. One, a Mr. Baddell, who, some years ago got a scholarship or fellowship at Cambridge, and the other, Mr. Fleming, entered Oxford.

67. I observe in 1857 the Commissioners reported as follows:—

"There is a great fault once made out for visitation being at once left by the Commissioners of Education, to ascertain how far the present unsatisfactory state of the school arises from misconduct or neglect on the part of the Master, and that the Commissioners should again take into consideration the facts disclosed on the last visitation."

Do I understand after that report there was no inquiry or visitation of any kind held?—No inquiry or visitation.

68. Nor any communication from the Commissioners in reference to the management of the school?—None whatever, because there was no man. I may observe that the Endowed Schools Commissioners came to Owen and held an open Court. They gave public notice that they would receive information. I did not know what the exact nature of the investigation would be, so I thought it advisable to try to get a scholar to attend; he did attend and the examination was continued the whole day. They examined everyone they could to obtain if they could prove false evidence against me of anything or anything of that sort, because they thought, naturally perhaps, that owing to the very small attendance there must be neglect on the part of the master. However, every individual from the highest to the lowest, from the bishop to the humbler in the neighbourhood, have testified to my untiring energy in the school, so much so, that my scholar said, "There is no use in my retaining here any longer—I can go away." They could find no cause of complaint in any one way.

69. You said you had some scholars whom you had been taking at a reduced amount and maintained some of the Clergy Sons' Society—these I understand to be the sons of clergymen or gentlemen, whose education is being assisted for the want of means of their parents?—Exactly.

70. Do you consider if funds were available for "maintaining, supporting, and providing for scholars," you would have applicants for such scholarships?—I have not the least doubt of it; at the present moment, in consequence of not having those I have lost some of the most promising boys I had, boys that next year or the year following might have gone in for exhibitions, for instance—two years ago these were advertised in the newspapers from Mr. Rice, the Warden of St. Columba's College, a free scholarship of £20 a year, open for competition not necessarily for pupils in that school but from any school. One of my boys, named Shilly, obtained first prize, and has gone there. In another case an exhibition at Fyfe College was obtained by a pupil of mine, and last year his brother obtained a similar exhibition in Duncannon. All these would, of course, have remained with me.

71. What amount of annual assistance attracted them away?—£20 or £25 a year.

72. Are you aware that the Commissioners of Clarendon have power to award the money that is now allotted for the vacant exhibitions to assist boys to be maintained at your school?—I am quite aware of that.

73. Did you ever make the suggestion that this should be done?—They made the suggestion to me. When giving school exhibitions to Arragh and Duncannon they wrote me to say they would give certain exhibitions, ten exhibitions to Duncannon and Arragh, and five or six to Owen. They wrote similar letters to Dr. Bingham and Mr. Morgan, requesting us to meet and suggest a plan, the nature of the examination, and so forth, under which these free scholarships should be given. I went to Arragh, as the place we all fixed upon, to meet together on the subject. They were given to Arragh and Duncannon, and the Commissioners wrote to me to say that on further consideration the funds would not permit, though they had requested me to publish in the town—which I did—that the exhibitions would be given.

74. Why should the want of funds be made the excuse where there is £125 made available for exhibitions in Trinity College not taken up?—I could not answer that.

75. Did you ever inquire?—I did; the simple answer was that the funds did not permit.

76. In these any school exhibition or any advantage of free or assisted education at Owen at present available?—Not to the amount of one penny.

77. What date was the meeting at Arragh?—About two and a half or three years ago.

78. Are you in a position to say what number of school exhibitions there would be a demand for in Owen?—I could not possibly answer that question, because many might come from a distance who would have no means otherwise; for instance, there was a lady a short time ago who asked me to take two of her sons. She was from a distant county, but when I mentioned that £40 a year each was the charge for board, it was quite beyond her reach. If what she could give were supplemented by a local income they would have been sent to me.

79. How many of the fourteen at present do not pay the full amount?—Eight at least.

80. To these eight, at all events, it would be an object besides an honour to get an exhibition?—A very good object. I have frequently had boys that I did, clothed, and educated, and never get a penny for.

81. At your own expense?—At my own expense.

82. Was it owing to their position, and from motives of charity, that you made reductions?—Entirely.

83. Do you make the difference on account of age or of abilities, or simply on account of their means?—On account of the inability of the parents to pay. Since the disestablishment of the Church some of the clergies are unable to pay for the school education of their sons.

84. You endeavour to ascertain, to the best of your power, what the parents are able to pay, and then you vary the fees?—Yes. A parent will write to me to know what my terms are. I mention an endowment. Sometimes I never get an answer again; sometimes I do, saying the payment is beyond their reach. I then request to know what they could afford to pay, and ultimately I agree to what they can pay as far as I can.

85. Do you consider it an obligation on you to take free pupils if you can get them? Have the Commissioners named any fixed number whom you should endeavour to educate?—No; the Commissioners always ask a return of the free boys, it is a mere question, but it has been decided that the Masters are not bound to take free boys. However, I have never refused, on the contrary, I have always contrived them. As I have informed your lordship before, I have applied to many of the local clergy of the parishes in which Owen is situated and others around. As an illustration, a boy from a distant parish, living nearly four miles away, under these very circumstances attended my school. He was the son of a common labourer. I educated him free, and I advanced money out of my own pocket to put him into the University, where he took a scholarship and exhibition. He was afterwards ordained and settled in England.

86. There is an important distinction in reference to free scholars; it is one thing to say that the Commissioners could send a boy to your school, and direct you to maintain and educate him free, but another, which the Act of Parliament appears to contemplate, to "support, maintain, and provide free scholars" at the expense of the Commissioners?—I maintain that is what the original endowment of the school was for.

87. Assuming that the Commissioners were not at liberty to call on you to maintain a boy, but that they were at liberty to "support, maintain, and provide" free scholars in your school, paying you certain stipendation for, about how much would clear the expense of maintaining a free boarder at Cavan School?—I would feel myself under such circumstances bound to act in the most liberal possible way. I would take a boy even for £40, as sufficient to pay the expenses of the boy; it would not be any profit in my pocket, but I would be no loser.

88. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What salary was given you by the Commissioners when you were first appointed in 1833?—£300 a year, and £100 a year to the assistant. £300 Irish is stated in my original patent, and also in the new one. I had to pay £50 grates for the patent. If I required a second, third, or fourth assistant, I paid out of my own pocket. I have two at the present moment, one of whom is paid out of my own pocket, so that I get nothing at all.

89. How long did you receive that salary of £300 a year?—I did not receive it once. Immediately after, as you will see from the first patent there, there was a difference between the Crown and the then bishop with regard to the appointment, and when I was appointed by the Crown they said I must get Holy Orders.

90. LORD JAMES FLEMING.—What was the object of the second patent?—On the death of William IV. a new patent had to be taken out from Queen Victoria. There was £150 a year taken from me four months after I was appointed, the peculiar cruelty of which was, under the circumstances, that there was no superannuation allowance provided, and the then Lord Lieutenant and Chief Secretary arranged that I should give £200 a year to my predecessor during his life, and £50 a year afterwards to his widow if she survived him; so I was bound to give £200 a year to my predecessor, and I got nothing whatever.

91. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—When the £100 a year was deducted from your salary was the original £400 a year still paid to your assistant?—Yes.

92. Was there any extra assistant appointed when the £100 was deducted?—There was no other appointed; there was only one master and an assistant master.

93. When was your salary reduced to £100?—At the time of the last Endowed Schools Commission, because I had not a larger school—because I could not do so.

94. Do they, at the present moment, spend only £100 a year for the head master, and £100 a year for the assistant?—£100 a year to me and £100 to my assistant, less income tax.

95. LORD JAMES FLEMING.—And whatever the expenses of the repairs are?—The expenses of the repairs, of course.

96. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Did you ever spend money of your own on the repairs?—I have often done a great many things I never required the Commissioners to attend to at all.

97. Did you ever apply for repairs that were not granted?—Never. In fact, it was the wish of the Commissioners to keep the house in proper repair.

98. Was Mr. Gray's visit confined merely to an inspection of the buildings?—Not at all. He went through the building, of course, and the land about it; but he examined the state of efficiency of the boys—every class carefully and thoroughly.

99. Are the scholars that you have got at present of Irish birth?—Most of them are.

100. Is the boy you mentioned as coming from India of Irish birth?—No; he was born in India. His father was Irish, and his mother was a Scotch lady.

101. Are the rest of your pupils all Irish?—All Irish.

102. What is the population of the town of Cavan?—About 3,500.

103. Do you know the proportion of Catholics to Protestants?—I suppose the whole Protestant population in the town would not be more than 400 or 500.

104. How many Protestants are there in a position to send boys to a Protestant Royal School?—I suppose not ten families in the town. There are very good schools in the town which were established by Lord Farnham.

105. MR. O'BRAUGHEN.—I see your school was founded by James I.—Charles I.

106. It was founded as a free school in the county of Cavan for the education of the youth in learning and religion?—Yes. Sir John Davis, the Attorney-General of James I., who came over to Cavan, and was appointed to divide properties among the people, alienated a certain quantity of ground to provide education for the sons of the English and Scotch settlers established there, and I believe the sole object was Protestant instruction; however, we have acted more liberally since.

107. I see the net income of your school is now stated in a return to the House of Commons to be £284 a year?—I was not aware of that.

108. Do you believe that sum could be largely increased by proper management?—I may mention to you that in the year 1803 my predecessor was appointed under the Earl of Hardwicke—the income of the school then was £900 or £800 a year; all the lands were then managed by the local schoolmasters of the different institutions. In 1812 or 1813, when the Board was appointed, the school lands were let at about £1,200 a year. I have the rental of that time, showing these figures. The property about there has largely increased in value, and we might naturally expect the school property would also have increased.

109. You believe by proper management the income can be increased?—I am critically of that opinion.

110. I suppose there is a very large Presbyterian population in Cavan?—Quite the reverse. I suppose the Presbyterians in the town of Cavan do not average twenty.

111. In the county there is a considerable Presbyterian element, I suppose?—No, there are a great many Presbyterians here and there, but not nearly so many as of the Church of Ireland. I do not know any county in the same position, it is all cut up to small holdings.

112. You speak of a Roman Catholic school being built in your neighbourhood. When was that built?—I think it was finished about three years ago.

113. Have you any idea how many pupils there are in it?—I could not tell you with accuracy. I suppose fully 100, but they pay, so far as I understand, a much higher income to the school than my boys pay.

114. Are you aware they have no endowment?—Perfectly well aware they have no endowment from the Government.

115. Are you aware whether the sum expended on the buildings was principally from voluntary contributions?—I should say entirely.

116. Have you any idea whether there are any Roman Catholic endowments in the county for middle class educational purposes?—That I do not know. My friend the Roman Catholic Bishop would tell me at once if I were to ask him, but I do not know of my personal knowledge.

117. What provision is made for religious service—have you morning and evening prayers?—Always.

and we read the Scriptures and examine for a quarter of an hour every day in the week. They get certain portions of the Scripture off by heart, repeat them to my under-classes, and to me as a repetition every Sabbath Day, with the Church Catechism and the Articles of the Church of Ireland.

118. For day boys what provision is made for religious instruction—are those daily prayers?—They come from their own homes, and it is presumed they have their morning prayers already.

119. On Sundays have you service, or do you go to the Parish Church?—We go to the Parish Church.

120. Socially, what class of boys are yours. Would you say they are of the upper class of society, or of the middle class?—Both. The only gentry in the neighbourhood are the clergy and some medical gentlemen, and any of the shopkeepers who choose send their sons there.

121. Out of your boys what is the average proportion who go to a university?—Not 50 per cent. They are chiefly destined for the Banks, and Civil Service, and things of that kind, and business; in fact, I have to use permission sometimes to get parents to send a boy to a university.

122. Do many of your boys leave before completing their course and go to English schools?—No; I mentioned two cases.

123. I see in the course of instruction in the report of 1857 for your school, that it contains Greek, Latin, French, English, Algebra, English History, and Geography, besides religious subjects?—And Hebrew. Some of my boys have been very successful in Hebrew. I take a great interest in that, and teach it myself.

124. Do all your boys follow the same course?—These for business do not require to study Greek and Hebrew, but, as a rule, all my boys learn French.

125. You have got two objects, to prepare some boys for a university, and to prepare a larger number for a mercantile and Civil Service career?—Exactly; perhaps the great attraction at the present time may be considered the latter; it is so facile to get into them.

126. Do all your boys learn Greek?—No, not all. The boys not intended for university pursuits do not learn Greek; sometimes, for instance, boys going in for the soldiers' examination do not require Greek.

127. What provision is made for teaching French in your school?—Both myself and my assistants almost universally teach it. We cannot get the advantage in a country-place of a French master, but we have taught it successfully. For instance, one of my pupils a day boy, obtained a first French honor at the university examination.

128. Do all the boys intended for commercial pursuits learn French?—I endeavour to get them all to learn it.

129. Is there any provision for teaching German in your school?—None.

130. Is there any provision for teaching the elements of mechanics or natural philosophy?—Mechanics are taught, but heat and electricity we do not teach, except in some few instances—as a rule they are not taught.

131. Have any of your boys within the last two or three years obtained scholarships in the university?—I could not say they have.

132. There is no permanent provision for the teaching of the rudiments of natural science in your school?—No.

133. What English history do you use?—Generally Smith's History, and for junior classes Arthur's is a very good one.

134. How far do you go in teaching algebra?—As far as quadratic equations and the binomial theorem. I have always good science masters.

135. Do you profess to have a course in English literature?—Yes, Smith's books in English literature, and French's.

136. Do all the boys learn these?—Not all—those sent to the university and Civil Service.

137. The boys for commercial purposes do not as a rule study English literature in your school?—Except in composition and good writing.

138. What is your present staff for teaching?—Myself, and the classical master, and the science master.

139. Is your science master a graduate of a university?—No; he is in the university, but not a graduate.

140. How many hours a day does your science master teach?—From half-past seven in the morning until nine, and from ten to three, with the interruption of an hour for recreation, which comes from one to two.

141. Is he actually teaching during these hours?—Actually teaching.

142. What is the average time per day given to each boy in mathematics?—About an hour and a half each day.

143. What mode have you of testing the knowledge the boys have attained in science?—We have examinations sometimes, about once a month.

144. Is there any test of the proficiency of the boys by examinations taken from outside?—No, we have no opportunity of giving them. I have sometimes myself had some of the local clergy, who have been qualified men.

145. That was at your solicitation?—It was.

146. What test is there by examinations taken from outside, an English, in French, or in German?—None.

147. Is there any regular examination held by outside examiners?—No.

148. At what age do boys who intend to enter the Civil Service leave the school?—Sometimes at fifteen.

149. Do you find it impossible to give an adequate commercial education at so early an age?—Quite so.

150. I understand you had nearly every boy of the Protestant faith, of the middle class, that you could have in Cavan?—I think so.

151. And in the neighbourhood?—Both as boarders and day scholars.

152. And you have but twenty-eight in this year?—About that.

153. Have you ever had any Roman Catholic masters in the school under you in Cavan?—I had one or two a very long time ago.

154. What did they teach?—Science.

155. Have you ever had any Roman Catholic boarders?—Yes, I have.

156. How long ago?—A very long time ago. The Roman Catholic doctor in the neighbourhood sent his two sons to me, but the moment the first Roman Catholic school was opened they were, of course, removed. I never had more than probably two Catholic boarders.

157. Your school is a thoroughly Protestant school as a matter of fact?—It is.

158. Mr. Wilson.—Do you know why the Presbyterian minister established the school at Cavan?—I should think his reason was to improve his income. I can suggest no other.

159. He had not found any fault with your school?—Not that I am aware of. Quite the reverse. His own son was a pupil of mine, and he expressed himself as most grateful for his treatment.

160. You stated that at the time he abandoned that school he had about ten boys?—I said probably eight or ten boys.

161. Do you know what happened these boys when he gave up the school?—Some of them, who had been with me before, came to me. His charge originally was about four guineas.

162. You state that you were the first layman that ever was head master of any of these schools. Why was it necessary that you should get Holy Orders?—The Government required it.

163. Was it the Government or the Board required it?—The Government and not the Board. The Board had nothing to do with my appointment. The person who appointed me was the late Earl of Derby when he was Chief Secretary here.

164. You succeeded your father in the school?—Yes.

April 3, 1859.
Rev. William
Pres. Miers,
114.

April 1, 1877.

Mr. William Fisher Moore,
Esq.

145. And it was to your father you paid the £500 a year?—Yes. The Government made that arrangement with me. My father previously had the first school in Ireland, at Donnybrook Castle.

146. You stated a great deal of the property of the Crown School had been sliced away?—I said that in the general impression. I believe there were 1,500 acres originally given by King Charles and only 600 remain.

147. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Has there been any reduction in the area as long as you know it?—Not so long as I know it.

148. Mr. WILSON (handing copy of advertisement, vide Appendix No. 2, to witness).—Have you ever seen that advertisement before?—Yes. That is a public advertisement of a farm of the school lands offered for public sale.

149. Are the lands in the neighbourhood let at a much higher figure than the school lands?—Very much higher.

150. It is stated in this advertisement that fourteen acres are let at £12 2s. 10d. You say lands in the neighbourhood on other properties are let much higher?—The average rent is from £2 to £3 an acre in the neighbourhood.

151. On these lands are you aware whether there is any tenant-right or not?—I don't think there is any tenant-right in the neighbourhood.

152. Is there any tenant-right on this property?—I think not; I never heard of it before.

153. And what were they selling?—They were selling the interest in the yearly tenancy, and the chance of being allowed to remain in the holding on such easy terms.

154. How much did it sell for?—I am not in a position to answer the question. I have heard more than £300 was given for it.

155. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Are you in a position to tell us from your knowledge, as a resident, about what proportion the rent of the school lands has to the adjoining holdings?—You may form an idea of the average rate by comparing the income from 600 Irish acres, about £560 a year, that is something under £1 an acre; similar land, held under ordinary landlord's lets at about £2 an acre, or from 24s. to £3 for some land. Some might be mountain land.

156. Do you know the land that is advertised here?—Yes.

157. About how much by the acre does a similar farm with a similar house lying in the neighbourhood?—From 24s. to £2 an acre. You will see an advertisement in that very paper of land to be let, nine miles from Carran, at nearly double that. There were thirty acres of the school lands given in exchange for ten acres of ground, on which the present Royal school was built. These thirty acres went into the hands of other proprietors, and they are now at an average of from £2 to £3, they are close to Carrigrohane, and about the same quality. If it is within the power of your Commission, I would wish to suggest as to all these different estates, managed by a different class of people in different parts of the country, that it would be vastly for the benefit of the public schools, and the country generally, if all were revivified and sold, and the money given to the Government and paid by the Government to the masters.

158. Mr. WILSON.—You attended before the Commission in 1837?—Yes. I was examined nearly from morning to night before them.

159. Dr. HART.—After a Visitation in 1846, were not the salaries re-adjusted and portion of your salary taken from you and given to your assistant?—I think that when they took £100 from me originally I did not exactly know how it was, that they gave me the money altogether to pay the master out of it, and afterwards they allocated it direct to the master.

160. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—It appears from your own evidence to the former Commission that your salary was reduced to £100 before you were examined. Was anything whatever done with reference to your school or your position, after 1837, that you can tell us?—I don't think anything was done. I was under the impression up to this moment that it was in 1837 the reduction of my salary took place—but it is quite clear that it did take place in 1846. There must have been some mistake in that report. It was never sent to me for correction. It might have been taken down incorrectly.

161. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—At question 7883 of the former report you were asked, "How much do you receive at the present moment," and you said "£100 a year, liable to deductions and taxes of various descriptions"—so clearly your income was reduced to £100 a year before your examination by the Commissioners?—All I know is, I was deprived of my income a long time ago.

162. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You say not twenty per cent. of the boys go to the university. Would there be a larger field of competition by eighty per cent. if there were school exhibitions than you have at present for the college exhibitions?—I should think so—decidedly. The school exhibitions would be a very great attraction. There are many schools in England having exhibitions of this nature, and parents have gone over from Ireland to reside in towns in England for the mere sake of the exhibitions.

163. How are your boys supplied with the ordinary school requisites?—The books are got by the boys themselves. As to school requisites in the way of maps I get nothing at all, in fact, except out of my own pocket and the pockets of the boys.

164. Is there any supply of school requisites to Crown School given by the Commissioners?—None whatever.

165. Dr. HART.—What salary does each of your assistants receive after all deductions?—The assistant who is appointed by me and approved of by the Government, and paid by the Board receives £100 a year from the Board, but I make some trivial charge to him for board and washing—that is a private arrangement.

166. As to the second master?—I pay him £50 a year, and give him board and everything else. His post is worth about £100 a year.

167. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Each of the places is worth about £100 a year?—They are more. The first is worth about £150 a year. My masters are seldom with us less than seven years.

168. Mr. O'BRIEN.—How much do you deduct from your first assistant master for the passage you speak of?—Only £25. He gets £72 a year clear of every possible expense.

169. What do you deduct that for?—For his living. He lives with me altogether.

170. Are you aware that he is entitled to his lodging in your school-house free?—I am not aware. I suppose he is.

171. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Pay the £38 a year which you deduct he gets all his keep?—Everything—fire, light, every comfort.

172. Mr. O'BRIEN.—You have got the scrip of land yourself?—Oh, in fact, in my only income. The rent goes in payment to the masters.

173. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Is your assistant master a University man?—Yes, and they always have been of Trinity College.

174. Then your second-class master?—My second master is a University man also—of Trinity College—the science master.

175. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Are both under-graduates?—They are both undergraduates at present.

176. Do they contemplate taking their degrees?—Yes.

177. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Will they be able to go in for their degrees as well as teaching in your school?—Yes. It is very difficult to get men now.

178. CHAIRMAN.—Was any provision made to facilitate Roman Catholics coming to your school? At what hour have you religious instruction?—Every morning.

122. Is there any conscience class?—Oh, no. Every boy who comes in is present at whatever instruction is given—both religious and secular. If there was a Roman Catholic, and he objected to the reading of the Scriptures, I would excuse him; but I never had more than two, or perhaps three, Roman Catholic pupils. Two of those their father wished to attend morning and evening prayers at my house.

200. But you have no arrangement by which there could be religious instruction, either at the beginning or at the end, so that they could absent themselves?—We have generally religious instruction at the beginning. But there is no likelihood of Roman Catholics attending for they have a private school—one of the finest in Ireland now.

201. Can you form any idea as to the relative proportions in your neighbourhood of Protestants and Catholics—not of the total population, but of the class and social position competent for classical education?—There are no Roman Catholics gentry in the neighbourhood.

202. But the middle class?—The farmers and shopkeepers are the only ones. Of these the majority are Roman Catholics.

203. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Did the Commissioners state to you in writing that they were unable to spend any money on the school on account of the funds?—With regard to the small allowance for pupils on the foundation, that was the reason suggested for not giving it.

204. Have you got that in writing?—I don't think I have; but it is a fact.

205. After making the proposition to you as to the use of school exhibitions, and requesting you to suggest to them how these exhibitions should be instituted they subsequently wrote and said they had not funds?—That their funds would not permit them.

206. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You don't happen to know there is a sum of £5,000 odd that has accumulated in Government stock out of the O'Connell estate?—I have no means of knowing. I never heard the fact.

207. If you can find the letter telling you there was no fund, we would be glad if you sent it to the secretary?—If I can find it. I was so distressed about it I gave up all thought about it after talking the matter over with Dr. Ringwood and Mr. Morgan. I can at all events give you the published list of the exhibitions that were proposed. I published them in the local paper, and gave information of them amongst the townspeople.

208. MR. O'BRIEN.—It is returned here to the Commissioners that you have got accommodation for 80 day pupils and 60 boarders. I think 60 boarders would be rather much. I could accommodate 50 very easily.

209. You were educating when your return was made in 1878, one pupil gratuitously?—Yes. Three was the most I ever had.

210. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—If eligible free pupils had offered themselves would you have raised any question as to their right of coming in provided it was not put to you as a matter of right?—The only thing I would require is that they should dress respectably.

211. LORD R. CROMWELL.—Are your buildings in good order?—In very good order. We would be the better of a good ball-alley. There is nothing of the kind at present. I built one at my own expense some years ago.

212. Are the buildings situated in the middle of the town?—No, just outside the town. About half a quarter of a mile from the centre of the town.

213. Is there a play ground attached to the school?—Yes.

214. Is that included in the nine acres?—Yes; that includes the whole of my ground. I may be allowed to add that I trust the Commissioners may, as far as in their power impress on the Government the justice of resuming what has been taken from me—as I believe unlawfully—and also with regard to a retiring allowance to masters arrived at a certain age. Formerly the Government finding the necessity of a retiring allowance, and not having the means of giving it as such, used to present the masters for the time being to valuable Government livings. But that is all at an end. So the suggestion might come very well from the Commissioners to make some provision for us. As to myself I may mention one circumstance Lord Linger strongly recommended me, and the Government offered me a valuable living some years ago. I went to see it, but there was no congregation, and being always fond of active life I could not consent to accept it.

215. Would you retire from the mastership of O'Connell School if there was a retiring allowance?—I should decidedly, on a suitable allowance, but at present if I were to retire, I have nothing to retire upon, and I could not retire to beggary.

REV. WILLIAM STEELE, D.D., Head Master of the Royal School, Portora, Enniskillen, examined.

REV. WILLIAM STEELE, con.

216. CHAIRMAN.—How long is it since your appointment?—Since 1857. I previously was Head Master at another Royal School, Raphoe, in 1858, and I was transferred by the Lord Lieutenant from one to the other.

217. What is your income, has it been the same all through, or has there been any change?—No change, £500 a year for myself personally.

218. And what else, you have something for assistant masters?—£200 a year, but for the first few years it was £350. I had a claim for £500 from the very beginning in consequence of the number of boys I had, and the Commissioners recognised that claim, and paid me what they had omitted for the years that were behind, so that I had from the time I was appointed to the school until now £100 for myself, and £500 for assistant masters. £150 a year was contingent upon the school reaching a certain number of boys, but my school had exceeded the required number from the beginning.

219. Do you know anything about the management and value of the estate?—I know nothing whatever about the estate. I don't know personally whether it is well or badly managed, I hardly know where it is located, because not having any duty whatever connected with the management of the land I never made any particular inquiry about it. I don't know, even approximately, the value of the estate. But I desire to state another subject that I do know a good deal of, namely, the portion of the estate which is in my own hands. When I was appointed to the Portora School, I had not ever read the Act of Parliament under which the Commissioners were acting, and I was not aware that it was one of their duties and not my duty to keep the school premises and the place generally in repair. I never inquired into the subject. I thought when I got the place in tolerable repair I was to keep it in repair.

220. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Was that at Raphoe?—No at Portora. I received this letter from the then Head Master of Raphoe, Dr. Goulbourn:—

"Dear Sir,—Be good enough to inform me as to the Commissioners of Education allow any thing for heating and lighting the school-room and class-rooms, and so on, they allow me liberally for all repairs."

I wrote back I had never asked them for anything and had never got it. This was ten and a half years after I had been appointed. I made an attempt to be paid for what I had expended on it. I was told by the Commissioners that after a good deal of discussion of the matter they had come to the conclusion that they could not give a large sum of money. I raised no more

April 2, 1878.
 Rev. William
 Smith, Esq.

I referred to their architect, Mr. McCurdy, who perfectly well knew how the place was kept, and what he wanted I would accept. They said they could not give it without vouchers or dates and so on, and if there was any further application it must be accompanied by vouchers. I never kept a particular account of the repairs but I gathered together all my receipts and I handed them to an accountant to prepare an account. He gave me a schedule which I sent forward with an application to the Board, saying I had conformed to what they had told me. I got a letter from the Secretary to say that after careful examination in his office it appeared I had expended £1,420 odd for repairs during a considerable period, and it would be brought before the Commissioners. It was brought before the Commissioners, who refused to repay it because it was unauthorized expenditure; that is, I had expended the money without previously receiving authority.

221. During the two years you were at Baptoe, were there any repairs executed on the buildings there?—Continuously, but by myself.

222. During that time did you become aware that the Commissioners were charged with any duty of repairing?—I did not at all know.

223. Did they during that time take any step to ascertain whether the buildings were or were not in repair, or do anything to them at all?—Nothing.

224. How soon after you came to Enniskillen did you become aware that the Commissioners had any duty to repair the buildings?—Ten or a half years.

225. During that time were considerable repairs done by you?—Very considerable repairs.

226. During that earlier period did the Commissioners take any steps to ascertain whether the buildings were in repair or not?—None that I am aware of. Their architect, Mr. McCurdy, frequently visited the place, not to see whether it was in repair, but with respect to certain additions, and new buildings, and things of that kind that from time to time were executed by the Commissioners or myself.

227. During the ten and a half years, then, was there a visitation of the place by an architect?—Oh, an architect very frequently came down under those circumstances. I had applied perhaps to the Commissioners to build me a school-room, or to make additions to the premises, which was the first thing I did. Certain things I asked they granted, and of course the architect came down both to draw the plans for this, and occasionally to see that this new building was carried out by the contractor to his satisfaction.

228. Was any report as to the state of repair sent up by you from year to year?—Never.

229. As far as you know, had the Commissioners any means of knowing whether the buildings were in repair or not?—The only way they could know was by asking their architect when he went there on other business, whether the place was in repair.

230. By whom were the ordinary repairs, such as painting, whitewashing, and cleaning, done?—By me as far as because necessary, and a great deal more, new floors and things of that sort.

231. Dr. HART.—You never got any compensation for the repairs done at Baptoe?—No. I applied for a great deal of additional work to be done at Baptoe, not for repairs, but additional accommodation for the boys; and when I applied for this, the answer was that they had not funds for it. I said I would confide my endowment if they lent the money for the building. They lent me £600, and my salary was stopped. I agreed to that, but only £300 was actually repaid when I was transferred to Enniskillen, and they never asked me to pay the other £300.

232. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—The provisions of the Act of Parliament are that the money in certain order shall be applied towards building, enlarging, repairing or furnishing the school-houses, together with grounds, houses, and other apparatus necessary for the proper keeping of the school. Was any step taken by the Commissioners during the ten and a half years you mention to ascertain whether any repairs or furniture was necessary?—None whatever. I paid the money myself, and sent up the vouchers.

233. Dr. HART.—They asked you for the previous vouchers, and I sent them to them. They never paid me the amount of those vouchers, but they have been very liberal to me in the way of repairs for the last eleven and a half years, and have never refused anything I applied for.

234. CHAIRMAN.—What was the nature of the works you carried out from your own pocket, were they in the nature of repairs or enlargements?—I have done both. Every description of repairs was executed by me at my own cost during those ten and a half years. And during the same period I did other things, such as building a row of stables, building additions to the school, building here and there, bringing in hot water pipes to heat the house, and things of that sort, and a great deal of building of one kind or the other.

235. The number of school-rooms is now returned as very much greater than it was during the former Commission, is that entirely due to you?—Oh, no; the Commissioners did the greater part of all that would appear as an increase to the school accommodation.

236. But the Commissioners never inquired what you were doing, enlarging or building during those ten and a half years?—They never inquired of me.

237. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—As far as you know, if instead of repairing you had been allowing the place to go to ruin, were there any means by which they could discover that fact?—As far as I know, I might have utterly neglected the place, and let the slates be off, and the Board would not have known it.

238. Lord R. CRENSHAW.—When you applied for repairs did the Board at once act on your application or make any investigation?—Always since I began to apply to them they acted very promptly.

239. Suppose you sent in a list of repairs, would the Board send down their own agent to examine, or would they take your statement?—They never sent anyone down either to see that those repairs were such as their architect would approve of, nor did they send anyone down to take up the work. They executed the repairs on my application.

240. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—How is it ascertained that the repairs have been done or are value for the money?—It is on my certificate the money is always paid. It is an amount of trust in my knowledge as well as integrity of which I did not approve. I often felt I was wasting work that I was not a judge of.

241. Is there any skilled examination?—No; everything is done on my authority.

242. Ordered on your authority and paid for on your certificate?—Yes, I am in rapport with the builder there that the Commissioners have employed, and at the end of the half-year when the boys have gone away I send for him. We go over the place, and he makes out a list of things I indicate to him, and an estimate is made of its cost. This I send up with a letter to the secretary, begging him to lay the matter before the Board. I think I was always indebted for a prompt reply and a granting of the request to the secretary himself. In a few instances he has replied:—"Before I answer your application, I shall show the estimate to Mr. McCurdy to see if the prices are correct."

243. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Then he did not appear to submit them to the Board?—He did not appear to me to submit them to the Board, for which I was much obliged, as I got the answer quicker.

244. Lord R. CRENSHAW.—Were the prices ever altered?—Dr. Kyle has remonstrated against prices, but as far as I know they never were changed; sometimes they were objected to, but ultimately the men at Enniskillen triumphed.

245. Dr. HARR.—Although the architect was consulted he never went down!—In connection with repairs he never visited Porters.

246. CHAIRMAN.—And the repairs were done entirely by this one builder?—Entirely.

247. You did not seek for any other contractor or get tenders?—Never.

248. Was there any step taken to ascertain if the measurement was correct?—Never.

249. Did you employ any surveyor to measure the number of square feet or anything of that sort?—I never assumed that myself, but I have a very trustworthy man to look after these things. He was always with the builder when the measurements were given for these things, and I have perfect confidence in them both.

250. LEON J. JEFFES FERGUSON.—Was the report of the secretary on this matter in 1865 ever communicated to you?—I don't think I ever saw a report of his; he used only to give me their answers by letter.

251. This is a minute of 1866 upon your claim "The architect was directed to examine the details and to report thereon." As I understand, the architect never made any personal examination as to your claim for ten and a half years?—He never to my knowledge at all made the least examination into the way in which the repairs were executed at any time. I would like to explain my real position with regard to these repairs. Originally I made an application to the Board about 1866 or 1867 to be refunded a large portion of any expenditure, not supposing extension of the building, improvements of the building and repairs. I had them all in one but I subsequently separated those two because I saw that they stood upon a totally different foundation. As to the claim for buildings I acknowledge it is an appeal, in a great measure, of supererogation, because I expended that money not only without authority but a great deal afterwards, even knowing that they had given me a warning, and when I did expend that money, I acknowledge I had not the slightest intention of ever making them for one penny.

252. You drew a distinction between enlarging and improving expenditure as contrasted with ordinary repair that should be done by somebody?—Precisely, and these were totally distinct accounts.

253. Dr. HARR.—Was there £1,667 for repairs?—I never could ascertain. But I know the amount that they ascended, by examining my vouchers, I never did claim as a matter of supererogation.

254. You made an application for money spent on repairs, distinct from improvements?—I did.

255. LEON J. JEFFES FERGUSON.—During the time you were spending money in the belief—I have no doubt a right belief—that you were improving the place, did the Commissioners ever send any one to see your alterations?—No one.

256. Are you at liberty to make any alterations you like in the place as long as you are master?—I would be precisely at liberty to do so but I always thought I ought not.

257. During the time you have been master of Porters School have you been at liberty to tear down if you liked?—Certainly I have, and I have done it.

258. Dr. HARR.—Even to pull down the house and build a new one?—Possibly I might have pulled down the whole thing only it would have interrupted the school. I have been precisely at liberty to do what I liked with the school.

259. CHAIRMAN.—In the way of altering, repairing, and in fact treating the fabric as if it was your own?—Certainly; the Board may have some secret way of knowing these things.

260. LEON J. JEFFES FERGUSON.—From the time of your first going there did you not send reports?—I sent reports of the number of boys in the school, the number of masters, the salary of each, and the subjects taught in the school, and nothing else.

261. Do you now send any report as to the actual condition of the buildings?—I never did send such a report, and I am not asked for it. I report nothing with reference to the state of the premises, except when I want something done, and even then I only ask for the thing to be done. I don't say how other things are.

262. Do you get any school furniture from the Commissioners?—I furnished the whole school myself, but many things have been made me, during the last few years, seek to get money that I had a fair claim for, that I was very careless about long ago. I found that the school desks and the furniture actually required by the boys in Arragh and other schools had been paid for by the Board; all mine had been paid for by myself. And within the last few years I sent up a statement of the number of desks and the accounts that I had paid, and my receipts, with a memorial or letter to the Board, and they very promptly gave me the money.

263. But until four years ago did you get any assistance from the Commissioners towards the furnishing of your school-house?—No, I never did. They never even made inquiry whether any was wanted until lately.

264. Can you tell us approximately during what period were you furnishing this school-house at your own expense, without making any application to the Commissioners?—I furnished it from the date of my appointment until 1873.

265. For fifteen years you furnished the school-house at your own expense, believing you were bound to do so, and they never gave any information on the subject?—Yes; for that number of years I was furnishing the school-room at my own expense. I am doing the same now, if it was required, in small matters, but I was paid for all the desks in the school.

266. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—When you were appointed first to Raphoe and then to Enniskillen, by what authority was your appointment notified?—My appointment to Raphoe was notified to me by the then Chief Secretary, I think Mr. HOSKINS, and it was notified to me directly by a letter from Lord Cardale when I was appointed to Enniskillen.

267. When you were appointed did you receive any circular or letter from the Commissioners or their secretary, telling you what the duties and the rights of your office were?—None whatever.

268. Mr. McCurdy paid you visits in Enniskillen for the purpose of inspecting structural additions to the place?—Exactly so.

269. Did he ever look for the purpose of seeing whether the old building was in repair or dilapidated?—Not as far as I am aware.

270. Did he ever call your attention to any dilapidations which existed?—Never. On the contrary, he used to compliment me on the state I had it in.

271. Were any of those repairs executed by you objected to by the Commissioners when they discovered them?—No.

272. Did they send Mr. McCurdy or any one else down to inspect the repairs made?—No.

273. Then all they did was to maintain a correspondence with you on the subject of those repairs?—That correspondence did not begin for ten years after I came there.

274. Have they paid you anything on foot of those repairs you undertook without knowing you were to be paid?—Nothing.

275. And the Commissioners have refused to repay it?—They have.

276. And they have not pretended to refuse it on the ground that the repairs were unnecessary?—Certainly not.

277. Did they send anyone to see whether the repairs were necessary?—They did not.

278. What has been their last answer on the subject?—That my application for those repairs to which I had referred so often had been considered at several meetings (there seemed to be some difference of opinion among the Board), and they adhered to their resolution not to pay for any unauthorized expenditure.

279. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Three years after you were appointed to Portora you claimed from the Commissioners the large sum of over £3,000 which you had expended on the school?—Yes.

280. What led you to claim that sum?—It was mostly this, having accomplished a great deal of additions and improvements, and in a certain sense you might call some of them repairs, for instance, making new floors. Having done that and finished for the time being what I thought was needful for the school, I made an attempt to get back some of my money.

281. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—And you did get back some?—I got £1,600. I always understood the £1,650 was given to me for the permanent work; and they left unpaid what was not permanent. They called them substantial and permanent.

282. Mr. O'BRIEN-SMITH.—Did they call the improvements in respect of which they did pay you permanent, substantial improvements?—These were the very terms.

283. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The Commissioners wrote to you after paying £1,600 of the large expenditure informing you that they would not be liable for unauthorized expenditures on the school?—They did.

284. Did not it occur to you on receipt of that letter that any money expended on the schools would be expended at your own risk?—I knew perfectly well it would be expended at my own risk then, but all necessary annual repairs I thought were outside the question altogether.

285. But did not it occur to you that the expenditure of any money, if unauthorized, would be at your own risk?—I knew any money I expended would be at my own risk. A large portion I knew was at my own risk, but I could not apply the word "risk" to expenditure, I believed my duty, and which was not done with the view of making for repayment.

286. Did not the Commissioners' letter in 1860 suggest to you, in fact, that they were liable and willing to maintain the school?—It never suggested the idea to me that they were liable for the repairs.

287. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—In 1860, and for years after, you believed that the liability to repairs fell on yourself?—Yes.

288. You sent the Commissioners, on the 13th January, 1860, a memorial asking for £3,912 8s. 2d. for works ordered and executed at that cost to yourself, and paying that repayment might be made. Their answer record?—

"A difference arose in consequence of the order of this outlay having been incurred by Mr. Steele wholly on his own responsibility, without the knowledge or approval of the Board. It appeared, however, that some of the unauthorized works, so made under Mr. Steele's direction, were of advantage to the establishment. Acting on the report of the architect, the Commissioners, on the 4th February, 1860, consented to pay to Mr. Steele a sum of £1,600 10s. 11d. as certified by the architect to be the value of permanent, substantial repairs, desisting to pay the balance, amounting to £2,305 13s. 3d. of the amount paid by Mr. Steele."

Do we understand you that the £1,666 9s. 11d. was for the permanent, substantial repairs pertaining of the character of improvements and the £2,305 13s. 3d. included the ordinary current repairs?—I never could tell what they meant by the difference.

289. The minute proceeds?—

"That the secretary be ordered to express to Mr. Steele the strong feeling of the Commissioners at the great expenditure made by him, and that any future such expenditure must fall wholly on himself, as the Commissioners would not pay for any works not sanctioned or ordered by the Board."

Then, for seven years after, you continued to do all the ordinary repairs of the building as a portion of what had been disallowed before?—I believed the money they gave had nothing to say to the repairs; and I was greatly strengthened by a remark Master Lyle made personally to myself, "I think that masters ought to get these houses in a good state of repair and they should be obliged to keep them so."

290. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—But did not that remark suggest to you that such was not the case?—It never did.

291. Mr. O'BRIEN-SMITH.—Did you include in the £1,600 applied for in 1860 the items for ordinary repairs?—I think I did.

292. Out of that they gave the £1,400 as being for permanent works?—For permanent works. Before you leave that £1,600 I ought to mention this, that they gave it to me upon the condition that I paid £400 add of it to their contractor for work that I never had ordered him to do, but which he did at his own risk ever and above his contract, knowing it would be a good and proper thing to do. In reality, it was the difference between the £400 and £1,600. I got

293. Dr. HART.—Did you understand you were liable for all the ordinary repairs, but had a sort of claim for the improvements?—Precisely.

294. But the direct contrary was the fact except authorized?—Yes; I am nearly certain that the repairs, the vouchers for which were acknowledged to come to £1,400 add, were repairs ascertained to have taken place after 1860. What happened was this: I said, "I have executed the repairs for so many years. I find now that the burden was on you. I ask you, therefore, to recomp me that money and I am perfectly content to take whatever you arbitrate says would be a fair sum." The answer was "We cannot give you a large sum of money without vouchers. If you make this application again let us have the vouchers." I sent them up and they were acknowledged for an expenditure of £1,600 add. I knew the secretary thought I would be paid every halfpenny of it. I had a memorandum from him stating "I fully expected to send you a cheque to-day." When my accountant's schedule was sent forward he separated the repairs in it; but then they adhered to their former decision.

295. CHAIRMAN.—What has the number of your boys been at various dates?—From 150 down to about 70. That is borders and day boys. I might have had a little more than 160. I never had fewer than 40. I have had 120 boarders as the largest number I obtained to. The smallest number I ever had was 34. I have at present 45.

296. What, in your opinion, was the cause of these large fluctuations?—My opinion is, that of all, that it is due to the great migration of each boy as he goes to such schools as Portora, to England. Why my school has risen again in numbers within the last two or three years I cannot tell. There was no good reason it should have fallen, and no good reason why it has recovered itself.

297. It is not to be ascribed to the difference in the state of prosperity of the country?—I am no judge of time, perhaps it is, but we have steadily improved for the last three years, and we had steadily gone down for about ten years. I can explain it first of all from that general cause I speak of, that would affect all schools of our sort, but further, there was an unhappy accident at Portora—two boys were drowned. I know that prevented numbers of boys coming that would have come.

298. Do you think that success in University distinctions has any effect?—None whatever. We were most successful with our boys in college, they gained the highest prizes at the very time the school was declining.

299. Do you know whether there was any fluctuation in the total number of boys of the classes that go to your school, or was there a diminution at other schools when yours increased?—I never knew or heard of five Royal schools fall at the same time, or anything like it.

300. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—There are 2000 of them that have never been full at all?—I don't know, but when I was Master of Raphoe, twice as many boys came to me as were ever in that school before.

301. With what appliances for instruction are you supplied by the Commissioners—books, or globes, or maps?—No appliances for general use. I have always supplied those myself, but the books required for individual boys are paid for by the boys.

302. Do you teach natural sciences, physics, or chemistry?—I never did, nor do I think it is desirable to teach them. When I first went to Portora, I consulted gentlemen in Trinity College that I thought were the very best judges on the subject, and they disapproved anything of the kind, even if it were not a matter of means at all, or impossible.

303. Have you any Roman Catholic pupils?—Oh, yes; we have always had some. I never had one as a boarder, and I wish particularly to call the attention of the Commissioners to that point. A few years ago an old schoolfellow of mine came from Bernado, bringing his son with him. He addressed to me, "I brought my son to place him at your school." I said, "But you know this is a Protestant school, and first of all, I am a Church clergyman, and my assistants are Protestants; all my boarders are, as a matter of fact, Protestants." "Yes," said he, "I know that." "Now," said I, "Do you wish your son to be brought up as a seve-fide Roman Catholic?" "Well," said he, "I do." I said, "I am willing to receive your son, and not only to receive him, but any kind of religious instruction that you disapprove of he will not get—he will not read Scripture or books that you disapprove of, for I hold that a parent has a right to fix the religion of his child. But there are other things for you to consider. All his schoolfellows will be Protestants, and there are a thousand little things that on head of a school can possibly influence in the social intercourse of boys, and with the other. Would it be bringing him up in a wholesome atmosphere, from your point of view, if he, a Roman Catholic, so brought up in the atmosphere of Portora School? Is it for you, not for me, to determine. If you decide, when I put the thing before you, to leave him, I shall perhaps not do my best for him, and, moreover, if you wish him to be instructed in religion, of course I cannot instruct him in the dogmas of your religion, but if you make any arrangement with the priest of the parish, I will give every facility. Remember, however, that all the boys of the school may very much trouble him, in fact, snub at him, and make it very uncomfortable for your boy. Think of that." The upshot of it was he did not leave him; he left him of some school in England. The same has happened in reference to two other boys.

304. CHAIRMAN.—Have you any arrangement for day boys so that they may come in when you have religious instruction?—We have the reading of Scripture and prayers morning and evening for the boarders, before the day boys come in, and then there is no religious instruction during school-hours.

305. LORD JUSTICE FLEMING.—Is there any supply of day boys from the neighbourhood at present?—We have thirty-three, and we never, at any period, had more than forty.

306. Is there in the neighbourhood a class from where more would be likely to come?—No; I think we have the largest number ever looked for in Portora.

307. CHAIRMAN.—Are your boys educated specially for college or mercantile pursuits?—I don't educate them specially for anything.

308. What proportion go to Trinity College?—Certainly not more than 10 per cent. Others go to the Civil Service, and many go into the army.

309. Then you varied the course to suit?—I vary it in a certain way. I laid the plan of Portora when I came to it in such a way that I said the boy who will go through this way, at different stages of his course, from the third, second, or first class, branch off to this, that, or the other thing, and I am perfectly confident there is no school in Ireland, or in England either, where boys are taught who can go direct to the University, or anything they like, more readily than from Portora. I have sent up nine to compete for Woolwich of whom seven got in.

310. Are they all taught Greek?—Not every boy in the school.

311. They are all taught Latin?—Not every boy in the school, but nearly every boy.

312. Are many learning Latin that are not learning Greek?—Not more than three or four. I do not think these subjects should ever be divorced.

313. What are the modern languages taught?—French and German.

314. What foreign assistants have you?—I have one foreigner. When the school was larger I had two—Germans by birth and nation. I have no doubt there are very good Frenchmen that teach, but I never met any. They are not good disciplinarians.

315. What do your assistants teach?—Classics, mathematics, English literature, French, and German, and of course I have a drawing master.

316. Is there a special mathematical and special classical assistant?—Yes. I have two classical assistants, and one of them teaches a good deal of English, and I have one who teaches nothing but English.

317. Do you instruct in mathematics principally yourself?—No, but I have done so. At present the classes I teach are the junior class.

318. What number of free pupils have you?—At present I have eleven. As regards the free pupils, perhaps I may explain my system. Any man in Keshifolia who wishes to send his son to Portora, and who considers his own means do not enable him to pay my terms, naturally comes to me, and says, "I would like to send my son to Portora, but cannot afford it." In nine cases out of ten I know whether he can or not, and I say "Very well, and you are up." In twenty-two years in Portora, and I never refused a boy yet whose father said "I am not able to pay your terms."

319. Is there any system of examination?—We have, I think, a very complete system in consequence of the examinations, for the school exhibitions, and also for what we call the English December prizes. These are examinations conducted every year, in which every subject is embraced—classics, mathematics, English literature, and ordinary English.

320. Mr. O'SHEA.—Do not the free boys compete for the school exhibitions?—They do, and they sometimes get them.

321. Dr. HARR.—You put no restrictions on the number of free boys?—No.

322. LORD JUSTICE FLEMING.—That is, you exercise your own discretion on the statement of the father?—Exactly, and always according to the charitable idea.

323. How many free boys have you?—From ten to twelve.

324. The others pay full fees I suppose?—The others all pay full; but I charge a third brother only forty guineas, with that exception, and two boys designated's sons—in fact, explain whom being boarders I could not possibly afford to take free—I take at what exactly prevents my being literally out of pocket.

325. What amount does that?—About forty guineas a year to clear the boy of cost to the master.

326. Has there ever been, in your experience, any application of money from the endowment towards clearing the expenses of a boy at the school, either boarder or day boy?—Never.

327. What number of exhibitions have you?—We have five of £25, and five of £15, school exhibitions.

328. There are ten exhibitions tenable from the school in Trinity College; five of £50 and five of £30 a year?—Exactly, and there is also a Bache exhibition tenable there. This consists of about £20, divided among three boys.

329. Have your exhibitions in Trinity College been always kept full?—I never lost but one, and I have gained about three extra ones.

330. And they are full at present?—The only time I lost one was last examination. One boy did badly, except in mathematics. A schoolmaster cannot exactly control the boys that go in. That ultimately must be determined by the boy and his parents.

331. During your time, what visitations have there been, if any, of the school by the Commissioners?—It never was visited but once, about three years ago.

332. Was that on the occasion of Mr. Gwy's visit?—Yes.

333. Was anything done by the Commissioners in consequence of the investigation that took place in 1867?—Nothing that I am aware of.

334. Are you supplied with any information by the Commissioners as to the state of the accounts of the school estate?—None; I never knew, and don't know the least thing about it.

335. Has there been any visit at any time to your school by any one to look after the fabric?—Never, that I knew.

336. Exception on occasions when the architect comes for new buildings?—I always understood that was merely to see if the new buildings were done according to contract.

337. Have you boys at school deserving of a larger number of exhibitions if there were available funds to establish them?—At present I would say we have not boys numerous enough to require a greater number of the sort of exhibitions we have. In fact, I don't think we have more than five boys that really deserve £25 a year, and five more, £15, but it is a question whether it would not be a better thing to increase the number and diminish the value.

338. Are the exhibitions in the school given as prizes for proficiency, or is regard had to candidates' means?—Entirely for proficiency. There is no restriction as to the means of the candidates.

339. Are you aware of any cases of boys in the neighbourhood to whom it would be an object to get an assisted education, and who have not got it?—Of the ten boys in our school who have those exhibitions, the greater number are boys to whom it is an object; but there are some holding them to whom it is not an object.

340. Are these exhibitions competed for by boys on entrance, or must they enter school and undertake to become scholars before applying for them?—For the junior exhibitions they need not be in the school more than to have their names down.

341. Then it is open to any boy of small means to put his name down to be examined, and, if able to get an exhibition, to take it?—Any boy on the books on the first day in September may apply to me to put his name down, and compete for the junior exhibitions of that year.

342. Have you, as a general rule, a class competing for them?—We have a splendid class; so much so, I suggested last September to the Board that they might give three instead of two, dividing the same sum of money. However, they did not do it.

343. Do the boys that compete for your exhibitions come from your neighbourhood, or are they from all over Ireland?—They come from different parts of the country. We have three or four from Enniskillen itself.

344. Are there any other schools of the same class as yours in the neighbourhood of Enniskillen belonging to different denominations?—We have got a most efficient model school in Enniskillen, and also a school of Christian Brothers. These are primary schools, but there is no provision for higher education except at Portora.

345. Is there a large proportion of Presbyterians in the school?—I don't know, for their fathers have made no point of particularity in the religious instruction. I know I have Presbyterians, and some have been sent with the express notification of the father that they should go with the other boys to Church.

346. All your boys attend Church?—All the boarders.

347. Has there been any falling off in the amount of success in Trinity College obtained by your boys having regard to the numbers?—We never had such success as three years ago. A greater number of prizes were gained in College in proportion to our numbers than at any other time.

348. Was that after the falling off had taken place?—Yes, I think it was in the year '73 or '74. The number of prizes gained by the pupils from Portora were equal to the best year we ever had.

349. What was the number of boys in the school at that time?—About seventy.

350. Since the number of your boys fell off has there been any diminution in the corresponding period in College in the number of prizes they gained?—Very little indeed, the teaching is the same and the change is the same.

351. Do you know of any boys in the neighbourhood of Enniskillen that are not attending your school, and that are of the classes that ought to go there?—Yes, I know some boys who were sent to other schools at my own particular advice. I have had the pleasure of particularly recommending Denham to residents near me. I don't think it desirable that boarders should come from the immediate neighbourhood. I think that most sensible fathers would send them to a little distance.

352. Is there any unprovided demand for school teaching in the neighbourhood?—I think they are abundantly supplied in Enniskillen.

353. Where do the middle and upper classes of Roman Catholics in the neighbourhood go to?—They come to me—every one.

354. Have you any idea how the proportion stands?—The Roman Catholics and Protestants in the town of Enniskillen and in the county of Fermanagh are about equal. The Roman Catholics are a little more than the Protestants. I am not at all sure that there are any Roman Catholics in the neighbourhood in the class of gentry. There is one, perhaps.

355. Then the neighbouring gentry are principally Protestants?—Altogether so.

356. CHAIRMAN.—And the shopkeepers?—There are some Roman Catholic shopkeepers; generally speaking they—particularly the big ones—are Protestants. When using the word "Protestant," I include Presbyterians.

357. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you think these Royal Schools were intended for the upper classes principally?—I always thought our duty was to give an education at Portora, that would qualify for the Universities or anything on a level with a University. The majority in the neighbourhood and in Ireland that want that education are Protestants, but it never practically affected any rule I ever made.

358. From what class, as a rule, have your pupils been drawn?—The middle class, and among that too I am not only leaving the ability, but the huge landed proprietors on the one side, and then I leave the shopkeepers and small farmers on the other, and it is in the class between the two—those who send their sons generally to the Church, the Bar, or to the Army. These are the propertious our boys go into.

359. From which classes do you think—the upper classes or the middle—the boys go to England?—Every class that has money, the upper classes to a man. There is not a nobleman in Ireland that has his son taught at an Irish school.

360. Do you know any of the middle class in Enniskillen who send their sons to English schools?—The middle class in the town of Enniskillen are all shopkeepers. There was only one gentleman who sent his son to an English school, and he brought him back after the first half-year.

361. Had the Commissioners of Education any communication with you as to the management of the Portora Royal School subsequent to the report of 1867?—Yes, they have several times written enquiring about day boys, and whether they were equitably treated and not charged too much.

362. Have they ever communicated to you that they were anxious to carry out any of the recommendations of this report?—They never made any communication that I was aware of that had any connection whatever with that report.

363. LEON JENNISON FERGUSON.—The Commissioners in 1857 reported thus:—

"The school was inspected by one of our Assistant Commissioners, who reports favorably of the school, but notices the English instruction as weak and not successful. From his report and the result of our visit, we consider the state of instruction in classics to be very satisfactory, and the instruction in English unsatisfactory. Our Assistant Commissioner expresses his opinion that the term of Enniskillen is in need of a school more suited to the wants and pecuniary means of the inhabitants. Out of 70 pupils on the roll there were 64 present, and of these 40 were boarders and the rest day pupils, of whom 13 were free. We are of opinion that the inhabitants of Enniskillen are entitled to require that a complete course of English and commercial education should be provided for their sons in some department of the school, as a preparation for their entering upon civil and mercantile pursuits. . . . Since the period of our inquiry Mr. Wm. Steele was appointed master."

Has there been anything done to give an English and commercial education?—I always gave it; any boy going to business or commercial life had facility for learning anything directly useful to him.

364. Has that been avoided of?—Yes; numbers have gone to England, and I had many letters about the way the boys were prepared in book-keeping, &c.

365. Then the school affords an education fitted for boys going into the Civil Service and mercantile life?—Certainly; and always did. I should mention we have £200 a year in the shape of very valuable grants from the Board on subjects quite of a commercial character, chiefly mathematics, geography, elementary mathematics, and French.

366. LEON B. CHURCHILL.—What date was that instituted?—These prizes were instituted at the same time as the school exhibitions—about three years ago.

367. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are those the English December prizes?—Exactly.

368. LEON B. CHURCHILL.—Is there any great admitted want of Catholic middle class education in Enniskillen?—I do not think there is any in Enniskillen town; but that is a very different question from the country.

369. How many Catholic pupils have you?—I never had many—not more than four or five; but, at the same time, there has never been the slightest reluctance, directly or indirectly, to send them to Portora.

370. There must be more than four or five of that class that require higher education?—No; I think higher education becomes unnecessary from looking out for something that will speedily pay, and as for Latin and Greek, I do not think they want it.

371. The Catholic people are generally the poorer class?—Yes.

372. Whose children would not require a higher education?—Yes; and do not care for it.

373. Did you ever apply to the Commissioners to inspect the school?—Never.

374. Do not you think an inspection of the schools satisfactory to the Master?—I think it would be exceedingly satisfactory. I was glad when Mr. Gray came, and would be glad he came every year.

375. LEON JENNISON FERGUSON.—Are any of your boys preparing for the Intermediate Commissioners' examination?—A great many will go up—not less than twenty-five or thirty.

376. Were your charges always as high as sixty guineas?—No; for the first three years they were fifty guineas, and then I raised them to sixty guineas.

377. The rise does not coincide with the falling off in numbers?—No; the numbers began to rise when I raised my terms, and went on from that for several years.

378. Your relations with the Commissioners have been confined, since your appointment, to a half-yearly report, and to a demand for repairs from time to time?—Yes.

379. The Board have not interested themselves in any way in the school beyond those matters and Mr. Gray's visitation?—They have not shown any particular interest, but, although they did not do so, some of the Commissioners came to the place as my personal friends, but not in the least degree officially. I said: "Now, as you are here, come and see," and they said everything was in good order.

380. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—As I understand, there are three schools in Enniskillen—the Portora school, a middle class school, and the Christian Brothers'—and you have four Roman Catholics attending your Intermediate School?—Yes, I think that is the number at present.

381. Do not you think that many of the Roman Catholics of Enniskillen—we will say nothing of the county Fermanagh at present—besides these four boys are entitled to intermediate or distinguished from primary education?—I would not say a great many; but there are some.

382. You said there were a few big shopkeepers, as distinguished from small shopkeepers, Roman Catholics?—Yes, a very few. I know of none except a butcher, who is one of the wealthiest men in Enniskillen.

383. Very few professional men there are Roman Catholics?—There is not a professional man at all that I know of.

384. From your knowledge of Fermanagh and Enniskillen, would not an intermediate education advance the commercial and pecuniary position of Roman Catholics very much?—Of course, I am bound to say it would advance it; but, as far as I know, in the county Fermanagh as well as in the town of Enniskillen, there are exceedingly few Roman Catholics above the class of small farmers and laborers, and they would not send their boys to any school but a Roman Catholic one.

385. But if there were educational facilities that happened to suit their taste and their religious conviction, and they availed themselves of them; would not that promote the material and commercial interests of the population very much?—It would of any population.

386. Are you aware that in Scotland the class of small farmers and small shopkeepers have the advantage of very largely endowed schools of intermediate education, which, it appears, the Roman Catholics in Fermanagh do not get?—I do not think the Protestants get it either in Fermanagh.

387. Do you know whether there is any Roman Catholic endowment in the county?—I never heard of any.

388. Is there a Roman Catholic boarding school in the county?—None whatever.

389. Is there a private Roman Catholic day-school in the county?—Not that I know of.

390. You have told us of the very creditable and considerations way you spoke to your friend from Portora, would you be disposed to think that in the case of boarders of the Roman Catholic persuasion, although you would do your utmost to insure perfect impartiality and fair play, notwithstanding the influence if not hostile to Catholicism would at least be disagreeable to the Roman Catholic mind?—My own opinion is that no considerations Roman Catholic would ever send his son as a boarder to Portora.

391. Have you been sometimes without any Roman Catholic day boys?—I think hardly without once.

392. Has it ever exceeded four?—I am not very sure, because I make no difference.

393. Do not you think that to some extent the anti-Catholic influence which would exist in the case of boarders would be likely to exist as regards the day people?—That would be noticed to surprise, but I never detected the least trace of it.

April 2, 1876.

394. Do you know much of your Roman Catholic neighbours?—I do, but not socially.

395. You have at present four Roman Catholic boys; what class of life are they from?—They are the sons of shopkeepers.

396. Besides the fathers of these boys do you know any other Roman Catholic shopkeepers with families in the town of Enniskillen?—Really, I do not.

397. Has the butcher sons there?—No; they must have been educated before my time; they are all butchers.

398. From what you know of the butcher, do you think he would have made his sons butchers if they had the benefit of intermediate education?—I think he would.

399. What is the course of your English and commercial education?—I have never separated English and commercial education, we teach them, of course, writing, arithmetic, and facility and quickness in accounts, book-keeping, which I look upon as just the pivot upon which the whole thing turns, an elementary English history, some French, as much as they can learn, and German, if they can. With regard to mathematics, we always teach them elementary algebra and Euclid, but at the same time, as far as I know, neither algebra nor Euclid ever has any bearing on commercial education.

400. When you send these boys out as commercial gentlemen in the world, do you think their education is complete without some rudimentary knowledge of the physical sciences?—I think it is so more complete without that than without some elementary knowledge of classics and other things.

401. But do not the commercial boys learn something of Latin and Greek from you?—Sometimes they do, and sometimes they do not.

402. You make no distinction between the university class and the commercial class?—No; except by saying—"You boys who are going to business and do not want to learn classics need not do so;" otherwise I teach them all.

403. Are your boys able to read an ordinary French book when they leave?—I think so.

404. And German?—I think so. Whilst all learn French, not more than twenty-five, or one-third of the school, learn German.

405. Do you select the boys that are to learn German?—No; their parents.

406. Do you think if you had an additional £100 a year for a master to teach the rudiments of physical science, in connexion with the intermediate education, but not in another point of view. If asked this question: Do you think it an advantage to school education? I would say, No.

407. Mr. Wilson.—You have got a large Presbyterian element in a portion of Fermanagh?—No, I think not; very few Presbyterians in Enniskillen.

408. Of the boys you have now, I see you return none as Presbyterians?—I am not aware any are Presbyterians.

409. The return obtained by Lord Randolph Churchill states you have accommodation for 250 day pupils and 80 boarders?—Yes; I meant to say there would be accommodation for 300 pupils, 80 of whom would be boarders.

410. If you have as many boys from the neighbourhood as you could expect, why was it on your report that the Commissioners made those large extensions preparing accommodation for 350 boys, does it not appear to you to be a great throwing away of public money?—At the time that that application was granted I had 180 boys, and before they made the additional buildings I had not the accommodation for the proper teaching of 150 boys in it. I was very deficient in accommodation. I represented it and pointed out the place where an addition could be made, and it was made; if it were much less than it is it would suffice.

411. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The enlargement made was to meet the want then existing?—To meet a want very pressing at the time.

412. Mr. Wilson.—You spent large sums at Raphoe as well, I think?—Indeed I did.

413. But a sum of £200 you never were repaid?—Far more than that; I have the accounts at the present moment. I spent £1,200 at Raphoe, and of this £1,200 I got back £400; £600 had been lent, and £400 had never been repaid.

414. You got that school in a bad state?—Shocking.

415. And the boys went after you to Portora?—All except one boy.

416. In fact, you left it just as you found it?—Perfectly.

417. You stated to Mr. O'Shaughnessy that the other Protestant denominations did not get educational advantages in Fermanagh?—They have no endowments, and are just as backward in receiving the education within their reach as the Roman Catholics.

418. You look on your school as strictly Church of Ireland?—For a boarding school it is practically that, but for a day school it is nothing of the sort. All kinds of religion can get the full benefit of the day education without the slightest interference, and, moreover, I am quite convinced that that is their own impression.

419. You have no Presbyterians at the school?—I may have, but I do not know. As I do not subject them to any different treatment, I cannot well tell.

420. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Before you left Raphoe what number of boys were there?—I am not quite certain what the exact number was, I think about fifty-six boarders.

421. Was the school full at the time you left it?—Quite full. I had to hire a house in town in which a number of boys lived.

422. What was the assistance from endowments at Raphoe?—I got £100 a year for myself and £100 a year for my assistant, but the £100 a year for myself I contributed, in order to improve the place, the Commissioners lent me £600, and stopped the £200.

423. Which is Cavan or Raphoe the better place?—I do not think any place can be more remote than Raphoe. Cavan is a county town; Raphoe is not.

424. I understand you had only the same endowment Cavan has—£100 a year for yourself and £100 for your assistant?—That is what I had.

425. You told Mr. O'Shaughnessy that no honest independent Catholic would send his son as a boarder to Portora, does the same observation apply to any system of boarding school in which religion is to be taught at all?—I am afraid it would be the hardest thing in the world under the same roof and the same master to have Roman Catholics and Protestant boys fairly and honestly treated.

426. Chairman.—But you think it is quite possible that Roman Catholics and Protestants be educated together in a day school, but not in a boarding school?—I do.

[Mr. Steele subsequently requested permission to add to his evidence an explanatory statement, viz. Appendix No. 3.]

Mr. PATRICK KING JOYCE, B.A., Queen's University, Head Master of the Royal School, Banagher, examined.

April 8, 1878.
Mr. Patrick
King Joyce,
B.A.

427. CHAIRMAN.—You are head master of Banagher School?—Yes.

428. When were you appointed?—In the end of January, 1874.

429. Was the school in operation at that time?—It had been vacant for two or three years, and, moreover, it had no pupils for several years when the former master was there.

430. What number of boarders did you get?—The highest number I had at any time was twelve. I came there without any influence in the place whatsoever, except whatever good people thought the school would do. My pupils came up to forty-one in two years or so after I had gone there.

431. When was the school burned down?—About a year after my appointment.

432. LEON R. CHURCHMAN.—Was there much damage done?—The whole detached school buildings were burned to the ground, but the main building was not touched. The place was not repaired until there had been great inconvenience to me and great loss to the ability of the school. The repairing and the preparation for it took over twelve months.

433. CHAIRMAN.—What number of pupils have you now?—Fourteen, but this season was exceptional.

434. How many of them are day boys?—Eleven, and the other three are boarders.

435. What is your course of instruction?—Classics, English, and mathematics. The greater number of pupils go in for the public examinations for the Civil Service.

436. What assistants have you?—Just at the present moment I have none. My last master left me three weeks ago.

437. When your school was full what assistants had you?—A fellow graduate, at present inspector of schools in Ceylon, and a French master—a Belgian. I had besides pupil teachers whom I took at a lower rate of fees for the purpose of helping them. One was from Fermagh.

438. What, in your opinion, is the cause of the decline in the number of pupils in your school?—The first cause was certainly the burning down of it to the ground, and after that some of my pupils went to the Queen's University. The boarders were Roman Catholics, I being myself a Roman Catholic. Mine was the first appointment of a Roman Catholic to the school.

439. Since the damage was repaired why did your number not increase?—I incurred some displeasure from the Roman Catholic clergy, by some of our boys going to the Queen's University, and we have had a kind of passive resistance since then—except I engaged not to try and prevent them from that—although I did not try to send them there at all.

440. Have you had Protestant boys there?—Yes, but I have none at present. There are none in the town at present that I know of. I had three of the nephews of Rev. Mr. Bell, the former master, but I had not his own son. I don't think he sends him to any school, but educates him at home.

441. You were unacquainted with the neighbourhood when you came there?—Entirely. I had to look out for the route to get there on getting my appointment.

442. The house is repaired at the expense of the Commissioners of Education?—Yes.

443. You reported that it was burned down?—Yes, and it took a long time to rebuild it. They were very dilatory. It was an old mansion that was taken for a school, about the year 1800, and there were detached buildings added in which the school was held; those were burned down.

444. LEON R. CHURCHMAN.—Did the fire prevent you residing in the school?—No.

445. LEON JAMES BYRNE.—You are a B.A. yourself?—Yes, of the Queen's University.

446. What college were you at?—Galway.

447. Had you any experience of teaching before you went to Banagher?—Yes, I was first trained at Marlborough-street, and then went to the Catholic Diocesan College of St. Mel's, Longford, and immediately on obtaining my degree I went to the Clerical Catholic Intermediate School.

448. You were appointed to Banagher by the Lord Lieutenant?—I was, by Patent.

449. Do you know on whose recommendation I do not. I understood I was chosen for my skill and experience in teaching. I was introduced to the Lord Lieutenant through Mr. Keenan and Lord Hastings.

450. How long after your degree was it that you went there?—I got my degree in 1872, and was appointed in 1874.

451. How long after you went there were the numbers increasing?—I think about two years or over.

452. And at the end of two years what number of day boys and boarders, taken together, had you?—The maximum number at any time was forty-one.

453. How many of those were boarders?—I do not remember, but the greatest number I had at any time was twelve.

454. What accommodation had you for boarders, without crowding?—There are three large rooms that could be used as dormitories, and would accommodate between thirty and forty.

455. You could have made room for twice as many as you had?—Oh, yes.

456. What were your charges?—My maximum was £36, and my minimum £25, which I found did not pay me, so I raised it, and for that reason I did not get so many afterwards.

457. How much for day boys?—24 and 26.

458. When were the repairs completed after the fire?—A little over twelve months.

459. Do you attach to the present state of your roll to the fire?—Not altogether, but certainly it had a great effect on me at the time, and for nearly two years afterwards, through want of despatch, &c.

460. When did the numbers begin to fall off?—A short time after the fire, when the youths went to the Queen's University.

461. Were these pupils of yours?—They were.

462. Did any of them obtain distinctions?—One of them obtained the first exhibition in classics. I understand he was third highest at entrance. He passed the first examination for medicine direct from the school ten months after entering college.

463. I see in Lord Randolph Churchill's return there was one Protestant at your school, and forty-one Roman Catholics?—That includes both day boys and boarders.

464. You had at one time three Protestants?—I think I had five.

465. Are there in Banagher, so far as you know, any Protestant boys of the class that would require intermediate education?—I don't think there are, except, perhaps, one who is being educated at home.

466. Is that the son of the former master?—Yes, I think so.

467. Was it the Commissioners carried out the repairs after the fire?—Yes, but I think they had the house insured.

468. Has your school been kept in repair by them?—Yes.

469. Did you do any repairs yourself?—No.

470. Did you find that all the repairs required were done on your requisition?—Yes, after considerable delay.

471. Is there any check in doing repairs except your certificates?—The Commissioners got them done by the agent, or they gave a contract.

472. Is there a local agent?—No. There is a gentleman who comes there from Rathfriland—a Mr. Owen.

473. Do you know anything of the property of the school?—No.

474. Do you know its situation?—No, I never saw it.

475. Are there any exhibitions or prizes open to

April 5, 1878.
Mr. Patrick
Kemp Jones.
J. A.

the boys of Banagher?—No. The Commissioners gave a prize of £10 on Christmas on condition that Latin and Greek should form two of the subjects, and that the boys be examined by an outsider.

476. Who has examined them?—The Roman Catholic clergyman of the district.

477. Is he selected by yourself?—Yes; I asked him to do it. I sent his name to the Commissioners for approval, and he has been approved of.

478. Has there been any visitation of your school by Mr. Gray or any one else since you were appointed?—No. I generally get the boys examined by the Science and Art Department of South Kensington.

479. Have your boys distinguished themselves at these examinations?—One of them got as many as four firsts in the year. Out of fifteen examined, eight were first class.

480. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In what?—In organic and inorganic chemistry, magnetism, and electricity, and in five subjects last year.

481. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—That is since the falling off in your numbers?—They were not as low then as at present.

482. They are still falling?—I think there is a prospect of their rising at present.

483. Did some of your pupils come from distance?—Yes, as far as five miles. They drove in every morning, but some of them have gone to Ban.

484. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Where is the school opened there?—A new Christian Brothers' school.

485. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Is it a primary school?—A primary school with somebody taking an intermediate class.

486. Did you devote yourself to mathematics and classics in the Queen's University?—Mathematics and natural science.

487. What provision had you for teaching classics?—My assistant, a Mr. MacNamara, who is a graduate of the Queen's University. He got first place as Inspector of schools under the National Board.

488. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Do you think Banagher suited to the establishment of a large middle class school?—There are several districts better.

489. What population has Banagher?—Something over 1,600.

490. Is the population entirely Catholic?—Not entirely.

491. Is the middle class population entirely Catholic?—The lower classes are.

492. And the middle class shopkeepers?—They are nearly all Catholic.

493. The pupils who resort to your school as day boys are principally Catholic?—Yes.

494. Where did they go to get their education before you were appointed?—There was a private school in the town which had ten or twelve pupils.

495. What has become of that school?—It has been done away with.

496. Your appointment drew the Catholics from Ban?—Yes.

497. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What is paid to you now?—£100 a year, minus income tax.

498. Have you any provision for teachers?—No. There is no endowment for an assistant.

499. Did the fact of your getting £100 a year, and the house and buildings kept in repair, enable you to take pupils at a lower price than a private caterpillar?—I don't do so.

500. Were your charges higher?—Equal or higher.

501. Had the fee any immediate effect on the diminution of your numbers?—It had no immediate effect, but the want of accommodation had other some time.

502. Did your numbers diminish rapidly?—No, the diminution was gradual.

503. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Did you make any efforts to attract boarders from other parts of Ireland by advertisement or otherwise?—Yes, but these efforts have not met with success.

504. Is there any cause you can attribute that to?—Certainly; there is no railway accommodation for travelling to the place, and every town of equal size within twenty miles has its own schools; most of them taught by Catholic clergymen.

505. What is the difference between your charges and those of the next Catholic diocesan seminary, Summerhill?—I think it is £33 there.

506. Yours is £30?—From £36 to £36; but I would not take them now at £24.

507. Would your school interfere with the prosperity of Summerhill in any way?—It had some effect. I had four or five from Summerhill.

508. In what year did you send your pupils to the Queen's University?—I think in 1877.

509. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Is there any provision for religious education?—The boarders have prayers morning and evening in the school, and at 12 o'clock they say the Angelus, and at the end of the school there is religious education.

510. What clergymen attend the school?—The Roman Catholic clergyman of the district. He is at present absently.

511. In his absence does any one come?—No; but they go to the church to him.

512. How long has that arrangement been in existence?—He only came at his own will and pleasure. There was no arrangement by which he should come at stated intervals at all.

513. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—He was not attached to the school?—No.

514. He received no remuneration for his religious instruction?—No.

515. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Does his unfriendly feeling arise from the difficulty about the Queen's University?—Yes.

516. How long is that going on?—Since October, 1877.

517. Since October, 1877, has there been no clerical assistance given in your school in religious education?—Yes, so far as coming to visit; and I see that they go to attend him.

518. But before the difficulty in 1877 did the clergyman attend regularly?—Not a bit more regularly than lately. He came in a friendly spirit, though.

519. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Had you reason to think that before 1877 the Catholic clergyman was satisfied with the religious instruction given in your school?—They were quite satisfied always, and are still. There is no objection whatever to the religious education.

520. They consider it well to leave that to your supervision and charge?—Certainly.

521. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The religious education has been the same during the whole period?—Certainly.

522. And there has been no objection to it; but in consequence of some of the boys going to the Queen's University, the numbers have fallen from forty to fourteen?—I could not say it was altogether on that account.

523. Is there any other reason as to changes in teaching or any other matter to account for the reduction?—I don't believe there is.

524. Has there been any change in the teaching?—I was away a month or two last winter; but that has nothing to do with it.

525. That was after the numbers had fallen?—Yes.

526. CHURCHILL.—Have any of your pupils gone to any National school in the neighbourhood?—Some of them have.

527. What is the reason?—I should think the people did not think they were able to pay my charges. There is no charge at the National school. Moreover, some of the forty pupils were more suited for a primary than for an intermediate school. Some of them were only learning to spell.

528. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—There is no exhibition attached to Banagher?—No; none whatever—nothing but the £100 a year and the house.

529. Did you ever make any representations about the school?—Yes; several.

530. What kind?—I have been asking for several years for a grant to buy apparatus for natural science.

531. What answer did they return to those applications?—I don't know the exact answer, but they did not give the money.

532. Have the Clerestreet Commissioners done anything to lead you to think that they took any special interest in the Benagher school, or were anxious that it should arrive at some state of prosperity?—Nothing whatsoever.

533. They never inspected it in your time?—No.

534. Lord JAMES FITZGERALD.—Did you absent yourself from the school before last winter at all?—Yes, in 1876.

535. How long were you absent then?—I should say not more than a few months, but not continuously.

536. How was the school carried on in your absence?—Carried on very well by my assistants.

537. What was the longest period you were absent during school time?—Three weeks—a week at one time and a fortnight at another, with, perhaps, a month's vacation.

538. Were you engaged in any occupation, or absent from illness?—No; I was attending some lectures in Galway.

539. During the time you were away did the attendance at the school fall off, as had it begun to fall off previously?—It had begun previously. The cause of my absence was, that before I got my appointment I had gone half-way through the law course. I had some lectures to take out before acquiring the degree. I had nearly completed the course.

540. Was that the cause of your absence last year?—Yes.

541. Had your absence in 1876 anything to do with the falling off in the numbers?—Yes.

542. Was there any objection to your going?—There was no objection taken to my going by the curate.

543. To your absenting yourself?—Not to my absence, but to my going to the Queen's University.

544. Did the Commissioners make any objection?—I don't know whether they knew it.

545. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Did you ask leave of anyone to absent yourself?—No.

546. Did anyone at the Board enquire you since leaving your absence?—They never inquired from me whether I was there or not.

547. The Commissioners have taken no notice of your absence?—Not yet.

548. Did any one of the Roman Catholic clergymen complain to you of preparing boys for the Queen's University?—Yes—the curate.

549. Did he convey that in a private way or publicly?—He reported me to the bishop of the diocese. The bishop was afterwards satisfied, and said he would be very glad to see the school going on as a Catholic one.

550. Do you mean after your sending boys to the Queen's University?—Yes.

551. Then, if there was any disavowal shown to your school in consequence of that, it was not passed very strongly?—Not by the bishop.

552. In fact, after learning that, he expressed a wish that the school should continue?—He wrote to me, and said he would be glad to see it going on as a Catholic school.

553. Did he make any condition that you should cease to prepare boys for the Queen's University?—Not in the letter.

554. The letter contained no request for sending them to the Queen's University?—I got a previous letter, which I had to answer, in which he said it was reported to him that I had been seducing and urging them on to go to the Queen's University, which I did not do.

555. You wrote denying that you had been seducing them?—Yes.

556. Were many of the boys who were going to your school very young?—Not very.

557. Of those who were not very young, the greater body were of the humber class?—No; lower middle.

558. To whom Latin and Greek would be of little importance?—There were only very few—two going to the priesthood—that it was really necessary for, and those going up for the Civil Service.

559. You applied to the Commissioners for instruments to teach physical science, what was the amount of money which would have paid for what you asked?—I suggested my money from £10 to £50.

560. I suppose £50 would have satisfied you?—£50 would have satisfied me very well.

561. Did they give an exhibition of £10 a year?—It is hardly an exhibition—£10—for prices to be divided amongst two or three boys, and even that was refused this year.

562. For a school in which there were only two going for the priesthood and three for the Civil Service—five boys to whom Latin and Greek would be of any use?—There were more than five learning Latin and Greek.

563. But you had a school composed of persons, of whom, according to your experience, for the purposes of life, only five would absolutely require Latin and Greek?—That is five or six at any one time, who immediately required it, but there were others junior to those. On the whole, there were ten or twelve.

564. Learning Latin and Greek?—Yes; some of them are there still.

565. Have you been compelled to give up the idea of effectively teaching physical science from want of apparatus?—Yes; effectively. In fact, the Science and Art Department objected that we had not enough of science apparatus.

566. Did you bring under the notice of the Commissioners the fact that the Science and Art Department had objected?—Yes.

567. Did they make any reference to that in their answers?—I think not.

568. In your opinion, ought the main facilities in a school like that to be of a commercial character?—Yes. In fact, I do not know that the district is fit for the school. It is rather too small a place. It had not been successful for several years before my time.

569. Mr. WILSON.—Are there any Protestant boys in the locality that might be there as boarders?—I do not know of any that are boarders in any other school, but a gentleman, from Finsbury, has asked me to take one as a boarder. I should rather not take him. It would upset the place to have two different religious boarding at the school. I do not think I could conscientiously look after the religious education of a Protestant; but there is no objection to receiving Protestant day boys, and, in fact, we have had some almost continuously.

570. CHAIRMAN.—Are you aware that within a distance of five miles from Benagher there is a private boarding school, with something like forty boarders?—I am not aware of the number. I do not know that they are from the neighbourhood.

571. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—I see the Commissioners inspected your school this year?—I was not aware of it. The land-agent, Mr. Owen, came to see it one day. I do not know whether that was an inspection.

572. Were you present?—Yes. I understood it to be an inspection of the premises, not of the school. There were some reports by the Commissioners just completed at the time. I was not told of any other reason.

573. Dr. HARRIS.—Was the objection to your school that you had solicited boys to go to the Queen's University?—Yes.

574. It was not merely on the ground that your teaching enabled them to go?—The charge was that they went from the school.

575. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Was the charge that you urged them on and solicited them?—That was added to it, but when they went at all, it was held up as something wrong on my part.

576. Are you content the objection was not on account of yourself going to the University at a time you ought to be attending to the school?—That was in addition, but it was not the whole ground of the objection.

April 3, 1879.

Mr Patrick
Kemp-Jones,
&c.

577. That the teaching you gave at the school enabled them to go to the Queen's University?—Yes; that I used secular books that fitted them for that, and helped them, and that I also went there myself.

578. Have you got the bishop's first letter to you in which he complained?—He did not write his first letter to me, but to the priest, who read it to me; but I have the letter which he wrote to me after the charge was answered by me.

579. I understood you to say in that letter he expressed a wish your school should prosper?—He said he would be very glad to see it go on as a Catholic school.

580. Who made the objection to your going yourself?—The priest. He read the bishop's letter to me.

581. Did the bishop's letter contain any reference whatever to your going to the Queen's University?—No. He simply said I had objected to an investigation into my affairs, and that I should not have felt offended at his inquiring, and he would be glad to see the school going on as a Catholic school.

582. Did the Roman Catholic authorities object to anything else?—Yes; one of the charges was that I used secular books.

583. Did the bishop use the words "secular books"?—He used words to that purport. I do not say those were the precise words.

584. What books did you think he objected to?—Those of the National Board of Education.

585. It was not to any books used specially for preparation for the Queen's University he objected?—That was the intention.

586. The charge about unacceptable books fell to the ground?—The whole thing fell to the ground; because it was not true at all—at least, there was very little compared to the whole charge; and the bishop said he would be very glad to see the school go on.

587. It is not true that he objected to the books you actually used?—It is not.

588. LEON B. CHURCHILL.—I suppose it was a great object to you to take the M.A. degree?—Yes; because lately a great many masters of the public schools of the country got the M.A. of Trinity College given to them, and I should like to be at least equal to them in having a doctor's degree.

589. CHAIRMAN.—You do not look upon this appointment as a permanent one, unless you can get more pupils than at present?—I keep it with the hope of getting a better school.

590. LEON B. CHURCHILL.—Had you any free pupils at Banagher?—I had none.

591. When had you these free pupils?—Up to this year.

592. How many?—Generally two; not more.

593. You took those of your own free will?—Yes; lately I made an arrangement by which the manager of the National school, who is the curate, might examine his best boys, and I would take them and teach them free.

594. Are there none now?—None, until the examination comes off in a few months.

595. Did you see the report made by Mr. Owen?—No.

596. Did he give you to understand what would be the nature of his report?—No; I did not know he was going to make a report on anything beyond the buildings.

597. Do you consider the premises unsatisfactory?—They are hardly suited for the place at present. The house was not built for a school originally.

598. When Mr. Owen visited was the pupils in the school?—They were; he actually came when I was teaching, and was in the room before I knew he was coming.

599. Dr. HARRIS.—He did not examine the boys?—No.

600. CHAIRMAN.—Was religious instruction given to the whole school, both day boys and boarders?—Yes; except Protestants when they were there.

601. Before or after school?—After school.
(Adjourned to next day at 11.30 A.M.)

SECOND DAY—THURSDAY, APRIL 3, 1879, 11.30 O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

PRESENT.—THE EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; LORD JUSTICE FLYNN-GIBSON; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P., WILLIAM WILSON, Esq., M.P.; ANDREW SHARKE HART, Esq., LL.D., and ANDREW HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D., with JAMES CRESSY NICHOLSON, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Rev. F. M.
Duggan,
M.A.

REV. FREDERICK HOWE RUSSELL, LL.D., Head Master of the Royal School, Dungannon, examined.

602. CHAIRMAN.—What was the date of your appointment?—1859.

603. How was your appointment made?—By the Lord Privy Seal.

604. What was your salary?—At that time £800 a year, and £200 for assistant master. There was no land; there were but a few fields at that time.

605. They were not sufficient for a play-ground?—They would have been, but a portion only of them was so employed. I had the walls thrown down and made the fields one play-ground. There is not ground sufficient for a Royal school even now. The Kamellion School has forty acres immediately adjacent to Enniskillen worth £150 a year. We have no land of that sort; the land belonging to the school is entirely devoted to a play-ground now, but it was not so at first.

606. What is the number of your boys?—I have only thirty-nine boys at present, including day boys and free boys.

607. What number of free boys are there?—There are only four free boys now.

608. How many have been your largest number of pupils?—No. I had 100 boarders at one time, some years ago.

609. Can you form any idea why the numbers have declined?—Certainly. There have been various reasons for that. One great reason for it is the fact that I have been a Whig since I took my degree, and that has come out latterly, and I am looked upon as either a dangerous character by the Tyrone gentry.

610. Have you taken an active part in politics?—I twice refused to propose or second a Liberal candidate, although I voted for the Whigs in the University. I voted for Dr. Ball when Wiggishly inclined, and for Judge Lawson when a Whig, but I asked my destiny with the Protestant clergy of Ireland, by allowing my name to be put on Dr. Webb's Committee Supporting Dr. Webb discovered the full venom of the Whig. Without either proposing or seconding I also voted for a Whig member for the borough, and I was named in effigy for that. I declined proposing or seconding a candidate, because if I did so I could not object to the boys who differed from me in politics hooting me. Another cause was this—that partly fed me so high in Tyrone. One reason was when my boys were out walking a boy once at a Roman Catholic clergyman's who was passing, and made some offensive observations. It was reported to me, I immediately took the boy to the Roman Catholic clergyman's residence, and made him beg his pardon. I think that may have indirectly produced an unfavorable effect.

611. Has the number of university distinctions diminished?—Certainly not. There is no connexion between the number of boys and the goodness of the teaching.

612. What are your terms?—Sixty guineas a year for boarders.

613. And what for day boys?—£10. They never have exceeded that, but I often had boys at various prices, even as low as £3 a year. The parents were poor, but would object to their sons being free, and state they would prefer paying something, but not £10 a year. I have always endeavoured to meet their wishes, but the regular terms for a day boy, including classics, mathematics, and German, are £10 a year, and I cannot charge more as I read the rules of the Commissioners. The fees for the boarders are the pension of the master. I could charge what I pleased, and so could any of us, and I have been so informed by the Board. We vary the terms from time to time, with the increase in the price of meat and wages. Another cause which, perhaps, I should have mentioned, as to the distinction of numbers is this—I have at present a Roman Catholic drill sergeant, who might be objected to by some as a dangerous innovation.

615. What are your duties in reference to free boys?—To get as many as I can that have abilities.

616. There is no rule as to the minimum number you are to take, issued by the Commissioners?—Not at all, but people have come to me saying, that they object to their sons being free, and that they would rather pay a little, and, then others, some of them clergymen, quite prefer to pay nothing.

617. Is there any difference in the treatment of the free boys?—Not the slightest. They are quite as well treated, and they frequently get exhibitions.

618. How is the supply of candidates for free places limited?—Because the town of Dungeness is so small and till the last few years no one could get a lease of land to build upon lest it would endanger the borough prospects. Follies were ever coming up upon those points, however there has been quite an innovation there, too, but the town has not increased much as yet.

619. What are the religious denominations of your boarders?—Generally Protestant Episcopalians. I have had from time to time a few Presbyterians, I have some now, but none who make any point about it.

620. Any Roman Catholics?—No. I never had any Roman Catholic boarders; I was asked to take one and I distinctly declined, not thinking I could have the moral and religious control over a Roman Catholic which I ought to have when he was an inmate of my house. I had one Roman Catholic day boy and was anxious to get such.

621. What Roman Catholic day boys have you had?—In my twenty-eight years' experience I never had more than one Roman Catholic day boy. My predecessors objected to taking any day boy who would not attend prayers and worship with the other boys; we held different opinions, I would subject no person to any disadvantage on account of his religion; however, shortly after my appointment a friend applied to know would I receive a Roman Catholic boy, he said "I know it is a rule of the place that he must attend Protestant worship, and the father will consent to that." I told him I should not like to let him come to prayers against his conscience.

622. Are the daily prayers before or after the regular hours?—Before, and it is optional with the parents of the day boys whether they attend or not. If Protestant parents say they have prayers at home, I do not require the boys to come, but I tell them to come except they read the Scriptures at home.

623. Are there not some shopkeepers who would be glad to send their sons as day boys?—Certainly.

624. Why are there not more applications if there is no limit to the number?—There are not a number of persons of this class who would be willing that their sons should learn Latin and Greek; they prefer that they should earn their bread; for instance, the Roman Catholic lad after being a short time at the school dropped out. I inquired what became of him and was told he had gone to the drapery business. The people are too cunning to let their sons receive a college education except they are likely to distinguish themselves. They are an intelligent people.

625. In fact they prefer a continental to a college education?—Yes; but what sort of continental education can you give boys who leave school at fourteen and become apprentices in shops. I know men who made their fortunes and who went to business at thirteen.

626. That is from Primary schools?—Not at all, very respectable people who had been apprenticed at that early age. You may see boys behind a counter at fourteen who will rise to eminence afterwards, if they are clever.

627. That is a class who would not seek any education but the primary?—No, indeed, they would try and get a little of the manners of a gentleman, and the fathers of people like that prefer paying £4 or £3 to paying nothing. They do not come to ask me to take them free, though they know I would do so, that is part of the Northern independence.

628. Are there any schools in Dungeness to compete with the Royal school?—None.

629. To educate those classes for whom the Royal school is not suitable?—There is an Honorary Smith's school, which gives a fair English education, and there are two National schools. There are in many places quite denominational. Thus there is a Protestant and a Roman Catholic National school in Dungeness.

630. What are the subjects taught in your school. Latin, I suppose, and Greek, as a matter of course?—Yes; and French, German, Euclid, algebra, book-keeping, English literature. All those subjects. Not natural sciences.

631. You have no arrangements of any kind for teaching natural science?—No.

632. What subject do you take up specially yourself?—My special subject in the head class is chemistry.

633. Does one of your assistants devote himself more to mathematics?—Entirely to mathematics. I have always had one who taught nothing but mathematics, and perhaps some English. Another reason for the decline in numbers was that I did not give two half-holidays in the week until lately. The number in a school often depends more on the boys than the parents. Even though the parents approve of arrangements the boys object to them, they can say one school is too hard and they are sent to another. It was the old fashion to give only one half-holiday in a week.

634. How many assistants have you now?—I have three at present. I paid £200 or £300 a year to masters when the school was full. Of course as far as the school is concerned, I should become bankrupt if I went on with that, and at present I have only three masters. I have two masters of arts, one entirely devoted to mathematics, the other entirely devoted to classics, and a foreign master who teaches French and German, he also teaches writing to a certain extent, and drawing. I have always had a foreign master.

635. What proportion of your boys learn French?—Every boy in the school must learn French as well as Latin.

636. And German?—Not as a general rule. I think it is unwise to require boys to learn two or five grammars at the same time. One grammar is the key to all in a very important sense, and generally speaking I do not recommend a boy that is getting on well for an important competitive examination to take up German if already working at French, Latin, and Greek. When a boy does not learn Greek we generally put him to German lest he should be idle. There are some clear-headed lads whom it would not injure to learn four grammars at once.

 Rev. F. H.
 Bagwood,
 Eton.

637. Is it compulsory with a boy to learn either German or French?—French is compulsory.

638. And Latin?—Not always. Suppose a parent says, "I do not want my boy to learn any ancient language." I exempt him from lessons by making him go up in two classes in French.

639. What class are your assistants taken from?—They are both A.M. One of them is a Queen's University A.M. He is quite a junior man. My last man was a Cambridge A.M. My mathematical master at present is a very young man. I commenced with a Trinity College Gold Medalist in Science. I generally had that sort of a man. Professor Parmer wrote voluntarily, and said if I wanted a master he could recommend one of the ablest students they ever had in Belfast in mathematics.

640. What salaries do you give your assistants?—The mathematical master has only £60 for this half, and is to have £70 for the next, £80 for the next, and £90 or £100, or even larger increments, if he does the work efficiently. Besides that he resides in the house. The classical man has £110, besides his lodging and board, but when the school was full such a master had £150. I have also a French master, who gets £120 a year, but he is non-resident. He spends five hours every day in the school. There is more than ample teaching for the number of boys at present with us.

641. You consider that the school buildings are sufficient for the present requirements of the school?—A great deal more than sufficient. I advanced £3,000 or £4,000 in improving them very much under Mr. McCurdy's direction. I proposed to make a number of improvements, by erecting a detached hospital, school-rooms, a hall court, and enlarging the playground. The Board consented to the proposal upon my advancing the money. They have paid me back without interest. They have acted in a kind way towards me always.

642. How are the repairs carried out?—They have been always paid for by the Commissioners.

643. Did you send in an application that repairs should be done, or notify to the Board that certain things were necessary?—Generally I did not; but the secretary wrote to me saying I ought to submit an estimate before getting work done.

644. You got the repairs done?—Yes, and sent in all the vouchers with the exact amounts that I paid. I should say this—After when first appointed I found the premises in a very different condition from what I thought they ought to be. At the same time I visited Eton, after I had carried out my improvements, and found my school-rooms were airy and civilised than those of Eton were at that time. Dunsington school was apparently a more healthful institution. When I came there first I went ahead with certain necessary improvements absolutely indispensable. I built a corridor for the boys to exercise in, in wet weather. The then Principal paid me a visit, and he asked me as to whether the money allowed for making those alterations was sufficient. I told him the truth, and he immediately gave me a cheque for £200. That did not cover the additions, and he subsequently offered me another cheque. I refused, but afterwards accepted it. He said he did not want details as to how the money was expended. I put up a slab to state the amount was built by the late Principal at his own cost. I did not ask compensation from the Commissioners at first for giving up all my fields to make a suitable play ground, as I afterwards did. They met the request fairly, and gave me £100 a year more to meet this and other claims.

645. Did anyone on the part of the Commissioners inspect the buildings after the improvements were made, or at any fixed period, or was there any supervision of the expenditure to see that the work was done properly?—Of course the vouchers showed what had been paid. Mr. McCurdy used to come down. He had his eyes open when looking at the state of the buildings. It was his business to see that the builder carried out the specification. I think that, without Mr. McCurdy having been paid for it, I felt myself at all times, to some extent, more or less under supervision, though there was none strictly speaking. They always took my word for it.

646. In large improvements and expensive repairs you got a builder's estimate?—Yes, and they were inspected by Mr. McCurdy, the architect to the Commissioners.

647. Mr. O'SHEEN—What percentage of your pupils is of the class that generally go to a university?—Between ten and twenty per cent.

648. The others generally go to the Civil Service or commercial pursuits?—Well, you know with regard to the Civil Service there is civil service and civil service, for instance, thirteen Dragoon boys have in my time succeeded in the Indian Civil Service.

649. That is equivalent to a university education?—Yes, that is the distinction I want to make.

650. Have any considerable numbers gone to commerce and other branches of the Civil Service?—No, not many to the Civil Service of an inferior order.

651. Do you think there is sufficient pressure made in your school for those who go to the higher branches of the Civil Service?—Not without subsequent guiding. I would not undertake to grade a boy up immediately for these examinations, for it would interfere with the regular teaching of the ordinary boys.

652. Do you think that you give an adequate education to those who are to be country gentlemen in a small way, large farmers, and commercial men?—I believe, with a view to enlarging a boy's mind, the teaching in young lads is the best that can be given.

653. Don't you think for boys who are destined for commercial and agricultural pursuits some sound rudimentary knowledge of the physical sciences would be a useful part of education?—I do; I should like, if it were possible, to have that optional in a school.

654. Do you think it impossible?—I should if the lad were trying to distinguish himself in classics and the exact sciences at the same time, except he was an unusually clever boy.

655. Are boys unlikely to make very great advances in the exact sciences unless they are going in for the high Civil Service or university examinations?—Yes.

656. And therefore for boys whose education will not be monopolised in the high Civil Service or university courses—by the classics and exact sciences, it would be possible under careful restrictions to introduce a course of physical science?—I believe it might. I say that, admitting that I have consulted two of the ablest Fellows that Trinity College has produced upon that very point, and they utterly disapproved the idea of boys learning any chemistry in school. They said they had great difficulty in rooting out the false views and the metaphysical notions which boys had acquired before they came to college.

657. Their objections rested on the bad style of teaching of physical science, and were not objections to the science itself?—They said distinctly they would rather have nothing of the kind taught at school, no matter how it was taught; but I myself think a clever boy could make progress in this if he was judiciously taught, and was not engrossed with other studies.

658. You spoke of the danger of teaching a boy too many grammars at a time?—Yes, but not an extremely clever boy.

659. What is the language, the grammar of which you regard as the key to all others?—The great elements of grammar can be taught out of any civilised language.

660. Do you think that if the English Grammar were more scientifically taught than it is now at our ordinary class teaching it might be made a useful grammar for the general expansion of the mind, and to enable boys to learn the grammars of foreign languages of the present day?—I am not prepared to

April 8, 1871.
Rev. F. B.
Hargood,
Clerk.

day that, but I think that a boy would learn grammar better from any language, whether ancient or modern, than was not his own. It is a great defect, in the Intermediate Act that should be able to get distinctions under it without learning any language except the English. I think one language not his own ought to be acquired by every educated man.

661. And that gives more facilities for learning languages?—I think it does.

662. Do you think it possible to fill the five Royal schools with an adequate number of boarders from the Protestant gentry and upper classes?—I think it is utterly impossible, for the number of parents who will pay the terms of the Royal schools and at the same time accept education in Ireland is limited, as all the nobility and the great majority of the gentry send their sons to English or foreign schools. In consequence of the supply of pupils being so much reduced by this educational dislocation, when one school becomes popular other schools fall off in point of numbers. Moreover, when a new master who has been distinguished in the University is appointed, his qualifications are fresh in the minds of the junior fellows who have a great deal to do with the recommendation of schools, and who, having only a traditional knowledge of the older men, naturally recommend the man whom they have known personally.

663. You have got in the town and county a very large and prosperous middle class of shopkeepers and tenant farmers?—Large, but not very prosperous just now.

664. Do you think that a primary education is adequate for the wants or proper aspirations of those people?—I do not think it is fully.

665. Then you think that some degree of intermediate education is requisite for this large lower middle class?—It is very desirable.

666. Don't you think it would be very desirable to give that large lower middle class about Dungannon—and generally throughout Ireland—adequate, suitable, well-timed, well-guarded opportunities for a suitable intermediate education?—I do.

667. They do not enjoy that in Tyrone at present?—I do not think that they do, to the extent that is desirable. It would not be fair for me to make any reflection upon the master of the Roman Catholic school.

668. How many scholars in the Roman Catholic school?—I don't know.

669. It is like a primary school?—It is chiefly a primary school.

670. What would you consider a fair expanding course of education in such a school as we speak of?—I think there should be an opportunity of learning one foreign language, and a certain amount of chemistry, and such matters as would be useful in obtaining a scientific knowledge of agriculture; and I would say they at present learn enough arithmetic and spelling, and writing, in these schools.

671. But would you not add to their course, to expand their minds, a fair, generous knowledge of English literature?—Certainly, but I would lay particular stress upon learning one foreign language, and especially a language—whether French or German—which would enable them to get attention for commercial purposes.

672. You said you had experience of only one Roman Catholic schoolboy—you mean one at a time?—I never had more than one, and I have reason to know the Roman Catholic clergy would object to a boy being with me lest he should catch infection from association with other boys. In fact I know a case of a Roman Catholic tradesman who stated he wished to send his son to me, but he dared not do so, and he sent him to a Roman Catholic school in Armagh against his own private will.

673. There is a pretty large Roman Catholic population in Dungannon and Tyrone generally?—Yes; half, or about that.

674. Are there a large number of Roman Catholics in the lower middle class?—There are, but I think they are in the minority.

675. And there is a pretty large Presbyterian minority in the county?—Yes.

676. Do you know whether the Roman Catholics and Presbyterians have any state endowments in that county?—I do not think they have.

677. Have the Roman Catholics any boarding schools in the county?—I don't think they have; but they have in Armagh—only ten miles from Dungannon.

678. I believe the number of scholarships in Trinity College obtained by your boys has been—taking everything into account—the largest of the Royal schools?—I don't think we ever failed altogether. We once sent up only one boy, and he was the best answerer from all the Royal schools.

679. You applied to the officer of the Commissioners for information as to the statistics of the relative number of scholarships obtained by the different Royal schools?—No, I asked could the secretary let me have a list of the pupils who were at the top of the list at the Royal scholarship examinations. The boys who answered best of all the Royal schools, and of I think, ten other schools, who were all examined together, must have been well taught if the examination was fair.

680. Did he refuse to give you the information?—It was merely said that he had a great deal to do, and would rather not have the trouble.

681. Mr. Wilson.—Have you any Presbyterian boarders at the school?—I have had. I am not sure now, but I think I have one or two, and they wished to go to church.

682. Have their parents never intimated to you that they would wish them to go to their own place of worship?—That has happened, and they have gone.

683. You attributed the decision of your school to some political feeling that the gentry of Tyrone had against you?—A good many of the gentry and a great many of the clergy in Ireland would think a man who was a Whig a very bad sort of person.

684. Don't you know that the great majority of the boys in your school are Episcopians?—Yes.

685. The Episcopians as a rule belong to what we may call the Conservative party, I suppose?—Yes.

686. And the Presbyterians and Roman Catholics as a rule belong to the other party?—Yes.

687. Don't you think it strange that you have only one Roman Catholic boy at your school with your very great friendship for the Whig party?—No, because I know well my being a Whig would make me more objectionable to an enlightened Roman Catholic.

688. Where as a rule do the Roman Catholics in Tyrone send their sons?—To the Roman Catholic school in Armagh, I believe.

689. And the Presbyterians of Dungannon?—I have had a good many Presbyterian clergymen's sons as free boys and otherwise.

690. LORD JUSTICE FRASER.—You say the exhibition examination was the only means the Commissioners had of ascertaining whether your boys were well taught?—Yes.

691. To these examinations do any large number of boys go up?—Only the boys who think they have a chance of winning.

692. Do you, as a matter of fact, ascertain before they go up who has, and who has not a chance?—Of course.

693. Do any other boys go up except those intending to go through Trinity College?—The examination is held after entrance; but I suggested that some arrangement might be made to open these exhibitions to the Queen's Colleges.

694. Have any means been taken either by visitation or otherwise by the Commissioners, of ascertaining what the state of education of the other boys who do not go up for these examinations is?—None, in my time, except Mr. Gray's visit.

695. On that occasion did Mr. Gray examine into the condition of the education of all the boys in the school?—He did.

April, 1905
 Res. F. H.
 Baywood,

696. Did you ever see the report he made?—Yes—he sent it to me, and it was very favourable.

697. Was it ever officially sent from Clarendon-street?—No, it was not.

698. Do you consider the establishment of school exhibitions as contrasted with university exhibitions to be useful to your school?—I do. If not earlier, I was para magno, in getting these up. I brought the matter forward about 1850, but it was a considerable number of years before any were established.

699. Has the establishment of school exhibitions increased the proportion of boys who went to the university?—I think it would have that tendency, for we have an initial examination, and there is a certain amount, and a certain amount only, of Greek grammar. That itself would give a boy a sort of taste for a university education.

700. The examination on the university royal scholarships is conducted independently of you altogether?—Altogether.

701. By whom is the examination for the school exhibitions conducted?—Ourselves.

702. Do the Commissioners, so far as you know, obtain any information as to the proficiency of the boys who get school exhibitions?—Indeed they do. We make out a tabulated return of the different subjects in which the boys are examined, showing the marks per cent. awarded.

703. Is that before the exhibitions are granted?—Oh, yes, and there is often a long delay between our sending the returns and their making the awards. They wait to have a meeting, and look through the marking.

704. Do you consider it would be beneficial if the examinations for school exhibitions were conducted by independent examiners?—I don't think it would, because we feel on our honour, and give more time to it than it would get otherwise. It comes as a great deal of trouble, because we do it conscientiously. Our boy who failed lately with us, got an exhibition at St. Columba's afterwards.

705. Is there any comparison of the results of the examinations for school exhibitions at the different Royal schools?—No.

706. Then you have no means of ascertaining the comparative state of efficiency of your boys with the boys of Eton or Pontefract schools?—No, it would be almost an impossible inquiry, because we should have to test the different examinations and questions.

707. Does the number going to the Queen's College enable you to state a per-centage for them?—No, it is very small.

708. Is it anything approaching to the same proportion that go to Trinity?—No, but there have been some. I think we have had four or five boys who went through and got scholarships.

709. Are the scholarships of equal or approximate value at entrance to the Queen's University?—No, but I have thought of that long ago, and made a suggestion to the Presidents in reference to that subject.

710. Are the scholarships that are open for competition to the Queen's University, easier or harder to get than the royal scholarships in Trinity College?—They are far easier, I should say.

711. Then as far as an inducement of any prize, to be got in the way of exhibition by preference, it is easier to get such a prize in the Queen's University than in Trinity?—Very much easier.

712. Nevertheless, you say the proportion that go is small?—Yes, because the boys, whose ambition is directed to college, are anxious to enter Trinity College. They look upon it as so much higher.

713. Apart from your certificates and reports, are there any steps taken annually or otherwise by the Commissioners to ascertain the state of the school buildings?—No.

714. Do they give you any school furniture at all?—Only school desks.

715. Except the desks, have you ever got any furnishing of your school from the Commissioners?—

No, never, but blinds in the school windows are paid for by them.

716. Do they give the furniture of the school-rooms?—Yes, of the three school-rooms.

717. Lord JAMES FITZGERALD.—Have they ever taken any step at all to establish free boarders in your school?—None, except those exhibitions.

718. Is there any restriction as to the means of the candidates?—No, it is purely competitive.

719. As far as free boys are concerned, has that ended with yourself altogether?—I am under no obligation, but I distinctly understood from the Minutes that it would be agreeable to the wishes of the Commissioners that I should receive free boys.

720. The Act of Parliament gives power to the Commissioners to apply such sums as shall be necessary "towards the purchasing, procuring, building, enlarging, repairing or furnishing the schoolhouse, together with grounds, houses, and other appurtenances and accommodations necessary or useful for or towards the convenient and proper keeping of the school therein."

Has any money been applied to this purpose, except for the purchase of the desks for the school-room?—No, we have not ground enough; additional ground ought to be taken.

721. The Act proceeds—

"If any matter shall remain, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners to order and direct that such matter shall be applied to the supporting, maintaining, and providing of such and so many free scholars, according to such arrangements, and in such sums, shares, and proportions as shall be directed by any such order."

Has any money been applied to the supporting, maintaining, or providing free scholars, day boys, or boarders?—Nothing, except the exhibitions, and these are competed for independently of the means of the candidates, but, as a matter of practice, the persons that inquire whether their sons would have a chance of getting these things, have been people who were not wealthy.

722. Have you ever received or obtained any information as to the state or amount of the school property at any time?—Never.

723. Have you any knowledge of the means available for the purposes of the school?—I have not, except by hearsay.

724. Dr. CORMEY.—Are not some of the exhibitions in Trinity College tenable only for three years?—Yes, where there is rather inferior answering.

725. And the exhibition is forfeited if the student does not continue to obtain honours in Trinity College?—Yes.

726. Are you aware scholarships in the Queen's College are obtained at entrance?—They are.

727. What is the value, and how long are they tenable for?—£25, for one year.

728. You can hardly consider a prize, say £25, tenable for one year, so offering the same inducement to a boy as a royal scholarship of £40 for five years?—Certainly not.

729. That to some extent will account for the small proportion of boys who go to the Queen's College from your school?—It might, but I still think that there is a greater prestige attached to Trinity College than to the Queen's University at the present day. It will continue so for some years still, perhaps a good many, and I think it is very natural and reasonable.

730. Lord JAMES FITZGERALD.—Have your exhibitions in Trinity College been continually falling?—Yes; I recollect but one instance in which we sent up only one boy, and he went to the top of the poll.

731. Have they always continued to be held?—As a general rule they have.

732. Dr. HART.—How many of the school exhibitions are there?—Ten altogether, the same as in Armagh and Enniskillen. They are only instituted about two years. We have been trying to get them a long while.

733. You have no experience as to the success of the exhibitors in competing for the royal scholarships?—Not one has gone up yet.

734. Why were exhibitions given to three Royal schools and not to the others?—My idea is there were no others.

735. Are the exhibitions paid out of the estate of each separate school?—That is my impression from conversations with some of the Commissioners and with the Secretary.

736. LEAD JUDGE FERGUSON.—Was there ever any official intimation given to you that the state of the funds had anything to do with it?—Yes, I think so.

737. Mr. WILSON.—I see you have only thirty-nine boys?—That is all.

738. And the endowments amount to £1,650 a year?—Yes.

739. At Raphoe they have thirty-eight boys and the endowment is only £200 a year?—Yes.

740. Dr. HART.—How many are boarders?—Twenty-one boarders. I believe I have every available day boy to be found in the neighbourhood. They come from three or four miles round. The town would not supply even that number of boys desiring university education, and it has long since been suggested, even before I became the master, to transfer Dungannon School to a situation more likely to furnish day boys.

741. CHAIRMAN.—If you resigned your appointment you would have nothing whatever to fall back upon?—Nothing whatever.

742. None of your assistants have any retainer allowances either?—No.

743. You stated that the upper classes of boys went over to England to school. Can you form any impression as to what the advantages are of going there, or how does your school differ from English schools?—One of the chief advantages sought is the acquisition of the English accent. The character for masculinity generally in the higher English schools is lower than in the Irish. There is much greater facility for idling with idleness. I have heard it asserted that there is only one school in Ireland that gives the English public school education—that is St. Columba's.

744. Why is your school inferior in public esteem? In the assertion as to St. Columba's just?—I don't know as to the other schools, but I am perfectly convinced it is inferior with regard to Armagh, where the master has attained nothing, as I have heard, that was instilled by Dr. Guillemeau, a Fellow of Cambridge, and a very distinguished man in every respect, thoroughly acquainted with schools in England.

745. As regards athletic sports and amusements suitable for education, do you think they get enough, consistently with attending to their books, in Ireland?—I think so: my boys go to cricket matches at Armagh, &c., &c., and they are rather distinguished at football. The English go in more for that than we do. A little too much, I think.

746. Is music taught?—That is an extra.

747. Is there any model school in your neighbourhood?—No, the only model schools in that part of the country are at Rathfriland, Enniskillen, Newtownstewart, and Omagh.

748. Would it be possible to have chemistry properly taught without a considerable addition to the expenses of the school?—I think not. As a general rule you would have to get a special teacher, as in the case of a foreign master.

749. You would never have an assistant competent to teach it, as well as mathematics or classics?—I have had men who professed to teach it, but whether they could teach it in a way satisfactory to the heads of the Medical School of Trinity College is another question.

750. Are there any small gentry in the county that are not Irish Church people or Presbyterians?—Not one that I know of.

751. LEAD JUDGE FERGUSON.—Do you consider that the existence of the power of superannuation would be an advantage?—A very great advantage, indeed. It would introduce fresh energies, and also encourage the assistant masters. Within the last twelve months Messrs. Morgan, Steele, and I, tried to have some of the money that is now spent either on the exhibitions in Trinity College or on the school exhibitions, employed in increasing the salaries of the assistant masters, who want substantial other encouragement. The idea that occurred to me was, that when the Intermediate Act came in and they were about giving exhibitions to the youth of Ireland generally, the exhibitions in Trinity College might be given up, and we might rely for that kind of stimulus upon the results of the Intermediate Act, and employ the money then saved in increasing the salaries of the assistant masters. The carrying out of this would require an improvement in the plan of exhibitions, (which is obviously needed), under the Intermediate Act.

752. Would the existence of superannuation allowances by shortening the tenure of office of headmasters be likely to mitigate the evil?—It would obviously.

753. The great body of the pupils who attend the Royal schools are boys to whom it is of great consequence that they should be able to make their own way at some profession?—I should say that is true.

754. Did you ever consider the question at all whether there was any proportion worth noticing of those who succeeded, either at the bar, in the church, or at the medical profession, who have been at English schools?—I think that most of the lads that have succeeded in professions have not been at English schools.

Rev. JAMES ALEXANDER WHITE, LL.D., Head Master of Raphoe Royal School, examined.

Rev. J. A. WILSON, LL.D.

755. CHAIRMAN.—When were you appointed?—In 1857 by the late Earl of Cullinstown. For seven years before that I was an Assistant Master in Enniskillen Royal School. I was a Royal scholar, having been educated at Enniskillen school, so that I passed my entire time there either as a pupil or as a master until I was appointed to Raphoe school. There was no endowment except £100 a year for the head master and £20 for an assistant. The school was then utterly unknown in Trinity College, but this is not so now. My pupils have taken scholarships there almost regularly. Some have won scholarships and some have gone to Belfast and been most successful in the college there, others have taken high appointments in the Civil Service. I have had scientists, indeed, but the work was principally my own, and that both in mathematics and classics.

756. What department did you devote your attention to—mathematics or classics?—Both. I could also teach modern languages, and take the supervision of every department in the school.

757. You found no boys when you arrived there?—There were a few day boys, but not a boarder.

758. What has been your average number of boys?—About twenty boarders and ten day boys, but at present the boarders are a little fewer. I have about fifteen boarders, but I never had as good a school of day boys; about twenty-five day boys. They are mostly the sons of farmers, and come long distances.

759. What is the prevailing religious persuasion of your pupils?—Presbyterians and Church of Ireland.

760. Your boarding school is exclusively a Protestant school?—No; I would take any boy, but I would not care to have a Roman Catholic boy.

April 1878.
 Rev. J. A.
 Wier, LL.M.

761. Have you had any Roman Catholic boys?—One—a day boy.

762. What proportion of Presbyterians have you?—The great majority of the day boys are Presbyterians; of the boarders, about seven or eight. Some years ago some wealthy Presbyterian business men asked me to allow their sons, who were boarders, to attend the Presbyterian Church in charge of a minister on Sundays. I took a pew in that church, and I have often had six boys in company with the minister attending there.

763. Of what religious denomination were your assistants?—All Church of Ireland.

764. Was there any facility afforded for Roman Catholic day boys attending your school?—Yes, I gave every facility.

765. At what hour of the day is religious instruction given?—At such a time as would not interfere with any. I open school at half past seven o'clock in the morning. Just before nine I have a chapter read, and read prayers myself. When the Roman Catholic boy was there I did not ask him to read English History. If endowments are to be given to the Roman Catholics, they must get them entirely, or else the failure of the model schools will be repeated over again.

766. LOAN JAMES FITZGERALD.—You have been twenty-two years at Raphoe?—Yes.

767. During that time have you had any visitation from the Commissioners?—Never, except Mr. Gray's, two or three years ago.

768. How do you manage the keeping of your buildings in repair?—I do it myself, and am repaid in part by the Commissioners, who have all along given about half the amount expended in repairs.

769. Was there any statement of what was required made by you to the Commissioners before the work was done?—Sometimes that did occur; but at other times I carried out what was absolutely necessary.

770. When you sent in your claims did the Commissioners ever suspect the work that had been done by any officer of theirs?—Never. At one time at my solicitation an infirmary was built. Mr. McCurdy, the architect, paid two visits during the building of the infirmary. He was the only officer I ever saw.

771. Have you any knowledge of the state of the estate?—No; it is in a very wild part of Donegal.

772. What exhibitions are there in Trinity College connected with Raphoe school?—None.

773. Have you any school exhibitions?—No; but when I went there first I solicited the Board repeatedly to give me something of the kind; at last they gave £20 a year, to be decided by examinations at the end of each year.

774. You have now £20 paid each year to six boys?—Yes; these boys are selected by me on my own judgment, and they are then examined, and the prizes awarded, by an Examiner appointed by the Commissioners.

775. Mention in order all that you get from the Commissioners in the year?—£100 a year for myself, £60 for the classics assistant, £40 for the mathematical assistant, and £20 for prizes.

776. How are the assistants that are paid by the Commissioners appointed?—By me.

777. Is there any control over your appointment or any superintendence by the Commissioners of the fitness of the assistants?—No; of course, I would not appoint them if they were not fit, that must be the rule. The head master's office is a despatch.

778. What proportion of your boys go to any university?—I send a very large proportion, indeed. I never got met a man who was fit to be made a classical man that I did not make him so.

779. Was there ever any application made by you to get any exhibition in Trinity College for your boys?—Yes, very often.

780. Would it have been an advantage to your school if your boys had been allowed to compete for the Royal scholarships with the boys from the other Royal schools?—Certainly.

781. Had you a considerable number of boys who, if that regulation had been made, would have been able to obtain those scholarships?—Certainly; and some of them would have been first.

782. Did you ever suggest to the Commissioners or they to you that that course might be taken?—Over and over again I applied to Dr. Kyrle, but he always told me the Act of Parliament barred the way.

783. Did you ever look at the Act of Parliament yourself?—No, I did not.

784. Then you are not aware whether the Act enabled the Commissioners to send so many exhibitions in Trinity College, "to be held by such persons, and under such regulations and restrictions as to the Commissioners might seem proper"?—I was not aware of that.

785. Have you any special class, or mode of teaching, for boys not intended for the University?—I give them a good English education; but undoubtedly I rather wish them to learn classics.

786. From what distance round about are you able to attract day boys?—Six miles. Three or four people ride in and put up their ponies in town.

787. Can you tell us generally what the boys, that are the sons of farmers and come from a distance, make of the education they get?—They go up for competitive examinations for the medical professions, the army and navy.

788. Of the class attracted to your school, what proportion are Roman Catholic?—The Roman Catholic population are not nearly so well off as the Presbyterians. Raphoe is the most Presbyterian district in Ireland. The Presbyterians hold all the land. They have entirely ousted the Episcopalians and Roman Catholics.

789. Among the Presbyterians who are attracted in this way, have you ever found any difficulty arising in the matter of religion?—None whatever. In fact the parents often told me they had no objection to their sons going to Church.

790. Are there in your neighbourhood any appreciable number of boys of the class that ought to be at your school but do not attend at it?—I think not.

791. What is your experience as to the success in Ireland of boys from English schools as compared with boys from Irish schools?—I do not think they are as successful either at the bar or in the medical profession, or as country gentlemen. As schoolmasters, too, they are total failures in this country. I don't know a single instance of an Englishman who has been a successful schoolmaster in Ireland.

792. What do you think would be the best number of boarders to have at a school for purposes of efficiency?—About sixty would be quite enough for anybody.

793. You told us you taught both classics and mathematics yourself. I believe you got distinctions in college in both branches; what were they?—On entering college I got second place; I got a second exhibition. I was habitually a first-class man in classics through my whole course. I got second scholarship in classics. I was habitually a second-class man in mathematics, and got a junior mathematical modicum.

794. Mr. WILSON.—What can you tell about the fluctuations in the number of boys in the Royal schools?—It is a very difficult thing to speak of. The country is not so prosperous. Then the abolition of the better class of livings in the late Established Church has destroyed one feature of the social system of Ireland. I suppose there is also something in the feeling of sending boys to England.

795. LOAN JAMES FITZGERALD.—How is your school supplied with furniture and requisites?—By myself. If I were leaving to-morrow I would sell everything.

796. Was any part of the expense of furnishing the school-house defrayed by the Commissioners?—None; I only got the bare house.

797. To whom do the accommodations necessary or useful for the convenient and proper keeping of the school, not your house, belong?—Myself. One great defect is that there is no land attached to the school; and land is so valuable at Kesh that it is more difficult to get it than about Dublin.

798. What number of boys have you accommodation for without crowding?—I suppose I could accommodate forty boarders.

799. Where do the boys that are boarding with you now in general come from?—From the county Donegal, the county Derry, and there is one from Tipperary. I have had them from all parts of Ireland.

800. About what proportion compared with those who go to Trinity go to the Queen's University from Kesh?—It varies. I would naturally wish to send any lad I could to Trinity; because I had been there myself; but a great many were anxious to go to the Queen's College.

801. Have your pupils obtained distinctions in the Queen's University?—The very highest.

802. What is open to boys at the Queen's College in the way of entrance exhibitions?—At entrance they can get scholarships of £30, tenable for one year. They may then with scholarships of £30, tenable for one year. At their degree examination they can repeat that and win a £30 exhibition, tenable for two years, and get a gold medal besides. That has been done more than once by my pupils, both in classics and mathematics. They were extremely successful in Belfast.

803. Which is it more difficult for a boy to get a Royal scholarship in Trinity College and keep it by getting the honours he is required to do year by year, or to get an entrance exhibition at the Queen's College?—It is a little more difficult to get exhibitions at Trinity College and keep them; but there is very little difference in reference to Belfast at present, for the Belfast College is rapidly becoming an outmost college both in numbers and distinctions and everything else. Belfast, as a city, before a hundred years ago would, will beat Dublin in everything.

804. Do you consider it an advantage to boys trained at the Royal schools that they should be allowed to go to the Queen's University to compete for its prizes?—Certainly. As to the whole matter, I think these Royal schools are a Protestant endowment worth about £4,000 a year. Any breaking up of the system, with a view to place schools of a similar kind in other parts of Ireland for the accommodation of Roman Catholics, would be a most enormous blunder, and quite a gratuitous one. You would confer no boon whatever on the Roman Catholics of Ireland, except by giving them an endowment to establish schools either in Dublin or the south of Ireland for themselves exclusively.

805. Mr. O'SHEA-SHERIDAN.—Is there any Roman Catholic boarding school in your county?—There is not.

806. Are there any Roman Catholic state endowments for intermediate education in your county?—I do not think there is one.

807. Are you preparing any of your boys to go in under the Intermediate Education Act?—Yes; I think about fifteen.

808. Do you think that it would be practically impossible to conduct intermediate schools for Protestants and Roman Catholics under the same roof?—Indeed, I think so. I say that with reference to the feeling of Roman Catholics. I do not think they would take it.

809. Mr. WILSON.—How many free boys have you at the school?—About four. I take every promising boy that I can get, and I even give them the books and everything else. I give liberally every assistance that I can. I never refused a free boy. I require only that he come fairly dressed; that he be a regular boy, and of good character, so as to be entitled to associate with respectable boys.

810. You have been always anxious for the attendance of day scholars?—Yes; and in general their education has been a very marked success. With an average of ten day boys when there were twenty boarders, the day boys have worked over them in point of distinctions, though I had rather clever boys as boarders.

811. Some of the day boys lodge in the town?—Some have come there to get the benefit of the education.

812. Is your school diminishing or increasing?—I have not so many boarders as I had; but in day boys it has largely increased.

Mr. WILLIAM CHRISTOPHER BLISS, M.A., examined.

813. CHAIRMAN.—You are head master of the Sligo Diocesan School?—The diocesan school of Elphin, Clonsilla, and Kilmacshagh, held at Sligo.

814. When were you appointed?—At the end of 1866.

815. What salary have you?—At present £163 5s. 6d.

816. Is that the sum that you have always had?—Since the disestablishment I have been much improved in point of money. What I had badly collected before myself the Church Commissioners now pay.

817. You have a fixed annuity?—Yes.

818. What number of boys have you?—At present I have twenty-five on the roll. The average attendance is almost the same.

819. What number are day boys?—Three are boarders and twenty-two day boys.

820. What education do you give—is it classical?—Much the same as I received myself at Armagh—Latin and Greek, English, and a little mathematics.

821. Any extra subjects, such as natural science or German?—No, I am sorry to say. There is one boy attempting to learn natural science, beginning with my assistant, but before that, though I wished to do it, I had no opportunity of introducing it.

822. Is French or German taught?—French is taught.

823. To all the boys?—To almost all.

824. What assistants have you?—At present one assistant.

825. What does he teach?—Principally mathematics, also English.

826. You take the classics yourself?—Yes; and the English literature.

827. Have you ever had a larger number of pupils than at present?—I have had a little over thirty—perhaps thirty-five.

828. Has the number shown signs of declining of late years?—Not of very late years. Perhaps just after the disestablishment of the Church it declined. Certainly it did so in boarders, but I don't think it did essentially in day scholars.

829. What other change besides improving your income has the Irish Church Act made in the condition of the schools?—I think it has decreased the number of clergymen who would be likely to send their sons as boarders.

830. Has it had any effect on the buildings?—No; the buildings have nothing to do with the diocesan school. They are at present leased to trustees who established a school previous to the diocesan school of Elphin being transferred to Sligo. Then the master of the diocesan school was also made master by these trustees.

831. Is it a terminable lease?—It was leased to the trustees for the purpose of education, and the lease will expire in 1888. The house is subject to an annual rent of £22.

832. Who are the trustees?—They are gentlemen in Sligo. Two are merchants, and the third was rector of the parish.

833. What do you consider the annual value of the house to be?—I believe it is valued for poor rate at about £38; and that is probably 20 per cent. under the ordinary letting value.

834. What are the religious denominations of your pupils?—I think they are about equally divided between Church of Ireland and other Protestant denominations.

835. Are your boarders exclusively of the Irish Church?—They are. I have had one or two Presbyterians.

836. Is any distinction made between different denominations as regards day boys?—None whatever.

837. Is there any religious instruction during school hours?—There is, so far as reading the historical books of the Old and New Testament from the text and nothing else.

838. Are all the pupils present?—All. They are taught that as part of the curriculum. There is no attempt to convey any particular religious idea. I particularly desire my assistant to direct the teaching to fact and not to opinion.

839. From what class are your pupils principally drawn?—The boarders are, and have been chiefly, the sons of clergy and medical men and some small landholders. The day pupils are the sons of professional gentlemen residing in the town, and of shopkeepers.

840. In what proportion are the day and school day boys divided as to religion in the town of Sligo?—I suppose there are more Roman Catholics—I thought there would be more Roman Catholics, but I found, on looking over the list of burgesses, that the number was not much in favour of Roman Catholics. Of 331 registered burgesses 157 are Protestants.

841. Your school, as an endowed school, is likely to cease to exist in the future?—Quite true. It is just gone on as long as I remain there.

842. You are bound to carry on the school?—Oh, yes, I am bound by law, as long as I wish to retain the endowments, to act either personally or by an efficient substitute, but, the endowment being so small, it would not be worth while to appoint one.

843. You cannot consider the annuity as your own?—Oh, no, it is contingent on carrying out the duties. It was open at one time to me to commute and compound, but that opportunity has passed.

844. LOUIS JENNIE FRINGESS.—What endowment has the school besides your annuity?—None whatever, except what interest it has in the house.

845. Was there not also some capital money produced by the sale of the old school house in Elphin?—The annual value of that was included in my annuity.

846. What has become of the capital value of it?—I believe it was seized by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. I learned from my predecessor that he prepared a case to recover the annual value from them, and they granted it to him without the case going into court, and so I got it. I suppose the capital value is now vested in the Church Temporalities Commissioners.

847. Your life interest remained for the purpose of education?—Yes.

848. But the capital out of which that life interest has come has gone into the hands of the Church Commissioners?—Quite so.

849. Was not your income originally paid as a tax by the clergy?—It was, principally.

850. Were you obliged to collect it yourself?—I was. I had to pay ten per cent. for collection in Glenties and Kilmacdonagh, it was thought so difficult to get.

851. I suppose the sum to be paid by each clergyman was very small?—For the most part very trifling.

852. Can you mention some of the sums?—St. John's, in Sligo, amounted to about £4, and from that they went down as low as 6s. or 7s., which was to be collected annually from individual clergymen.

853. Now the Church Temporalities Commissioners pay you directly?—They do.

854. And when you resign, the capital value of which you have the life interest, will remain in their hands?—Yes.

855. Do you know whether any steps were taken before the passing of the Church Act by the Commissioners in Clarendon, or any other person to preserve for the purpose of education the endowment of the diocesan schools?—I am not aware.

856. Was anything done to point out that this was really an endowment for education and was not church property, but a tax upon church property?—No.

857. Was there any communication made to you from Clarendon on the subject?—Certainly not.

858. And the result has been that the capital of this educational endowment is in the hands of the Church Temporalities Commissioners, subject to your life interest, and that terminable when you should resign?—Exactly.

859. You are a graduate of Trinity College?—I am.

860. What branch did you cultivate?—I only was in for honours in classics.

861. And you got honours?—I did. I took gold medal and second scholarship.

862. What was your age when you were appointed to Sligo. Under 32. I had left college in 1838 for India.

863. Is there any other school in Sligo that gives the same class of education as yours?—Not that I am aware of. There may be among the Roman Catholics. There is a school that gives a very good education, indeed, as far as mathematics, under the Incorporated Society, about three or four miles from Sligo.

864. What is the nearest good classical school?—I don't think you would get such a thing nearer than Tuam.

865. Is there any provision in the neighbourhood, as far as you know, for a high-class education for Roman Catholics?—I am not aware. I have heard that the Christian Brothers' school is successfully conducted.

866. The Christian Brothers' school, I believe, is a primary school with good classes in it?—Yes, educating very carefully the higher boys.

867. With the exception of that, is there any other school in or near Sligo for classical education except yours?—None that I am aware of.

868. What is the largest number of boarders you have had?—Ten is the highest number I can conveniently take into the house.

869. Did you find that there was a demand for a greater number of places for boarders than you were able to give?—I did.

870. What was your highest number of day boys?—From twenty-five to thirty. The largest number of day boys might not be consistent with the largest number of boarders.

871. What pursuits in life do your pupils generally follow?—A small proportion go to Trinity College. During the time I have been there, from ten to twelve, and two to the Queen's University; and of the rest I should say a considerable portion go to the medical profession; perhaps one half go directly to it without going to any college, and some go to other professions.

872. Did any of those that went to Trinity College become distinguished there?—Yes, some took first place at entrance; one got first place at a July entrance, and others fourth and fifth in October. One got a junior exhibition, and the other day another got a senior exhibition.

873. So that the education you gave was such as to enable your boys to compete with fair success with those that came from other schools?—Quite so; we were anxious to push on industrious boys.

874. Are those exhibitions funded by the Board of Trinity College?—Yes.

875. Is there any endowment open to the pupils of your school as such?—In the way of exhibitions, no.

876. How are your buildings at present kept in repair?—At my own expense.

877. And are you obliged to pay all the expenses of maintenance and furniture?—There are three or four old desks transferred from the Elphin school, and with that exception all the property is my own.

876. Is such a school as yours acquired as a permanent institution in Sligo?—I don't think there is much demand for a classical school, but if you could give a good English and modern language education, with Latin, at a moderate cost, it would be very acceptable.

879. Would it be possible to keep up your school without the endowment you have?—No, I don't think it would be possible, even with the endowment, unless a man had means of his own.

880. Then you brought to the school means of your own as well as your classical acquisitions?—I happen to have a small annuity from the Government of India, or else I could not maintain a family there.

881. Is the existence of the school dependent upon the maintenance of those endowments?—Certainly; I don't think a school could exist without it, and with it it would be very difficult now.

882. What number of scholars are in the buildings suitable for?—The buildings that belong to the school-house itself are not suitable for more than ten boarders, but I could add, at a small expense, adjacent buildings which belong to me.

883. Was it in any private benevolence or any public source that the low rent is attributable to?—Private benevolence. The landlord, with a view of promoting such a school in Sligo before the diocesan school was established there, gave this house at £22 a year nominally, but really at 1s. that is, during his life he never required the money to be paid.

884. Then it was on account of the actual want felt in the place that the diocesan school was brought to Sligo?—Quite so. The inhabitants themselves first established what they called an academic institution, and two or three years afterwards by Royal warrant the diocesan school was transferred.

885. How were you originally appointed to Elphin?—By the Lord Lieutenant.

886. Do you know how the master was appointed to that academic institute?—The master was appointed by the trustees who held the lease.

887. Had the school any success before it got the addition?—I believe it had a great success; it was warmly supported, and had more success than any school since; it was started before the model schools.

888. Is there a model school in the neighbourhood which competes with it?—It does not compete with it in the same class of education, but it makes parents content with a lower class of education.

889. Then if there was by means of endowments or otherwise a school of the higher class maintained in the town, would it lead the inhabitants to avail themselves of a better education than they can get in the model schools?—Yes; if they got it at a moderate cost, very little above the highest fee exacted by the model schools.

890. What are the highest fees in the model schools?—I believe they are about £1 a quarter.

891. What charges do you make for day boys?—The highest two guineas, and the lowest four guineas.

892. Does the scale vary according to the age or according to the kind of education?—According to the age. From eight to twelve they are admitted at four guineas, and after that they pay ten guineas, but there are many boys in the school that are at reduced rates. If any parent wishes to say that he is unable to pay the fees at all, his child is admitted free. If he says he cannot afford to pay the fees in the first and that he can afford to pay any other fee, his son is taken at such fee.

893. Has any one the right to say a boy shall be admitted free or at any special rate?—Not that I am aware of. That is done by myself.

894. What proportion of the boys that are attending your school have the advantage of a reduction?—I should say there are three at least out of the twenty-two day pupils.

895. Have any boys prepared at your school gone in during your time for any of the large public competitions?—No.

896. CHAIRMAN.—Did your present house, such as a diocesan school before the disestablishment of the Irish Church?—The diocesan school is placed in it, but this house has no real connexion with the diocesan school at all.

897. Had it ever any connexion with the church?—No.

898. There never was a diocesan school-house belonging to that part of the country?—Yes, the house at Elphin. The old bishop's house, I believe, or adjoining it was the old diocesan school, and that school went away to the Church-street Commissioners.

899. It had been disused as a school-house before the disestablishment?—It had.

900. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The preamble of the Act under which your school was founded (12 &c., s. 1) reads thus:—

"Whereas as the greatest number of the people of this poor Majesty's realm both of long time lived in rude and barbarous states, not understanding that Almighty God hath by His divine laws forbidden the unedified and ignorant offences, which they were not duly and lawfully to commit and perpetrate, nor that their souls by His Holy Scriptures commanded a due and honest education from the people in their prisons and jails, whose ignorance, in these so high points touching their damnation, proceeded out of lack of good bringing up of youth in their cities in public or private schools, where through good discipline they might be taught to avoid those felonies and hostile crimes."

I suppose the state of things is not quite so bad in Sligo and the adjoining counties as depicted there?—No.

901. But still there is a great want of a moderate commercial education for the shopkeepers?—I think there is a great want, and if they got good value at low terms it would improve their status.

902. Don't you think when a school began to be largely filled it would be much easier for a school-master and his assistants to give their services at lower terms than with a small school?—It would.

903. And, therefore, that useful and instructive middle class commercial schools, bringing large numbers to them, would pay?—If they had large numbers I think they would pay an adequate staff of masters in time—not immediately.

904. You have in the town of Sligo quite a sufficiently large middle class population to sustain such a commercial school?—I think so.

905. And quite a sufficiently large Roman Catholic population of that class to sustain a commercial school?—Certainly.

906. I see that your school was called The Elphin, Clonsilla, and Kilmacdonagh School; have you still pupils from remote places like Kilmacdonagh?—No, and never had or thought of having.

907. CHAIRMAN.—If you had a good endowment you could keep a school there, but a school cannot be supported there without an endowment?—If there was a valuable salary for a modern language master, say £100, and a capitation fee on each pupil, you would attract to the town a good master, and so a private school would feed the upper school. To attract boys from a very youthful age there ought to be a clergy certificated English master at a fixed salary also, and that lower school should receive boys at a very small fee, say 10s. a quarter.

908. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Don't you find it a great disadvantage, not to be able to get masters with some proof or testimonial of capacity?—Certainly it would be a great relief if one could refer to some authority or test. The only thing you can go by now is college distinctions.

909. I think you have found that your foreign modern language masters have not been very successful?—I found one man there when I went there, he died a short time after, I was told he was a very efficient man. The man whom I suggested, after great trouble and selection in London, was very well able to teach one or two, but he had no command to teach a class.

April 1, 1878.
Mr. W. C.
Eaton, & C.

910. What you suggest is to have Englishmen or Irishmen trained in those foreign languages to teach in place of those hapazard foreigners—I certainly would prefer a trained Englishman.

911. LEAD JUSTICE FIRSTGROSS.—You think a man who has learned the language himself as a foreign language is better able to teach it than a foreigner?—I think he is, but still better he is able to maintain discipline among boys, when a foreigner would fail.

912. Mr. O'SHEAVENIMY.—I understand you to say that the model school education is not an adequate intermediate education, but a primary commercial one?—High primary.

913. But the education they give there does not supply the want of an intermediate education for commercial purposes?—No.

914. Would you advocate the teaching of physical science?—I think it would be very desirable and would make the school much more attractive to the boys themselves.

915. Do you consider that a necessary part of an intermediate education?—It would be a very important part. It would interest boys who took no interest whatever in the grammar, Latin or Greek.

916. Then in the commercial class from which your pupils come you find a considerable number who do not take an interest in Latin or Greek?—I don't suppose more than ten per hundred take an interest even in Latin.

917. And you attribute that principally to the fact that they cannot see what use Latin would be to their commercial pursuits hereafter?—Yes, and they get no encouragement from their parents at home.

918. LEAD JUSTICE FIRSTGROSS.—What is the school cost of maintaining your school at present?—The number of day pupils is twenty-two, and five from day pupils for the year ending 30th April, 1878, amounted to £156; ditto, boarders, after deducting cost of maintenance, £15, total fees, £201. Adding maintenance, the gross income of the master is £266 5s. 6d. Then the outgoings—rent of the school-house, £23 (that would be payable to myself at present; I bought the interest of the landlord). The rent of playground, which is not included in the lease, £12; the team average 7s. in the pound on a valuation of £40—say £14; the repairs are exceedingly heavy on an old house like that—wear and tear and insurance, £25; that would include the cost of school requisites, but not the interest on the original outlay. Salary and maintenance of an assistant master, £25; that is quite inadequate to get a good master, but I could not chance giving more. School prizes, subscriptions to sports, &c., £10—that is a total of £148, so that, deducting the expenditure from the income, the balance left to the master is £118 5s. 6d.

919. I see you have deducted the cost of maintenance from the boarders' payments. What do you consider to be the cost of maintenance of each boarder so as to be at no loss for his keep?—I think, as we do it, as members of our own family, £25 each.

920. What would be an adequate salary for an assistant master?—£100, with his maintenance, would be a reasonable salary for a master.

921. How much of the £25 have you put down as maintenance?—£25, and I pay £60 as salary.

922. Is one assistant master enough for the school?—No. If the school were to increase in numbers, I should think there ought to be at least two more masters—one for modern languages and one for English.

923. Would each of those be an equal expense with the one you have mentioned?—They would. The modern language master ought to receive at least £100; the total ought to be at least £300.

924. You have put down only £32 as the rent of the house, and £12 for a playground. For what could you get such a house if you had to pay the market price for it?—It would come to about 270 a year for such premises as would be required.

925. And that would be altogether independent of any of the requirements of the Roman Catholic population?—Altogether independent.

926. Mr. WILSON.—What was the aggregate amount you received from the clergy?—The aggregate amount was normally something over £100 a year.

927. LEAD JUSTICE FIRSTGROSS.—Do you know what schools there are for the children of the Roman Catholics?—The Convent schools and the Christian Brothers' school.

928. Mr. WILSON.—Do they attend the model school?—I believe to an appreciable extent; there are, perhaps, ten or fifteen who do so.

929. LEAD JUSTICE FIRSTGROSS.—Between the date of your appointment and the passing of the Church Act, was there any visitation by the Clergy-street Commissioners of your school?—None. I had no communication with them, except the half-yearly form they sent to be filled up.

930. What was that?—There is a form sent out by them every half-year enquiring as to the master's salary, and the date of his appointment, name of his assistants, salary, by whom paid, number of pupils, boarders, day boys and free boys, what hours the school is open, what the head-master teaches, and what his assistants teach.

931. Was there any result of that form in the way of verification or returning it to you?—No.

932. Did you fill it up and lose no more of it?—Just so.

933. Besides the power of visitation, under the Act of Parliament, there is also a power of making rules, and enforcing orders and proceedings for the better management of any school. Were any such regulations for the management of your school ever made to your knowledge?—No; no regulation or direction of any kind. We, doctress schoolmasters, should have been glad if there had been any visitors or inspectors to come round, but we never had any attention paid to us at all, except that of the half-yearly form.

934. Did you yourself know anything of any other doctress school in Ireland?—No, except by speaking to the masters. I was in charge of Derry school for a short time.

935. Were you appointed there or only there for a short time?—Locum tenens merely, appointed by the schoolmaster during his illness.

936. Dr. HARR.—Are there a good many resident gentry in and about Sligo?—There are.

937. Mr. O'SHEAVENIMY.—Of course, there is no provision made for a retiring allowance to you?—None whatever.

938. LEAD JUSTICE FIRSTGROSS.—As a matter of fact, have not the higher subjects been taken up by the model schools and Christian Brothers' schools because there is no other way of teaching it; it is outside the ordinary curriculum of the model schools, so it will—I think most of it could be got with us. And if the model school ceased teaching Latin subjects, I think it would increase the demand for intermediate education in Sligo.

939. Are any boys from your school preparing for the Intermediate Education Commissioners' examination?—About fifteen out of the twenty-five; but it will be very difficult to get them to attend unless the examination is held in Sligo. I intend to offer one-third of the results fees to the boys on prizes; one-third to the assistant master; and I shall keep the other third for the good of the school. I think unless we give some inducements to the boys for going up, their parents won't send them.

940. As large a proportion as you can qualify for, I intend to go up to compete for the examination?—I intend them to go up, but I don't know their intentions. I presume if the place is convenient they will go for certainty; but when they find the examinations are so few and far between, it will be rather more difficult to get them to go in a second time.

(Adjourned to next day at 11.30 A.M.)

THIRD DAY—FRIDAY, APRIL 4, 1879; 11.30 O'CLOCK, A.M.

April 4, 1879.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—The EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; WILLIAM WILSON, Esq., M.P.; ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CREED MEREDITH, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. THOMAS HUGH FLEMING examined.

Mr. Thomas H. Fleming

941. CHAIRMAN.—You are accountant in the office of the Commissioners of Education?—Yes, I have been in that office nearly forty years.

942. By whom were you appointed?—By Dr. Kyle, the late secretary.

943. What salary did you receive?—I was appointed at £50 a year. My salary was raised gradually, and ultimately I received from Dr. Kyle £130.

944. Is that what you get at present?—No, in 1879 I petitioned the Board to take my position into consideration. I felt it was very precarious, and my salary very small; and after a good deal of discussion they decided to make me grants in addition to the pay I received from Dr. Kyle.

945. Where does the fund come from out of which you have been paid?—The estates. It is proportioned to the different schools according to their results.

946. The 4th sec. of the Act of George III., c. 107, is—

“And be it further enacted that it shall and may be lawful for the said Commissioners and their secretaries from time to time to appoint a secretary . . . with a salary not exceeding the sum of £700, and also such other sub-secretaries, officers, or clerks, as they shall think proper for the carrying into execution the purposes of this Act; and to certify to the Lord Lieutenant . . . such sum or sums of money as they shall deem adequate to defray the expenses of such officers, and the incidental expenses of the Board, whereupon it shall and may be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant . . . to issue out of the Consolidated Fund of Ireland such sum or sums of money to defray the expenses of such officers, and the incidental expenses of the Board as to the said Lord Lieutenant . . . shall seem fitting or convenient.”

Are you aware of that?—I was aware of it before I made the application to the Commissioners, but previously I did not know much about it. From time to time I heard Dr. Kyle say the Board had no power to appoint anybody.

947. Do they continue to pay you out of the income of the estates up to the present?—Yes.

948. What is your salary now?—£250 a year. I am now the Officer of the Board. Since Dr. Kyle's death, I have been appointed Clerk to the Commissioners. My duties will be principally to keep the accounts.

949. What have been your duties as accountant?—Keeping the various accounts of the schools, which must all be kept separate.

950. Your work is entirely office work?—Entirely; but after my long service I know a great deal of the details, having heard much of them from time to time.

951. You have no inspection of the estates?—No; nothing of that. The idea of the Board always has been that they had no power to pay inspectors, and, therefore, they could not appoint them.

952. Then the only inspectors they ever sent out to inspect the schools was Mr. Gray, &c. &c., about two years ago?—Yes. The Board looked upon his inspection as a casual visitation, in fact.

953. How was he paid?—He was paid £100, which was charged mainly over the schools visited.

954. You are aware, according to the Act, that was one of the incidental expenses which should have been repaid by application to the Lord Lieutenant?—I was not aware of it.

955. Were there any applications ever made to the Lord Lieutenant to pay the expenses of that visitation?—None, to my knowledge.

956. What does the annual vote for the Commission amount to? Is it a fixed sum?—The estimate which the Treasury sent us for the year 1879–80 is £840, the same as usual for some years past.

957. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—Is not what they sent you only a copy of what you had certified to them?—Quite so. The particulars of the estimate are—the salary of Secretary, £450; travelling expenses, £15; and incidental expenses, £175, total, £840.

958. What were the travelling expenses?—The expenses of one of the Commissioners who attends from the country.

959. And those have always been paid by the Treasury without objection?—For a very long time, I think it began in the time of Dr. Gibbon, a Presbyterian Commissioner, who lived in or near Belfast.

960. CHAIRMAN.—These incidental expenses were ordinary office expenses?—Yes, £150 went to the Secretary to pay his clerk and messenger, provide a board-room, and supply stationery, £20 was for law costs, and £5 for postage. Of late years, until the Board decided to make me grants, Dr. Kyle paid me £130 out of the £150, and he used to give me £5 donation every Christmas from the time I went to him; but from the time the Board decided to give me grants he cut down his allowance to me, and he only gave me £75 and £5 at Christmas.

961. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—What was the amount of increase or grant the Commissioners gave?—The matter was under consideration for more than a year, then they made me a grant of £100 for the period which had elapsed from the time I had petitioned.

962. What annual increase did they give you?—It varied from time to time; but at the time of Dr. Kyle's death I was receiving from them £170 a year.

963. That was paid entirely out of the school funds?—Certainly.

964. What did Dr. Kyle reduce his payments to you to?—He gave me £75—half of the allowance he received for office expenses—and £5 additional at Christmas.

965. Then the result was the school funds were burdened with £170, and Dr. Kyle was relieved of £45?—Yes.

966. Was there any alteration in the amount annually voted by Parliament?—No.

967. Dr. Kyle was benefited £45, the schools lost £170, and the Government gained nothing—is not that the result?—The Government gained nothing.

968. And your increase, which, as far as the Commissioners were concerned, was an increase of £170, was to you an increase of only £125?—Quite so. I felt it very hard that when the Commissioners acted so kindly Dr. Kyle should cut me down.

969. Dr. HART.—£150 was stated to be given for board-room and assistant; what is the meaning of board-room?—Dr. Kyle applied the use of the room for the board meetings and also for the office in his house, he was also obliged to pay a messenger and supply stationery.

970. CHAIRMAN.—Do you know anything of the management of the estates?—There are agents for the different estates, and they are resident or intended to be resident, except Messrs. Guinness and Mahon, of Dublin, who collect about £134 for Caryfort school.

April 4, 1878,
Mr. Thomas
H. Pilling;

191. Do the agents go to the office when furnishing their accounts?—They send them in, in writing; we make them account monthly. There is one exception, that of Captain Stewart, who does not furnish his accounts at all in the same satisfactory manner as the other agents do; he does not account monthly. At the same time the Rathfriland school estate is a very difficult one to deal with. I have heard that it is in a very lawless district; that there are a great many people there who don't recognize the law very much; that there is a great deal of illicit distilling, and so forth. It is a large tract with a great deal of mountain.

192. Do all the agents furnish half-yearly accounts?—No; they furnish cash accounts showing receipts and balances monthly, and at the close of the year they furnish an annual account based upon the rental. The vouchers are always sent with the monthly accounts.

193. Do the agents go over their accounts with the Secretary of the Commissioners or before an auditor?—The practice has not been so, the accounts are examined in our office, and if any necessity for an explanation appears, it is called for. Generally speaking, the accounts are very correct; but a personal interview would be very much better.

194. Do the rentals furnished contain explanations of any charges of tenants or rents?—Yes.

195. When anything is required in the way of improvements or any action is to be taken with reference to the non-payment of rent, what steps are taken to inform the Commissioners?—The agent writes to the Secretary stating the whole matter, and he lays them before the Board and takes their orders upon them. The agent would not act at all without orders, and these orders should be from the Commissioners themselves.

196. The whole thing is done by correspondence?—Generally; but occasionally agents have come to our office, and we have spoken to them on such subjects.

197. How are the agents paid?—25 per cent. on the collection.

198. Are there any other expenses? Do they pay all the subordinate officers, such as bailiffs?—They charge for all those things, and on the Danganoo estate there is an agriculturalist who receives £1 a week. Formerly he had 240 a year and an allowance for a horse. He was about leaving when a new agent was appointed, and there was an arrangement made that he should stay and receive £1 a week. The Commissioners were very glad he stayed, because he had been for a long time connected with the estate, knew all about it, and was able to help the new agent, who found his services valuable.

199. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—What were his duties?—Going amongst the tenants on the estate. He used to direct the tenants on their farms. I dare say he helped the agent in serving notices.

200. Chairman.—Was the agriculturalist's salary paid out of the rent of the estate in addition to the agent's 5 per cent.?—Yes.

201. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—In your original Act of Parliament I find the Board was composed of:—

"The Lord Primate, the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Archbishop of Dublin, the Lord Archbishop of Tuam, and their respective coadjutors, the Lord Chief Justice, the President of Trinity College, the four bishops to be appointed hereinafter to serve by the Lord Lieutenant, one bishop for each province in Ireland, together with four other proper and discreet persons whom the Lord Lieutenant for the time being shall think fit to appoint, each person to be removable, at three as appointed, by the Lord Lieutenant at his pleasure."

And then by the amended Act there was added:—
"The Archbishop of Cashel, the Chief Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant, and the member to be chosen to serve in Parliament for Trinity College, Dublin, now and hereafter for the time being."

At the time of the passing of this Act there was only one member for Trinity College?—Yes.

202. And subsequently the number was increased to two?—It was.

203. Since the number was increased to two has anyone been summoned or treated as a member of the Board under that notification?—No; there being a doubt as to which of the members was the proper one, the doubt was solved under the advice of, issued by summoning neither.

204. Has the Chief Secretary at any time within your experience attended any meeting?—Sir William Somerville attended, but I don't remember any Chief Secretary since.

205. There is now no Archbishop of either Cashel or Tuam?—No.

206. Does either the Bishop of Tuam or the Bishop of Cashel receive a summons, as it were, in substitution for the Archbishop?—No.

207. For the past few years has the Archbishop of Dublin attended any of your meetings?—He very rarely attended.

208. Has he attended at all for the past three years?—Not for the past three years.

209. Do you remember Archbishop Trench attending at any time?—Certainly not. I can say that I do not remember any attendance of any Archbishop of Dublin.

210. Looking through your minute book for 1877 and 1878, I find that the Lord Chancellor appears to have attended on the 1st April, 1878, and on no other day?—The attendances are correctly reported there.

211. Has the Lord Primate attended?—His Grace has sometimes come.

212. I see he attended on the 29th November, 1877, and not at all in 1878?—I dare say that is quite correct.

213. Now, as to the next class of persons to be appointed, the second section of the Act 3rd of George IV., cap. 73, says:—

"It shall and may be lawful to and for the Lord Lieutenant . . . to appoint two other proper and discreet persons, who shall be usually resident in the city of Dublin to be Commissioners."

Who are the two at present appointed as Dublin resident Commissioners?—Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick is one, and Rev. J. H. Jellitt, rector, is the other.

214. I find Mr. Jellitt attended 22nd February and 29th November, 1877, and never again during that year; and in 1878 he appears to have attended some seven times altogether?—No doubt that is correct.

215. Dr. Kirkpatrick is one of the most constant attendants?—He and the Provost were the most regular attendants. Mr. Berkeley used to attend frequently, but he dropped off.

216. Do you keep a regular attendance book, independent of the minute book, showing the attendance of each Commissioner?—No.

217. You are directed, within fourteen days after the 25th March in each year, to make a general report of all your proceedings to Parliament. Have you ever reported to Parliament the attendances of your Commissioners?—Not as part of the report; but we made returns to Parliament on one or two occasions, when specially asked for them.

218. Has any list of attendances of your Commissioners been placed before the Lord Lieutenant?—No.

219. The Lord Lieutenant is authorized to appoint four other proper and discreet persons whom he shall think fit to be appointed Commissioners, removable at his pleasure, but not necessarily resident in Dublin. What persons, if any, have been appointed since that class?—Mr. Berkeley is one, and Mr. Justice FitzGibbon is another.

220. The next class of appointments that the Lord Lieutenant was empowered to make was four bishops—one from each of the provinces. What bishops are members of your Board?—The Bishop of Limerick is the only one.

221. Do you remember what bishops besides the Bishop of Limerick was on the Board!—The late Bishop of Tuam.

1002. Referring to the minute book, I find that the Bishop of Limerick attended only once in 1877, and apparently only twice in 1878!—He is not a regular attendant. He lives in Limerick, and, I have heard, his health has been very bad. That, perhaps, interfered with his attendance.

1003. You are aware that, under the 5th section of the Act of Parliament, a quorum of your Board is three?—Yes.

1004. Look to the minutes of the 18th January, the first meeting in 1877, and read the attendance that day and the note in reference to it.

* Present—the Provost of T.C.D., Rev. Mr. Berkeley, and no other member of the Board attending, those present retired.

1005. Was there any business transacted on that day?—No.

1006. The minutes of the business transacted on the 19th March, 1877, state:—

"Rev. L. E. Berkeley alone attended, the Provost and Mr. Jellett being obliged to meet by Excelsior the Lord Leinster in T.C.D. at that hour, and Dr. Kirkpatrick, being taken ill by a dog, were unable to be present. Mr. Berkeley signed the below-stated drafts, which were subsequently signed by the Provost and by Dr. Kirkpatrick."

For what amount were cheques signed that day by a single Commissioner?—£439 4s 6d.

1007. Explain the process by which the signatures of the other two Commissioners were attached to those cheques?—The practice has been on occasions of this kind that Dr. Kyle would send the cheque-book, perhaps, to the Provost or Dr. Kirkpatrick and get them to sign in their own houses. The cheques were cheques payable to people who would be inconvenienced by the delay.

1008. Under the 8th section of the Act of George III. an annual report is directed to be laid before Parliament under the hands and seals of the Commissioners. Look to the minutes of the 26th June, 1877, was that a meeting at which an annual report was made?—Yes.

1009. Read the minute as to the attendance of Commissioners, and the transaction of business that day.

"Thursday, June 26th. Present.—The Provost, Dr. Kirkpatrick. The Commissioners present signed the annual report, which was subsequently signed and sealed by the others whose names appear attached to it."

1010. What names are attached to it?—"H. Lloyd, Provost, &c.; J. D. Fitzgerald, William B. Kirkpatrick, &c.; L. E. Berkeley, John H. Jellett."

1011. Then it was, in fact, signed and sealed by three Commissioners not at that meeting at all?—Yes.

1012. On that occasion the report was signed and sealed without having been laid before a legal board at all?—That was so.

1013. When was the next meeting after that?—The 29th July, 1877.

1014. Read the minutes of that meeting.

* Present.—The Provost, &c.; Rev. Mr. Berkeley. The Commissioners present discussed the different matters in the agency book, compared receipts with cheque-book, drew the agency cheques necessary to pay all the August salaries, and lay express and clearing, and then separated. No other Commissioners having attended, the Bishop of Limerick subsequently signed the cheques."

1015. About how much money on that occasion was paid away?—Nearly £3,000.

1016. What was the next meeting?—27th September, 1877.

1017. Read the minutes of the attendance and business.

* Present.—The Rev. the Provost and Dr. Kirkpatrick. The Board attached the corporate seal to a power of attorney to Messrs. Deane and Burns, stockbrokers, to re-treasurer to Mr. Mann, their late agent, a sum of £1,000 for permanent New Three per cent. stock, which he had transferred to this Board as part of his security as their agent, all balances due by him, having been paid into the bank to the credit of this Board."

April 4, 1878.
Mr. Thomas
E. Fording.

1018. Having regard to the provisions of the 3rd section of the Act of Geo. IV., that the common seal may be affixed to any instrument at any meeting of the Commissioners by any three, of whom the Provost, Chancellor, or any of the Archbishops, the Chief Justice, or the Chief Secretary, or Provost shall be one, was that power of attorney ever submitted to any legal meeting?—It is just possible the record may not be correct. I think Dr. Kyle was too careful in a matter of this kind not to have a legal board present at the use of the seal. Mr. Berkeley was present at that meeting, for further on in the minutes I find—

"Mr. Berkeley, at whose suggestion the sum of £20 had been entrusted to him for the purpose of sinking a well at the school-house, reported:—"That in consequence of unfavourable difficulties in procuring good water, the cost had far exceeded what was expected, but that the water was excellent and abundant."

1019. Was that a written or a verbal report?—Verbal.

1020. Turn now to the 25th October. Is that the next meeting in order?—It is.

1021. Read the minutes.

"25th October, 1877. Present.—The Provost, &c.; Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick. A third Commissioner did not attend, but those present signed the drafts which were necessary to pay the numerous Royal scholars their stipends, payable November 1st, as well as the other required drafts which were subsequently signed by Mr. Jellett, who was prevented from being present."

1022. What amount were the quarterly payments there?—About £1,000.

1023. Turn to the minutes of 9th May, 1878, and read the entry.

* Present.—The Lord Bishop of Limerick, and the Rev. Doctor Kirkpatrick. No other Commissioners attending, those present, after remaining nearly an hour, separated."

1024. Was there any business transacted?—None.

1025. Turn to the 26th September, 1878, and read the minutes.

"26th September, 1878.—The Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick was the only Commissioner who attended. Whilst waiting the arrival of other Commissioners, Dr. Kirkpatrick compared receipts with the books of cheques, and initialed books as usual."

1026. Did any other Commissioners attend that day?—No; but there were no drafts signed. The position as to comparing receipts is this: At each meeting the receipts were produced for the amounts for which cheques had been drawn at the former meeting, and as one of the Commissioners examined each receipt he initialed the book of the cheque.

1027. Turn to the 21st of November, 1878, and read the entry of the business on that day.

* Present.—The Provost at T.C.D., Rev. J. H. Jellett, &c., and written in the margin, "Dr. Kirkpatrick." Secretary read the report, and submitted the table of marks sent by the Bishops, which were read and discussed by the Commissioners present whilst waiting the arrival of another member."

1028. It is plain from that that Dr. Kirkpatrick was not there at that part of the business at all?—I recollect the transaction.

1029. Read the last sentence.

"They also considered the case of Rutledge, a Royal scholar of Ennisballymore. . . . Dr. Kirkpatrick, who arrived shortly after the departure of the other two Commissioners, fully went into this case, and approved the decision of the other members."

1030. That is, he went into the case after they left, and in that way, made out a quorum?—Yes.

1031. During the forty years you have known the Board, has there always been the same difficulty of allowance, not salary, as are herein suggested by them, and which they consider will be but equitable as regards the additional work imposed on the office, by their order."

"Oppose.—I am of opinion that the Commissioners may, from time to time, make such payments to their clerk, not by way of salary, for any extra work done by him beyond that he is called upon to do as clerk, such work to be noted with respect to the agency and management of their estates, and what would have to be done by some person, and paid for accordingly.—(Signed), R. Down.—13/3/72."

"A very long discussion arose upon these documents and on the former minutes, &c., on this subject, and it was resolved, That in conformity with the opinion of the Attorney-General given upon the case submitted to him by direction of this Board, a grant of a sum of £100 be now made to the Secretary's clerk in consequence of the extra labour thrown upon him and the office by the officers of the Board, in connection with the agency and management of their estates, and grant to be charged reliably on the accounts of the estates, respectively, the grant being for the period intervening between the presentation of the clerk's memorial and the present date, the grant to be retrospective and for the time past."

1053. What addition, if any, in the nature of your duties has taken place since the extra payments by the Board began?—There was no change.

1054. Is there any separation of other year time or occupation with regard to what are called the orders of the Board as reference to the management of the estate and your other duties?—No, there is no separation.

1055. Out of what fund were the costs of these two cases and opinions paid?—They were charged over the school accounts.

1056. So that those cases and opinions do not appear upon the annual certificate to Parliament?—No.

1057. Was there ever any certificate to the Lord Lieutenant that your Board deemed it necessary to increase the allowance for incidental expenses?—There was a letter on the subject written by Dr. Kyle to Mr. Chief Secretary Fortescue when Chief Secretary for Ireland, on 23rd December, 1870.

1058. Read that letter.

"Rep.—I have the honour to transmit by order of the Commissioners, a copy of a resolution adopted at a recent meeting of their Board; and I was directed to express their hope that you would use your best influence to have their recommendation therein contained carried into effect. And I was further ordered to state to you the confidence of the Commissioners individually to wait upon and to give to you personally any information in their power in reference to the subject, in case you should think fit to direct any of them to do so."

1059. What was the resolution referred to?

"Ordered.—That the Secretary do write to the Chief Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant stating that the members of this Board, having on several occasions had under their consideration the amount of the allowance (£150 per annum) made thirty-five years ago for the incidental expenses of this Board, are unanimously of opinion that this sum is now wholly inadequate for that purpose; and that the Chief Secretary be informed that the necessity for bringing this matter before the attention of the Government arises from the fact that this Board has no power to apply any of the funds under its control for such a purpose; that the recommendation of the Board is that the sum of £150 should be increased to £200 per annum, and its application should be placed wholly under the management and at the disposition of this Board."

1060. Have you the answer?—I have:

"Dublin Castle, 4th January, 1871.
 "Gentlemen.—In reference to your letter of the 28th ult., forwarding a copy of a resolution adopted by the Commissioners of Education in Ireland on the subject of the allowance for incidental expenses of the Board, I have to request that I may be furnished, for the information of the Lord Lieutenant, with an explanatory statement in writing on the subject, such as can be forwarded to the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury."

1061. Was such a statement sent?—It never was sent.

1062. And was there any further correspondence on the subject with the Government?—No further correspondence.

1063. Was that letter even acknowledged?—It was not.

1064. Read the minute of your Board on that letter, if there is any.

"13th January, 1871.—The Secretary read a letter from Mr. T. H. Burke to the Commissioners in reference to their resolution, forwarded by their Secretary pursuant to order, in which Mr. Burke requests that an explanatory statement in writing as to that resolution may be forwarded to him for the information of His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, and such as can be forwarded to the Lords of the Treasury. Secretary was asked had he prepared any reply thereto. He stated he had not done so, reasoning the Commissioners that the application for an increase of the grant paid had not in any way emanated from him, that his position in this matter was a very peculiar one, and that the application referred against his consent. That all this was fully admitted by the Board when the matter was previously before the Board, and when the resolution was drafted by the Commissioners themselves, and he was directed simply to transmit it as their act, and to state that their individuality would, if desired, give personal explanation as to that, and pointed out that Mr. Burke's letter was to the Commissioners themselves and not to their Secretary. The Commissioners admitted fully that the reply to Mr. Burke's letter should be prepared by the Commissioners themselves and not by the Secretary, whose position in this matter was quite peculiar, the present grant being made to himself personally by Government and he not making any application for an increase of it. A very protracted conversation took place. It was felt that the transmission of the resolution was somewhat out of order, without notice, and not quite consistent with the previous resolutions in reference to Mr. Treasury's estimate, but that, as it had been sent and an explanation had been called for by Government, a written explanation must be prepared by the Board which had ordered the resolution to be forwarded. The Secretary stated that he wished it to be done gradually, and that, in case the application of the Commissioners for an increase of the incidental expenses should succeed, he would not continue to give to Mr. Fleming his present allowance of £12 per annum. The Board quite took the same view of this matter as the Secretary, and it was agreed that the Board be specially summoned for Friday next, 26th inst., especially to consider a statement to be made by the Commissioners in reply to Mr. Burke's letter, submitted not to be prepared by the Secretary, but by Commissioners themselves."

1065. Was the special meeting held?—Yes. There was another meeting held on the 21st April on the same subject.

"Present.—The Lord Chief Justice, the Right Hon. Judge Fiddisall, and Mr. Baskley. The Secretary stated, that in the absence of Dr. Kirkpatrick, who had undertaken to, and who actually had prepared a draft answer from this Board to the Under-Secretary's letter on the subject of Mr. Fleming's (debt to the Secretary) expenditure, nothing could be done in the matter."

1066. What is the next minute on the subject?

"On the 26th April, Dr. Kirkpatrick read the draft letter which he had prepared as an answer to the letter of Mr. Burke on the subject of the application for an increased grant. The resolutions of the Board heretofore came to, &c., &c., were referred to, and a long discussion ensued as to the reply to the Government letter and the power of this Board. The Lord Chief Justice stated that he would fully consider the matter before the next meeting of the Commissioners, with a view to forwarding a reply to the letter of Mr. Burke; and for this purpose took away within the Acts of Parliament. The Secretary, in accordance with the views of the Commissioners heretofore expressed, taking no part in reference to applying for an increase of the grant."

1067. Were the minutes of your Board read and signed at the succeeding meeting?—Neither read nor signed.

1068. Who wrote the minutes?—They were all written by Dr. Kyle, except the lists of the receipts and drafts, which were written as by me.

1069. Was there ever any chairman at your meetings?—Not formally. There is no chairman recorded in the minutes; but, if the Provost or any other ex officio member was present, he might be regarded as the chairman.

1070. Read the next minute on the subject, 26th May, 1871.

"The memorial of the Secretary's clerk and the former proceedings thereon, were read by the Secretary. Dr. Kirkpatrick produced a paper which he had, as suggested,

April 4, 1878.

Mr. Thomas
H. Deane.

prepared as an answer to the letter of the Under Secretary. A long discussion arose, in which the Chief Justice, Judge Fitzgerald, Mr. Justice Keogh, and others, took part. The Chief Justice expressed a strong opinion that the Commissioners could, as in numerous other cases, the management of the estate, and the troublesome and voluminous accounts connected therewith, make a great saving of costs in proportion to its value, and thus augment the salary that the Secretary thought fit to grant to himself. Judge Fitzgerald looked to the Acts of Parliament applying to this Board, and expressed considerable doubt on the matter. And it was ordered notwithstanding a strong recommendation from the Secretary, that the Secretary do himself, and not through the solicitor of the Board, prepare a new setting out of the views of the Chief Justice, to be submitted to the Attorney-General for his opinion and advice. The Secretary agreed that this course was not quite professional as within the course of his duties. Ultimately, it was ordered that the Secretary should draft a case, and send it to the Lord Chief Justice to revise, and subsequently to Judge Fitzgerald, and then to the Attorney-General, with a paper for his opinion and advice.

1071. So far as you know, did any of the learned judges whose names are mentioned in that minute ever take it read at any subsequent meeting of the Board?—It was not the practice to read the minutes.

1072. Is there any further minute in reference to the answer to Mr. Healy's letter?—I think certainly not.

1073. So that the matter dropped?—It dropped. There was no further communication with the Government.

1074. Produce your annual report to Parliament of the proceedings of that year.—It is dated June, 1872. 1075. Read it.

"We, the Commissioners of Education in Ireland, constituted and appointed pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Parliament passed in the 51st year of the reign of His late Majesty Geo. III. respectively submit to your Excellency a general report of the proceedings of the Board since then last report. In many of our former annual reports, heretofore in those for 1862-70 and for 1870-71, we took the liberty to submit to your Excellency's consideration suggestions (which appeared to us to be most important) for the saving and the improvement of the very limited pecuniary resources of the Commission, in reference to the funds which form the endowments of schools constituted to us; and also as to the selection, control, promotion, and superintendence of the teachers. We urged the necessity that order for the appointment of paid visitors or inspectors of schools and establishments generally, and we pointed out certain alterations in our constitution which, in our opinion, would be of great public advantage, and having heretofore brought these matters specifically under your Excellency's notice, we feel that we now sufficiently discharge our duties in respect to them, and accordingly and respectfully, but urgently, rendering your Excellency's attention to the annual reports attached to us. A considerable portion of our time and attention is, of course, devoted to the several estates vested in us, and which, under our control, are managed by land agents resident in their respective vicinities; and we have the satisfaction to report that the tenantry on these estates are generally well conducted and peaceable, and that the payments of the rents calls for no complaint from us. We have, under the advice and supervision of our architect, caused to be expended on the respective school-houses and premises such sums of money as have been voted to us in requisite to keep them in a sound and satisfactory condition. At the Lough Royal school we have, in addition to the outlay thereon referred to in our last annual report, found it necessary to approve of plans for, and to order the erection of, additional class-rooms and other buildings there in connexion having been found to be quite inadequate for the accommodation of the increased and increasing number of pupils. As regards the Royal schools of Drungavan and Enniskillen, we have to report that the attendance of pupils continues to be numerous, and the establishments are improved to be in excellent condition. The present state of the Royal schools of Carrin and Carrigrohane does not call for any special remark from us. As regards the Royal school of Raphoe, which is placed in a thinly-inhabited locality, we are happy to be in a position to state that the number of pupils is considerable, and appears to be steadily increasing, and that the annual report on the examination recently held in the school-house speaks in laudatory terms of the endowments of the school, and of the present Head Master, and of the conduct of the pupils. Of the private endowments in connexion with this Commission, that of St. Hilary, in the county Cork, is the most successful. The local visitors and government-inspectors, who recently held visitations and examinations there, have reported most favourably upon the establishment, and its general management and success under the charge of its present Head Master. This school appears to be one of the most successfully attended of its class in the south of Ireland. The primary school, which, in the face of strong opposition, we some time since established for the benefit of the tenantry of the Drungavan school estate, has proved to be a very great advantage to the neighbourhood; the pupils having become so numerous that we have felt ourselves necessitated to increase our expenditure in connexion with it. The returns from the masters of the primary schools established by us for the tenantry of the Narcan and Ballyvaughan and Raphoe estates show that they are of great benefit to their respective localities. We have further to report to your Excellency that the two primary schools in connexion with the endowment at Tully, in the county of Clon, are carefully superintended by the trustees, who have notified us in that they are of very great benefit and very fully attended by the children of the landholder classes resident in that locality. We have so frequently reported specially as to the Royal schools founded by us in Trinity College, the several competitive examinations that must be successfully passed before obtaining them, and the continuous gaining of honours during the years of course to prevent the forfeiture of these highly-prized exhibitions, that we do not feel called upon to report more specifically our former statements in reference to them, but we beg to annex to this our report a list of the names of the persons holders of these exhibitions, and the respective amounts payable to each, as also a copy of our most recently published rules and regulations for the examination to be held for the next appointment."

1076. Then there was no reference in the annual report to the correspondence in reference to the allowance for incidental expenses?—None.

1077. I find that the control of the Raphoe estate is referred by the agent, Mr. James H. Stewart, as £253 18s 9d, and that the amount received during the year ending 1st November, 1877, was only £405 7s 3d, and that the amount then returned as due amounted £1,041 11s 11½d. What steps have been taken by your Board to reduce the amount of rents upon the estate?—I do not think there were any special measures taken.

1078. Do you remember any instance in which any agent of yours was discharged with arrears?—None; it was not the practice to do that. The arrears were simply carried forward from year to year.

1079. I see that £1,821 was the sum earned forward from the year before, and that was increased to £1,911. That is £120 additional arrears on a rental of £223. Was any communication made to Mr. Stewart on that subject?—Dr. Kyle wrote this letter to him on 17th June, 1878—

"Dear Sir.—On investigation of your accounts up to the 1st November, 1877, I feel bound to call your attention to the fact that they are in every way most unsatisfactory. An enormous increase of arrears of rent is exhibited. And I am to tell you to use active and immediate exertions to diminish the arrears, which you have permitted to be so very much added to. I regret being obliged to write in so peremptory a style, but I cannot avoid doing so."

1080. The rental as £253 18s 9d, the money received, £405 7s 3d. How much of that was lodged to the credit of the Commission?—£233 16s 9d.

1081. What became of the balance?—That was never paid for outgoings, poor rates, county cess, and income tax, which were all rendered; Thomas Carter, one year's salary as teacher, to the 1st August, 1878, £20. He was the schoolmaster of Terenure, the tenantry school.

1082. Was that deduction of £20 a year for the tenantry school made out of the funds of the Raphoe estate under the authority of the Board?—The Board established that school, on the opinion of the Law Adviser of the day, about twenty-two years ago.

1083. What is the percentage allowed to Mr. Stewart as agent?—He gets ten per cent.

1084. Is there, in addition to ten per cent, £17 paid for built?—Yes.

1085. Do all those Raphoe tenants hold from year to year?—They do.

1085. Has any valuation been made within your memory with a view to ascertain whether the property is fairly, or under-valued?—I do not think there was any more of that kind.

1087. Has there been any substantial increase of rent of recent years?—If a farm became vacant there might be a few shillings additional put on the increasing tenant; but there was no important change.

1088. Was there anyone ever sent to the place with a view to examine the present letting of it?—No.

1089. When farms did fall vacant who let them?—The agent.

1090. Did the Commissioners require a valuation on the occasion of any new letting?—No.

1091. On what evidence do they act in sanctioning the letting?—In the case of a farm falling vacant it would be let on the same terms. If there were arrears due the agreement would be that those arrears should be paid up, and the farm would be let at the same rate over again, or at some very small increase.

1092. Are there any leases on the Raphoe estate with the 160 tenants?—None.

1093. Do you know whether the Raphoe estate is in a tenant-right district?—I do not think it is.

1094. CHAIRMAN.—Is the rental exactly the same year by year, as a general rule?—I think generally. In the case of the Dungannon estate there were some little variations.

1095. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEGROVE.—The rental of the Raphoe estate brings the rent only down to the 1st November, 1877. When was it furnished?—On the 28th June, 1878.

1096. When was the £238 lodged to the credit of the Commissioners?—On the same day.

1098. When was the account of the Carran estate up to 1st November, 1877, lodged with your Board?—On the 8th October, 1878.

1099. Was your Board in the habit of allowing their agents' accounts to remain almost the whole year overdue?—Mr. Benson, the agent on that estate, always sends his monthly account regularly, and therefore if occasionally his annual accounts and rentals were a little late we would not be disposed to press him.

1100. In this account I find there are sixty-six tenants. The yearly rental is £669 7s. 1d. The amount received during the year was £535 6s. 3d., but the arrears are £1,689 16s. 8½d.—That is a very old score running on for a very long time.

1101. There is an increase of arrears during that year of very nearly £60, and further, at the date the account was furnished there was another year's rent almost due?—That is so, but Mr. Benson generally gets the rent in very well.

1102. Has there been any step taken, in your recollection, with regard to that estate to ascertain whether it is let at the value or not?—No, I think not.

1103. Where there were new lettings on the Carran estate, were they communicated to your Board before or after they were made?—I think in cases of that kind the agent would put an observation in his rental and explain how he had acted, and that he had done so after the best consideration.

1104. On this rental £33 2s. 6d. is returned due by John Lamb, up to 1st November, 1877, on a holding, the rent of which is £9 11s. 7½d. per annum. Read the agent's note!

* Since the 22nd November last I have urged John Lamb to pay his rent, like the other tenants of the estate, but in vain. I was obliged to proceed against him by distress last year, and it was only in October of that year I succeeded in getting the rent which I accounted for on July. At the time of taking out the distress that year, I told the County Judge that if he'd settle a year's rent of his holding I'd be satisfied, and this in the hearing of Lamb. It is not for want of means he refuses to pay, as I have been assured, but a disinclination to pay rent.

1105. Has any step been taken by your Board in that case?—The case of Lamb is settled and the rent paid.

1106. At No. 15 on the rental I find Edward and John Lamb returned as owing £151 2s. 8d. on a £27 18s. 10d. holding, and nothing at all received during the year. Is that explained?—Yes. The agent's note is—

"Over £160 has been lodged in Ulster Bank, Carran, in agent's name, by the person who wishes to become the representative of Edward Lamb, towards the payment of any portion of the arrear due by him, which the Commissioners may think sufficient."

1107. What action have the Commissioners taken in reference to the £151?—I think the case of the Lambs was mentioned at the Board not very long ago.

1108. The amount received on that estate during the year was £535 6s. 3d., and £480 was the amount received by the Commissioners, and a balance is returned on due by the agent of £15 12s. 1d. What percentage is Mr. Benson allowed?—Five per cent.

1109. At what dates were the lodgments to the credit of the Commissioners made?—10th December, 1877, £400, 9th March, 1878, £40, 11th June, 1878, £40.

1110. When was the Enniskillen account for the year ending 1st November, 1877, lodged?—On the 24th July, 1878. It is the largest estate, there are 327 tenants, and the rental amounts to £2,157 8s. 3d.

1111. Are the tenants, generally speaking, tenants from year to year also?—They are. There is one tenant in the town of Enniskillen held on lease.

1112. The total amount received during the year is £2,157 8s. 11d. Is the same gentleman the agent at Enniskillen who is agent at Carran?—Yes, Mr. Benson.

1113. What arrears are due on the Enniskillen estate?—£638 7s. 3½d. was the amount up to 1st November, 1877, when the agent's account was furnished on the 24th July, 1878.

1114. The account of the Dungannon estate appears to be in two parts?—Yes; there is a big rental and a general rental. They are both furnished by the agent, Mr. Moore.

1115. I observe that account was received on the 16th May, 1878, but ends with 1st November, 1877?—Yes.

1116. It has a reconciliation at the foot?—Yes; it states that—

"The rental for 1878 was £1,739 4s. 1d.; and for 1877, was £1,733 18s. 9d., which is less than the rental for 1876 by £5 7s. 1½d., which was deducted from the rental of the several tenants through whose holdings the new railway line runs."

1117. What is the gross rental of that estate?—£1,739 4s. 1d.

1118. How much was received during the year?—£1,689 8s. 1d.

1119. What arrears were due to 1st November, 1877, as contrasted with 1st November, 1876?—£63 8s. 1d. on 1st November, 1877, as against £4 2s. 4d.

1120. Does your evidence, that there has been no revision of rent for forty years, apply to that estate as well as to all the others?—It does, generally.

1121. Do your agents, upon any of those estates, furnish reports as to the state of the different holdings?—Mr. Wynn, who was formerly agent of the Dungannon estate, and is now the agent of the Armagh estate, in sending forward his accounts and rentals, has been in the habit of sending such a report.

1122. Is Mr. Wynn the gentleman whose management of the Dungannon estate was spoken highly of, in the report of 1867?—The same.

1123. I see that on the Dungannon estate you have an account of money advanced to the tenants, from time to time, to aid them in improving their holdings by the purchase of lime, and for that sort of thing. We are gradually extinguishing that, it was needed on to the extent of £200 or £300 by the late agent, Mr. Wynn, but the present agent is gradually discontinue it.

April 4, 1880.
Mr. Thomas
H. Fleming.

April 6, 1878.
Mr. Thomas
H. Fleming.

1124. In the account of the Dungannon estate I find you pay £30 a year to teachers in the King's Island National school?—They are the teachers in the tenantry school, which is in connection with the National Board.

1125. Dr. Hare.—Have you any idea why the system of loans for tenants was discontinued on the Dungannon estate?—The new agent, perhaps, might not be as clever at it as the former one, and the Commissioners thought it as well that it should be put an end to.

1126. LEON JENNIE FERGUSON.—When was Mr. Wynn's account for Armagh estate furnished?—On the 18th April, 1878, up to 1st November, 1877.

1127. In that instance the rental is £1,452 11s. 8d., and the sum received £1,513 6s. 4½d., showing a reduction of arrears from £70 10s. 11d. to £10 2s. 0½d.?—Yes.

1128. That estate appears to be held by 107 tenants from year to year?—Yes.

1129. Have you ever found, during Mr. Wynn's management, any accumulation of arrears at all?—There may have been from year to year, occasionally, very small arrears, but he generally collects them afterwards.

1130. Has that estate been left without a revision of rents, for the same length of time as the other estates?—I think, in the case of Armagh, Mr. Wynn was allowed to get a revaluation of the property; not so much with a view to any increase of rents or anything of that kind, but for his own information.

1131. Was it upon his suggestion that was done?—It was.

1132. I am he is allowed, in addition to five per cent., £31 salary for a bailiff?—Yes.

1133. By how many tenants is the Brougher estate held?—Only by eleven tenants. It is a very small estate, the rental is £179 7s. 3d., and there is a turf account of £9 11s.

1134. Upon that estate I see there are no arrears?—It is a clear rental.

1135. There is £169 12s. 2d. returned as a balance in the agent's hands. What was done with that balance?—was he called upon to pay it?—He lodged it. He furnishes quarterly accounts, and is very correct.

1136. Messrs. Guinness and Mahon are the agents for the Caryfort estate?—Yes.

1137. Caryfort, I see, is held by twenty yearly tenants?—Yes.

1138. What is the rental of that estate?—£132 1s. 6d., and there are no arrears.

1139. Have the Commissioners, so far as you know, any books in their office showing the poor low valuation of their different estates?—No, I think not.

1140. Can you tell us, for example in the case of the Caryfort estate, whether it may not be let at half the valuation?—I cannot.

1141. No comparison of the valuation with the rents has ever been made to your knowledge?—No.

1142. Where is the Caryfort estate situated?—In the county Wicklow.

1143. Have the agents recommended any changes of tenancy, or do the new tenants appear on the rental without observation?—If they change a tenant they would be likely to make an observation that they had done so.

1144. But the rent would not be changed?—I think not. As well as I remember, it has been the same for a very long time.

1145. Have you an account of the amount that may be standing to the credit of, or the debt that may be due by, each of those schools?—Yes; we balance half-yearly, but we make out a yearly balance sheet showing all the receipts and expenditure in the year.

1146. I see you have a separate account in your ledger for each of the schools?—Yes.

1147. What has been the practice of your Board with regard to expenditure for repairs?—In very many cases the schoolmasters send up estimates, and occasionally these estimates have been referred to Mr. McCurdy, and then the repairs are ordered and executed.

1148. You heard the evidence of Dr. Steele, that for ten years and a half he did all the repairs himself at Enniskillen, and that he was not aware that the Commissioners were under any obligation to do ordinary repairs?—Yes.

1149. Is it a fact that for ten years and a half the ordinary repairs were done by Dr. Steele?—I suppose they were. When he went there the Board laid out a good deal of money.

1150. During those ten years and a half was anything done by the Commissioners to ascertain what the condition of the buildings, from time to time, was?—As he asked for nothing, I do not think there was.

1151. Did the question of the state of repair of any of the schools come before your Board at all?—Only when there was an estimate or an application for payment for them.

1152. There were the school buildings allowed to take care of themselves, unless the schoolmasters chose to repair them?—The schoolmaster was the officer of the Board, to a certain extent, and if there was anything that required repair he should notice it, and not allow disbursements to occur.

1153. Then it is the fact that the schoolmaster alone was the person who could tell whether the buildings were repaired?—It is so.

1154. The making of any expenditure for repairs, and the ascertaining whether there was any necessity to repair at all, depended on the schoolmaster applying for the money?—I think so.

1155. Has that been so as a general matter of practice?—I think so.

1156. Under your Act of Parliament it was one of the duties of your Commissioners to apply such sums of money as should be deemed necessary for the purpose, towards repairing or furnishing the school-houses together with other appliances and accommodations necessary or useful for, or towards, the convenient and proper keeping of, the schools therein. Have your Commissioners ever visited those schools?—There was visitation a great many years ago by some of the Commissioners—Dr. Kington, I think, was one of the Commissioners who went. That was, I think, before the Commission of 1857.

1158. Has any one, either from time to time or at any time, supplied any information to you, Commissions as to the necessity for repairing or furnishing any of those school-houses or supplying appliances for teaching?—There was no person on the part of the Board sent down from Dublin or anything of that kind; but if repairs were certified by a master to be necessary, an estimate would be obtained and sanctioned by the Board.

1159. Look to the minutes of the 3rd June, 1875. You see a notice of motion by Dr. Kirkpatrick in reference to inspections?—There is a minute here with regard to inspections.

"The necessity for regular inspection of the schools under the Board by persons competent to do so, and to be paid by the Board, for inspection, having been brought under consideration, the Commissioners present were strongly of opinion that if possible paid competent inspectors should be appointed. The Secretary stated that Mr. Roberts had had always been considered that this Board had not the power to pay for inspection; that Government Commissioners had so reported; and that in several of the annual reports from this Board, it had called upon the Government to grant them power to appoint and pay inspectors. Ultimately, after a long discussion, Dr. Kirkpatrick gave notice that at the next meeting of the Board (on the 25th inst.) he would move that an inspector be appointed who shall visit the schools under the superintendence of this Board, and whose remuneration shall be paid from the funds of the schools which shall be inspected."

1160. Look at the minutes of the 25th June, 1875, and see what was done on that.—The minute is—

"The Secretary read the case and opinion which, pursuant to order, had been obtained from the Right Honorable the Attorney-General as to the power of this Board to pay inspectors for inspecting the various schools under its charge. Copy opinion.—I have read the patent and the Acts above referred to, and, on my opinion, it then the Commissioners have no power or authority to apply any portion of their funds for the purpose of remunerating persons deputed by them to inspect and report upon their schools? On the opinion of the Attorney-General having been read considerable discussion ensued, and it was ultimately resolved that, it appearing desirable that a visitation of the Armagh, Cavan, Donegal, Enniskillen, and Raphoe Royal schools should take place, a visitor should, pursuant to the powers given by the Acts of Parliament in this behalf, be appointed to visit the schools at the latter part of this year, if possible; and that, if the Rev. T. T. Gray, M.A., will undertake the duties of visitor (deputy), warrants, &c., he hereafter prepared for him, the Secretary, in the meantime, to put himself in communication with Mr. Gray on this subject and report the result to this Board.

1161. That was the origin of Mr. Gray's appointment?—It was.

1162. I said you have to the credit of the Armagh Royal School £1,019 15s. 3d. Government stock?—That represents the purchase-money of some land taken from the school estate by a railway company, and is to be regarded as capital.

1163. Chesham had £484 11s. 11d. stock, is that an accumulation of the annual rents not used for the purposes of the school?—Yes.

1164. Is there, in addition, any cash to the credit of this school?—Yes, £560 4s. 10d.

1165. Again, to the credit of the Cavan school I find £2,145 9s. 5d. cash, and £3,362 16s. 6d. stock?—Quite so.

1166. How long has the cash been lying idle in the bank?—That balance has been accumulating for some time, on the 31st December, 1876, it was £1,671 5s.; on the 31st December, 1877, £1,954 6s. 5d.

1167. How long is it since any money was invested in Government stock for Cavan school?—The last investment was in June, 1874.

1168. What sum was invested then?—£2,980 7s. 8d., which produced £3,259 9s. 6d. stock.

1169. How long had that been accumulating?—A very long time. There had been no previous investment within the period from 31st December, 1869, and without referring to the old ledgers I cannot say how long before.

1170. How much cash had you in 1869 belonging to Cavan school?—On the 31st December, 1869, you had £3,927 6s. 11d.

1171. Dr. HARRIS—Was there between 1869 and 1874 any large expenditure on Cavan school?—No; but advances from the Cavan funds were made to other schools.

1172. Lord Justice Fitzgerald—Where do the Commissioners bank?—With the Bank of Ireland.

1173. Do you know every month what balance you have to your credit there?—Yes.

1174. Does the bank account include the funds of the Royal schools, the private endowments, and the diocesan schools?—Yes.

1175. What was the amount in bank to the credit of the Commissioners on 1st January, 1878?—£9,383 4s. 3d.

1176. What through the year?—On the 28th February, £9,663 8s. 6d.; on the 30th March, it was £9,567 1s. 5d.; on the 30th April, £9,349 17s. 1d.; on the 31st May, £9,188 17s.; on the 29th June, £9,126 2s. 6d.; on the 31st July, £9,169 11s. 10d.; on the 31st August, £7,340 8s. 7d.; on the 30th September, £7,300 8s. 7d.; on the 31st October, £7,366 15s. 3d.; on the 30th November, £7,308 5s. 3d.; and on the 31st December, £7,831 11s. 11d.

1177. Were you allowed any interest on your balance?—No.

1178. So that during the whole year 1878 you might have had £7,260 invested, and yet all the time have had a balance at your bankers?—It appears so.

1179. What amount of Government stock is there to the credit of the Royal schools?—£7,774 8s. 2d. Government stock. Of course, there are one or two schools in debt to the others.

1180. What was the total amount of stock belonging to the Commissioners on 31st December, 1878?—A sum of £1,411 15s. 3d. to the credit of the Cavan school, £17,100 16s. to the credit of the six endowments of private foundations (Athlone, Clonmel, Eyre-court, Midleton, Newry and Ballymore, and Tollymore); making, with the amount to the credit of the Royal schools, a total of £24,269 19s. 11d.

1181. On whose suggestion were investments made; whose duty was it to bring the matter before the Commissioners?—At one time the Right Hon. William Brodie was a Commissioner, and he said something about the balance being invested, subsequently to that it was done at the suggestion of the Secretary.

1182. What steps were taken in reference to the project of establishing school exhibitions while you had all this money?—The matter was considered by the Board on the 25th June, 1875. The minute is as follows:—

"Special commission in English, &c. The Secretary submitted the written replies, which he had received from the different schoolmasters, to his circular in reference to the proposed English and mercantile course, and as to school exhibitions. A protracted debate ensued, and it was ordered.—That the Secretary do send all the papers on this subject to the sub-committee, viz., the President, Rev. Dr. Kirkpatrick, and Rev. J. H. Jellett as anti-committee, to consider and report and advise upon."

On the 19th November the matter was again considered, and the minute appears:—

"The sub-committee produced a report which they had prepared in reference to school scholarships, an exhibition or prize. A protracted discussion took place. The intended report was withdrawn, and the President gave notice that on Thursday, 29th, he would move a resolution on this subject. All the papers bearing on the subject were handed to the committee."

1183. What was the next step?—The minutes of the 25th November, 1875, are as follow:—

"The President made a statement as to exhibitions, &c., proposed to be founded in connection with the schools, and produced tables of calculations founded on returns prepared in the office in support of his plan. A protracted discussion arose, and it was ordered.—That the Secretary do forthwith have the tables and plan printed, and sent to the Commissioners before the next Board."

The minutes of the 2nd December record:—

"The President stated his arguments in support of the proposition brought forward at the recent Board; and all the Commissioners having been furnished by the Secretary with printed copies of the plan, and the calculations on which it was founded, a very long debate ensued, in which all the members present took part, and the President's plan was unanimously adopted, and ordered to be embodied in the printed regulations in reference to Royal schoolmaster endowments for 1876, and a copy sent to the editor of the University Calendar, as well as to the different schoolmasters."

1184. A copy of that plan was sent to all the Royal schoolmasters?—Yes.

1185. What communication took place with Mr. Moore, of Cavan school, on the subject?—On the 8th December, 1874, the Secretary had sent the following circular to the masters of Armagh, Donegal, Enniskillen, Cavan, and Raphoe schools:—

"Dear Sir,—The Commissioners having taken into consideration the question of granting money prizes of moderate amounts—£5, £3, and £4—on the results of examinations of daily pupils (which may be considered a superior class of daily pupils) and mercantile classes, are desirous of having from you any practical suggestions as to the manner of awarding and details which may occur to you on this subject, and I am therefore to request that you will have the goodness to forward such to me at or early date."

* Faithfully yours,

"W. C. KYLE, Secretary."

1186. Did you receive suggestions from Mr. Moore and others?—We did. These were part of the papers referred to the committee.

1187. What became of the proposal to found three prizes in Cavan?—On the 5th June, 1875, there was a further circular sent to Mr. Moore, as well as to the masters of Armagh, Dungannon, Raphoe, and Enniskillen schools—

"Sir.—It having been frequently brought under the notice of the Commissioners that there is in the mind of the public at large a very strong impression that the nature of English education, given at the Royal schools, is mainly subsidiary to the classical course of instruction given therein, and not such as is fitted for pupils requiring a high-class English and mercantile education, the Commissioners, with a view to doing away with this feeling in the public mind, have unanimously adopted the resolution, of which you will find a copy attached hereto, and I am directed to request that you will, on or before the 24th instant, forward to me, for the information of the Board, such practical observations as may occur to you in reference to the examinations for the proposed prizes, and the general order of carrying into effect their resolution."

"Faithfully yours, W. C. Kye, Secretary."

Resolved.—That with a view of giving an impulse to education in the English and mercantile course to such pupils as are not looking forward to entering on any of the learned professions, money prizes shall be granted to such pupils at Royal school at a public examination to be held at Christmas or Midsummer in the following subjects:—Reading, penmanship, writing from dictation, writing proofs, arithmetic (high-class), book-keeping, geography, history, English literature, and French or German for the higher prizes. The amount of the prizes resolved to be granted is as follows:—Five prizes not exceeding £10 each. Ten prizes not exceeding £5 each. All to be given on the grounds of superior merit alone."

1188. Was there any further communication to Mr. Moore on the subject?—No, he was left out when the circular establishing exhibitions and prizes was sent to the masters of the other schools, I believe, in consequence of the want of success of his school.

1189. Was any letter sent to Mr. Moore informing him of the final determination?—No, I do not think there was anything more communicated to him.

My belief is that he was not told anything more about it.

1190. Was there ever any proposition to establish anything of the kind at Raphoe?—There never was. Raphoe had no balance of either stock or cash to its credit.

1191. Have your Commissioners always acted upon the construction of the Act of Parliament that they were obliged to keep each school's money to itself?—The accounts are separate, but they have applied the surplus funds of one school to the benefit of another; for instance, in 1874, when there were balances against Banagher and Raphoe schools, Carran money was taken for Banagher to the extent of £805 2s. 1d. and £69 10s. 6d., making together £874 12s. 6d.; and for Raphoe to the extent of £347 3s. 8d. and £374 18s. 3d., making together £721 1s. 10d.

1192. Were those sums finally paid over to the credit at Banagher and Raphoe, or were they treated as debts due by those schools respectively?—Certainly not, they were paid over to those schools.

1193. By what authority was that done?—Under the Act of Parliament; the construction upon which the Commissioners have acted is this, that any balance that stood against any one school at the end of the year upon the general maintenance account, they were at liberty to pay out of any surplus they had from any other school.

1194. I find on the 31st December, 1878, there was a balance against Banagher of £313 8s., was not that paid off by charging £100 against Enniskillen and £119 8s. against Carran?—Yes.

1195. So that for the past year, during which it appears that Banagher had sixteen scholars, Enniskillen has paid £100 and Carran £119 8s. towards its maintenance?—Yes.

April 4, 1879.

FOURTH DAY—SATURDAY, APRIL 5, 1879, 11.30 O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—THE EARL OF ROSKE, Chairman; LORD JUSTICE FITZGERARD, RICHARD O'SHEAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; WILLIAM WILSON, Esq., M.P.; ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; and ARTHUR WILK CURTIS, Esq., LL.D., with JAMES CREED MURPHY, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

MR. PATRICK KEOU JOYCE, B.A., recalled.

Mr. P. K.
 Joyce, B.A.

1196. MR. O'SHEAUGHNESSY.—Do you now produce the letter from the bishop which you mentioned in your evidence on Wednesday?—Yes.

1197. Read it.

"Bishop's House, Newcastle, Co. Longford, January 10, 1877.

"Dear Sir,—I am unable to see how you can consider yourself 'unduly and unjustly humiliated,' or 'subjected to the indignity of answering irrelevant questions,' because your bishop, who finds himself described in some of your publications as patron of your school, has sought to learn whether the school is such as he can conscientiously recommend to his flock.

"His reasons for making the inquiry were these—

"He believes that the Queen's College are not fit places for the education of Catholic youth, and he has frequently warned his people against these Godless institutions. He heard that you, the head-master of a school of which he is described in the public journals as patron, were yourself attending lectures in the Queen's College, Galway; and that some of the boys in your school were making preparations to enter the same college. Under these circumstances he felt it to be no objection to you, but rather his plain duty, to inquire how far your connection with the Queen's College had affected the Catholic character of your school, and through whose souls he more properly made such inquiry than through the clergyman who have the pastoral charge of the parish in which the school is situated."

"I wrote this to assure you that it would give me the greatest pleasure to see your school flourish as a good Catholic school. I thank you for the pains you have taken in writing to me at such length, and I am willing to make every allowance for some expressions which I am sure you now regret having permitted yourself to use.

"I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

"A. G. CURTIS."

1198. DR. CURTIS.—Have you a copy of your letter to the bishop to which that is the reply?—Not an exact copy; I have the first draft at home, and will produce it.

Mr. Thomas
 H. Fleming.

MR. THOMAS HYUN FLEMING recalled.

1199. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERARD.—You are acquainted with the contents of the minutes and with the general proceedings of the Board?—Yes.

1200. How long have there been two vacancies among the four members of the Board appointable by the Lord Lieutenant at his pleasure?—I think there was one vacancy which the Government did not fill up for a considerable time. It was caused by the death of Master Lyle.

1201. Who are the present members of your Board, and to what classes, under the Act, do they belong?—The Lord President, the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Chief Justice, the Provost and the Chief Secretary, are the ex-officio members.

The Bishop of Limerick is one of the four Bishops. Mr. Justice Fitzgerald and Mr. Berkeley are two of the four appointable by the Lord Lieutenant; and Dr. Kirkpatrick and Mr. Jellett are the two Dublin residents.

1202. Since the death of the late Bishop of Tuam, has there been any other bishop on the Board?—The late Bishop of Meath, Dr. Butler, was a Commissioner.

1203. Has your Board ever invited the attention of the Government to the existence of vacancies?—On the 25th of September, 1874, Dr. Kyle wrote to Mr. Burke, the Under Secretary, as follows:—

"Sir,—I take the liberty to call your attention to the fact that by the recent death of the late Rev. J. G. Porter a vacancy was caused amongst the members of this Board. I may also mention that no appointment has ever been made to the vacancy caused by the death of the late Master Lyle."

1204. Did you receive any reply to that?—I think not.

1205. What was the next communication on the subject of vacancies amongst the Commissioners?—A letter from Mr. Burke, on the 5th of April, 1875, to the late Dr. Kyle:—

"Sir,—I am directed by the Lord Lieutenant to acquaint you, for the information of the Commissioners of Education, that his Grace has received from the Right Honorable William Brookes a notification of his resignation as a member of that Board."

1206. That made three vacancies?—Yes.

1207. Was any notice taken of the two previously existing vacancies?—No.

1208. What was done about those vacancies?—On the 5th of May, 1875, the Rev. J. H. Jellett, M.A., F.R.S., was appointed a Commissioner in the room of Master Brookes, resigned.

1209. How often did he attend during the year 1877?—The minutes record two attendances by him in that year.

1210. Have the Government any means of ascertaining, without special inquiry, whether the Commissioners appointed are attending or not?—No.

1211. Was there any further appointment made?—Mr. Jellett was the last member appointed.

1212. That shows, therefore, there are two vacancies amongst the members, and that they have now existed for upwards of four years after an intimation to the Government that they did exist?—That appears to be so.

1213. Was any member of your Board, except Mr. Jellett, appointed since 1874?—I think not.

1214. Can you tell me the date of the appointments of the present Commissioners?—Not without hunting through the minutes, we did not keep any dates opposite their names.

1215. The 12th section of the Act of George III. empowers the Commissioners to "Direct that any sum, or sums of money, belonging to any of the said schools, the estates belonging to which are vested . . . shall be laid out and invested in such Government funds and securities as such Commissioners shall from time to time think proper, and that such share and proportion as they shall think proper of the income and profits of all funds or estates applicable to the support of such school or any of such schools, shall be paid and applied to and for the sole use and benefit of the schoolmaster of such school for the time being; and if it shall appear . . . that one or more under-master or under-mistress are necessary . . . then it shall be lawful . . . to order and direct that such other share or proportion, as shares and proportions . . . as they shall think proper shall be applied to the sole use and benefit of the under-master or under-mistress, respectively."

Whichever, if any, was made from time to time by the Commissioners as to the necessity for any under-masters, or as to the proper rate of paying them?—The head master would state, as in the case of Dungannon, for instance, whether there was a certain allowance to the master there, and whenever changes were made they would notify them to the Board.

1216. Were the Commissioners in the habit of considering, before appointments were made, what was the necessary staff of under-masters, and what ought to be their payment?—In the case of Baniskillen there was an under-master taken off when the number of pupils did not come up to a certain number. I think it was fifty, but the under-master was again allowed after the pupils had reached the proper figure.

1217. Read the minute of the 26th of May, 1871, in reference to the under-masters at Baniskillen.

"The Board then went into the consideration of that petition of Mr. Steele's application which referred to £150 per annum for salaries, and which had been postponed from a former meeting. The Secretary submitted, in obedience to order, a statement showing the attendance of pupils at Portora, in each year, from the date of his appointment up to the date when the sum £150 had been granted, viz., six and a half years; and it appearing that during those six and a half years Mr. Steele had actually paid more than £250 per annum, out of his own pocket, in salaries, and that the number of pupils in each year had fluctuated sixty, and that those pupils had not been properly relieved by Mr. Steele on former occasions.—It was, as an equitable measure, resolved to accept Mr. Steele for the annual expenditure of £150 per annum, for the six and a half years already to do, and a draft for £975 was accordingly drawn; and it was further ordered that the Secretary do intimate distinctly to Mr. Steele that the Board had unanimously decided that it will not, on any future occasion, permit any part of these charges of Mr. Steele, which have been so frequently and fully considered and decided to be re-opened or re-estimated, and that he must consider those questions as now finally and wholly closed."

1218. When was the sum £150 a year granted?—On the 5th of January, 1864.

1219. What was the previous allowance?—£50 per annum.

1220. Has not Mr. Steele received £500, for assistant masters, annually, from 1864?—Yes.

1221. Was not the £975 paid to him on the 26th of May, 1871, paid in respect of the years ending 5th of December, 1863?—Yes, in respect of the six and a half years preceding the termination of the £150.

1222. During that six and a half years was the question considered at all by your Commissioners, so far as you know, what under-masters were necessary, or what share or proportion of the property should be applied for their benefit?—I am not aware.

1223. Read the minute of 30th January, 1864.

"The following memorial from Mr. Steele was read by the Secretary:—'That the Royal School, Baniskillen, now was in a more prosperous condition than it is at present, whether regard be had to the number of pupils or to the disbursements obtained in the Universities and at the public competitive examinations. That, in accordance with a resolution of your honorable Board, memorialist has had for the last six years a claim for an additional assistant master, at the yearly salary of £150. That the prosperity of the school is endangered by the want of a detached hospital and its inefficiency caused by the want of sufficient school-rooms. That the estimated cost of an hospital in 1860, and of a school-room sufficient to accommodate all the boys is £796. That memorialist, notwithstanding his immense outlay in permanent improvements at Portora, amounting to upwards of £2,000, is willing to contribute half the sum necessary to erect an hospital and school-rooms, if your honorable Board be graciously pleased to vote him the other half, and in accordance with the resolution referred to appoint an additional assistant master, at a salary of £150 a year. That the necessity for a detached hospital has again been urged that memorialist believes it to be his bounden duty to have one erected immediately, even though he should be left to bear all the expenses himself. Memorialist hopes that your honorable Board, taking the measures into consideration, will grant him the additional assistant master and such hospital assistance either in the way of immediate grant or half-yearly instalments as may seem reasonable towards the erection of an hospital and school-rooms.'

The above document, which had been sent to each member of the Board by Mr. Steele, having been very fully taken into consideration, it was ordered that the salary of £550 be restored for additional teachers, the Secretary to express the gratification of the Commissioners at the great success of this school, and a hope that the benefit of the great endowment might be made as useful as possible for daily pupils, and for the inhabitants of Kensington."

1224. Then the Commissioners had before them in 1864 the fact that Mr Steele had a claim for the six years before, for the £1361.—They had.

1225. What exceptional expenditure was made on Banagher school in 1873, which rendered it necessary to pay £219 8s. for that school out of the funds of two of the other Royal schools?—There was £214 7s. 6d. spent on repairs during the year.

1226. What was the state of the Banagher school account for the half-year ending the 31st December, 1873, the half-year immediately before Mr. Joyce's appointment?—The expenditure upon the school during the half-year was £20 2s. 10d., leaving a balance of £100 2s. 1d. against the school.

1227. How did it stand for the half-year ending 30th June, 1874?—The £295 2s. 1d. previously due was paid out of the funds of Owen school during the half year, but at the close of it there was a balance against the Banagher school of the total expenditure of that half-year, viz, £100 13s. 1d., which included £61 9s. 7d. for repairs.

1228. In the succeeding half-year, ending 31st December, 1874, £29 10s. 5d., expended on Banagher school in repairs during the year, is charged against the funds of Owen school?—Yes, the £61 9s. 7d. and a further sum of £9 0s. 10d.

1229. I find this note at foot of the accounts of Banagher school for the last half-year of 1875:—

"A balance of £275 remaining due on former advances by Government on account of this school, the Government has approved that the balance shall be received by them in yearly instalments of £50 each, the first to be paid on or before the 31st of March, 1874."

Do you know how long that balance of £275 had remained due to the Government?—I believe about fifty years.

1230. Was it liable to any interest?—No.
1231. Was it an advance obtained under the powers of the Act of Parliament that enabled you to get money free of interest?—It was.

1232. In the accounts for the half-year ending 30th of June, 1875, this memorandum is appended:—

"R. Owen, balance on account for rebuilding school-room. Money consumed by me, £29 14s. 6d."

Was the school-room insured?—It was, for £150, which we got from the insurance company.

1233. Was the full sum expended on the buildings?—It was, and £28 14s. 6d. more.

1234. What were the next charges for repairs at Banagher?—£5 during the half-year ending 30th June, 1877, and in the succeeding half-year £4 10s.

1235. How were those sums finally charged?—Against Owen Royal school estate, on the second half of 1877, thus:—Balance of expenses, restoring burnt school-room, £28 14s. 6d.; cost of repairs executed in 1877, £9 10s., making £38 4s. 6d. We endeavored, as far as we possibly could, to recoup Banagher. The balance of £25 2s. which stood against Banagher on 31st December, 1877, was also discharged out of the Owen funds in the first half of 1878.

1236. In the half year ending the 31st December, 1878, I find £290 charged for repairs at Banagher.—Yes.

1237. How did it happen that although nearly £360 had been spent after the fire, and that the annual expenditure on repairs had been such as I have referred to, Banagher school required £290 to be spent on repairs in 1878?—It is a very large old fabric, and the roof of the main building required to be thoroughly repaired. The building that was burned down and restored was the school-room building, it is connected with, but is different from, the main house.

1238. When will your lease of that house expire?—

The lease expired about a year ago, and we have got a short renewal.

1239. Did you actually expend £290 when your lease was about to expire?—Quite so; we were obliged to put the premises into a certain state of repair, even if we were giving them up.

1240. Thus being a leasehold which you were under a covenant to keep in tenable order, was anything done while the lease was running to ascertain whether the covenant was being kept?—From time to time the repairs necessary, according to the representations of the trustees, were made.

1241. Do you know of any officer of the Board having been asked to examine the condition of Banagher school?—The expenditure recently made was on the recommendation of the architect, Mr. McCurdy.

1242. So that Mr. McCurdy will be able to tell us how long the place was getting into the state in which he found it?—Yes, and the extent of the repairs, and so forth. It is a very old place, and would require considerable outlay. The funds being very small, the Board wish to expend as little as possible on it.

1243. In the Armagh School Account on the 29th of June, 1873, I find charged repairs, £231 16s. 6d., miscellaneous disbursements, £141 15s. 1d. What, in contrasted with repairs, &c., at £231 16s. 6d., is included in miscellaneous disbursements, £141 15s. 1d.?—They are totally different items. There are no repairs included in the miscellaneous.

1244. Have you a miscellaneous account that will enable you to tell what was the claim of expenditures included in that £141 15s. 1d.?—Yes; £51 17s. 4d. was five per cent. discount allowed to the tenants for prompt payment on account of the failure of the flax crop, and in pursuance of this minute of the Board:—

"29th of January, 1873. Read a petition from a number of the tenants praying an abatement in their rents in consequence of the failure of the flax crop. Read letter of the agent recommending that an abatement of five per cent be made to all those who are paid their rent. Agent's suggestion approved."

The charge for miscellaneous disbursements also included £17 16s. 6d., part of the £109 granted to me, a sum of £15 allowance for improvements to the Widow Jane Purser, of Kilcon, a tenant; 2s. 7d. for printing rent notices; £6 5s. on account of sitting at gymnasium apparatus; a proportion of a sum of £4 7s. for Government account sheets.

1245. Why was not that item charged against the incidental expenses of your Board, and included in the certificate to the Treasury?—The practice was not so.

1246. Did you ever estimate for it?—Not that I am aware of.

1247. Was that £4 7s. spread over all the accounts?—Yes, as well as small items of petty cash, £1 4s. 6d., and 8s. 4d. for a cheque-book. The item for miscellaneous disbursements also includes a portion of a sum of £50 paid to Mr. McCurdy, the architect, the amount of his fees on building works. I cannot now tell exactly how much of that was for Armagh, but I think there must have been about £40 or £45.

1248. In the second half-year of 1873 I find £63 8s. 3d. charged for miscellaneous disbursements. Of what was that composed?—There was £47 11s. part of a grant to me, and the remainder was composed of small items for sundries.

1249. So that in that year Armagh contributed to your payment £45 7s. 6d. 1.—Yes.

1250. What amount was spent for new buildings at Armagh in the first half of the year 1873?—£660.

1251. And for repairs?—£135 13s.

1252. In the second half of the same year how much is charged for new buildings?—£214 18s. 8d.

1253. For repairs?—£117 14s.

1254. For miscellaneous disbursements?—£21 16s. 6d.

1255. Of what is that item chiefly composed?—Mr. McCurdy, the architect, balance of fees for works executed, paid to him for Armagh, £21 3s. 6d.

April 4, 1888.
Mr. Thomas
H. Fleming.

1236. What was the expenditure charged against Armagh during the first half of the year 1876?—Poor rate and income tax, £41 11s. 7d.; exhibitions, £75; office-stampage, £44 18s. 3d.; postage by agent, 10s. 6d.; county cess, £19 7s. 6d.; agents and bailiffs, £180 4s. 8d.; rent and taxes, £31 18s.; teachers' salaries, £275, ditto (Mulhegheer), £37 10s.; miscellaneous disbursements, £43 11s. 11d., and £14 17s. 11d.; repairs, &c., £143 11s. 11d.

1237. What was it during the last half-year of the same year?—Repairs, &c., £73; improvements on estate, 10s.; miscellaneous disbursements, £19 8s. 6d.; repairs, &c., £154 1s.; rent and taxes and income, £41 11s. 8d.; teachers' salaries, £275; ditto (Mulhegheer), £36; unallowed tenants, £1 18s. 8d.; and little re-charge, £44 18s. 3d.

1238. What other charges are there since 1875 for new buildings, repairs, or miscellaneous disbursements?—In the first half-year of 1876 there are miscellaneous disbursements, £19 14s. 7d.; new buildings, £400; repairs, &c., £331 11s. 9d. In the last half-year of the same year (1876), new buildings, £768 13s.; miscellaneous disbursements, £15 1s. 1d. In the first half-year of 1877, new buildings, £600; miscellaneous disbursements, £31 7s. 10d.; repairs, &c., £111 8s. 2d.

1239. Why is there, in the Armagh school account for the last half-year of 1877, a separate item for fees paid to Messrs. McCurdy and Mitchell, £166 4s. 9d., while in other half-years such fees are included under miscellaneous disbursements?—I put them separately as that account, as it was the closing up of the account, and we wished to have the items separate.

1240. Were there not the architect's fees for all the work at the conclusion of the new buildings?—Not for all the work. We had been paying him from time to time.

1241. What further charges appear for miscellaneous disbursements and repairs at Armagh?—In the same half-year, repairs, £134 14s.; miscellaneous disbursements, £26 8s. 8d. In the first half-year of 1878, repairs, &c., £133 13s. 10d.; miscellaneous disbursements, £19 16s. 11d.; in the last half of that year, repairs, £26 12s. 6d.; miscellaneous disbursements, £10 6s. 6d.

1242. By what system are those large sums for repairs and miscellaneous disbursements vouched?—The agents send vouchers for all same paid through them. As to the allowance to myself, I give a receipt for that, which is produced to the Board.

1243. How is the allocating of the different sums of money against the different schools done?—I calculate them in proportion to the several rentals.

1244. How are the accounts checked?—The receipt for each draft drawn by the Commissioners is produced at the next meeting of the Board.

1245. What vouchers were produced for the large items for repairs?—They were all vouched in the same way.

1246. Does the item for miscellaneous disbursements which appears in any one account represent one actual payment?—No, certainly not. We have an account of miscellaneous expenses, and the items that appear in the school accounts charged against each school, as, for example, in the case of Armagh, represent certain payments that have been made and totted together with sub-divisions of others that are made on account of several schools, but every one of these is most carefully vouched.

1247. In whose favour were the cheques drawn for the repairs?—In the case of Armagh, for instance, generally a cheque, payable to order, would be drawn in favour of a man named Farr—the builder in Armagh.

1248. Did you pay for all the repairs that were done in Armagh direct to the builder?—We did; we did not pay through the architect at all.

1249. Do you not sometimes pay through the architect?—Only in the case of small repairs. We generally draw in favour of the tradesman.

1250. In the first half of the year 1877 there is £433 12s. 10d. charged for repairs at Armagh; of what payments was that made up?—To J. Farr, masonry repairs, £318 14s. 3d.; to Gardiner and Company, plumbers, Armagh, £138 3s. 3d.; to Maxwell, for painting, £18 19s. 8d.; to J. Farr, for rendering a larned shed, £13 7s. 3d.; for ventilating cesspool, £12 10s.; for building buttress to the playground wall, £13 18s. 6d.; and levelling earth in garden, £11 10s.; and to a man named King, for gravel, and laying same, £28 10s.

1251. The payments were made in those instances directly to the persons who did the work?—I think so; but it is quite possible we may have sent a small sum like £85 10s. through Mr. Morgan, the schoolmaster.

1252. Was not a survey of the Armagh estate ordered on the 27th June, 1878?—Yes, I think it has been obtained since.

1253. Read the minute directing it.

"Read letter from Mr. Wynn stating the latest survey of the Armagh school estate is now quite obsolete, and that the same, as set down therein, did not correspond with the present holdings, and that it would be most impudent of a surveyor should promulgate the same, and make a correct map with the holdings of each tenant set out and the rent, &c., and that he thought it would be all done for £25.—Ordered to be done, but suggest that the tenant valuations be also added."

1254. Was there any survey made of any of the other estates under the Board?—We have none.

1255. How old are they?—Some are as old as 1816; they got some of them from Bransington and Gault.

1256. Do you give the whole of your time to the Charitable Commissioners?—Yes; I have not held any other office for the last ten years.

1257. Did the Secretary also give the whole of his time?—Yes.

1258. Did he hold any other secretaryship?—He held some small things, but they were rather nominal. They did not take up a great deal of his time at all events.

1259. Had you any duties to discharge in reference to them?—None; Dr. Kyle's son latterly helped his father at those duties.

1260. Dr. HARR.—As to the deductions from your salary made by Dr. Kyle when you began to receive grants from the Board, was it not simply this, that Dr. Kyle gave you out of the £150 allowed for supplying a Bannaston, a clerk, and stationery, £125 so long as you had no other salary, but when you got other payment from the Board he did not consider himself bound to give you more than half of the £150?—Yes, I suppose so.

1261. LOUIS JEFFERSON FERGUSON.—In the year before you got the £100 from the school funds, was the certificate which was presented to the Treasury, and on which the Board got the money from Parliament, in identically the same words as the certificate for the same amount which was presented in the following year when you got £45 less of the grant?—Identically the same; the grant remained the same.

1262. I find in the report of the last Commission, page 107, this paragraph—

"The powers entrusted to the Commissioners were of the most simple character, they had all the powers of Vestries at Common Law increased by a statutory provision for compelling parties to give them information, to produce documents, and to give evidence before them. They also had power to make orders for the better regulation or management of the schools under them, and through the medium of the Court of Chancery to remove trustees of private endowments, and to take the funds under their own care, or place them under the control of new trustees."

And in reference to the Ballyroom and Navan schools the same Commission reported—

"The endowment of Navan and Ballyroom school presents one of the most remarkable instances of an abused trust."

And further as to Ballyroom they reported—

"The school-house is in a most dilapidated condition, attended by only two day pupils. No benefit appears to arise from the endowment, as far as the pupils are concerned. The school has not been inspected by the Commissioners of Education since 1838."

April 2, 1878.
Mr. Thomas
H. Fleming.

Can you say whether the Ballyroan school was inspected by the Commissioners since 1857?—I think not.

1283. Can you say whether inquiries were made, or directions given by letter, by the Commissioners with reference to the condition of Ballyroan school since 1857?—We pay the master's salary—we have the Navan and Ballyroan account.

1284. What amount have you at present to the credit of the Ballyroan and Navan endowments?—£5,662 6s. 5d. stock, which remains on an endorsement fund for both. There was no appreciation made of it. There is also in cash £723 8s. 6d. to the credit of Navan, and £1,068 10s. 3d. to the credit of Ballyroan.

1285. The return made to our Secretary, for the purpose of this Commission, states that the house, especially the roof, and the office at Ballyroan, are in a bad state, and that the premises require general repairs, painting, and clearing. Are you aware whether any effort was made by the Commissioners to repair, paint, or clear these premises since the year 1857?—I don't now recollect. I must say in that case it is, to a great extent, the master's fault.

1286. Has any inspection of those premises been made or directed since 1857?—I don't think there has been.

1287. The Commissioners suggested in 1857 that the two endowments should be united, and an efficient school established at Maryborough, which was the nearest large town to the charity estate, do you recollect any correspondence or any attempt being made for the purpose of carrying out that suggestion?—No.

1288. Or its being discussed?—No.

1289. There is a charge of £385 8s. 6d. under the head of repairs, &c., for Navan school, in the second half of the year 1874. What repairs were executed, and by whom were they directed and carried out, and how verified?—There was £98 for works by William Balld, per estimate, as recommended by the architect. There were also the sums of £108 and £44 4s. 8d. for works by the same person, on the same recommendation, and there was £5 4s. 3d. for small repairs.

1290. Whose does Mr. Balld live?—In Dublin.

1291. Who employed him for the purpose of these repairs?—It was all done through Mr. McClintock, and by estimate.

1292. Upon what information did the Commissioners order these repairs at Navan?—I find on the minutes of the 30th of January, 1874, this entry:—

"Read a letter from Mr. L. W. White, Master of Navan Endowed School, checking the Commissioners for their consent to enable him to raise the school from its fallen state. Read letter from Mrs. C. Lambert (Navan), stating that a new school be erected, also a note and other notes suggested by Mrs. Lambert, and for which he sent an estimate, should be undertaken. The Secretary stated that, having consulted with the architect, it was deemed necessary that the proposal should be carefully inspected before any steps were taken in the matter; that accordingly the architect had visited the school-house, &c., where the Bishop of Meath, at the request of the Secretary, had met him and approved of his suggestions, which were to the effect that a new (A12) water-closet (A2), exclusive of certain sewer pipes), new (A30), and chimney-place (A10), and both (A10) on (A10) should be undertaken.—Ordered that the architect be requested to take steps to have these works carried out, the Secretary to prepare a financial statement to this school."

1293. Is there any evidence that that was followed up, and that an estimate was prepared, covering the amount which was ultimately spent?—The next minute on the subject is 29th May, 1874—

"The Secretary stated that he had ordered additional works (which the architect had reported to be necessary) to be at once proceeded with."

1294. Is there any minute to show whether that report by the architect was in writing?—No.

1295. The Navan school, which was to have been raised from its fallen condition, according to the language of the master, now appears to have only two boarders and ten day scholars—what salary is paid to the master?—£29 4s. 3d. a year.

1296. The Commissioners of 1857 reported that Carrickmacross school, was then in a ruinous condition, and they also reported the want of visitation on the part of the visitors, who were the Lord Primate, the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Dublin, the Bishop of Clogher, and the Rector of Trinity College. Were not some of those visitors appointed by the deed of foundation, members of your Board?—They comprised two of the Close-street Commissioners.

1297. Did the Close-street Commissioners cause any visitation to be made of this school since 1857?—No.

1299. With regard to Clonsilla school, the Commissioners of 1857 say it is remarkable that you should retain that school on your list, inasmuch as it was not endowed. Have you ceased to return Clonsilla as an endowed school?—We have sent forms there to be filled up, but latterly they have been returned from the Post Office marked "Gone away," "No school," and so forth.

1300. Did the Commissioners not conceive it their duty, having sent their forms, to direct inquiries as to what had become of the school?—Nothing was done.

1301. Do you know who is the present master of Clonsilla school?—Mr. Hutchinson.

1302. Was he master in 1857?—No, he has been newly appointed.

1303. I see there is £748 16s. 8d. cash to the credit of Clonsilla school.—There was, on the 31st of December, 1878.

1304. With respect to Eyre Court school, county Galway, it appeared that the founder left a sum of £700

"For the founding of a charity school at Eyre Court for the maintenance and education of such poor children of the parish of Donaghribagh in the Bishop of Clogher, John Eyre, esq., the master of that parish, or their successors, should think fit."

The Commission of 1857 reported that—

"Instead of being a school for the poor, and therefore one giving an education adapted to their wants, it was from the commencement made a classical school."

And they went on to say—

"It followed from the neglect of the Trustees and Commissioners that the direction of the master as to its being a charity, that is to say, a free school, was disregarded, and, in fact, no free scholars are received into it."

Can you tell me, from any correspondence or decision which came to your notice, whether the Commissioners ever made, since 1857, any attempt to follow out this suggestion, and to turn their Eyre Court school into a free school?—The funds at the disposal of the Commissioners of Education for this school are very trifling, only £440 for 5d. Government Stock, the interest of which would be payable to the master, minus the cost of the premises, £4 12s. 6d. per annum, which Mr. Eyre, of Eyre Court Castle, is entitled to.

1305. Does a school exist there now?—No, for there is no master. The former master resigned about a year ago.

1306. You still retain the premises and pay rent for them?—Mr. Eyre, I think, has somebody in there, but we have to pay the rent.

1307. Did the Commissioners take any steps in consequence of the master's resignation?—It has been under consideration whether or not that school should be put into connexion with the National Board, but nothing has been decided as yet.

1308. In 1857 the Commissioners noticed the condition of Killybeggy Grammar School as very unsatisfactory both as regarded attendance and inspection. Do you know whether any inspection of Killybeggy visit by an inspector of the Church Education Society.

1334. This school is the property of the Commissioners, and the schoolmaster is paid by them?—Yes.

1335. There is no inspection by the Commissioners?—There is not; but if the school wanted repairing or skirting, or anything of that kind, Colonel McCulloch, the late agent, who took an interest in the school and occasionally went to see it, reported the matter to the Board.

1336. Apart from any casual interest a gentleman might take, were there any general instructions for periodical inspection of that school by the agent, named by your Board?—No.

1337. The repairs, and salary of the master, of that school are paid for out of the Armagh estate?—Yes.

1338. And it still continues under the inspection and control of the Church Education Society?—Not that I am aware of.

1339. I understood you to say so a few minutes ago?—As well as I remember, the master there might have occasionally reported that the school had been inspected by the Church Education Society's inspector; but we don't want, and never asked, that it should be done.

1340. I suppose you are astonished to hear that it was reported by the Commissioners of 1857 to be under the inspection and control of the Church Education Society?—I think it is not correct to say "control."

1341. Where is Rathfrilly school?—In the county Carlow.

1342. That school was endowed in 1814, under the will of Benjamin D'Israeli, to educate poor children in the neighbourhood of Rathfrilly. The Commissioners of 1857 reported that it was then under the inspection of the Church Education Society, and they remarked,—

"There is nothing in the terms of the will to make these schools exclusive. . . . We think that the placing non-exclusive schools under the inspection of an endowment society, is so objectionable a proceeding as the part of the Commissioners."

Did the Commissioners, since 1857, take any steps to remove the Rathfrilly school from under the inspection of the Church Education Society?—Not that I am aware of.

1343. In 1857, there was a very strong expression of opinion by the Commissioners that the Royal Schools had not to an adequate extent the character of free schools. Is there anything on the minutes of your Board to show that they endeavoured to have the free places increased?—The Board was very anxious to encourage the admission of free pupils at all their schools, and particularly at the Royal Schools, and they were also very anxious that they should be useful as day schools, and that the charges for day boys should be moderate.

1344. Is there anything on the minutes, since 1857, showing any decisive action by your Board to enforce an adequate number of free places in the Royal Schools?—I don't know whether it was before or since 1857 that it was decided there should be ten free scholars at Armagh.

1345. Dr. HARRIS.—That was in 1845. How there been anything done since, with a view of enforcing in any way the admission of free pupils?—I don't know whether the Commissioners would have the power to enforce it.

1346. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—They have the power "to provide and maintain free scholars?"—Yes.

1347. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Since 1857, as I understand, there has been only one visitation at Cavan school?—Yes, the one made by Mr. Gury.

1348. In 1857, the Commissioners reported that there was a prima facie case made out for a visitation being at once held by the Commissioners of Education, to ascertain how far the then unsatisfactory state of Cavan school arose from misconduct or neglect on the part of the master, and that the Commissioners should again take into consideration the facts disclosed at the former visitation. Was any visitation held in consequence of that report by the Commissioners?—I think not.

1349. The Commissioners have not the power of appointing or dismissing the masters of Royal Schools?—No.

1350. Would it not be in their power to hold a visitation and recommend to the Crown the misconduct of a master?—It would be in the power of our Board, I think, to get rid of any master who was believed. I am quite sure, a very long time ago, they dismissed one.

1351. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—With regard to the masters of the Royal Schools, who hold by patent, you are aware, of course, that their patent is during good behaviour, but that your Commissioners are the visitors for these schools. Do you know any instance of any representation being made to the Government with a view to having a patent recalled?—Yes, in the case of Bangor school.

1352. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Was that the case in which a visitation was threatened and the master resigned?—It was.

1353. Is that the only instance you remember?—That is the only one.

1354. Mr. Joyce, the present master, holds by patent?—I think so.

1355. The Commissioners in 1857 recommended—

"That on English and commercial education should be applied in a department of the Royal schools especially devoted to the purpose, at a charge not exceeding 4s for day scholars."

Was anything done to carry out that suggestion?—I don't remember there was anything specially done except the foundation of the December English examinations.

1356. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Read the minute of the 25th of May, 1870, as to the charges for day boys?

"Several half-yearly returns from the schools having been examined, and a long discussion having arisen on the charges specially for the daily pupils, and the small number of day boys at the schools, it was ordered that the Secretary do write to the respective masters stating that the opinion of the Commissioners is, that £10 per annum, the maximum, is too high a charge to be made, at a well endowed school, for day boys, and expressing surprise that in towns the schools have of the pupils is so small, and to request the masters to give suggestions as to how these schools may be made more available for the middle classes as day schools."

1357. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Was a notification to that effect sent to each of the different masters?—Yes.

1358. Were there answers received from them?—Yes. I find in the minutes of the 24th of June, 1870—

"The Secretary laid on the table the replies of the different Royal school masters to the circular sent by the Secretary on the subject of school charges."

1359. Was any action taken subsequently?—There certainly was action taken after that. This minute (26 April, 1872), refers to Armagh school:—

"Read a letter from Mr. Moore Morgan, master of Armagh Royal school, stating that from want of sufficient class room, and other accommodation, he had been obliged to decline to receive several pupils, both without and daily; that being aware of the feeling of the Board he was using his best endeavours to increase the number of daily pupils, and that with that object in view he had determined to reduce the charge (the maximum) from ten guineas per annum to eight guineas per annum for daily pupils, and providing that additional class rooms, which were absolutely necessary, should be erected."

1360. Is the amount payable as fees by day scholars on term in the returns furnished to your Board by the school-masters?—Certainly.

1361. And therefore your Commissioners must have been aware of the amount of the charge by the head master of Armagh for day pupils?—Yes; both boarders and daily pupils.

April 8, 1878.

Mr. Thomas
H. Fleming

1363. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIERSON—Was there any collection in consequence of the minute of 27th May, 1870?—I think all the masters replied stating their willingness to comply with the wishes of the Board.

1364. Mr. O'BRIEN—The master at Armagh appears to have made a nominal collector to six guineas, and to have charged extra for the most ordinary subjects—such as Greek and Latin—in order to get over the effect of the reduction. Dunnington returns that in charge for day scholars is £10 a year, but the master said that he has had them at £4 a year. Do you know whether in the last two or three years any remonstrances have been addressed to the master of Dunnington school on the subject of his charges to day pupils?—Quite recently he sent returns stating something to the effect you have mentioned, and Dr. Kyle sent them back to him to attend, at least to explain, and he did send something more, with a view to meeting the requirements of the Board.

1365. It appears now that notwithstanding what he did, he is charging £10 a year for day scholars?—He should not do that.

1366. Did Dr. Kyle bring that before the Board?—No, he sent the return back to have it altered.

1367. With respect to Enniskillen. The head master returns the fees for day scholars as being from four guineas to £10?—Yes.

1368. He does charge, in some cases, ten guineas?—That is for an advanced education. You could scarcely expect to give a boy such an education cheaper.

1369. At Raphoe I find the head master has acceded to the request, and charges his day scholars eight guineas, and at Glenties it is from six guineas to eight guineas?—That is so.

1370. Mr. WINDSOR—I have report to the Royal Commission in 1857, Mr. Murland stated that the Commissioners of Education did not seem to possess any proper power of taxing, and he recommended that it would be advantageous to the estates that the Commissioners should have ample taxing powers. Do you know whether after that report any leases were in fact made to the tenants on the Royal school estates?—I think not. I do not think there are any leases at all on the Royal school estates, except one of a tenement in the town of Enniskillen.

1371. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIERSON—You are aware the Commissioners have large statutory powers of taxing?—I think they could not make leases beyond twenty-one years.

1372. Mr. WINDSOR—They never exercised any of those powers?—They were never asked for leases.

1373. Do you know that Mr. Murland recommended that leases should be given to the tenants?—I never knew a case where they applied.

1374. What is the gross rental of the Dunnington estate at present?—£1,739 1s. 8d., not including the bog.

1375. Are you aware that in 1832, the estate, exclusive of the bog, was valued at £1,439 6s. 8d.?—I think a valuation was made. The bog is worth more than £300 a year.

1376. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIERSON—1832 was a very disturbed period?—Yes, the value has very much increased since then.

1377. Mr. WINDSOR—Do you know that the Government valuation of the estate is only £1,045?—I am not aware of that. I am sure the estate is not extravagantly let, or anything of that kind. I think it has improved in value.

1378. Allowances were made on this estate for bad seasons from 1846 to 1852?—Yes, very large allowances.

1379. Were there any arrears afterwards struck off on that estate?—I do not know that there were large arrears at the time. There are none now—at least very little.

reported in 1837 that it was let at its full value co-extensive with the prosperity of the tenants?—Yes.

1381. Mr. Murland further reported that the houses and farms of these tenants who were much in arrears were in a bad state. Since that time have any of those arrears been remitted?—I think not; there are none now. We allowed discount to those who paid up their arrears.

1382. Mr. Murland in his report stated that up to the 1st May, 1856, the arrears amounted to £2,600?—The only arrears due up to the 1st November, 1877, the date of the last account furnished to us, amounted to £10 3s. 0d.

1383. The rental of the Enniskillen estate is returned by Mr. Murland as £2,142 12s. 11d.?—The rental on the 1st November, 1877, was £2,137 8s. 3d. It is substantially the same.

1384. When was the valuation of that made?—A long time ago.

1385. Does the constabulary barracks still exist on the Enniskillen school estate?—I do not think it is there now.

1386. There was a large amount of arrears on that estate?—There was a large amount; but the late Master Lyle, who took a great part in the proceedings of the Board, and was also a very good judge of such questions (being the Master who specially attended to those matters), suggested to the Board that the arrears should be wiped out, which was done.

1387. Mr. Murland also reported that the estate required draining?—The agent has been attending to that.

1388. Did he charge some in his account for draining?—He has looked after it lately, and charged whatever outlay there was.

1389. Mr. Murland also stated that from 1847 to 1850 some of the tenants left their farms, and sold their good will to the adjoining tenants?—Yes.

1390. So they had a tenant-right or good will on the estate?—Yes.

1391. Were you aware that, in the case of the Glenties school estate, Mr. Murland wrote—

"Before any improvement can be expected on this estate some arrangements must be made for reducing the large arrears hanging over so many of the tenants. I would suggest that the same plan should be adopted, which I have pointed out in my report on the Enniskillen school estate; but whether that plan or some other be adopted, nothing, I think, can be done there that while a tenant feels himself liable to be called upon at any moment for a large sum of rent, he will neither improve his land nor pay any rent he can avoid?"

—I was not aware of that.

1392. Were those arrears remitted?—I cannot say; but there is a large arrears over the estate at present.

1393. What is the valuation of the Raphoe estate?—The rental in 1877 was £558 18s. 9d.

1394. Then it had been increased from £495 11s. 11d., at which it was returned in 1857?—Yes.

1395. I see that it was valued by Messrs. Sherrard, Bevington, and Gwynne, at £254 7s. 3d., Irish currency, in 1816?—I think so. That is the date of the maps we have.

1396. From 1844 to 1855, I find that the net produce of the estate was very little over one year's rent; are you aware whether the arrears which then accrued have been carried on against that estate?—I cannot say; but there is a large arrears at present amounting to £1,941 11s. 11d.

1397. Can you tell the amount of arrears due at the time the present agent was appointed?—The earliest rental I have here is that up to November, 1874. That shows an arrears due on 1st November, 1873, of £1,778 16s. 14d. The present agent had been only a short time appointed then.

1398. You have not remitted any of the arrears of rent on the Raphoe estate?—I think not; they have been carried on against the tenants.

1399. Have the Commissioners ever inspected this

April 3, 1875
Mr. Thomas
H. Fleming.

estate since the inspection by Mr. Merdall?—Not that I am aware of, the agent is there.

1389. Does he make any return of the state of the property?—No; he may, perhaps, write a letter with his accounts, mentioning, very shortly, any matters to which he wishes to call attention—nothing very elaborate or lengthened.

1390. Would there be any use in increasing the rent on this property, when you cannot even get the present rent?—I don't think it would be the least use, I think the Commissioners would be very slow to increase rents, unless there were some very good grounds for it, and I don't think it would be either palatable or desirable on this property.

1401. Do you think it would be desirable that this survey should be revisited?—Very much better. We have always found the greatest difficulty in dealing with the Rabbie property, because it was so hard to get an agent. It may have been suggested to the Commissioners that by striking off these arrears they would get the property into better order, but I am not certain whether it was.

1402. You stated the Commissioners never went down there—did the tenants come up to the office?—Occasionally a tenant comes up and presents himself at the office; but we do not encourage them to do so. We tell them to go home and write a statement of their case, and we refer that to the agent for his report, and then the whole thing is sent to the Board.

1403. They have never seen their landlords, in fact, I believe they have had protracted discussions as to whether they had landlords?—All the tenants, as far as I have heard, are glad to be tenants to the Commissioners; they hold under a public body, and think that is as good as a lease.

1404. How did it happen that this property got into such a state of lawlessness, as was described by Mr. Merdall?—I think a great deal of that was owing to illicit distillations. It is a large tract of country, about 5,000 acres, and nearly 7,000 of that is moorland.

1405. Mr. Merdall reported that on the Narva and Ballynary property, Mr. Hawkenworth was the only tenant who held by lease, and that his lease was to expire in 1857?—I believe so.

1406. It was suggested by Mr. Merdall that there should be a renewal of his lease made to Mr. Hawkenworth, was that done?—I believe so, Richard Hawkenworth holds at present.

1407. The Commissioners had always confidence in the master as to expending money in repairs?—Yes, but where there were large repairs the architect would be consulted.

1408. But as to the ordinary repairs?—Ordinary repairs of £30 or £40, if the master had estimated carefully proposed, I think we would be satisfied that he would see properly done, and that the estimates were not exorbitant.

1409. They had the same confidence in Dr. Steele as in the other masters of schools?—Dr. Steele's case was different, he had out several thousand pounds.

1410. Read the minute of May 30th, 1868, on the subject?—

"The Secretary laid on the table a report in reference to the office use and the expenditure at Porters' school-house, in obedience to the order of the Board, laid November 34th, 1865. Report of the Secretary on the memorial and statement of account of expenditure made by him without any sanction of the Board, forwarded by the Rev. William Steele, and of the expenditure made during the same period by the Commissioners, viz.—from July, 1857 to 1867. On Mr. Steele's appointment in June, 1857, as master of Eastcliffe Road School it was agreed upon the Commissioners by Mr. Steele that certain repairs for which he forwarded an estimate, amounting to £253 19s. 6d. should be at once undertaken, and three works were, with the exception of a kitchen range, amount £253, approved of by the Board, and ordered to be executed during the approaching vacation. At the close of the same year, 1857, Mr. Steele and a member of the Board who visited the school premises urged so strongly on the Commissioners the necessity of further works at Porters, that it was ordered, that an estimate be prepared, and this estimate amounting to £3,028 was submitted to, and approved of, by the Board, and it was resolved that the works should be executed with from time to time according to the funds in the hands of the Commissioners would permit; Mr. Steele, however, being of opinion that the completion without delay of the whole of these works, so approved of by the Board, was necessary, ordered their execution to be at once commenced, making himself liable to the contractors, to whom the Board, from time to time, paid instalments, and finally in February, 1860, Mr. Steele received from the Commissioners the balance of the entire contract for £3,028, as approved by the Board, and the matter was fully closed, the sum of about £3,000 having been up to that time paid by the Commissioners, pursuant to estimates and contracts submitted to and approved of by them. On the 15th January, 1860, Mr. Steele forwarded to the Commissioners a memorial stating that very extensive and valuable works from time to time, between the date of his appointment as master and of forwarding the said memorial (during the same period during which payment of the said £3,028 had been so made by the Board) had been ordered by him and had been executed at a cost to himself of £3,963 3s. 2d., and praying that repayment thereof might be made to him. Very considerable discussion arose upon this memorial in consequence of the nature of this outlay having been incurred by Mr. Steele solely on his own responsibility, and without any knowledge or approval thereof by the Board. It appeared however that some of these unauthorised works, so made under Mr. Steele's direction, were of undoubted value to the establishment, and the architect of the Board was accordingly directed to examine the details and to report thereon. Acting on the report of the architect, the Commissioners on the 4th of February, 1860, assented to pay to Mr. Steele £1,638 9s. 11d. as certified by the said architect to be the value of permanent, substantial repairs, deducting to pay the balance, £2,325 13s. 2d. of the amount claimed by Mr. Steele, and the Secretary was ordered to express to Mr. Steele the strong feelings of the Commissioners at the great expenditure made by him, and to warn him that any future such expenditure must fall solely on himself, as the Commissioners would not pay for any works but those which might be previously sanctioned or ordered by the Board, and Mr. Lyke, who was very much interested in the establishment, and who took a very active part in the discussion, undertook to examine all the papers and to draft the resolution, a copy of which is appended hereto. The substance of this resolution had been communicated to Mr. Steele and acknowledged by him in a letter bearing date, 21st February, 1860, a copy of which is also appended to this report. In reference to the memorial and account now submitted by Mr. Steele, it is to be remarked it is for repayment of £4,901 19s. 6d. for the execution of works that were never sanctioned by the Commissioners and of which sum the Board had by their resolution of the 4th February, 1860, already refused to pay, £2,265 14s. 3d. of the sum then applied for. It is pointed out that the excess of the present claim £4,901 19s. 6d. over and above the said £2,265 14s. 3d., has been incurred since such refusal on the 4th February, 1860, but the accounts furnished on behalf of Mr. Steele by the Rev. W. T. Patterson, C.E., do not give the date of a single item of expenditure which extends over a period of ten years, viz.—from the time of Mr. Steele's appointment up to the present date, and the Secretary has to report that during the same period of ten years, the sums paid by the Commissioners for works, viz., at Porters, amounted to a sum of records of £6,666, viz., up to 1860, £1,238 18s. 6d., ordered by the Board, 4th February, 1860, £1,690 0s. 11d., special grant to Mr. Steele, since 1860, £2,567 13s. 11d., ordered by the Board; and £4,173 3s. 4d.; and that the sum now claimed by Mr. Steele amounts to £4,901 19s. 6d."

The particulars of the £2,567 13s. 11d. are set out in the margin of the minute, thus:—

| | £ | s. | d. |
|----------------------------------|-------|----|----|
| "Cricket ground, | 506 | 0 | 6 |
| Infirmary, | 610 | 0 | 7 |
| School-rooms, | 1,190 | 10 | 0 |
| Architect's fees, | 184 | 15 | 6 |
| Stones wall, | 80 | 0 | 0 |

£2,567 13s. 11d."

1411. Does not Mr. McCurdy state that all that he certified for were permanent and substantial improvements done at Porters?—Yes.

1412. Did the Board, during the first 10½ years that

April 5, 1876
Mr. Thomas
H. Fleming

Dr. Steele was master of Portora, pay anything for ordinary annual repairs?—I think not; no.

1413. The glass must have been kept in repair by some one?—Yes.

1414. Dr. Steele says he kept it in repair. Do not you think he should be paid for that?—It seems fair enough, but still he should expressly show what the glass was, and the periods.

1415. Did you examine the account yourself that Dr. Steele furnished?—I did, all the accounts.

1416. Did you not ascertain that that account was perfectly right, except a sum of £1 odd 1?—Oh, yes, he supported it with vouchers.

1417. And, notwithstanding that, the Commissioners disallowed him this large sum?—The Commissioners felt he had been very liberally treated in having been repaid a great deal of money he expended without their sanction, and he was also paid up the back money for the salary of an assistant master, and, in fact, as I have read to you the figures, he got a great deal of money.

1418. But the only money he was not paid was due for annual repairs?—I think so.

1419. CHAIRMAN.—There are four schools called tenantry schools.—Townsville, on the Raphoe school estate, a school on the Cappaghleaghlin estate, King's Island on the Dungannon school estate, and Mullaghmore on the Armagh school estate. The Cappaghleaghlin school is under the National Board, and receives grant?—Yes.

1420. There was some idea of putting the Armagh tenantry school under the National Board?—There was, but it has not been done.

1421. Was there ever any proposal to put the Townsville school under the National Board, and so save the funds of the endowment?—It has been talked of lately, and it is possible something may be done.

1422. On the subject of the fire at Donaghue school, were any steps taken by the Commissioners to investigate its cause, and ascertain whether there was any malversation?—The fire was purely accidental. Our agent was sent there, and made a report.

1423. You spoke of some maps of the estate, some surveys which you have?—Yes.

1424. You have them in the office in Clare-street?—Yes.

1425. Are they ever referred to by the Commissioners, or made any use of?—They would be, of course, if it was necessary, but I don't remember any one where they were actually brought before the Board. If an agent came up to consult the secretary, and get instructions from him, he perhaps would open the map with him.

1426. You are aware that many years ago there were encroachments on some of the estates?—It is so alleged, but it is very hard to trace these matters.

1427. Do the Commissioners, in order to see that there are no further encroachments, carefully look over the maps of their estates?—I don't know that there has been any looking over of their maps.

1428. I see mentioned in the Report of 1857 on the Armagh school, a reply by the Lord Frimont, on behalf of the Commissioners, to a memorial addressed to the Lord Lieutenant on the question of free schools. What Report states?—

"His Grace also showed that the memorialists were mistaken in supposing there were no votes as to the admission of the free boys, inasmuch as the Commissioners of Education, in 1849, on the appointment of the present master, had made regulations."

Amongst other things—

"There shall be ten free boys."

Was any similar instruction given to the other masters on their appointments?—I think not.

1429. We have evidence before us, by Dr. Haggwood and Dr. Steele, that it is entirely in their own discretion?—It is in their own discretion, but they know perfectly well that the Board are anxious to encourage, and I think they are anxious themselves to encourage, the admission of free boys.

1430. There were no special instructions given on the appointment of these several masters?—I think not.

1431. Mr. WILSON.—Are you aware that there was an Act passed in the reign of George II., with a section, reciting the want of good school-boys attached to royal endowments, and enacting that the master may charge the endowments to the extent of one and a-half year's income for money laid out by him in repairs of building?—I did not know it.

1432. It was not necessary for the master to consult the Board at all?—There has been nothing of that kind for a very long while, and I don't think any of them would attempt it now.

1433. With reference to the claim of Dr. Steele, read the letter of Dr. Kyle, dated 1st February, 1872?—

"(No. 10720)

"The Commissioners of Education in Ireland, 1st February, 1872.

"Dear Sir,—Your circular setting forth your claims for repayment of general outlays for 16½ years, &c. &c., was by me brought before a rather largely attended meeting of the Commissioners. A good deal of time was occupied in reference to it, and to former orders, claims, and grants made to you. The conference arrived at the fact that the Commissioners felt they would not be justified in granting the prayer of your memorial for a large sum of money, the particulars and items of which were in no degree specifically stated or set forth by you in such claim, and I was ordered to notify that should you again bring forward a claim, it must be supported by items of particulars and dates, and verified by documents showing that payment had been in each case made by you."

—That was a letter from the Board.

1434. It was in pursuance of that letter you investigated the account of Dr. Steele after we did?—Quite so.

1435. Was there a further letter from Dr. Kyle, dated 27th April, 1872?—Yes; as follows:—

"Dear Sir,—In the statement for January 1872 and the case of your present claim was specially noted, and I fully brought under the consideration of the Board your printed memorial and letter, and I reported that the subsidies for expenditure which you forwarded to this office were fully supported (with the exception of an error, in extension, of £9 14s. 8d., which I had, therefore, deducted from your claim, reducing it to £1,425 7s. 8d.), by the vouchers and receipts that you had transmitted, and which had been carefully investigated in this office."

1436. The £1,425 7s. 8d. was actually vouched by you?—Oh, it was vouched, and was not paid any of that money?

1437. He alleges, not a penny?—Oh, of course, if he says so, he was not.

MR. WILLIAM BLANDINE KYLE, examined.

Mr. William
H. Kyle.

1438. CHAIRMAN.—Are you the son of the late secretary to the Commissioners of Education?—Yes.

1439. Do you wish to make any statement to the Commissioners?—It appears in the evidence of yesterday, as reported in the newspapers, that when Mr. Fleming's salary was reduced from £125 to £75 my father made £45 by it. That leads the public to take rather a wrong view of it. When Mr. Quinn, his predecessor, was secretary to the Commissioners his allowance in office and clerk was £300, and his position was to allow his clerk £100. When my father succeeded, his allowance for clerk and office expenses was reduced to £150, and my father allowed his clerk £75, that is half of the £150. When this clerk was dismissed Mr.

Fleming was selected from about sixty candidates. My father commenced his salary at £60 and soon after raised it to £75; and then on Mr. Fleming writing to him to ask him to raise his salary, he went on raising it until it got up to £125. Then Mr. Fleming, without letting my father know, on the advice of one of the Commissioners, which he never stated to my father, nevertheless went into his salary and made him a grant, I think, of £100 on that occasion. My father told Mr. Fleming if the Commissioners felt entitled to allow him money he felt bound only to allow him half the office expenses, £75 a year, and so it has continued.

FIFTH DAY—MONDAY, APRIL 7, 1879; 11.30 O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—The EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBSON, RICHARD O'SHEA, ESQ., M.P., ANDREW SEARLE HART, ESQ., LL.D., and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, ESQ., LL.D., with JAMES CREED MERRITT, ESQ., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. John
McCusker.

Mr. JOHN MCCUSKER examined.

1440. CHAIRMAN.—You are solicited to the Classroom Commissioners?—Yes.

1441. How long have you held that post?—My connection with the Commissioners commenced in October, 1857.

1442. You have been employed on all improvements since that time?—On all alterations and additions, and in many cases on large repairs, but I had no general commission to inspect the premises periodically or to look to them, except when called upon by the Secretary.

1443. You were paid on the per-centage system?—The ordinary five per cent. commission on the outlay.

1444. What was the first occasion on which you were consulted with reference to Enniscliffon school?—In October, 1857, I received a letter from Dr. Kyle, the Secretary, and the late Master Lyke, one of the Commissioners, also called on me and asked me to meet him at Portora Royal School, which I did.

Mr. Porter, another Commissioner, was also present. I surveyed all the buildings in company with those gentlemen, and took general notes of all dilapidations and also measurements for plans. I found the buildings in a very bad state. The repairs had manifestly not been attended to periodically. The roofs were bad, and worn out for want of external painting, and other matters of that sort. I then furnished a report and also plans and specifications for additions to the school; and the works were carried out by Mr. McClelland, of Londonderry. I find by my book that the expenditure by the Commissioners was £1,730.

1445. You drew up a specification?—Plans and specifications, and we obtained estimates and tenders for the works, and McClelland was declared the successful man.

1446. Did you ever inspect the premises since that date?—Repeatedly. I have been there very often since. That work was finished in June, 1860. Although I had no special commission to inspect the premises, I felt it my duty, when I was in the neighbourhood, to look my journey and visit the school if I could.

1447. You made no periodical inspection?—No, I had no authority to do so.

1448. On those other occasions did you go there for the purpose of looking into the possibility of improving the school?—To see if everything was going on well, and also on several occasions to look at matters Mr. Steele himself was doing at his own expense or by his own order—certainly not through me.

1449. Since the date of your first inspection were the buildings kept in better order as regards repairs?—Certainly. There were many estimates before me for repairs since that date. In many cases estimates were submitted to me by the Secretary for my opinion on the spot, and to know if I thought the work necessary, but without giving me authority to go down. My knowledge of the premises enabled me to speak better than he possibly could as to the repairs.

1450. Do you think that the repairs were extensive—that the cost of the repairs was greater than the dilapidations due to the weather—to the fair wear and tear?—I do not think they were.

1451. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Was that £1,730 solely for repairs?—For the additions and alterations and repairs. I may say all the repairs of the premises when I visited them on that occasion were included in the £1,730.

1452. CHAIRMAN.—What was the last occasion upon which you inspected Portora school?—I am not certain as to the last. I was there in 1874, and I think I have been there since. When I was not specially ordered by the Board to go, I made no entry of my visit. In 1874 I was there, and inspected the works of the water supply authorised by the Commissioners, and reported on the same.

1453. I suppose of late years the expenditure has been entirely an account of repairs; there have been no additions since the decrease of the number of boys?—The last addition of importance was in 1865. A new detached school-rooms and class-room and a detached infirmary were built.

1454. Had you any connection with the improvements on the estate?—None, I was not consulted on them.

1455. Now on any of the estates?—No.

1456. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBSON.—Did you ever examine any of the tenants' houses either with a view to improvements or to see the condition in which they were?—Never; I never heard anything of them.

1457. CHAIRMAN.—I presume you inspected the other school-houses in the same way?—Except Dungannon, not so repeatedly as Portora. The works at the other schools were more recent and more in place. They came before the Commissioners in large sums for additions and alterations.

1458. On what occasions did you visit Dungannon?—In 1858 I furnished reports on works and repairs two or three times, and also with reference to the making of a well.

1459. Did you submit a specification and estimate to the Commissioners?—In 1860 the plans and specifications were furnished for additions and alterations which cost £880. In 1861 I furnished plans for a kitchen wing and various other works which cost £2,000; and in 1869 sundry contracts were entered into for alterations and repairs which cost £511 14s. 6d. In 1870 and 1871 I was also at the school, and there were various small accounts for leading a porch, glass over the screens generally (which were in a very bad way), repairs to walls, painting and general renovating and cleaning.

1460. Mr. O'SHEA.—Have you any account of those sundries in 1871?—£38 for the shooting; lead on old porch, £37; glass screen in school-room, £27; sewers, £94 17s.; repairs of walls, £11; painting, £60 12s. 6d., and £9 17s. 6d. In 1874 I again inspected and reported on sundry matters for the Commissioners.—Repairs, £40 12s., and painting, £176 3s. I find I paid 22 visits to Dungannon during the two years (1858–1860) occupied by the carrying out of the large works.

1461. Did you find, on the occasion of your first visit to Dungannon, that the ordinary repairs had been fairly attended to, or was there the same neglect and want of paint as at Portora?—Dungannon was not at all in the bad repair Portora was. There was a certain amount of wear and tear at Dungannon that all boys' schools will show, but it was in fair order.

1462. I suppose your experience is that buildings inhabited by schoolboys require a larger amount of repairs than those inhabited by other tenants?—Yes; the ordinary occupation of a house would not at all dilapidate the building the way that boys do.

1463. When was your last visit to Dungannon?—I was there twice since 1874. There was a lightning conductor imposed by the electric fluid, and I went to see it on some two occasions.

1464. I suppose on the whole the repairs have been well attended to—there was nothing allowed to go on neglected too long?—Not that I am aware of. On my last visit Dungannon was in very nice order.

1465. I suppose you inspected Armagh in the same ways.—More recently, my connection with Armagh is much more recent. I never was at Armagh until called on in 1870 by Dr. Kyle to visit and report on sanitary works.

1466. LEON JOURNÉ FERGUSON.—Describe the state you found it in, in 1870.—It was in very good repair, as far as the general buildings went. There were some little things to be done, as there will be in such cases. I prepared plans in 1871 for some works that the Commissioners authorized to be done—first, a gymnasium, £400; detached infirmary, £350, raising a wall, £15; gate to playground, £15; extension of the boys' messes, £35; aridials, $6 10s.; painting, £70, extra painting, £12 10s.

1467. Is that painting for the new work?—I rather think some extra windows that wanted painting. Mr. Morgan called my attention to it. On June 14, 1873, there was another painting account of McConiff's, $89 17s. On May 10th, 1873, I furnished plans for new dormitories and dormitory, servants' rooms, &c.—my memorandum is "Plan, builder, contract, £1,298 13s." In 1870 I prepared plans and specifications for a new school-house, dormitory, &c.

1468. Were you there between 1873 and 1876?—Yes, repeatedly.

1469. LEON R. CHURCHILL.—Informally as by order of the Board?—By order of the Board altogether. When works were put under me, either myself or my partner should visit them before we could certify. In 1875 I prepared plans and specifications, the cost of the buildings to be £1,878 13s. 1d.

1470. How were the repairs started on previous to your first visit?—I was informed that the master obtained an estimate from a local man for the works, and sent a memorandum to the Secretary, and he either authorized them or not.

1471. You never visited Armagh from the time of your appointment until 1870?—Never.

1472. CHAIRMAN.—Was your opinion taken by the Board without visiting?—Not in the case of Armagh. Very rarely there might be some isolated cases, when Dr. Kyle would send me a document.

1473. LEON JOURNÉ FERGUSON.—Could you give any opinion you would wish to rely on yourself, from documents, on a building you had never seen?—No, except as to prices.

1474. You could check on account that the prices per fixed management then was right, but how many cases there were you could not check?—I could not.

1475. LEON R. CHURCHILL.—Do you believe that between 1871 and 1870 much money was laid out on repairs?—I have no knowledge of that whatever.

1476. To keep a large building like that in repair there must have been considerable outlay?—There must. It was in fair order when I saw it first.

1477. Any outlay previous to 1870 was made on the responsibility of the master?—Certainly. I had never heard of it. There was a further outlay in 1877, of £181 18s. for works in the playground and repairs to some of the out offices. I am giving these figures from the certified accounts. I do not know the dates of the payments.

1478. LEON JOURNÉ FERGUSON.—Were the contracts obtained by advertisement?—In the case of Portora, as well as I remember, the works were put up to competition, and McQuibbin was declared successful. In the case of Dungannon, Gorman, who had been in the habit of doing work for the master, was highly recommended by him; but tenders were got subject to my approval, and we found we could not get the works done by anyone else so low as he tendered for. I had a tender in for Armagh, and it was lower than I could have got it done for by another.

1479. CHAIRMAN.—Have you ever inspected Caml school?—Once, about fifteen or sixteen years ago. I have no note of it. As well as my memory serves me, I visited it merely to report on the general state of the place.

1480. Did you do that with regard to any of the other schools?—That is the only instance.

1481. Have any specifications been submitted in reference to that school-house?—None. I never did any work connected with the Caml school.

1482. LEON R. CHURCHILL.—Do you recollect in what state you found it?—I could not say it was absolutely out of order, but the building had rough whitewashed walls, not at all equal in character to the buildings of the other Royal schools.

1483. MR. O'SHEAVEN.—Did you make a report on it?—I did, in writing.

1484. LEON R. CHURCHILL.—Was there any specification obtained on that report?—No.

1485. CHAIRMAN.—Have you ever visited Raphoe school?—I have. I never had anything to do with Raphoe school until January, 1874.

1486. MR. O'SHEAVEN.—Were you the sole architect of the Board?—I do not think they consulted any architects except my firm since 1857.

1487. CHAIRMAN.—In what state did you find the school house at Raphoe?—The buildings were only in a building state of repair. I went down to look about a detached infirmary, that the Board directed me to prepare a plan for, to be built in the grounds at the rear of the school building. I went through the place with Mr. Wair. Some parts were in a bad state, some middling, and some fair.

1488. It was not in so good condition as the other schools?—It was far better than Banahally when I first visited it, but not in so good a state as Dungannon, Armagh, or Fenchiffish at the same date. The infirmary cost £450 5s., and some other works £80. That is all I ever had to do with it.

1489. Have you ever inspected it since?—Not since the completion of that work. While it was in progress my partner or myself inspected it from time to time. When it was completed we certified, and our mission was done.

1490. How many visits did you pay?—Four or five.

1491. You found Raphoe school-house in fair order?—Portion of it. The main block of building was in fair, rough order.

1492. LEON R. CHURCHILL.—Did it look as if it had been kept in repair?—Partly in repair and partly not. I could hardly say it was kept in repair.

1493. But a certain outlay must have been made on it?—There must have been, or it would have been much worse.

1494. There were some permanent repairs made?—Yes; quite so.

1495. Have you ever inspected Banagher school-house?—I have not. When the works at Banagher were put in hands I was ill, and my partner took them up. He was at Banagher two or three times last year, during the execution of some repairs, amounting to $800.

1496. Was that consequent upon the fire?—No; it was a long time after the fire. Dr. Kyle mentioned to me that there was a new lease about being entered into, and certain repairs were necessary to be done. I ordered an estimate to be obtained. It was, at first, for a considerable sum, and I had it cut down to £250. I said to Dr. Kyle at the time that I thought it would be impudence to take a long lease of the place, from the report my partner gave me about the buildings.

1497. CHAIRMAN.—The repairs after the fire were confined to the part burned?—I had nothing to do with that.

1498. The house had not been put into order at that time?—Neither the house nor the lodge. The lodge roof was filling in, and the gate entrance coming down.

1499. LEON JOURNÉ FERGUSON.—You have had large experience as the permanent architect to bodies that have charge of large buildings?—I have.

1500. As a matter of fact, what is the economical and proper way for a body of that kind to keep its buildings in repair?—I consider that all buildings of the kind should be periodically inspected, say every six months, and estimates obtained for the repairs on schedule or specification, prepared by one who is an expert in such matters.

John
Mr. John
McCurry

1501. Is that the cheaper way, independently of the look of the thing?—In the end it is.

1502. Is it the fact that if a building of this kind is allowed to remain, for a considerable number of years, without ephepical repairs, it is then permanently injured, and it is impossible to make it as good as before?—Quite so; unquestionably.

1503. It lasts a shorter time and costs more to repair?—Yes.

1504. Was there ever, during your connexion with the Board, any periodical inspection of the buildings under their charge?—I made no periodical inspection, but whether any other architect or builder did I don't know. I had no authority to do so. I may state that I mentioned to Dr. Kyle, on one or two occasions, that I thought it would be desirable to have periodical inspections, not in all places where schools like these are situated, there are certain local builders who make a certain routine out of them, more or less, and it is well to see what they do, whether the work is absolutely done or not, or whether or not it is absolutely required. Although the masters sent up requisitions to get the work done they would hardly be the best judges of building work, and I think it would be well to send some one to inspect them periodically.

1505. When you saw the Portora buildings first, in 1857, and found them in the state you have described, could you give an approximate estimate of how long the buildings had been neglected, at that time, to bring them into the condition in which you saw them?—Twelve or fourteen years.

1506. To what extent had the neglect gone on?—The external woodwork had suffered very much for want of painting. The roofs and gutters had been a good deal neglected in every way.

1507. From 1857 down to, at all events, the middle of 1860 there were very large works and large expenditures on the place, both in repairs and also in improvements?—Very large.

1508. I believe you are aware that during that time, after Mr. Steele's appointment, the school was rapidly increasing in numbers?—It was.

1509. And a large outlay was made during the increase?—It was.

1510. From 1870, when you first visited Armagh, down to the present time, has there been a large expenditure there of a similar character?—Yes.

1511. Has Armagh during that period been going through the same process that Portora had been going through from 1857 to 1860?—It has. I don't say there was so much spent altogether on Armagh as on Portora. There was as much spent by the Commissioners, but Dr. Steele also spent a large amount on Portora out of his own pocket, and made the total much more than Armagh cost.

1512. Do you remember being called upon much later to examine into an account of Dr. Steele's for repairs executed from 1857 to 1868?—I do.

1513. Do you remember examining that account?—I do.

1514. I believe you were furnished with the details taken out by Mr. Pattison, a well-known surveyor, of what the nature of the work was?—Yes.

1515. Describe to the Commission what the work was upon which Dr. Steele put forward the claim?—I have some entries of the expenditures made by Dr. Steele at Portora, concurrent with the works that I carried out at the school. I have an item of £1,500 or thereabouts laid out on his own account. He paid £340 for painting, over and above the builder's painting. We all knew that the builder does a certain amount of painting, according to his contract—three or four coats—but he does so decorative painting. A plumber was paid £350 by Dr. Steele, and an iron founder £34 8s. 6d.

1516. Do you remember what the nature of the plumbing was?—Baths, lavatories, wash-hand basins, and things like that, of a very superior character.

1517. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—When you were superintending the work ordered by the Commissioners did you happen to see the painting and plumbing work done for Mr. Steele?—I saw it all.

1518. Was it work that was reasonably required for the school?—Taking into account the nature and character of the school, a great deal of it was not.

1519. In what way?—For instance, graining. Some of the best graining I ever saw was done by McNeill; and there were baths of a very high class, wash-hand stands, and all those things fitted up entirely in a first-class style, fit for the first house in the country, and all this I looked on as outside the requirements of an ordinary endowed school.

1520. Moving regard to the fact that those buildings are the absolute property of the Commissioners, and not of the schoolmaster, was the painting you describe as perhaps too sumptuous, in place of other painting that must have been done by the owners if they looked after the buildings properly?—Not altogether. Painting of some kind was necessary; but the amount of painting that was done by Mr. Steele was not necessary for that school.

1521. That is, there was some painting done that was required?—Yes.

1522. Can you tell me whether any large portion of the £340 paid for the painting was rendered necessary by the state in which he got the buildings?—No; I don't think so.

1523. Dr. HARR.—What was the lowest price at which the painting could have been done?—I suppose the painting in the contractor's estimate would have been about £200.

1524. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—And that you have mentioned was done before 1860?—Dr. Steele states that from 1860 to 1868 he did all the repairs himself?—I believe he did. I was surprised to hear it when he told me so in my own office, about the time the claim was put forward and the account laid before me.

1525. Were you at Portora at all from 1866 to 1868?—Often. Dr. Steele did many other things he asked me to look at.

1526. During that time did you see that the place was being painted?—I did. I saw the works going on.

1527. Was the building kept by Dr. Steele from 1860 to 1868, at his own expense, in a proper state of repair?—Nothing could be better.

1528. CHAIRMAN.—What was the expenditure due to the excess of luxury in painting?—I made an approximate estimate of that in a report that I furnished to the Commissioners of Education.

1529. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Dr. Steele states also, that from 1857 to 1860, what may be called the ephepical repairs, were done by himself, and not by the Commissioners. How does your recollection go as far as the payments are concerned?—I had no knowledge of any repairs going on at that time concurrent with the works.

1530. Did Mr. Steele from 1857 to 1860, at his own expense, you say, luxuriously, do the painting and papering of the place?—Certainly.

1531. Was that included in the expenditure by the Commissioners?—Not at all.

1532. Are you aware that subsequent to 1860 the same repairs went on down to 1867?—Quite so.

1533. Dr. HARR.—The money expended by the Commissioners was £1,720?—As far as I can confirm it out of my books, I was paid my fees exactly on that amount.

1534. That does not include any ephepical repairs that were taking place since 1857?—No.

1535. Was Dr. Steele paid for work from 1857 to 1860?—Not through my office.

1536. You remember in 1868 having an account for £1,050 paid before you by the Commissioners?—I do.

1537. I believe you subdivided that account, and part of it was paid?—I went into it most carefully, and attended at a very full meeting of the Board of Commissioners, while I very seldom did attend. The Secretary was the officer I usually had to deal with. I was examined most fully by the Board about the matter, and I considered Dr Steele ought to get a certain sum.

1538. There was £1,600 odd paid to him—I think so.

1539. Tell us, as well as you can, what was the £1,600 odd paid for, and what the balance was expended on. Did you satisfy yourself there had been an outlay of £3,000 and odd?—Dr Steele had asked me did I know a mason who would measure the work. I recommended Patterson, and that was the reason I was satisfied that the account contained everything that should, and only what should, be in it.

1540. Mr. Patterson is at the head of his profession as a surveyor?—He is.

1541. And very strict towards both parties?—He is; he won't go one way or the other for either party.

1542. They both complain of him?—He gets a good deal of abuse, but he does what is right, in my opinion.

1543. Tell us what Dr Steele was paid for, and what he was not paid for?—I allowed him for all works, so far as my opinion went, that I considered were of good value to the school. For instance, there was a lot of valuable ironwork, new slating, and other permanent works.

1544. The expenditure used in the Board minutes is that he was allowed for "permanent substantial repairs." Was he allowed in the £1,600 odd he was paid, for the expenses of the ephemeral repairs for the ten and a half years?—He was not allowed for the repairs in that account because I had no power to allow them. It was not part of my duty, unless directed by the Secretary, to go down and look after them.

1545. Therefore it is the fact that all the expense of the ephemeral repairs has been left on Dr. Steele?—Quite so.

1546. And also some expensive work in substitution?—Clearly.

1547. Were the works for which he was paid such as added to the value of the school premises, or merely substituted there?—In my opinion they added to the value of the premises.

1548. And did not include ordinary maintenance and repair?—They did not. I would not allow that, because I considered it outside my province.

1549. Lord Justice Fitzgerald?—About how much would have been the proper and necessary expenditure annually, on repairs to keep the place in a proper state, without going to insurance expenses?—I could only give an approximate sum; I don't think that the Portico buildings, which are very large and very extensive, could be kept in order for less than £200 a year, taking all contingencies into consideration.

1550. Without going to an expenditure that you would think extravagant?—Certainly.

1551. Lord R. Churcill?—This outlay of Mr. Steele's was going on concurrently with the works under your superintendence?—Yes.

1552. You thought it too luxuriant for an endowed school?—I did.

1553. Did you tell any of the Commissioners so?—I mentioned to Dr. Kyle that Dr. Steele was doing large works on his own account on the school premises, but he made no reply.

1554. That he was carrying out large works of a class rather higher than was necessary for an endowed school?—I implied as much.

1555. Did you represent to Mr. Steele at the time that his works were of too high a class?—I did not.

1556. You stated that you suggested, provided inspection to Dr. Kyle; did he make any reply?—He said he thought it would be advisable, and the matter was allowed to drop.

1557. When did you make that suggestion?—I made it first many years ago, and once or twice subsequently. I think he thought it would add to the expenses. He was very cautious about laying out money.

1558. Lord Justice Fitzgerald?—After the payment of the £1,600 were you called upon at any other time to investigate a subsequent account of Dr. Steele's for £1,420, carrying on the expenditure from 1860 to 1868?—I think not.

1559. I understand now the way it stands is, the value for £3,000 odd for improvements and repairs was only down to 1840?—Quite so.

1560. You considered £1,600 of that sum had been spent upon improvements, and that was paid?—Quite so.

1561. The balance which was left unpaid would include £800 a year of a proper and reasonable expenditure, together with what luxury he went to over and above from 1857 to 1860?—In my opinion it would.

1562. From 1860 to 1868 you know nothing about what was done?—Nothing up to 1865, except the new buildings.

1563. You are very familiar with the Armagh buildings?—Yes.

1564. And I understand you have been superintending the work annually since 1870?—Yes, since December, 1870.

1565. Taking a period of seven years, one year with another, what would be a reasonable expenditure at Armagh for ordinary works of maintenance and repairs at a rough estimate?—Armagh would not be an expensive as Portora. There are a good many things in favour of Armagh as compared with Portora—the buildings are of a more permanent character, of stone. I should say from £150 to £140 a year would suffice at Armagh if the works were judiciously superintended and kept up from time to time.

1566. Have you, during your professional engagements at Armagh, been called upon to examine or watch the repairs?—I think not; but I have Mr. Maxwell's painting account, June 14th, 1872.

1567. I find the following sums charged against Armagh for the last seven years for repairs, as distinguished from new buildings—1872, £331 16s. 6d.; 1873, £135 13s.; 1874, £390 5s. 6d.; 1875, £268 3s. 2d.; 1876, £350 1s. 6d.; 1877, £297 7s. 11d.; 1878, £263 4s. 6d.; making a total outlay during the seven years of about £2,000 for repairs only, on Armagh. Of that expenditure what proportion was submitted to your examination or supervision?—I could not tell you in plé, but from the account I would certainly say it included a large amount for work consequent on new buildings being erected.

1569. Would it be possible for a gentleman in the position of Mr. Horgan, or for any employer who is not acquainted with building, to secure himself against overcharges for the ephemeral repairs of a place of that kind?—It is very difficult even for an architect to secure the Board from overcharges, much more so for one not accustomed to it.

1570. And having regard to the fact that in seven years £3,000, in addition to improvements and new buildings, have been laid out, have you seen any value there?—The amount looks too large for the repairs of that establishment, but there may be some new works included. I have a note of an expenditure in the time I had to do with it of £4,405 altogether for new works.

1571. Does that mean what you put your percentage on?—No; I do not charge on the small items.

1572. The seven buildings you saw about fifteen years ago. According to your recollection of those buildings, if they were once put into tolerable repair, how much per annum should be allowed to keep them so?—I would not like to offer an opinion on that unless I saw them more recently. It is so long since I have seen them that I could not say.

April 3, 1878.
Mr John
McCurry.

1873. Are they as extensive as either Armagh or Portora?—Not so extensive as either of those.

1874. The Ragbree buildings you saw in 1874?—Yes.

1875. About how much—counting the repairs to be kept up regularly—would be a reasonable annual allowance for their repairs and maintenance?—£100 a year would keep Ragbree in repair.

1876. And for Rosskillin about how much would be requisite?—£200 a year. It is in a very wild situation, at least it is very much exposed; the breeze off the lake affect it very much, so that it must cost more to keep it in repair.

1877. Did you examine the school-house at Chryssfort?—Never.

1878. Were any bills in reference to it submitted to you?—I never knew a school of the name before.

1879. The powers of the Commissioners with regard to Navan and Ballyroan schools are these:—

"It shall and may be lawful . . . for the purposes of ascertaining the due management of the said trust, and the application of the funds arising out of the said lands, from time to time to make such visitations, inquiries, and reports, and to direct that the lease and profits of the said lands, and accounts or accumulations of such rents and profits, shall be applied in like manner as the said Commissioners are empowered to do with respect to any other schools of private foundation, under or by virtue of this Act."

When did you see the Navan school?—I never visited that school. It was only in 1874, I think, during my illness, that the works there were undertaken, under the direction of my partner. £211 1s. 6d. was expended on it.

1880. Did either you or your partner ever see the Ballyroan school-house?—No; I never heard of Ballyroan until Saturday last.

1881. There are a large number of other schools of which I may take Killyenny and Clonmel as instances. Were you ever professionally consulted about them?—I was with respect to Killyenny, but not by the Commissioners. I was sent by the Board of Trinity College to inspect Killyenny school. That was over twenty years ago.

1882. What condition was it in then?—There was a good deal of dilapidation.

1883. Were you ever consulted about Clonmel?—Never.

1884. Or about any of the Diocesan schools?—Never.

1885. Dr. HART—You were there then once at Killyenny school?—Yes. I was there, a second time, about three years ago.

1886. LOAN JURYMAN FERGUSON.—What state did you find it in then?—A bad state. Some of the out-falls were much out of repair. I reported on its condition to the Board of Trinity College.

1887. You were not directed to inspect it by the Clonmel Commissioners?—I was not. Killyenny was never mentioned to me in Clonmel, or any of the Diocesan schools.

1888. Did you ever investigate the condition of any of the other schools for the Clonmel Commissioners?—No, none other.

1889. So that your examination of schools for them was confined entirely to Armagh, Dunganess, Keshillan, Carrig, and Ballymagh?—Yes.

1890. Once to Navan?—We visited Navan more than once during the repairs; they commenced in 1874.

1891. Dr. HART.—What was done with regard to the dilapidations at Killyenny school?—On the last occasion I visited Killyenny I reported on certain dilapidations, and there was a counter report obtained from Mr. Langhake, the Diocesan architect. He did not think there were many repairs to be made, and that a small sum would do. When I learned that, I sent a builder's measure, of the walls of Lynch, to the school, and he measured up all the dilapidations he found there. I left it to himself, and he furnished me with a detailed estimate, and I think I handed that to the College authorities.

1892. LOAN JURYMAN FERGUSON.—How much did it come to?—Somewhere about £400 or £500.

1893. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I think you said you were not aware that any repairs were effected at Rosskillan since 1868?—In 1871 there were general repairs, £48 1s. 6d. and £39 12s. 8d. for new sewers.

1894. Had you any general instructions to inquire annually into the repairs required at any of the Royal schools?—Not at all; I have no power to inspect the dilapidations.

1895. On one occasion you had an interview with the Commissioners with regard to a large account of repairs sent by Dr. Steele?—For general works and repairs.

1896. Was that the only occasion on which the Board called you before them?—I think that and one other occasion were the only two on which I attended the Board.

1897. Your communications were always with the secretary?—Yes; and he was one of the most particular men I ever met, so far as my dealings with him went.

1898. What course did the secretary pursue with you as to ordinary repairs; did he submit specifications in the first instance, or simply show you the accounts after the repairs had been done?—The secretary generally forwarded to me an estimate obtained from a local man to do the works, with a request that I would give my opinion on the documents, and he also requested me generally to write upon it, and I usually did so as to the prices and whether I thought such works were essential or not.

1899. Was this before they were done?—Before they were done.

1900. Were you supplied with plans of the different schools?—I made plans of all the schools in order to adjust the insurance on the schools.

1901. I suppose you arrived yourself of these plans with regard to the estimates?—Certainly.

1902. Dr. Steele stated in the course of his evidence that during ten and a half years from his appointment, in 1867, he did other things besides repairs such as building a row of stables, additions to the schools, bringing in hot water pipes, and things of that sort, a great deal of building of one kind or another. Do you remember in 1866 a claim of Dr. Steele's for a large sum being submitted to you by the secretary, Dr. Kyle?—My memory may fail me, but I do not think it was submitted to me. It might have been.

1903. Then if Dr. Steele did send in an account after 1867 it never came before you?—Not that I can remember.

1904. You say that you allowed him, when he sent in the large account in 1869 or 1871, for such improvements as you thought likely to be permanently useful to the school?—Yes.

1905. Did you allow him for the stables which he added to the school?—It is quite possible I did, but I could not tell without having the items before me. Anything of that sort I would allow him for.

1906. Would you have allowed hot water pipes for heating the schools?—We acknowledged that I am sure, because there was a further item of £20. They were not well done, and I had to get them altered. There was £20 paid afterwards for the alteration of them.

1907. When Portora was brought under your notice in 1857 it was in a very bad condition?—Very bad.

1908. When you spoke of £200 a year as an adequate sum to keep it in repair for the ten years between 1857 and 1867. Did you speak of Portora in its original small condition, or did you mean the keeping it in repair in its enlarged condition?—In its enlarged condition.

1909. And therefore before the works were finished it would not have required so much as £200 a year to keep it in repair?—Not quite so much, it was considerably enlarged.

1610. The works were finished in 1860 or 1861.—
In 1860. I find I was paid my account in June, 1860.
1611. Therefore you think £360 a year would be too much to allow for the first three years between 1857 and 1867?—It would not cost quite so much, but the outlay would be in a very bad case.

1612. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—It would include, of course, the putting up for neglect?—Quite so.
1613. If Dr. Steele claimed £1,100 for ten and a half years' service, you do not think that would be in excess of a reasonable amount?—Certainly not.

Mr. John
McCurdy

REV. Wm. MOORE-MORGAN, LL.D., Head Master of Armagh Royal School, examined.

Rev. William
Moore-Morgan
Esq.

1614. CHAIRMAN.—When were you appointed to Armagh School?—In June, 1860.

1615. Did you find any pupils there on your appointment?—There were two boarders and about ten day boys.

1616. Had the former master taken any pupils elsewhere with him?—None had been taken away.

1617. You have had a very large accession of numbers since?—Yes.

1618. When did that take place?—We had the first half year about thirty-five or forty, including both boarders and day boys, about sixty or seventy in the following year, then about 110 the next year, from that up to 120 the year after, and ever since we have had between 120 and 140 altogether.

1619. What is the number of day boys at present?
—There are forty-two day boys, of whom ten are free pupils, and the balance between that and 127 are boarders.

1620. I suppose the increase has been principally in boarders?—We never had more than ten free boys since we commenced, and the day boys have been very steady in numbers, between forty and forty-five for the last six or eight years.

1621. Your school seems at present the most successful of all the Royal schools?—We have been very steady.
For the last six years we have not fluctuated at all.

1622. You obtained for your school a great many disinctions in Trinity College?—Yes, our boys have done very well indeed.

1623. And in the various professions?—Well, some have gone to professions, but as I began so recently very few have reached professions yet. Some have gone into the army. Some have entered Woolwich and the Civil Engineering College, two the Indian Civil Service. Very few as yet have finished their University course, perhaps four or five.

1624. Your school was only inspected on one occasion by order of the Board?—Yes, visited only on one occasion.

1625. Has it been inspected by any of the Commissioners since your appointment?—Two or three of the Commissioners have paid me informal visits, but nothing in the nature of a regular inspection.

1626. You made, I believe, some changes in the school vacations?—I found the old practice was to give two vacations in the year—one in the summer of two months or perhaps rather more, and another in the winter of six weeks. After about three years we gave the English vacations—three in the year. We now have three terms, and the total amount of the three vacations added together is exactly equal to that of the two previous ones. We give a month at Christmas, three weeks at Easter, and seven weeks in the summer.

1627. That differs from the other Royal schools?
—Certainly from the Royal schools, but I think other Endowed schools have adopted it since.

1628. You consider that an improvement?—I think so, up to the present it has worked remarkably well.

1629. I think you teach natural science?—Yes, we taught it all through to certain boys, but now it is a regular part of our work, and we have a lecturer on the subject.

1630. Is he attached to the school?—He is Dr.
Ballman's assistant at the Armagh Observatory.

1631. What salary do you give him?—He will only receive for this year what may be the results due under the Intermediate Education Act. There is no salary provided by the Commissioners for that purpose.

1632. Have you not been in the habit of allowing him a salary?—He has commenced this work within the last four months, and only on the condition that for the present he should be entitled to the results fee. The question of permanent salary will be afterwards arranged.

1633. Was there instruction in natural science before his appointment?—Only to certain pupils.

1634. How was that given?—By our science master.

1635. What qualifications had he for teaching?—
He was an Honorary man in Experimental Science in Trinity College.

1636. Dr. HARRIS.—What experience had you as a teacher before your appointment to Armagh?—I never had any work as a schoolmaster before.

1637. Did the school begin to increase immediately after your appointment?—In our first term we had 34 or 35 boys, and it went on steadily improving after that.

1638. There seems to be one difference between your school and the others, namely, that some of the boarders are kept in a private house belonging to one of the masters?—Yes, one of the masters (calls a house for the purpose.—Very much the same as the English system.

1639. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Is that the overflow?—Yes, it originated in that.

1640. How does that system answer?—I think remarkably well. Another of our masters has taken a house for the same purpose which will soon be ready.

1641. Entirely a private speculation?—Purely.

1642. The Commissioners have nothing to do with it?—No; the Commissioners have always told me they had nothing to say to the boarders at all, whether any boarders or the boarders of any other masters.

1643. Your boarders are all Protestants?—They are, and so are the day boys.

1644. Is there any obligation on you to have a fixed number of free pupils?—I never had any obligation from the Board requiring me to have any fixed number, but when I went to Armagh I found it had been the custom of my predecessors to have ten free pupils, in accordance with the rule of the Commissioners when he was appointed, about 1849.

1645. CHAIRMAN.—Did you receive any definite instructions on your appointment that you were expected to have ten?—I don't recollect any.

1646. What amount of assistance have you received in your school from the Commissioners of Education—first, by way of payment of yourself and the other masters?—My whole salary is £400, and the annual allowance for masters is £150 a year.

1647. Did you receive any other payment from the Commissioners in the way of remuneration for the masters?—None whatever.

1648. Did you receive any sums of money for providing school requisites?—They have provided the school-books and have generally furnished the schoolrooms with forms, gas fittings, and so on.

1649. That is the portion of the school-house occupied both by day boys and boarders?—Yes.

1650. Have you obtained any assistance from the Commissioners in providing any more extensive apartments for teaching such as you would require for natural science?—I think not. They voted £25 for Hoare-Moore,

 &c. &c.

a school library in addition to something given before my time.

1651. Have you yourself spent upon the buildings any money in addition to what the Commissioners have given?—Nothing of any consequence.

1652. Have the repairs been executed at the expense of the Commissioners?—Yes.

1654. On what system have the ordinary repairs been executed—how has the necessity for them been ascertained, the amount to be spent fixed, and when spent, paid?—I followed the custom that my predecessor informed me he had acted on, namely, to send up to Dr. Kyle, in May or June every year, an estimate from a local tradesman for the execution of whatever repairs were necessary: this would be submitted to the Board, and, if approved of, I was informed of it, and then gave directions to the tradesman to carry out the work.

1655. The amounts are very large. Did you ever give any opportunity to tradesmen to submit competing estimates?—Never.

1656. Did you yourself select the tradesman who was to send in his tender?—I contrived to employ the same tradesman who were employed before my time.

1657. What means had you of ascertaining whether the charges were reasonable or excessive?—Mr. McCurdy has frequently seen the work done by the tradesman, and he always expressed an opinion that the charge was reasonable.

1658. Before you got authority to employ a tradesman and pay a certain sum, what step, if any, was taken, to ascertain whether the amount was a reasonable one?—I was guided very much by Mr. McCurdy's opinion, which was expressed at a very early period of my mastership, as to the honesty of the man.

1659. That some work had been honestly and cheaply done, and you continued to employ the same man?—I thought myself that the work was done as cheaply as it could have been. I was guided by my own opinion as well.

1660. When the work was finished what inspection was it subjected to?—I don't think that the ordinary repairs were inspected in any way, except by myself.

1661. By ordinary repairs do you mean all the pointing and pointing?—Yes, and repairing windows, doors, floors, and so on. I always saw myself that every thing was correct.

1662. That the work had been done?—I went carefully through the accounts and saw that every thing was correct and certified it to the Commissioners.

1663. Then the duty was thrown upon you of inspecting and certifying the ordinary repairs of the building?—Quite so.

1664. Did you know how the account of the school property stood in the Commissioners' books?—I was perfectly ignorant of that.

1665. Had you ever any information from them as to whether there was a large or a small sum of money available?—Never.

1666. Were your demands ever refused or were they always acceded to?—About 1875, when the last account for enlargements was considered, there were two estimates sent in, both by the same builder. These were submitted to the Board, and they decided on the smaller of the two.

1667. When you sent in your annual requisitions for repairs was any investigation resulting in any reduction ever made?—I don't recollect any. As to the items that have been referred to in Mr. McCurdy's evidence as for repairs, amounting to about £1,000, a very considerable proportion of that was not for repairs at all, but for what were really additions.

1668. Have you any means of knowing how that is?—I am quite certain of it. For instance, a plumber, who did a good deal of work for us, sent in his account. The Commissioners had seen the estimate before, and he was paid in one sum for both the amount of his estimate and the ordinary repairs.

1669. Do you know yourself, or were you ever furnished with any means of finding out how much had been paid under each head, repairs and improvements?—I was not required to keep an accurate list of the accounts.

1670. Were you ever furnished with the account as it stood in the Commissioners' books?—I had a copy of the account furnished to me by the tradesman and sent by me to the Commissioners.

1671. Did you ever get the account back again?—Never.

1672. Nor any account of what they had been to?—Never, except the cheques, which passed through my hands, both for repairs and enlargements.

1673. You gave the cheques to the tradesman?—I handed them to the tradesman. I should say fully £500 of the £2,500 should not be entered under ordinary repairs at all. One thing was a new system of drainage in connection with the school. Drainage pipes were laid that came at least to £100. There were gas fittings through a great part of the house which came to a large sum besides, and none of these were included in what Mr. McCurdy stated in his evidence as having been spent on enlargements and additions. I know they were included in the cheques sent to the tradesman for repairs.

1674. In the report of 1867 are set forth the rules that were laid down by his Grace the Lord Palatine for the education of free pupils, I find there the passage—

"That there should be educated as free daily pupils ten boys, children of parents residing in Armagh, and who must have been rated at not less than 40s. poor law valuation."

And after other provisions are stated, the report proceeds—

"No sufficient pains were taken either by the Commissioners of Education, or by Mr. Giffenham, the master of the school, to make these regulations known, and hence the authorities might well be ignorant of their existence."

Where did the ten boys come from that are now freely educated in the school?—From the neighbourhood of Armagh.

1675. How are they selected?—By competitive examination.

1676. Independently of the means of their parents?—I generally ascertain, as far as I can, if their parents have small means.

1677. Have you had large competition for these places?—No, not very.

1678. Are you able to tell us whether the number of day boys you have had for the last six years represents a large proportion or nearly all of the boys of the class to be found in the neighbourhood for the education you give?—I do not think we could get many more.

1679. You think, therefore, as far as the neighbourhood supplies the raw material it is worked up in Armagh school?—Quite so.

1680. What is the proportion in Armagh of Presbyterians and Church people among the class from whom your pupils would be naturally drawn?—Of the class looking for work an education, I would say not more than one-third would be Presbyterians.

1681. And about what portion of Roman Catholics of the same class in Armagh?—On that I cannot speak accurately; but there are decidedly more Presbyterians than Roman Catholics.

1682. Have you ever had any Roman Catholic day boys?—No, none have applied.

1683. What provision is there in Armagh for Roman Catholic education of a high class?—They have a Roman Catholic grammar there.

1684. Is that largely attended?—I don't know the numbers at all.

1685. Is it a school where classics are taught?—I don't know.

1686. The Commissioners in 1857 reported,—

"A complaint was preferred by the 'liberalists' of Armagh that the course of instruction was exclusively for the higher members of society, and that the mercantile and middle classes were virtually excluded, that book-keeping, practical arithmetic, natural philosophy, and other courses of instruction suited to them were not pursued."

How far under your management are these matters taught?—All these subjects are taught.

1687. What provision have you in the school for giving a commercial education as contrasted with a professional one?—Book-keeping and all the usual branches of English that fit boys for mercantile life are taught, but my experience is that very few of the boys who come to us look for that exclusively.

1688. Do the great proportion look for the higher education?—For the higher education, and such as would prepare them for the University, or the Civil Service.

1689. Do all the boys require the highest class of education you can give them?—Almost all.

1690. Your boarders come from a very wide area?—Yes we have some from the centre of Ireland, and from the north as well as the north.

1691. During the whole time you have been there has the demand for the advantages of your school been equal to the supply that you are able to afford?—I think the supply and demand are about equal. We are able to meet all demands.

1692. Do I understand that the boys who go to your school and do not intend to go to a university, would have an opportunity of getting the education they require?—Certainly, not more than forty or fifty per cent go to the university.

1693. What universities do they go to?—Trinity College, Dublin, and Cambridge.

1694. About what proportions go to Trinity College?—Fully five-sixths, and the remainder have gone to Cambridge.

1695. Do any go into the Queen's College at all?—I do not recollect one.

1696. Then this school, under your management, has become mainly, to the extent of those boys who go to the university at all, preparatory for Trinity College, Dublin; and, as to the rest of the boys, mainly preparatory for the higher class examination of the Civil Service?—Yes, we have sent up a great many for that.

1697. Have they, to a large extent, been successful?—A good many have, two for the Indian Civil Service, four got high places at Woolwich, six have gone to Scotland within the last six years, two into Cooper's Hill Engineering College, and two into the higher class hono Civil Service, the examination for which is almost as difficult as the Indian.

1698. What are the charges for boarders?—Sixty guineas a year.

1699. Is that a fixed charge for all?—A fixed charge for everything, that is for all board and tuition.

1700. If your school was not an endowed school, had no allowances for masters, repairs, or anything else, what amount would you be obliged to make the sixty guineas to?—From ten to fifteen guineas additional.

1701. So that the extent the fees are reduced by the existence of the endowment?—Certainly.

1702. What do you charge for day boys?—My charge is ten guineas in full, the least payable is six guineas for English and mathematics, and then two guineas each for Greek, Latin, French, and German.

1703. A considerable number learn both Latin and Greek?—Yes.

1704. And a large number modern languages?—Yes.

1705. That would raise your charge to twelve guineas?—Well, they pay only ten; not more than half a dozen pay twelve guineas.

1706. And what number of your day boys pay only eight guineas?—About five or six.

1707. Those do not want to go to any university?—They go into commercial life.

1708. Dr. HARR—Ten guineas is the average charge?—It is.

1709. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—For a stranger education in an endowed school to what amount would you have to increase your charges for day boys?—I may say from fifteen to twenty guineas.

1710. So that I understand ten free places and an average for the day boys of ten guineas, is attributable to the endowment?—Quite so.

1711. The recommendation of the Commissioners in 1857 was—

"We recommended that the free places should be open to all, and generally awarded by competition at a public examination, some being reserved to be given away on grounds of poverty, under the regulation of the proposed Board of Commissioners of endowed schools. In the Armagh Royal School it appears to us that the people have a right to require a course of education suited to prepare them for the universities; but as we see no reason to believe that the foundation was intended for the sole benefit of boys proceeding to colleges we are also of opinion, that it ought to furnish a complete English and commercial education, suited to prepare boys of the middle class for civil and mercantile employment, even though they should refuse to receive any classical instruction."

I understand, as to the latter, that it is given?—Quite in accordance with that.

1712. How the answering at the competition for the free places indicated a struggle or exertion on the part of the boys to get the places?—The answering generally has been good, but the competition has not been at all keen. For instance—two places were vacant last September, and only four competed, but two of those four really answered well.

1713. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are the free places boarding places?—No; merely exemption from payment of tuition fees.

1714. If there were funds available for the purpose of maintaining and supporting free boarders at the school, would there be competition for places of that sort?—I am almost certain there would.

1715. Do you find there is a considerable competition for the Royal Scholarships?—Yes.

1716. Have these been constantly kept filled?—Yes; and we have had extra scholarships granted to us occasionally, because originally we had only one Royal Scholarship, whereas Enniskillen and Dungannon had two each, and we often sent up more than one candidate.

1717. That is two for each year?—Yes; if two of our candidates answered well the first got the only Royal Scholarship we had, and the second an extra grant. About five years after I went to Armagh, the Commissioners made an alteration by which I was allowed two each year. Even now we send up boys who take entrance junior exhibitions in Trinity College. The year before last we got three of them in addition to our two Royal Scholarships.

1718. Have you had many instances among your boys, of boys who have gone in for Bursarships in Trinity?—Four, I believe; three or four, but not many compete for it.

1719. Do you find the day boys hold their own with the boarders in the progress of their education?—First, in the school and then afterwards?—I think in the school they do, but as to success after leaving school I have gone through our list, and out of 135 successful graduates after leaving school, 140 were gained by boarders, and the balance 35 by day boys. The boarders seemed to me to have done better in the University.

1720. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are you now speaking of success in the University?—In the University and at competitive examinations. In fact all but one of those who succeeded at the Civil Service competitions have been boarders.

1721. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—To what cause do you attribute the great increase of efficiency in your school?—To the maintenance of a good staff of masters.

1722. What staff of masters have you?—We have

Mason Morgan,

Mr. William
Abrahamson,
Chairman.

nine assistant masters, four assistant, and five non-resident.

1723. What is the annual cost of maintaining that staff of masters?—The annual sum paid by me, exclusive of £150 paid by the Board, is between £1,400 and £1,500.

1724. One of the charges upon the funds, after making provision for the payment of the head-master, is—

"If it shall appear to the said Commissioners that one or more under-master, or under-masters, are necessary for any such school it shall be lawful . . . to order and direct that such other share or proportion . . . of such income and profits, as they shall think proper, shall be applied to the sole use and benefit of such under-master or under-masters respectively."

Have you taken any step to apply to the Commissioners as to what they thought should be paid?—I never consulted them, £150 would be quite inadequate.

1725. I observe that in another school £500 is paid. Have you ever had more than the £150?—Never.

1726. Dr. HARR.—You mentioned that only a small number got scholarships in Trinity College. I suppose that is because they were not poor enough to be eligible?—I fancy so.

1727. CHAIRMAN.—You have 15 acres of land with your house. Does it afford you any profit?—The 10 acres include the lawn and garden, the playground, which is too small, and about 2 acres which I have set apart for a cricket-ground for the boys, and the remainder, about 7 acres of hilly ground, I use for growing corn.

1728. In 1876 you had 88 boarders. Were these entirely in your own house?—Yes.

1729. Was that as large a number as you could take in?—We could not accommodate more.

1730. At present there are 78 at your house and 19 in Mr. Gordon's?—Yes.

1731. What arrangement do you make as to the charges for boarding and tuition, of the boys at Mr. Gordon's?—He boards them and they reside in his house altogether. They merely come to us as day pupils.

1732. Then the payment you receive for them is the same as you receive for the day pupils?—Yes, calculated according to the rates I have mentioned.

1733. Dr. HARR.—Do you know what they pay for their board?—They pay rather more than the boarders at our house.

1734. CHAIRMAN.—You stated there are some Roman Catholics in the town of Armagh who are in such a social position as to be able to send their sons to your school. Is there any religious instruction in the school-hours or anything that their parents could consider an obstacle to sending them to you as day boys?—Nothing that I know of. The religious instruction is confined to the boarders exclusively.

1735. LEON JOURNÉ FREEDMAN.—Do you think it would be at all practicable to have a mixed boarding school?—I am afraid under the circumstances of the country it would not succeed.

1736. Under the circumstances of any country?—I doubt that a mixed boarding school could succeed.

1737. You took boarders and graduated in Trinity College Dublin?—Yes.

1738. What canon did you principally follow there?—Classics, Mathematics and Modern Languages.

1739. You have stated both Classics, Mathematics, and Modern Languages, what under-graduateship did you get?—Two gold medals, one in Classics, and the other in Mathematics.

1740. Of what Universities are your assistant graduates?—Mr. Gordon of Dublin; Mr. Forshall of Cambridge; Mr. Johnston of Dublin; Mr. Pearson of Oxford; two, Messrs. Johnston and Mr. Strongways, of Dublin.

1741. Were the graduates from Cambridge and Oxford distinguished men?—Yes, they were both scholars in their colleges.

1742. Have the boys you sent to Cambridge been distinguished there?—One got an open scholarship at King's College, and another came out second in the Theological tripos.

1743. Do you find yourself able to teach boys in Armagh so that they can distinguish themselves in Cambridge as well as Trinity?—I think so.

1744. What is the nearest Protestant school of the same class to Armagh?—Dungannon is the nearest.

1745. Except these Royal Schools do you know of any other?—No; none near us for that class of education.

1746. What is the nearest school to yours, that could be regarded as a competing school with it?—I mean as to the class of education—that is not a Royal School?—The Lurgan endowed school. I do not know of any other very close to us.

1747. In Belfast there is the Belfast Institute. That is an endowed institution also?—It is a private endowment.

1748. If the endowed schools were not in existence what other provision is there for educating Protestants in the North of Ireland?—I do not know of any schools of private enterprise in the North of Ireland at all.

1749. LEON B. CHURCHILL.—Would not the fact of an endowed school existing in a neighbourhood operate against the establishment of an unendowed school?—It would, certainly.

1750. You stated the flourishing condition of Armagh was due to the maintenance of a very efficient staff of masters. You have seen the return of the numbers attending the other Royal Schools?—Yes.

1751. Do you think the unsatisfactory operation of the other Royal Schools in comparison with Armagh is due to the fact of an inefficient staff of masters or at any rate not so efficient a staff as yours, or is it due to the fact that Armagh has practically exhausted the supply of pupils?—I believe they could all be full.

1752. Do you believe it is possible that all the Royal Schools could be as flourishing as Armagh at the same time?—I do.

1753. Do you think you have as many scholars as you could educate?—I think as many as we are likely to have, unless we got more masters and more accommodation.

1754. Supposing you had every facility for increasing the school do you think you would be able to fill it?—I think so.

1755. Do you think the Protestant boys, the sons of the upper classes, would come to you in particularly unnumbered numbers?—I could not say that. The reason why the Royal Schools in Ireland seem to be low is that so many go to England. Our statistics on that point are remarkable; about 250 boys have entered Armagh School since my appointment, and of these 250 boys, 65 have come to us from England—that is to say, boys who have been at school in England, in Uppingham, Clifton, and other places. Some of these boys have been two or three years there and have come to us. Why should not the same thing take place in other schools?

1756. You think that boys would not go to England in such numbers as they do if there was a better staff of masters at the principal Endowed Schools in Ireland?—I think so.

1757. You said that you could keep the school going at an advantage to yourself without any endowment if you increased your charges for boarders by fifteen guineas?—I think so.

1758. There is a Schoolmasters' Association?—There is. I am a member of it.

1759. So you are intimately acquainted with the principal masters of the other schools in Ireland?—Yes.

1760. Do you know what the charges at Mr. Wall's school at Portlanning are 1.—No, I do not. I know a great many schools in Ireland charge less than sixty guineas a year.

1761. The fact of Armagh being an endowed school enables you to take pupils at lower charges than you could otherwise do?—Certainly.

1762. Are the pupils whom you are now taking at these lower charges, from the fact of Armagh being an endowed school, of a class in life to whom education should be supplied at the cheapest possible rate?—A great many of them are.

1763. From what classes are your pupils principally drawn?—They are chiefly the sons of professional men—clergymen, doctors, barristers, and solicitors.

1764. Are there many of the sons of the smaller landed gentry?—A few; but not by any means as many as of the others.

1765. Mr. O'SHEAQUESTER.—I suppose they go mainly to England?—I should think so.

1766. LEONARD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you think that the class you are now educating is the class for whom the Royal Schools were originally intended?—I think so.

1767. What number of scholarships in the university have you got?—We have two Royal Scholarships vacant every year, but only for the last four or five years, before that we had only one.

1768. How many competitors do you generally send up?—Five or six.

1769. LEONARD J. FREEMAN.—I suppose the boys know their chances before they go up?—They calculate beforehand what their chances are.

1770. LEONARD R. CHURCHILL.—Were the scholarships always gained?—Always, and sometimes an extra prize over and above the two.

1771. Mr. O'SHEAQUESTER.—From Trinity College?—No, from the funds of the school.

1772. LEONARD R. CHURCHILL.—Have you got any school exhibitions, bursaries in the school?—We have four every year, two males, of £25 and £15, for boys under sixteen, and two females, of the same amounts, for boys under fourteen.

1773. They were established by the Clero-street Commissioners?—Yes, about four years ago.

1774. What competition have you had for these exhibitions?—More for the junior than the senior. The boys who compete for the senior must be a year in the school before they can go in, and just as in the case of the Royal Scholarships, they calculate their chances beforehand, whereas there is much more uncertainty as the case of juniors, as they sometimes come from a distance, and boys in the school compete as well. I find, as a rule, the junior the more useful.

1775. How many had you last year?—Eight to ten candidates.

1776. Were they from the neighbourhood of Armagh, or from all parts of Ireland?—About equalised from the locality.

1777. Is it understood that these exhibitions are open to all boys, without distinction?—Without any distinction at all.

1778. I suppose no Roman Catholics competed for them?—I never had any application.

1779. Is it not rather remarkable that you have been in Armagh for ten years without ever having had an application from a Roman Catholic parent to educate his boy?—I suppose they would not accept the education, on the conditions offered in the Royal School.

1780. As a matter of fact, there have been a few isolated instances in the other schools, of Catholics being educated. In the Erasmus Smith schools a considerable number have been. Is there any particular reason in Armagh why a Catholic should not apply for education?—None whatever; there is more reason why they should apply to us than to the Erasmus Smith schools, because the Erasmus Smith schools are less strictly non-sectarian.

1781. Is it known in the town of Armagh that you would be perfectly willing to educate a Catholic boy on the same terms as any other boy, without in any way interfering with his religious belief?—I have never advertised to that effect, but I should say that it is assumed.

1782. It was clearly laid down by the Commissioners of 1857, as the duty of the Commissioners of Education to make known to the public that the Royal Schools were for all creeds and classes. It is known in Armagh that the Royal School is not confined to members of the Protestant Faith?—I am sure it is; Roman Catholic boys have been there before my time.

1783. Do you know of any reason for none having been sent in your time?—I know of none; in fact there is less reason now. With regard to religious instruction there is absolutely none during school hours; formerly it was necessary in the case of boys preparing for Royal Scholarships, to teach them Scripture history, at present there is absolutely none but secular instruction during the hours of the day school.

1784. What class in life are your day boys drawn from?—They are sons of parents living in or near Armagh. There are a good many resident gentry, and large tradesmen, who send their sons. In fact all who could be sent come to us.

1785. You said you got several boys from the English schools; are they of English birth?—Not more than six or eight were the sons of Englishmen, the rest were Irish boys.

1786. LEONARD J. FREEMAN.—Are you able to furnish us with any information as to the result of Mr. Gray's visitation in reference to anything he either recommended or condemned at your school?—No. I had no communication whatever from the Board as to his report, but I know he wrote one.

1787. I find in that report this passage—

"The headmaster is engaged in no other employment than the management of his school; he teaches the lower classes in certain portions of their regular work, and devotes the two half holidays which are given in each week, on Wednesdays and Saturdays, to hearing repetitions of the junior classes, no notice being given beforehand, as to what he will take up. He authorises the classes of any of the assistant masters who, from illness or any other cause, may be unable to attend. The assistant masters are all gentlemanlike men, and well qualified in every way to secure the respect and regard of the boys. Three of them are Englishmen, four are Irishmen, one a German, and one a Frenchman. Mr. Morgan estimates the cost of the annual salaries at £1,500 a year, inclusive of the £250 allowed by the Commissioners. Mr. Gordon is paid £250 a year, Mr. Forthall £200, Mr. Johnston £180, Mr. Unger £180, and Mrs. Deuchamps £125, all non-resident. Mr. Hyde is paid £125, with board and residence, Mr. W. F. Johnson £100 (day), Mr. E. H. Johnson £100 (day); Mr. Strangways £40 (day)."

Is that the expense at present?—Mr. Unger's salary should be stated as £105 and Mr. Strangways's as £109; Mr. Gordon's has been increased to £250, the others remain as before.

1788. The report proceeds—

"I carefully inspected the school premises, including school rooms, dormitories, . . . &c., and found all—particularly the dormitories—everything that could be desired in the way of cleanliness, neatness, and order."

Are your buildings in good order now?—In quite as good order as when the visitor was there.

1789. Mr. Gray made this suggestion—

"The ceiling of one of the oldest of the dormitories, containing no less than thirty beds, is exceedingly low, a defect which, I think might be easily remedied, and at a small expense by having the ceiling raised to the height of the ceiling of the others."

—That was done shortly after, and I rather think was one of the items included in the £1,600.

1790. He also suggested—

"The play-ground requires to be drained, this would be an easy matter from the nature of the ground, which slopes away gradually from the school buildings."

—That has been done as well.

1791. And further—

“I would also suggest that the portion of the play-ground, principally, and indeed of necessity, always in use by the boys, that namely, which occupies the school premises, and lies between the grammar on one side, and the ball-court on the other side, should be gravelled.”

—That has been attended to.

1792. He also reported—

“A foundation, about a foot in depth, of rough stones under the gravel, would keep this portion of the play-ground perfectly dry at all seasons.”

—That has been done also.

1793. Do you consider the visitation by Mr. Gray was an advantage to your school?—Certainly.

1794. In Germany objection, that you know of, on the part of the masters or otherwise, to such visitations being held?—I am not aware of any.

1795. Dr. HAME—You mentioned that there is a Roman Catholic school at Armagh—is it long established?—I think so; it was there before my time.

1796. Could not its establishment be the cause of no Roman Catholics coming to your school?—It is quite possible.

1797. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—In reference to the advantages of endowments to the middle classes of Ireland, I find this passage in the report of the Commissioners of 1857—

“In recent times the master would have a direct interest in limiting the admission of day and free scholars wherever he can furnish accommodation for the reception of a large number of boarders. Parents in the ranks of the gentry are no less willing than they were in former times to place their sons at schools attended by boys belonging to the middle and lower class. We find that out of this feeling has grown a corresponding inclination on the part of schoolmasters to discourage the attendance of those whose parents were readily prepared to seek a secondary education. In short, it becomes the interest of the master to reduce his school select. He may do this in different ways, he may raise the charges payable by day scholars to such an amount as practically to exclude the sons of all except the wealthier residents in the neighbourhood, or, as we have already intimated, he may render the school studies unsuited to the wants of pupils preparing to follow the pursuits of trade and manufacture. He may also throw difficulties in the way of the admission of free scholars, or actually refuse to receive them.”

I suppose none of these apply to Armagh?—I do not think they do.

1798. Do you think they apply to any other endowed school, that you are acquainted with?—Not in my opinion.

1799. Do you think that the causes there pointed out have anything to do with the remarkable decrease in these Royal Schools?—I think not.

1800. The Report goes on to say—

“Our inquiries into the condition of Free Grammar Schools in this country have convinced us that the influences and practices of which we have here indicated the nature are not merely imaginary. On reviewing the reports of our Assistant Commissioners we find that of the pupils educated in 48 of our Endowed Grammar Schools, 395 are boarders; from about 420 to about 460 a year. The number of day scholars attending the same schools is 1,091, whilst the number of free pupils educated amounts to only 161. The total annual value of these endowments is about £12,340. From these figures it might be inferred that the annual cost of providing free education in Grammar Schools for the benefit of the public is at the rate of £70 for each pupil. In such a calculation, the indirect advantages gained by the public in the establishment of schools where otherwise none would have existed, and in the improvement and cheapening of the education provided for the paying pupils, must not altogether be lost sight of, still the result to which we have just drawn attention shows too plainly that these endowments are not producing the effects they were intended to accomplish. A more equal balance of a disproportion between the magnitude of an endowment and the result produced by it in promoting free education, is presented in the case of the Royal Free Grammar Schools. The annual value of the endowments connected with these institutions is £2,050 to £2,347; the number of boarders educated in them not paying on an average £48 a year, is 177, whilst the day scholars number only 136, and the whole number of free pupils received into them is but 47. Thus the large endowments attached to these schools are gradually expended in improving and cheapening the education of the boarders, whilst for only 47 scholars are the Royal schools, in their same degrees then to be, free.”

Do you agree to that paragraph; or are you in a position, speaking of your own school and others, to contradict it, and say that since that paragraph was written a total change has come over the Royal Schools?—The result of my own experience is that it would be perfectly responsible, at least in the case of the Royal school of Armagh, to maintain it in its present efficiency as a day school unless we had a large number of boarders. In fact the boarders’ fees enable us to provide the day scholars with the education they receive. We have only forty-two day boys, and I suppose those boys on account of their different ages and the extensive they receive would require six classes in any ordinary intermediate school. Taking the average of our payments for efficient masters to be from £200 to £250 each, that would require an outlay of at least £1,500, and the fees payable by the day boys would not reach that amount or anything like it.

1801. The endowments attract boarders because you are able to take them cheaper?—And also the exhibitions.

1802. And the boarders enable you to take the day scholars?—The boarders enable us to keep a proper staff of masters.

1803. In Armagh school attended by boarders of the classes to whom a cheaper education is desirable and necessary?—Certainly. It is a great object to such boys to have the education cheaper than they otherwise could have it.

1804. Are you further of opinion that if the other Royal schools were conducted on the same principle as Armagh they would be as an equally decreasing state?—There is no reason why they should not.

1805. Mr. O’SHEA—Do you think you have all the day boys that you would expect to come from the neighbourhood of Armagh at your school?—I don’t think we could increase the number of Protestants very much.

1806. But still the number which do come to you as day scholars would not be enough to maintain the school without boarders?—Certainly not, when times are free.

1807. As I understand, the Commissioners said they had nothing to say to boarders?—They implied that they were rather concerned with the day school.

1808. What did you understand by that?—That the regulations, for instance, as to fees for boarders were left to my option, and that it was to the interests of the day scholars, and the aspect of the school as a day school, they were bound to look.

1809. It would follow that, were it not for the admirably-conducted boarding school, which has wrought such excellent results, and as to which the Commissioners profess to have no public duty, the town of Armagh would not be sufficient to maintain a day school like yours?—It would not, unless for higher fees were paid.

1810. But that as a school taking day boys for nothing, or some of the day boys for nothing, and the majority for low and inadequate prices, Armagh would not be a sufficiently populous centre?—I think not.

1811. You told Lord Randolph Churchill you could see no reason why all the Royal schools should not be well filled?—I see no reason.

1812. According to a return recently furnished to Parliament there is at present accommodation in the Royal schools of Armagh, Carrigrohane, Dungannon, Banagher, and Engharoe for 410 boarders. Do you think that it would be possible to have 410 Protestant boarders in these schools to fill them up?—If the boys came to them as they have come to us lately from the same places and classes, I think so.

1813. To what do you attribute their not doing so?—It would be very hard to answer that question.

1814. You said that you sent up some young men to the Civil Service examinations. Did they pass directly from your school to the examinations, or was it necessary that they should afterwards go to grammar or girdlers?—Some went to grammar for a very short time—a few months—but the majority passed direct.

1815. Did any pass direct for the Indian Civil Service?—They spent a very short time with girdlers.

1816. Then you believe it possible, at a school like yours, to prepare boys for those high Civil Service examinations without the deteriorating subsequent process of examining?—Certainly, up to the age of sixteen; my experience has shown that that is quite feasible.

1817. What is the population of Armagh?—Between 6,000 and 8,000 persons.

1818. You have in Armagh a pretty large number of shopkeepers and merchants in a small way?—Yes.

1819. You have also round it a pretty large class—saying nothing of gentlemen—of farmers holding from 50 to 100 acres of land?—I think they are mostly small farmers, and I should say, comfortable on the whole.

1820. I presume some of your boarders are from the neighbourhood of Armagh?—Very few.

1821. Then it is your day boys that constitute the Armagh population taking advantage of your school?—Quite so.

1822. What is the number of your paying day boys now?—Thirty-two.

1823. What number come from the shopkeeping and farming class?—Possibly six or seven.

1824. Is it not quite plain that the vast majority of shopkeepers and farmers in and about Armagh do not send their sons to your school?—They do not.

1825. What other schools are there in Armagh or within walking distance of the town?—The Roman Catholic school and the National schools.

1826. Is there a middle-class school in Armagh?—No.

1827. Then if the vast majority of the shopkeepers and farmers send their sons anywhere it must be to those primary schools?—Decidedly.

1828. Don't you think there is wanted in Armagh, for those shopkeeping and farming classes, an education coming between your intermediate education and the primary education given in the other schools?—I think the primary schools carry them far enough, quite up to us.

1829. How do you mean "up to you"?—So as to be qualified to enter our school, if necessary.

1830. Do you think that for the boys of the shopkeeping and farming classes, who are never to go to your school, the primary schools which exist in Armagh are sufficient?—I think quite sufficient. The education in the National schools is admirable.

1831. You think it is sufficient for the shopkeeping and farming classes?—For the average boy, I do.

1832. And it is only in case a boy of the shopkeeping and farming classes shows ability you think it necessary to give him more than a primary education?—I think so.

1833. You said that fifty per cent of the boys attending your school intended themselves for the University. What do the remaining fifty per cent devote themselves to?—A good many enter the army and the Civil Service, or go to professions directly without going through college; for instance, a good many pass the solicitors' apprentices' examination.

1834. Do many go to the medical profession?—They generally go to it through Trinity College.

1835. Do many of them enter commercial life?—Yes, a very fair number.

1836. Of 100 boys who would pass through your school how many, speaking roughly, would enter commerce now?—Not so many now as some years ago; perhaps now ten or fifteen per cent.

1837. Would any of those, being of the class of large household farmers, devote themselves to agricultural pursuits on their holdings?—Very few, I should think.

1838. The class of boys who go to your school do not require a more English and commercial education?—Very few do.

1839. You have made no attempt, very naturally, in the absence of such boys, to provide any department in your school specially for the purpose of English and commercial education?—No. We never had any funds available for it provided by the Commissioners, though I made a suggestion at one time that if such a department were required it would be necessary to have it in a totally separate house, under separate masters, but in connection with the school.

1840. Lord R. Grosvenor.—You mean by "in connection with," under you?—Yes; I should have the control of it.

1841. Mr. O'Shaughnessy.—Did they take any steps in consequence of your suggestion?—They made no allowance whatever for separate masters.

1842. What was the reply?—I do not recollect any reply. They have always, in circulars I have had from them, attached considerable importance to what is called an English and commercial education.

1843. They paid no attention to your suggestion?—I do not recollect any further communication about it.

1844. What percentage of your day boys learn Latin and Greek?—All but one or two learn Latin, and the majority learn Greek.

1845. Do many of them learn French and German?—Very few learn German; all learn French.

1846. Therefore the great majority pay ten or twelve guineas?—Far more pay ten than twelve. £10 10s is looked upon as the regular fee.

1847. Do you remember the Commissioners calling your attention, by circular, to the scale of charges for your day scholars?—I do.

1848. When?—Some years ago.

1849. What was their suggestion to you?—I think they suggested that there should be a fee as low as six guineas for certain boys.

1850. Precisely to that a day scholar's fees were ten guineas?—They had always, both in and before my time, been ten guineas.

1851. What did the ten guineas then embrace?—English and Mathematics, Latin and Greek.

1852. You thought then, and think still, that £10 10s was as low as you could take the day boys for, teaching them those subjects?—If there were only day boys I could not take them for that.

1853. When you reduced the ten guineas to six guineas you made the two subjects Latin and Greek, which had been formerly taught for the ten guineas, extras?—They were nominal extras, but every boy learned them, and so they are not regarded as extras.

1854. Are the Commissioners aware of the course you pursued with reference to that recommendation?—Yes; I have informed them, and sent in the returns showing the charges.

1855. Did they ever take any notice of your proceeding in reference to it?—I do not think so. Perhaps I may say I could not do otherwise unless the Commissioners allowed a much larger sum for the payment of masters.

1856. You estimate the difficulty of supplying day boys with instruction at the moderate rate suggested by the Commissioners, to their neglect to provide sufficient funds for an adequate staff of teachers?—If the Commissioners gave me the same amount as is allowed to Enniskillen school I would reduce the amount payable by day boys.

1857. In what respect do you consider the Erasmus Smith's schools less successful than the Royal schools?—I believe there is in them some provision for Scriptural instruction during school hours.

1858. And there is no such provision in the Royal schools?—No such provision at all. In fact the Commissioners have stated to the contrary.

April 7, 1878.

Rev. William
Moore-Morgan,
A.B.

1859. Do you share the view, put forward here by all the other Royal schoolmasters, that it would be virtually impossible to keep Roman Catholic boarders under the same roof with Protestant boarders without the accommodation more or less influencing their religious feelings?—I am afraid in Ireland it would be, but not in France. My experience extends to France; I have been at school there myself.

1860. I suppose you are aware that in France it is quite a common thing to have half-a-dozen Protestant boys in a Roman Catholic school without interfering with their religion?—Quite.

1861. But you think that would be hardly possible in a Protestant school?—I do not think it would under the present circumstances.

1862. Suppose you had a Catholic house under a Catholic clergyman, taking in boarders and superintending them?—I would it be possible to have Roman Catholics as boarders under such circumstances at your school?—There is no room at present; but if there was proper accommodation provided, I do not see any objection, or any difficulty whatsoever, in connection with it.

1863. But the entire superintendence of those boys outside the school-room would be virtually left in the hands of the Roman Catholic clergyman?—Yes.

1864. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is that practically so under the master who takes boarders now?—I have nothing to say to them except during school hours, but then they are all Protestants.

1865. You think there would be no practical difficulty in having a Catholic master who would take Catholic boarders?—There ought to be no difficulty.

1866. CHAIRMAN.—Have you ever had a Roman Catholic master?—Never.

1867. Did you ever limit your choice in any way, when looking for a master, to Protestants?—No, never.

1868. Mr. O'BRIEN.—As I understand, you do not think it would be fair or reasonable to put Roman Catholic boys as boarders into a Protestant college surrounded by Protestant boys, and with an entirely Protestant staff of masters?—I think not in Ireland.

1869. You were asked why it was the Roman Catholics do not go to your school, and you found some difficulty in assigning a reason. Is not it a well-known fact that the Roman Catholics in Armagh as well as in other parts of Ireland object to mixed education?—Quite so.

1870. And is not that the reason they do not send their sons?—Of course it is. For the same reason they do not send them to Trinity College or the Queen's Colleges.

1871. I am sure so far as you personally go you would not allow the religion of a boy or his religious feelings to be offended in any way in your school?—Certainly not.

1872. One of your assistant masters is a Cambridge man?—Yes, he teaches classics.

1873. Was he an honor man?—He was a scholar of his college.

1874. He enjoys your confidence?—Yes.

1875. I suppose you would not be a party to anything said or done offensive to Roman Catholics?—No.

1876. And if anyone said anything offensive to Roman Catholics, you would consider that a good reason for boys not liking your school?—I do not think so.

1877. The name of the Cambridge gentleman is Mr. Forsyth?—Yes.

1878. You are aware he has written a pamphlet on the subject of the Intermediate Education Bill and the Endowed schools in Ireland?—Yes.

1879. It was printed in the town of Armagh in 1878?—Yes.

1880. This Mr. Forsyth, who is one of the masters in your school, teaches the day boys as well as the boarders?—All.

1881. He is pretty well known in Armagh?—Very well known.

1882. How long has he been there?—Eight years.

1883. He writes in a pamphlet published in 1879.

"Indeed is undeniably governed, at least, as far as the great majority of her population is concerned, in all matters, educational and religious, more than any other Roman Catholic country in the world, from Rome. As long as the irreconcilable party, that is, at Rome, exhibit the vitality and the determination they have exhibited, since the accession to the Pontificate of Leo, XIII., in their slightest reason to hope that the Pope, now offered, will really soothe a single schism, or still the faintest screen of the irreconcilables here? I then ask, they will pretend to accept your measures, they will take your money, in any quantity, and continue to satisfy any conditions that may be imposed on them involving its acceptance, but they will spare your principles, and reject any liberal branch of education, which may require strict action."

Do you think that that language held by Mr. Forsyth, one of your masters, is calculated, if read by the Roman Catholic population of Armagh, to induce them to go to your school?—No; I should say not.

1884. You would not hold such language?—Certainly not.

1885. Here is another passage:

"Until European opinion can make itself felt with greater force, than it is, at present, in confessional circles at Rome, and throughout Italy, till the subtle influence of the Irish cardinals, which is holding even the Pope himself in its clutches, is really stamped under foot and washed out of the dark corners of the Vatican, you will never witness the entrance party here, by any legislation, which stops short of an absolute surrender to those of most of the educational revenues of the country, or such a scheme of numerous endowments, as places, unconditionally, at their disposal, the host's stores."

Do not you think that the holding and publishing of such language as that by one of the masters of Armagh school with regard to the cardinals who surround the Pope and who are alleged to hold him in their clutches, would account for the absence of a single Roman Catholic at the present day from your school?—I think if he used exactly the opposite language it would not induce a single Roman Catholic boy to attend the school.

1886. Do you think having regard to the language Mr. Forsyth held there that anyone meet in favour of mixed education would expect a Roman Catholic parent to send his sons to the Royal school of Armagh?—I do not think that affects the question in the least.

1887. Assuming there was a tendency to send Catholics there?—But there never was.

1888. Do not you think that language like that held by one of your masters, is very improper in a large population consisting of Roman Catholics?—I should never hold language calculated to offend the consciences of other people.

1889. Do you think that does?—I do.

1890. Suppose you were in a French town and found that one of the Jesuits in a French college used such language in a public circular or document with regard to the Protestant institutions of a neighbouring country, would you be inclined to send your son to be taught by that man?—I do not think that affects the attendance at the school at all.

1891. You think there is such an inclination to mixed education as to prevent Catholics sending their sons there in any case?—Decidedly.

1892. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Am you aware that the Royal schools are by their intention, and theoretically, non-exclusive foundations?—I suppose they are.

1893. Would not such language as that Mr. O'Brian has quoted be extremely improper in the mouth of a master in a non-exclusive school?—I should think it is. I have said so already.

1894. If it came under your notice you would reprimand the use of such language?—I have done so already.

1893 Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I assumed you did from the time you showed. Here is another extract —

"Whether may be said to the contrary, there is no such institution, in Ireland, in any sense of the word, as a Public School. The Royal and Endowed Schools are simply private institutions, bolstered up with, and assisted by Public Money, and the Head-Master is the only person connected with them who derives any personal benefit from the success of the school."

You said that the endowments which belong to your school, enable you to give education at a somewhat reduced price to the day boys and to the boarders who attend.—Certainly.

1896. Therefore it is not absolutely true that the only person deriving any personal benefit from it is the head master?—That statement is quite erroneous.

1897. The Commissioners conveyed to you that they had very little interest in the boarders?—They implied that.

1898. There were large sums of money spent in extending the school since you went there?—Yes.

1899. Of what buildings did the extensions consist?—A very large school room, three class-rooms, two master's sitting rooms, a dormitory, and a gymnasium.

1900. Is the gymnasium used by the day boys?—It is open to them.

1901. But the greater number of boys who use it are the boarders?—Yes.

1902. The school-rooms and class-rooms are used by both?—They are.

1903. Then the expense which has been gone to to acquire the school-room, class-rooms, and gymnasium has been more useful for the boarders than the day scholars in consequence of the larger number of boarders?—Quite so.

1904. And the expense of the dormitory was altogether undertaken on behalf of the boarders?—Yes.

1905. Can you recognize that expenditure, so largely made for the sake of the boarders, with the idea which the Commissioners conveyed to you that they had nothing to say to the boarders?—Possibly they were under the same impression that I have had—that the school could not have been maintained, as a day school, without the boarders.

1906. Did the Commissioners make any communication to you with regard to the Intermediate Education Act?—I think not.

1907. I may tell you there have been complaints sent from the locality—which, so far as you are personally concerned, cannot reflect on you—about disagreeable things occurring between the boarders and the day boys. Do you keep the boarders and the day boys separate?—No, they are taught in the same classes.

1908. Do they play in the same playground?—The day boys come at the commencement of school and leave when school is over, but they can play cricket and football together in the grounds.

1909. During the daily play hour are the boarders separated from the day boys?—Not formally, but in every school the boarders and day boys separate themselves, to some extent.

1910. Do you do anything to encourage separation between them?—Nothing.

1911. It has been charged that there were some expressions of contempt used by your boarders to the day boys. Are you aware of such a spirit existing?—Not at all seriously. It is much less now than it was a number of years. I discourage it in every possible way.

1912. Was it the boarders that at your school the other day?—Yes.

1913. Were there any complaints made to you about the day boys not being invited to attend his funeral?—Not a word.

1914. That has not in any way led to complaints?—Not in the least.

1915. Did they attend?—I do not know, I was unwell and not able to attend myself. I gave them all the option of attending, by adjourning school till a late hour in the morning. I think such attendance should be perfectly optional.

1916. There is a pretty large Roman Catholic section among the small shopkeepers and farmers round Armagh?—I should say so.

1917. I suppose you are aware that the Roman Catholic Academy school at Armagh has no State endowment?—None.

1918. Dr. CURRAN.—You said you made an application to the Clarendon-street Commissioners to establish a workable section in the school. Was that by letter?—I think so. It is fully five or six years ago. They happened to refer to the commercial teaching.

1919. You say you never received an answer?—I do not recollect any answer.

1920. Are there any boys who come from a distance and reside in the town?—A few day boys do.

1921. Those that would consider the expense of the boarding school too great?—Yes.

1922. LEON B. CHURCHILL.—Suppose among the shopkeepers and farming classes in Armagh there are two or three promising Catholic boys, of evidently superior talents, that recommend themselves to the notice of the master or the patron of the National school, what facilities are there for these boys to gain a higher education?—They can hold an exhibition, under the new Act, in the Roman Catholic school in Armagh.

1923. But before the Intermediate Education Act there were none?—I do not think there were.

1924. As a matter of fact, the Royal school in Armagh would not be open to them?—It is open to all, but they will not accept it.

1925. CHURCHILL.—You stated there was no obstacle to their coming as day boys?—They might come if they pleased.

1926. LEON B. CHURCHILL.—Supposing some Catholic boys compete for the junior exhibitions under the new Act and some boys go up at the same time from your school, would not your boys, all Protestants, have ten times the advantage over the Catholic boys coming up from an ordinary primary school?—That depends entirely on the way the Act is administered.

1927. Do you say that the education of the primary school, such as it is, will fit a Catholic boy to compete for the junior exhibitions under the Intermediate Education Act on equal terms with a boy from the Royal school of Armagh?—Considering the programme published, they have about an equal chance.

1928. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is not the relative position of the Protestants and Catholics this, that the Protestants have the advantage of the Intermediate Act plus the endowments of the Royal school at Armagh?—Just so, but that applies to all endowments through the country that the Roman Catholics do not wish to send themselves off.

1929. Did you apply to the Clarendon-street Commissioners for funds to provide an assistant master to teach natural science under the Intermediate Education Act?—No, I made no application. He will be paid by results fees.

1930. Had you previously made application to the Clarendon-street Commissioners to pay other masters?—I had.

1931. I suppose in consequence of their general refusal to aid you in improving your staff of masters, you saw it was useless to apply for assistance for a master in experimental or natural science, to obtain the advantages of the Intermediate Education Act?—Having been refused on another occasion I did not think of making the application.

1932. LEON B. CHURCHILL.—The success of the school is not in any way depending on the efforts of the Clarendon-street Commissioners?—I think the Clarendon-street Commissioners acted most liberally in the grants they made since my appointment.

1933. Do you think the success of Armagh school is due to the liberal action of the Commissioners?—To a certain extent. We had only room for seventy when I went there.

1834. Comparing the salary given at Dungannon, £200, and £200 for assistant masters, with the salary given at Armagh, £400, and £150 for assistant masters, do you think that the Commissioners have done as much as they might have done to assist the prosperity of Armagh?—Probably, so far as the funds would admit, considering the large grant for buildings, but, if possible, I think we should have a larger allowance for assistant masters.

Mr. William
 H. D. Moore.

Mr. WILLIAM H. D. MOORE CONTINUED.

1835. CHAIRMAN.—For which of the Royal School Estates are you the agent?—The Dungannon estate.

1836. How long have you held that position?—I was appointed in September, 1877.

1837. Whom did you succeed as agent?—Mr. Wann.

1838. Is he the same Mr. Wann who is agent over the Armagh school estate at present?—Yes.

1839. Where do you live?—In Lurgan, county Armagh.

1840. Are you agent for any other estates in the same locality as the Dungannon school estate?—I am not.

1841. Where is it situated?—About five miles from Dungannon, and twelve from Lurgan.

1842. What kind is the land?—Part of it is arable, part meadow, and part bogland.

1843. What is the extent of the estate?—By the Government survey, made in September, 1865, it is stated to be 5,371 acres, 3 roods, 30 perches.

1844. What is the proportion of arable land?—In 1830 there was a survey made by an engineer appointed by the Commissioners themselves, that stated the entire to be 5,890 acres, 3 roods, 12 perches, comprising 1,360 acres of arable land, 1,170 acres of bogland, and 1,360 acres of meadow land. The lands at present in the rental as held by tenants are about 2,600 acres, and there are about 1,200 or 1,300 acres of bog land.

1845. What is the rental now?—The rental for the year 1876 was £1,739 4s. 1d., but, owing to the railway from Dungannon to Stewartstown passing through one of our townlands, the rents of the tenants whose holdings were affected were reduced from 1877 by sums amounting to the whole to 26 7s. 11d. The rental for this year will be about £15 more than it was in 1876, for the tenancy was vacant that year, but has since been let for £20 a year.

1846. Has there been any change in the rent of the agricultural holdings since you were appointed?—It has been increased by £8 or £4 on exchanges of land, and the re-adjustments of rents.

1847. You know nothing of the property before the date of your appointment?—No, except what I have heard.

1848. You are paid by the Commissioners a percentage on the rents collected?—Yes, 5 per cent.

1849. And you have an allowance for balliffs?—There is a balliff and there is a sub-agent. I should explain that the Commissioners also derive a profit of about £200 a year from letting part of the bogland, which is let to the tenants, and also to persons who are not tenants. It is let in lots, not as a yearly taking.

1850. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is that in addition to the rental of £1,750?—Yes, it is quite distinct from the rental.

1851. CHAIRMAN.—Is that paid in advance for the season?—It is not paid in advance. The sub-agent gives a ticket for each lot to the balliff, who gets an IOU from each party taking a lot, and that IOU, which is a form used on the estate, enables the Commissioners to take the turf if it is not paid.

1852. That gives a right of cutting a certain length of turf bank for one season only?—Just so, but it very often happens that the same person takes it again for the following year.

1853. How do the agricultural tenants hold?—From year to year. There are no leases.

1854. What is Griffith's valuation of the property?—The valuation in 1833 was, on the land £1,616 7s.

In the last Government valuation the farm buildings are valued at £240 15s. The total valuation now is £1,883 1s.

1855. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How many tenants are there?—There are 280 tenants. The rental states 303, but some of the tenants have two or three holdings which makes the actual number of tenants 280.

1856. CHAIRMAN.—From a comparison with neighbouring lands of similar nature can you form any idea whether £1,750 for the lands, and £250 bog rents, is a reasonable rental?—I believe this estate is let much lower than the adjoining estates.

1857. For present letting, what would it be worth supposing there were no tenancies on it?—The tenants on the estate would give £20 an acre for the interest of the outgoing tenant at the present rent, but I should not like to say myself how much the land is worth. They are quite willing to take great bog at 10s. an acre.

1858. What is the average rent per acre including the bog-land?—It varies very considerably on the different townlands. In the townland of Tynanagh, which contains about 141 acres, the rent is £160 11s. 11d.

1859. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are the farms let by the statute acre or by the Irish acre?—The statute acre.

1860. CHAIRMAN.—There is Ulster tenant-right on the whole estate?—Yes.

1861. Is that the case on the neighbouring estates?—Yes, so far as I know, it is.

1862. Then you think that under the circumstances the property is underlet?—The competition when I first entered on my duties, not so very long ago, was a great deal hotter than it is at present, and I am not sure, with the fall in the value of agricultural holdings which is now taking place, whether it is so much underlet. The tenants as a rule are poor.

1863. In the district I know best to get a fair rent you add one-fourth to Griffith's valuation; would that be a proper calculation on the Dungannon estate?—It would be a large increase on this estate, because our rents at present are much below Griffith's valuation. I don't think the tenants would like to pay our fourth extra.

1864. What is the usual payment for tenant right on the surrounding estates?—Lord Lurgan's estate goes down as far as Maghamsbury, and is just separated from the Commissioners' estate by the river Bann. On the estate of Lord Lurgan the office valuation is £10 an acre, and the parties selling will get from £29 to £35 an acre.

1865. So that the tenant-right is higher on the Dungannon estate than on the surrounding ones?—I believe so.

1866. Have you had any interviews with the Commissioners, with respect to the estate, or do you only send up your rental, and correspond on items?—Merely send up my monthly account, and my rental at the end of the year. I have never had any communication with the Commissioners as to my lettings.

1867. Have you never had any communication with them as to any valuation or alteration in the rental?—None whatever.

1868. You just received the rents as you would perperty rents?—Yes.

1869. What is the nature of the farm buildings?—Very small as a rule. Chiefly cottages or cabins, and generally thatched.

1870. How are the repairs executed?—A cost of withless is the extent of the repair that most of them get.

1971. Do the tenants repair the thatch themselves?—Yes, they thatch sometimes with heather, and sometimes with corn straw.

1972. No application is made to the Commissioners to lay out anything on permanent repairs?—A few tenants have made applications for loans to alter their houses, but on inquiry I found that the buildings were unsuitable for being turned into slated holdings, and I did not recommend the Commissioners to advance the money.

1973. I suppose the farms were too small to build slated houses on?—The average size of the farms on the estate is less than ten acres.

1974. Is there any other source of profit except the agricultural rents and the tithes?—There is a very small one sometimes. The sub-agent has returned to me two or three pairs of 10s. each, for legs raised out of the bog and sold. Sometimes there is 10s. or £1 for liberty to allow cattle to run across a very large extent of bog which is in the estate state.

1975. Is there any outlay on the bog?—There is a considerable outlay in repairing drains throughout the bogs. We have very frequently men employed. From £50 to £30 a year is necessary for draining the bog.

1976. Are the rents collected half-yearly?—No, they are collected yearly.

1977. Do you collect them on the spot?—I go to Stewarstown, a neighbouring town, for two days, and I advise those who have not paid at Stewarstown that I will attend on another day at Portadown about three weeks from that day. The remainder of the tenants pay to the sub-agent, or to me if my residence in Lurgan. I spend three days from home collecting the rents.

1978. You have a bailiff on the property?—Yes, and there is a sub-agent whose duty at first was to look after the cultivation of the land. He also kept a seed and lime account for the tenants, and advanced them flaxseed, clover-seed, and lime. They paid for the lime at the expiration of two years, and for the seed at the end of one year. After I was appointed I consulted with the former agent and with Dr. Kyle, and they both agreed that the time had come when that arrangement might be done away with, and accordingly the lime account was closed.

1979. Does the sub-agent live on the property?—Yes, and so does the bailiff.

1980. What steps are taken to see that the cropping is not improper, and that there is no sub-letting?—It is the sub-agent's business to look after that.

1981. Does he send you reports?—He does. If any person enters on the bog without permission he reports to me, and I take the necessary proceedings. I have had two or three persons fined by the magistrates.

1982. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—What are the duties of the bailiff?—He looks after the cutting of the bog leas, and points out the leas in the season, and sees, as well as the sub-agent, that no person is doing injury to the property on the estate. The estate is a wide one, and a great number of the tenants are very poor, and require to be looked after.

1983. What is the salary of the sub-agent?—For some time before I was appointed he had a salary of £38 odd, and £10 a year as an allowance for keeping a horse, but since I became connected with the estate he gets £1 a week, without any extra.

1984. What is the salary of the bailiff?—£20 a year, which is partly made up of a fee of 6d. paid to the bailiff for attending and pointing out the leas by each person who takes one.

1985. What does he cost the Board?—From £13 10s. to £14 a year.

1986. CHURCHILL.—The sub-agent gets £32 a year, the bailiff £38, and you get five per cent. on the rental?—Yes.

1987. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Do you get five per cent. on the £200 bog rent?—I get five per cent. on the gross receipts.

1988. CHURCHILL.—There are not many of the tenants in arrears?—Very few, the tenants are punctual.

1989. When do the rents fall due?—On the 1st of November.

1990. When do you collect them?—About the first week in December I collect in Stewarstown for two days; about the last week in December I collect at Portadown, and the remaining rents are paid chiefly into my office.

1991. How do you transmit your collections to the Commissioners?—As I receive the rents, I lodge to the credit of the Commissioners, in the Bank of Ireland, and forward the receipt of the Bank of Ireland to the Secretary, with my account and monthly vouchers. There are considerable annual disbursements on the estate.

1992. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—What are the outgoings?—There is a drainage rate payable half-yearly of £63 18s. 11d.

1993. CHURCHILL.—That, I suppose, is tolerable?—Yes. There is also a half-yearly maintenance rate which usually was £16 18s. 3d. but Mr. Wogan informed me that the trustees of the drainage have power to increase that, and last year the sum was £24 10s. 11d., which I paid in two half-yearly sums of £12 5s. 3d. each. The maintenance rate will probably not be so high again.

1994. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—What is this maintenance rate?—An arterial drainage charge under the Board of Works.

1995. CHURCHILL.—What was the £63 18s. 11d. for?—To pay off the original outlay.

1996. What other outgoings are there?—The Commissioners of Church Temporalities are entitled to a rebetcharge of about £75 a year.

1997. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—What is that for?—It is the tithe rebetcharge on the estate.

1998. What does the county cess for the year amount to?—£24 or £25.

1999. And the poor rate?—The poor rate for 1897 was about £37 10s. paid by me, directly, on the small holdings and about £39 10s. allowed, as the landlord's proportion, to tenants who paid poor rate.

2000. What is the average rent per acre in your neighbourhood?—The average rent is high. On Lord Lurgan's estate the average, outside the town, would be 30s. an acre.

2001. Why is it that, what are the advantages it possesses?—It is a superior one, it is near a large town; and the people living on it are in much better circumstances.

2002. Are there any large estates adjoining the Draperstown estate?—Mr. Olin's estate and Mr. Stanley's.

2003. Are you acquainted with those estates?—Not at all.

2004. How did you get your appointment?—When it became vacant I made application to the Commissioners, got the best testimonials I could, and succeeded in obtaining the appointment.

2005. Had you any experience of managing landed estates before?—I was acquainted with the system of management on Lord Lurgan's estate.

2006. Had you been employed on Lord Lurgan's estate?—No, but I served my apprenticeship in the office of Lord Lurgan's solicitor, and knew a good deal about tenants on bog-land.

2007. You have never had any experience in the management of estates?—Only a little.

2008. Did the Commissioners require any security from you?—They did. £2,500 real security, and also personal security to the same amount.

2009. Have there been any changes in the tenancies on the estate since you were appointed?—Not more than three or four.

2010. In those cases was the tenant right put up for sale?—No, it was disposed of by private sale.

4p. 12, 1897.
Mr. Wogan
H. W. Moore

April 7, 1878.

Mr. Wilson.
H. D. Moore.

2011. Do you know what was given for it?—Oh, certainly.

2012. What was given?—From £30 to £50 an acre, but the holdings sold were small.

2013. Would that be high in that neighbourhood?—Very high.

2014. To what would you attribute it?—Competition, there are not more than ten acres for every family.

2015. Would not the same amount of competition exist in other parts of the country?—I should think not.

2016. They compete especially for this land?—Yes. There are more facilities for cutting turf on it.

2017. Have the tenants made many improvements on their holdings?—I should say not very much.

2018. Did the Commissioners make improvements on the property?—The Commissioners, I think, did all they could to improve the condition of the tenants. In addition to the advances for seeds and lime, which I have already mentioned, they built a good school-house at King's Island.

2019. In 1857 the Royal Commissioner recommended that a school should be established for the benefit of residents on the townland of Derrybrisk. Has that been done?—Yes. That is the school at King's Island.

2020. Would that be available for all the children on the estate?—It would.

2021. CHAIRMAN.—What salaries are paid there?—The Commissioners pay a quarterly salary to the male teacher of £8 6s; they also pay a quarterly salary of £1 5s. to the female teacher. It is an excellent school and well conducted.

2022. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—From your experience of the property, how many years' purchase would be given for the Danganman School Estate, if by any chance it should come into the market?—Considering the prospective advantage from the unenclosed bog, I think it should sell for thirty years' purchase. On Lord Lurgan's estate the bog is the most valuable portion of the estate, for the bog, on which turf is cut in lunks, will let at from £3 to £4 an acre. Of course, when it is cut out it will not be the most valuable portion of the estate, but it produces now a rental higher than any other land on the estate, except that adjoining the town.

2023. CHAIRMAN.—As I understood it, it is the advantage of having bog now, which induces the tenants on the Danganman Estate to pay higher for tenant-right on the neighbouring upland?—I mean at the present time there is very nearly a thousand acres of turf bog in the unenclosed state; it has not produced one penny. I cannot think that that will continue for any length of time, and I think that that which is now estimated as not producing anything whatever should add largely to the selling value of the estate.

2024. DE CURIEL.—You think that when turf is exhausted elsewhere this will be required?—Yes.

2025. Mr. O'BRIEN.—With regard to the tenantry school, of the 104 children attending that school, I find there are 93 Roman Catholics, ten Presbyterians, and one Protestant. Are the mother and mistress of that school Roman Catholics?—They are.

2026. By whom were they appointed?—By the Church-street Commissioners. I should say that Mr. Berkeley took the most active part in establishing that school. He virtually had the appointment, and selected a Roman Catholic and his wife, as the population was almost entirely Roman Catholic.

2027. CHAIRMAN.—The school is under the National Board. Who is the patron of it?—I think the Commissioners are.

2028. Mr. O'BRIEN.—I understood you to say that the amount paid for tenant-right on the estate is £30 or £50 an acre?—Yes. For a small holding of two or three acres, with a house, £30 or £40 will be given. When you go higher, and take in ten or twelve acres, there will not be so much paid for it.

2029. I understood you to attribute that competition to the thickness of the population when these holdings existed?—Yes; and, as a rule, the people there make their living by cutting turf.

2030. In point of fact, they have to offer competition then to take these holdings and out turf?—There is some weaving also.

2031. You would not, from an agricultural point of view, be guided as to raising rents by the extraordinary competition which leads people to pay £30 an acre for tenant-right?—I consider as the rents are lower than the valuation, and such extraordinary sums were given for tenant-right, the Commissioners are fully entitled to a small increase of rent on changes of tenants, and in no case have the tenants objected.

2032. But you don't mean to argue from that that any addition should be now made?—I did mean to suggest to the Commissioners that the estate should be revalued. When any change of tenants takes place, before accepting the new tenant, I make the rent what I consider fair.

2033. Having done that you see no reason, as soon as the transfer of the tenancy is over to increase the rent?—Oh, not at all, not to increase it twice, but that only affects a small number.

2034. Therefore, in those cases where the exchange has been made, you are not for an increase of rent?—No.

2035. Now on Lord Lurgan's property you say that the tenant-right is of a smaller amount?—Yes.

2036. Do you attribute that to the fact that the population is thinner on Lord Lurgan's estate, and that there is not so much competition?—Partly to that, and also in a great measure to the influence of Lord Lurgan's agent, and the restrictions of the office rules.

2038. Apart from that you think the competition is not so great?—I think not, and, moreover, the people on the Lurgan side of the bog weave more, and have a better chance of being employed as workmen and as weavers.

2039. Then, as I understood you, what drives up the value of land on the Commissioners' estate is not so much the value of land as the absence of other employment, and the thickness of the population?—The rent, I believe, is lower than on Lord Lurgan's estate, and that would raise the tenant-right also.

2040. Does Lord Lurgan do more in the way of improvements and personal assistance to the tenants than the Commissioners?—I think he does a great deal less. I think the Commissioners in the past did a great deal to assist the tenants.

2041. On Lord Lurgan's estate are the holdings larger than on the Commissioners' estate?—Yes, on the whole, larger.

2042. There is not such a necessity for helping large holders of land as there is for helping those very small holders of land?—Certainly not.

2043. You don't mean to say that Lord Lurgan, considering the size of the holdings on his estate, has been less generous than the Commissioners?—Certainly not. Lord Lurgan has acted very fairly by his tenants.

2044. Do you let the cut-out bog?—Yes, there is great competition amongst the tenants, for it at ten shillings an acre.

2045. Have applications been made to you for more than you had to let?—Yes; parties make applications to me before the bog is spent, I am endeavouring to let all that is really fit.

2046. Do you consider ten shillings an acre a good again for the tenants?—I can only judge from the fact that they are very eager for it.

2947. Would an ordinary farmer who looked to profit pay ten shillings an acre for spent bog?—I don't think he would.

2948. Then do you consider there a commercial point of view that ten shillings an acre is too much?—It is.

2949. You would not pay ten shillings an acre for it yourself?—If I were a farmer I would willingly pay five shillings an acre.

2950. As far as spent bog goes don't you think it would be a hardship to raise it beyond ten shillings an acre?—It is not raised. I think it would be quite improper to raise it above that.

2951. What are the average rents on the Dungannon estate?—The highest are on the townland of Tumpier, where one hundred and forty acres yield about £130. On Derryish, which is by far the largest townland on the estate, seven hundred and eighty-eight acres only yield about £385.

2952. Are the lands generally of the same class in point of fertility and suitability for culture as Lord Langue's?—Lord Langue's is much better.

2953. What would you say was the average rental paid for stable and pasture land on Lord Langue's estate?—From 25s. 6d. to 35s. per acre.

2954. Lord Langue's estate is much nearer the town, is much better land, and in large holdings, all of which things help to enable tenants to pay higher rents?—Yes.

2955. CHAIRMAN.—You mentioned a drainage rate paid to the Board of Works; was any increase made in the rental at the time of the completion of the drainage works?—I am not certain, but I believe the tenants were not charged with any part of it.

2956. What increase in the value of the estate took place by reason of this drainage?—I cannot say. I want to draw the attention of the Commissioners to the unsatisfactory state in which I found this whole drainage question. I believe there should be an inquiry into it.

2957. What is the drainage district called?—The Lough Neagh drainage district.

2958. Mr. O'SHANNON.—Were you in the habit of reporting to the Commissioners the proceedings and the steps taken by the Board of Works on this estate?—Not beyond making a charge in my monthly account whenever I made a payment.

2959. Why do you consider the drainage question is an unsatisfactory state?—I don't know that the Board of Works is giving any value to the estate commensurate with the very large sum we pay.

2960. Was it not your duty to represent that to you, Commissioners?—I consider it to be my duty, but I have been such a short time connected with the estate that I am only feeling my way. Moreover, the charge for maintenance, which was only about £37 per annum in the late agent's time, was increased last year to £84 10s. 10d.

2961. When did that great increase first come under the notice of the Commissioners?—When I sent up the voucher for the first half-yearly payment, in April, 1873.

2962. Did the Commissioners, or their Secretary, make any inquiry of you in reference to it?—None; I sent up the usual printed receipt from the Board of Works, which was the voucher for the payment, and I never heard anything more about it.

Mr. ROBERT OWEN examined.

April 5, 1888.
Mr. William
H. D. Moore.

2963. How do you account for the extraordinary increase?—In the spring of 1877 the floods from Lough Neagh rose to a very unrecalled height, and several farms adjoining Lord Langue's bog were inundated for a considerable period, and the tenants that year scarcely got their crops in. I think the trustees of the drainage made a spontaneous attempt after that to do something for the tenant, and that occasioned this huge outlay.

2964. Then the trustees apparently had previously neglected the drainage?—I think the whole proceeding was a tentative one, and it is very questionable whether it has answered its object.

2965. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—No inquiry having been made with respect to the huge increase in the drainage charge, would not you think that it would be in your power to make what returns you liked?—I should think not; as far as the accounts were concerned the management was exceedingly strict and accurate, and so far from being loose than on other estates, it was stricter. I always found the late Dr. Kyle extremely accurate in accounts. He would send back a receipt for your notes if it were a penny wrong one way or the other.

2966. Why did he make no inquiry?—I suppose he thought the Commissioners could not interfere with the Board of Works without incurring a large outlay, and it would only be for one year, and there would be no lasting a firm.

2967. Mr. O'SHANNON.—Dr. Kyle always insisted on vouchers?—For every shilling.

2968. And he got vouchers for his payment?—Yes.

2969. Suppose you had been agent for a private estate, say Lord Langue's, and you returned to him an extraordinary increase for maintenance, do you think he would pass it over, being satisfied with vouchers?—I believe he did in this very case. I think he took his agent's receipts in the same way as the Commissioners did mine.

2970. And made no inquiry about it?—His agent, Mr. Hancock, is one of the trustees of the Board.

2971. Do you think an ordinary landlord, whose agent was not on the Board of Trustees for a drainage district, would be satisfied to pay this extraordinary increase of drainage rate without inquiring how his estate came to be burdened with it?—I think he would ask his agent how it came to be so large, and his agent would say it was made by the Board of Works, and he had no control over it, and there would be the official receipt.

2972. CHAIRMAN.—Have you any recent map of the estate?—None since 1835. We have two maps made in 1835, but, on comparing the Government survey with our survey, I find there is a discrepancy of about 150 acres, which I cannot account for. It may be in the natural bog, but I have not been able to trace it.

2973. Your estate survey was made in 1835. When was the Ordnance survey made?—In September, 1853. The total area given by the Government survey is 3,371A. 3s. 30r., but our survey is only 3,220A. 3s. 12r.

2974. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is it your opinion that a new survey of the property should be made?—No.

2975. Why?—It would cost a great deal; and, as the farms on this estate usually go from father to son, there is very little change in the tenants. The tenants' names appearing on the map correspond with those in the present rental.

Mr. R. Owen.

2976. CHAIRMAN.—You are agent to some of the estates held by the Clare-street Commissioners?—Yes, to three. I am agent to the Bangor estate, the Cappaghlin estate, and the Linnane estate.

2977. What is the extent of the Bangor estate?—A little under 200 Irish acres of upland, and a couple of hundred acres of bog.

2978. How long have you been agent?—Since my father's death in 1870; he had been agent for forty years. I had assisted him for twenty years prior to his death.

2979. How often do you see the estate?—Once a year when I go to collect the rents. I have a bailiff on the estate who communicates to me anything, that transpires, of any consequence.

2980. How often does he report to you?—About K

three or four times a year, whenever there is anything worthy of note to report.

2081. Does the landlord live on the property?—Yes.

2082. What salary does he get?—Three pounds a year.

2083. What remuneration do you get?—I get five per cent. on my collection.

2084. Is it not unusual to collect the rents only once a year?—My father adopted that practice with the tenants. It was more convenient for them to make their arrangements to pay all at once, and there are no arrears on the estate.

2085. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is there a hanging gale?—No; they pay altogether.

2086. CHAIRMAN.—What is the nature of the tenancies on the estate?—All yearly tenancies.

2087. Is there any tenant-right on the estate?—No; not on any of the three estates I manage.

2089. Has any step been taken towards revaluing the Benagher property?—Not lately. It was proposed at one time, to the Commissioners, by my father, about sixteen years ago, to have a slight increase on it, but the tenants sent in a memorial against it; the Commissioners let the matter drop, and it has never been revived.

2090. What is the rental of the estate?—£179, and from £15 to £18 for bog.

2091. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What is the valuation of the estate?—The valuation is nearly the same as the rental, about £180.

2092. CHAIRMAN.—From what you know of property in various parts of Ireland, would you say that this estate is at its fair value?—Things in the country are rather depressed at present, and it would not be easy to say; but the standard adopted by the large proprietors in any one neighbourhood is, that they generally put on about one-fourth on Griffith's valuation.

2093. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are you aware that in 1842 the rental of the Benagher estate was £3700 a year?

—It was much more than it is at present, but that was long before my father had anything to do with it.

2094. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—And that was when tenants were in smaller holdings?—Yes.

2095. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The Inspector of Estates says, in his report in 1857, that the then rental was much less than had formerly been received, and adds, the "agent, Mr. Owen, states that it was a let in the very depressed times, and that he now estimates it as fairly worth £314 15s. 9d. per annum, exclusive of bog lots."—Yes; and I am of the same opinion. I add one-fourth to the valuation, but I don't include the bog, which may increase the value.

2096. If the rental were raised to £330, and you were to get £15 for the bogland, would that be an excessive rent for the estate?—It would not be an excessive rent, but at present I don't think it would be judicious to put more rent on the tenants. I don't think they could bear it.

2097. What proportions do the rentals of the neighbouring properties bear to the valuations?—Some of them are the same, and some one-fourth more.

2098. Do you manage any of the adjoining properties?—No; none other in that county.

2099. What description of land is this?—Very light, sandy land.

2100. Is there any pasture land?—Hardly any.

2101. CHAIRMAN.—How many tenants are there?—Twelve.

2102. Have any improvements been made by them?—I cannot say there have.

2103. Are the repairs done by the tenants themselves?—Yes.

2104. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The Inspector reported in 1857—

"There is a large tract of bog of which no use seems to be made at present, and the boundaries between it and the bog belonging to the adjoining estate are not clearly defined. If a drain were opened along the meaning it would serve the double purpose of defining the boundary, and taking some of the water off the bog."

Was that ever done?—A drain has been cut, and the bog has been made more available.

2105. He also added—

"An English gentleman, who has lately purchased a property in the neighbourhood, and he proposed to take a portion of the waste ground which he has his estate for the purpose of improving the appearance of it. It would be judicious to let it to him on fair terms."

Was that done?—No; the gentleman, Mr. Maxwell, died very soon after. An attempt was made to drain the bog; but labour was very high at the time, and the matter fell through.

2106. The Inspector gave a strong opinion on the value of the estate. Do you concur in it?—

"As the estate appears to be at present let below its fair value and considerably below the rate at which it used to be let, I think it should be re-valued with a view to long-rent, not charging the tenants for their recent improvements."

I do not think there were any improvements to be charged for. That was written twenty years ago.

2107. Has the rent been raised since?—Yes, but it might bear a little increase still.

2108. CHAIRMAN.—My property is adjoining, and I know that it is considered in that neighbourhood that about one-fourth over Griffith's valuation is a fair rent?—Yes, I think that is fair.

2109. Now, taking good and bad years together, say if things got better in the next ten years—would you think that that would be too much?—No; I think one-fourth more might be put on, if the times continued.

2110. That is if there is a change of tenancy?—Yes, or a new letting made, a rise might be put on.

2111. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What would you consider the value of the estate if it were to be sold?—The value of land there is not so great as it is in the north of Ireland. I would say twenty years' purchase on the rental would be a fair price, but if any person wanted particularly to buy it he might give twenty-two.

2112. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Were you directed by the Commissioners to visit Benagher school?—Yes, about two years ago.

2113. In what state did you find it?—I was told by the master of the school that the house had undergone repairs—that it was whitewashed, and something done to the roof to prop it up, and make it water-tight. There was one little place that had been roughly patched over. I could not see that much had been done. When I looked at it I thought that some of the slating was deficient, as there was water coming in, and he told it was.

2114. Then the improvements are not of a satisfactory character?—No. It is a very old house. A large empty house without furniture never looks well.

2115. Does the rain come in through the roof?—Yes. I wrote to Dr. Kyle, telling him about that.

2116. Had the repairs been done a short time before you went?—Yes; only a short time, and £200 or £300 had been expended. I thought it was money thrown away. I told the master so, and that I could not see where the money was spent on the place.

2117. Did you report that to the Board?—No; I was sent to see whether the master was in attendance, and how the school was getting on, for it was reported that the master was continually absent, and that he had left a person in charge who was not suitable, and that the school was going down. At the same time I looked over the place.

2118. Did you report in regard to the management of the school, the attendance of the master, and so on?—I reported to the Board that on the day I went, I found the master and seven boys present—three day boys and four boarders.

2119. Did you make any inquiry into the complaints or the alleged grievances?—I told the master the object of my visit, and said I did not want to take him by surprise; I said to him that the complainant was that "you are in Dublin taking out your degree as a doctor, and it is generally complained that the school is going down, and I am sent to report on the matter, and to see the number of boys attending." He told me that the school had been going down, and that he had been trying to get his diploma, because he intended to try something else as the school was a failure.

2130. The accounts show that in the end of 1875 there was a balance against you of £195 17s 10d.—Yes.

2132. At the end of 1877 the balance in your hands was £160 13s 3d, which was lodged by you on the 30th March, 1878?—Yes.

2133. How was it that the money remained in your hands for three months?—It generally remained in my hands as long as there might be any outgoings to pay in the next quarter. On the 31st of April I furnished the account, as I was bound to do, and forwarded the receipt for my lodgment, and then I received nothing for three months, and had to pay all the outgoings myself, and be out of pocket for them till the Christmas following.

2134. When were the rents received by you?—Generally at the very end of the month of December.

2135. Did you ever suggest to the Commissioners the disadvantage or inconvenience of a system by which you were nine months out of pocket?—I did not. It was never more than £10 or £30. I might have money in hand from some of the other estates, and one would balance the other.

2136. Would it not have been more satisfactory if you had lodged the balance in your hands at the end of the year, and if the Commissioners had sent you a sum of £50 to meet the outgoings?—Yes.

2137. Did you ever make any representation on the subject?—Never.

2138. And this system of your keeping the money for three months, and being nine months altogether without any, had their sanction?—Yes. I knew it was the same in my father's time; moreover, some of the tenants could not pay or get the money till about April. I would pay, and have paid, for some of them, so as not to return them as in arrears. There are tenants on other estates that I have advanced money to that were under objection, and I did it that they should not be returned as in arrears. I could show £150 on one estate returned by me as paid by tenants that I have not got a shilling of yet.

2140. Is it 800 Irish acres?—Yes, Irish acres.

2141. What is the gross rental?—It is £787 6s 5d.

2142. How much bog-land is there?—There are 200 or 300 acres of bog.

2143. Does the estate all lie together?—The Cappaghlin estate is altogether, but there is a portion of the Ballyroan, where there are three tenants, who are endowed school in the Queen's county is. On the Cappaghlin estate the Commissioners built a very large school-house. They pay £43 a year, and give an acre of land, a very good house, and fuel to the master and mistress, in addition to the salary they receive from the National Board.

2144. Do the Commissioners keep the house in repair?—Yes.

2145. What number of pupils attend that school?—I think the average, counting boys and girls, is about ninety.

2146. That would give a first class master?—We had a first class master. He was selected by Dr. Newell, the Secretary to the National Board, and sent him the Model school, I believe. The school improved greatly during the time he was there, but he has left recently.

2137. Is that school in the town of Ballyroan?—No, it is on the Cappaghlin estate. The master of the endowed school in Ballyroan receives £150, and I think there are no pupils in it.

2138. Is the other school for the tenants' children?—Yes, for the tenants.

2139. Are all the children who attend it those of tenants on the estate?—Some of them are, but others come from other estates, so we had a good master they left other schools and came to ours.

2140. Where is the Ballyroan estate?—It is at the very edge of the town.

2141. Are there any town holdings?—No.

2142. Is it a purely agricultural estate?—Yes. There are three tenants from whom I receive rent—one pays £31 a year; the master pays £3 10s for the lawn, and another tenant pays ten guineas.

2143. What is the nature of their tenures?—They are all tenants at will.

2144. On both portions?—Yes.

2145. I believe you said there was no tenant-right?—There is not, but the Commissioners have been most liberal whenever an application was made to them by the tenants, and good grounds were shown for the roofing of houses, &c., on the Cappaghlin estate. The school-house can be seen when passing from Maryborough to Mountbush by rail.

2146. Is the Mountbush station on the estate?—Yes, it is.

2147. Have there been any changes of tenants in your collection?—None, with the exception where the father of a growing family became troublesome, I ejected him and gave the land to his son. I think I did this on two occasions, so as, without removing the family, to get them through the form of surrendering the possession, and then handed it back to them.

2148. Are there any arrears due on the estate?—No, there have been none in my time, except the running half-year.

2149. During your father's time?—Not for a long time previous to his death.

2150. What is Griffith's valuation of that property?—Griffith's valuation is very slightly less than the rental.

2151. Not considering the present depressed times, but taking things as they generally are, would it bear a higher rental?—If times were better it might bear a rise, but I am not an advocate to overland tenants, for it results on you afterwards when you try to get your rent from them.

2152. You say you get five per cent. on the rental?—Five per cent. on the amount collected, and the landlord gets £10 a year, which, with the exception of the ordinary outgoings, are the only charges.

2153. How often do you collect the rents on this estate?—Twice a year. I account every quarter.

2155. You said that some improvements on the houses were paid for by the Commissioners?—Yes; up to the passing of the Land Act, if a tenant was reported by me or my father to be worthy of it, the Commissioners generally supplied slates and timber to him for the building of a house. Now they have made a little alteration, they are ready to advance the money and charge five per cent. on the outlay to the tenant.

2156. Do they do the whole thing themselves?—Yes. I get the slates and timber that may be required from Mr. Kelly, in Dublin, and send the bill to the Commissioners, giving the length of the buildings for which they were intended, and showing that the money was properly laid out.

2157. Who is the patron of the National school?—I am. The parish priest of Mountbush and I were joint patrons. He looked over the female branch of the school and I over the male branch.

April 1, 1855
Mr. R. Owen.

2158. I suppose the majority of the people are Roman Catholics?—Yes, but there are a few Presbyterians.

2159. Of what religion are the master and mistress?—They were Roman Catholics—husband and wife—but they have just left us.

2160. To what school does the Lisnane estate belong?—The OConnell school.

2161. What is its extent?—Between 400 and 500 Irish acres, and a couple of hundred acres of bog.

2163. Are your rents there collected twice a year?—Yes, twice a year. This is the estate in regard to which I have returned the tenants as having paid their rents when they have not. I had ejectments against some of them, but I patched them up, because I did not want to have evictions. I recommended the Commissioners to give them something to enable them to get seed to sow their land, and I had a letter from Mr. Kyle, before his death that he would bring the matter before the Board, but, unfortunately, he died before anything was done.

2164. What is the rental now?—It is between £600 and £500 a year.

2165. What is the valuation?—The valuation is slightly less.

2166. Then I suppose the land is let at a fair rent?—There was a motion brought forward by Lord Mountcashel, I believe, in the House of Lords, in reference to the endowed schools; and he mentioned the Lisnane estate, with the object of having the rents raised, as the property was under-let. However, the matter fell through.

2167. Comparing the rents on this estate with those on other estates, would you say that they were fair?—On this estate there were, some years ago, a number of small tenants, who were allowed to get very largely into arrears, and nothing could be done unless they were got rid of. It was in the distressed times, and my father got possession from them, and employed them in digging the whole of the land; and he then set it in two or three large holdings. The former tenants had cultivated the land a great deal. The succeeding tenants held for twenty-one years, and at the end of that period there was a slight increase put on by the Commissioners.

2168. Is it good land or mountain land?—It is not mountain land, but fair average land.

2169. Have there been any improvements on the buildings?—Not on any of the buildings, except the bailiff's house and another, which were slated.

2170. What salary does the bailiff get?—Only £5 a year on that estate.

2171. I suppose he reports to you regularly?—Yes; and I visit the estate myself a couple of times a year, but I see him half a dozen times a year.

2172. Have there been any improvements on the estate?—The Commissioners laid out a large sum of money in sinking a boundary drain between the estate and another property, and drained it very considerably. They borrowed money from the Board of Works for the purpose, and they paid it off in a lump sum. That is the only improvement within my memory.

2176. In general, what is the system of bog-tinting?—Each season you set at so much a perch. The tenants get the bog at 2s. 6d. a perch, and strangers pay 5s.

2177. Are there any leases?—On the Lisnane estate there are a couple of leases, but on the other estates there are none. The tenants were offered leases in some cases, but they did not care to take them.

2178. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Before the Land Act, I believe, the Commissioners consented to the assignment of tenancies by the tenants?—Yes.

2179. And they declined to consent to that after the Land Act was passed?—Yes.

2180. On what ground did they decline?—Because that would be letting in the then end of the wedged the Ulster Tenant-right system. The privileges were asked for in one case, but it was refused, as others might want to do the same.

2181. They did refuse, however, after the Land Act, to give liberty to assign?—Yes.

2182. What was the extent of the holding sought to be sold?—It was a holding of ninety acres.

2183. Was it held under lease?—It is held under lease.

2184. Was the tenant, when he sought leave to sell, in embarrassed circumstances?—Yes, I think, rather.

2185. Does he still continue to hold it?—Yes.

2186. Has he been in low water since then?—Things have been gradually getting worse since then. He has not mended, but he has not got much worse.

2187. Does he cultivate his land?—No; he allowed the grass and meadow to rot on the land last year. He never put a beast on it. The meadow is there still and there is only one beast on it.

2188. Did you make any attempt to negotiate with the person to whom he proposed to sell it?—No one but the tenant ever made an overture to me, and I referred him to Mr. Kyle, who wrote a letter, a copy of which he sent me, asking who the proposed tenant was. He intimated that it was a practice not admitted on the estate, and contrary to the rule of the estate. No answer was given by the party proposing. They were sent in a statement of the sum to be paid. Mr. Kyle tried to find that out.

2189. Did Mr. Kyle lay it down as a general rule of the Commissioners, since the Land Act passed, that they would not allow assignments for money?—That they would not allow transfers or sales of leases.

2190. How soon after the rent falls due does the owner of the leasehold pay you?—In five or six months.

2191. Would you not rather have a good tenant than a man like the one you spoke of?—At the rent, he ought to be a good tenant, but he has not the capital.

2192. What was the cause of the fire at Banagher?—It was thought that the servant had not closed the school-room windows, that there were a fire in the grate, and that the wood caught fire.

2193. I suppose the house itself is a very old one, and requires repairs?—It requires a good deal to keep it in repair, and a man with limited means could not go into it, and furnish it in a proper manner in the state it is at present, and people using the house not furnished will not be anxious to send their children there.

2194. Was Mr. Joyce absent at the time of the fire?—No, he was at home. It was soon after his appointment. The mail car driver coming from Ballinacree in the morning discovered it.

2195. You used occasionally to inspect Banagher school?—I was frequently sent down in Mr. McNally's train. I had the neglectful duty of getting him out. I was frequently sent down by the Commissioners to see how the school was going on. I reported that it was necessary to change Mr. McNally.

2196. Was there any difficulty in putting him out?

—There was very great difficulty. He thought not to go out at first. I went down by appointment, and there happened to be a great deal of snow on the ground. He pleaded that he had no place to go to. I said that I must get possession, as I had strict orders to carry out, but that he might remain as caretaker if he chose. He refused to accept the position of caretaker to the Commissioners at first, but afterwards he let his wife do it. He threw the keys on me to put him out. When giving me the possession that day he had put a little boy in the top garret of the house, and I suppose that was in order that he would not give clear possession. I happened to go and inspect the school premises, and I saw the little boy up in the room. The plea of the father was, that the boy was frightened at my coming.

2197. How long had Mr. McNally been there?—Two years, and that was two years too long.

2198. His conduct was unsatisfactory to the Board?—It was gross in the extreme.

2199. How?—There was a Commission about to be appointed to suspend him, or an application was made for it.

2200. But all the attempts they made to remedy the defective discipline were through you?—Largely. I had several conversations with him.

2201. None of the Commissioners ever went down?—I never know of any of them going down. I think the Bishop of Meath was to be the visitor, but I never heard of his being there.

(Adjourned to next day at 11.30 A.M.)

SIXTH DAY—TUESDAY, APRIL 3, 1879; 11.30 O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present.—THE EARL OF ROOSE, Chairman, LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; LORD JAMES FITZGERON; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; ANDREW SHARKE HART, Esq., LL.D.; and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CREED MURPHY, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr WILLIAM M. MITCHELL continued.

Mr. William M. Mitchell.

2202 CHAIRMAN.—You are partner with Mr. McNally, the architect?—I am.

2203. How long have you been his partner?—Nearly seven years.

2204. You are particularly acquainted with the repairs done to Bunsagar and Naven schools?—I had the entire management of the repairs of those two schools.

2205. On what occasions did you inspect Bunsagar school?—I went there twice last year—I think in April and October. One visit was to make a report, and the other to see that the works had been properly carried out.

2206. The fire had occurred some time before that?—So I understood.

2207. Had you seen the house before the fire?—I never saw it until last year.

2208. In what state did you find it?—The roof was originally a very good one, but had been suffered to become dilapidated. The rain had come through in many parts.

2209. What works did you recommend?—We recommended rather extensive repairs to the roof, and complete refitting and renovation of the whole fabric, but only a portion of this was carried out.

2210. What was your estimate?—Between £400 and £500. There was included the restoration of a ledge at the entrance, outside the boundary wall, but, as I understood, in the possession of the Commissioners.

2211. Was that put in repair?—Yes.

2212. What other works were done?—The works actually done, were those that were more pressing—the immediate repair to the roof, some repairs to the floors, plastering and painting, thoroughly, inside and out, and the restoration of the ledge.

2213. What amount was actually expended?—£200.

2214. Was that sufficient to put it in repair so as to keep out the weather?—It would do that. It is a very large house, and the amount expended was not, by any means, sufficient to repair it thoroughly. We advised repairs to the amount of between £400 and £500; but the Commissioners on account of the shortness of the lease, did not see their way to spend more than £200. They confined us to that limit.

2215. What is the length of the lease?—Seven years.

2216. The repairs which were executed were merely sufficient to keep it in order for that term?—Quite so.

2217. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How long do you think the building had remained without repairs?—It would be exceedingly difficult to say with any degree of exactness. Certainly it had been a very long time.

2218. Did it give you the impression of a neglected edifice?—It certainly did.

2219. Neglected in the way of the most ordinary repairs—painting and plastering?—Quite so.

2220. Were all the repairs you recommended absolutely necessary, in your opinion?—Yes, to put the building in thorough repair.

2221. In what state did the repairs actually executed leave the building?—In a pretty fair state of repair for a few years to come.

2222. What kind is the building?—It is a very large block of a house, larger than necessary for the purpose of a school at present. Probably the reason of its falling into disrepair was, that but a small portion is used. In fact, the basement of the school was carried on in an out-building which was probably a stable in former times.

2223. CHAIRMAN.—That was the building that was burned?—Yes.

2224. DR. CURTIS.—Was the schoolmaster present on the occasion of your visit?—On the first occasion he was, but not on the second.

2225. What was the reason of his absence?—I understood he was in Dublin.

2226. CHAIRMAN.—Were there any boys there?—Yes, the boys were in the school-room with the assistant master.

2227. DR. CURTIS.—Was the building itself fairly fitted up for scholastic purposes?—Yes, furnished in the ordinary way. The repairs which were required were in the main building not used for the purposes of the school.

2228. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you consider the condition in which you found the school was such as partly to account for its not having had any boarders for years past?—I must say the school had a neglected appearance about it.

2229. Was it a school in which you would like your son to be lodged?—It was not.

2230. DR. HART.—Was the out-building which was used as a schoolroom in good repair when you were there?—It was in good repair except some parts of the ceiling, which had fallen down. It had never been properly put up, and from some cause or other a pe-then had come down, and that was included in the repairs.

2231. If that building had not been repaired in the previous year the amount of your estimate would have been considerably increased?—I should say so, but I could not say to what extent.

2232. It would have been £150 more if that had not been done?—At least that.

2233. CHAIRMAN.—You visited the Navan school?—Yes, in April, 1874.

2234. Was there only one visit?—No; I paid three or four visits. I went first to report on the condition of the place, and then to see the works carried out.

2235. What condition was the house in?—The house was not by any means so dilapidated as Bangor, but still it was in need of considerable repairs, especially outside. The plaster-work was very much dilapidated, and thorough pointing and a good many small repairs were necessary.

2236. Did it appear to have been neglected for a good many years?—It was a more modern building than the other, and not by any means in such a dilapidated state.

2237. What was your estimate for that?—I do not know that we made any regular estimate of the amount of repair required to be done. I can tell you what was done.

2238. What were you sent there for?—To make a report on the general state of the place.

2239. What work was actually done?—It consisted of repairs to the plastering work; in fact, I think the whole of the outside was replastered. There were new eave-gutters put up; the roof was repaired; the house was thoroughly pointed inside and out; there were also sundry repairs to the wood-work.

2240. What amount was expended on it?—£539 is 5s. was the exact amount certified by me, and that put it into very good repair.

2241. Have you ever been there since that?—No; we are never asked to make periodical reports, but merely to report on particular occasions.

2242. How were those works executed?—By contract.

2243. Were these tenders invited by advertisement?—The usual way was to get tenders from local tradesmen, two or three or four, as the case might be.

to which the Inspector for the Commissioners of 1857 attributed the state of Navan School, was the bad locality of the school-house. Can you describe the locality?—The school-house is immediately on the outskirts, and within a very few minutes' walk of the centre of the town. The approach is through a rather dark avenue, very thickly planted. It is not an inviting approach, but once you are in the school it is quite open and looks towards the country. I saw nothing in the position of the school that one should condemn it for.

2245. Are the school buildings at Navan so large as those at Bangor?—Not by any means.

2246. Are these good surroundings to the Navan School?—On one side the surroundings are very good, but on the other there was an objectionable building, a public house or grocery establishment, and there was some dispute about a window which looked into the school premises; I understood the land-agent was trying to have it closed up as objectionable to the school, whether he succeeded or not I do not know.

2247. DR. HARRIS.—Was your visit in relation to my report by the master of the school, that there were repairs wanted?—There was a report from Mr. White who had recently come to the school, that the whole place was in a state of decay and dilapidation.

2248. It was not the spontaneous desire of the Commissioners then?—I fancy not.

2249. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Do you know anything about the locality of any of the other schools of a similar class?—I only know four of the Endowed Schools—Navan, Bangor, Armagh, and Raphoe.

2250. You knew the neighbourhood in which Raphoe is situated?—I was once there about six years ago.

2251. Which neighbourhood would be the most likely to supply a school—Navan or Raphoe?—I would have thought Navan.

2252. Have you had any experience of teaching schools about Dublin?—I was at school at Rathfarnham.

2253. Navan itself is rather a good town?—It did not strike me so. There is a good deal of business done in it, but it is purely a market town.

2254. CHAIRMAN.—Did you ever visit Ballymullin?—Never.

2255. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—You do not know anybody that ever reported Ballymullin school?—I never knew of the existence of a school there until it was mentioned yesterday or the day before.

Mr. Henry
Guinness.

MR. HENRY GUINNESS EXAMINED.

2256. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the partners in the firm of Guinness and Gibson?—Yes.

2257. Which of the estates of the Chancery-street Commissioners are your firm agents over?—The Shinnis estate, which belongs to Croycroft school.

2258. Where is it situated?—Near Anghartha.

2259. What is its extent?—About 350 Irish acres, equal to 550 statute acres.

2260. What is the present rental of it?—£139.

2261. What is Griffith's valuation?—The land is £136 a year, and the buildings £16.

2262. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—So that the land, although in the county Wicklow, is at below the tenement valuation?—Yes.

2263. CHAIRMAN.—Is it usual in that part of the country for the rental to be below Griffith's valuation?—No; certainly not.

2264. Is there any special reason why it should be so on this estate?—I do not think there is. I think the land is worth more.

2265. Have you ever suggested that a re-valuation should be made?—No, I never have. It is too low, but it is a very unbusinesslike district.

2266. What per-centage do you get as agent?—I get five per-cent., which amounts to about £6 a year.

2267. What other outgoings are there for the management?—Is there a bailiff?—Yes, there is a bailiff paid £4 a year. There is no other outlay.

2268. How often do you visit the estate?—Twice a year; I collect the rents twice a year, either by myself or by an assistant.

2269. How often does the bailiff report?—He does not report at all, unless it is necessary to call attention to something.

2270. Is there any tenant-right on the estate?—There is no recognised tenant-right.

2271. How long have you been agent?—Since the death of my father—about eighteen or twenty years.

2272. Have there been within your recollection any changes of tenants?—Yes, some, but not very many.

2273. Has there been any amalgamation of farms?—Yes.

2274. Was there in any case an increase of rent when any of those changes took place?—The only one of rent in any time has been a few shillings a year—10s. a year added in the case of a change of tenant.

2275. You never directed the attention of the Commissioners to the fact that the property was, in your judgment, undervalued?—No; I did not consider it so much under-valued as to render such a step necessary.

April 1879.
By Henry Galester.

2276. Have you ever inspected Clarysfort school-house?—I have seen it from the road, but I never inspected it.

2277. Was it within your province to do so?—No.

2278. Are you aware whether anyone inspected it?—No, I am not aware.

2279. Do you know who looked after the repairs?—No.

2280. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Had you anything to do with the management during your father's time?—Not much.

2281. How far back does your personal knowledge extend?—Twenty years.

2282. In those twenty years has there been any change in the letting value of land?—An upward change.

2283. In 1857 the rental was £140 ls 6*d*, and it is now only £132 ls 6*d*.—Formerly the Rev. Wm. Smith Gurness, who was Rector of Rothbury, paid £10 a year for a small holding, upon which a church was built, he has since surrendered it, and the building having become useless as a church, the holding was let separately with another at 3*ls* a year.

2284. What became of the building?—It is now used as an out-office.

2285. Together with the building formerly held as a church, what land is now let for the 3*ls* a year?—Practically none,—perhaps a perch.

2286. During your acquaintance with the property, has there been any investigation either of the rental or of the condition of the estate by the Commissioners?—None that I knew of.

2287. CHAIRMAN.—Do you hold any other agencies in the immediate neighbourhood of this property?—Yes.

2288. Is the rental higher in proportion to the valuation on those estates?—I should say a little higher—not very much, perhaps up to the valuation a little beyond it.

2289. According to your experience might the rent be fairly raised to the valuation?—The rental on this estate might be raised.

2290. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—To Griffith's valuation?—It might be, on some holdings, even beyond that.

2291. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Although the property is let £10 a year below Griffith's valuation, I find there is an allowance to tenants of £24 ls 6*d*. for lime?—Yes.

2292. I find in the report of 1857 this passage:—

"The Commissioners see in the bulk of allowing the tenants lime for wheaten lime they bring on their farms each year."

Having regard to the fact that the rent is below Griffith's valuation, do you know any other instance in which 20 per cent is allowed for lime?—I do not. It is a large allowance.

2293. Has a similar allowance been usually made?—It has.

2294. What is the average net income of the property?—About £90 a year, but I should explain that there are only about 300 statute acres of arable land and the remaining 284 are moorland, not available for any purpose.

2295. How has the lime been used for fertilizing the moorland land, or for cultivating the arable land?—For the cultivation of the arable land, there has been very little reclamation; in fact the moorland is too high for reclamation.

2296. What kind of buildings have the tenants?—The ordinary farm buildings.

2297. In what condition are they kept?—They are pretty fair. The tenants are comfortable.

2298. CHAIRMAN.—By whom are the improvements carried out?—On one occasion I got from the Commissioners an allowance of £15 for a tenant who had spent £32 on a new building and an outbuilding. The £15 would cover the timber and slates.

2299. As a general rule are the repairs carried out by the tenants themselves?—Irish tenants do very little repairs in any experience.

2300. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—You are agent over a great number of estates. In the case of an individual landlord would you consider it your duty to suggest a re-valuation if the rental were as low as it is here?—I would.

2301. Dr. HARR.—Do you take care that the lime is actually expended on the land?—Yes, I see that the lime is drawn to the land.

2302. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—I suppose lime every year to put on the land is an ordinary subscription?—Allowance for lime is very common in that moorland district.

2303. What survey have you of the estate?—None, except the Ordnance map.

2304. When has there been any general examination of the boundaries of the holdings?—None by anybody except myself.

2305. How do the tenants use the moorland?—It is grazed in common.

2306. Has each tenant a right to put a certain number of cattle on it?—I do not exactly know what the division is as to; but that is the operation.

2307. Then there is no separate letting of the moorland?—No.

2308. Do you make any examination at all as to how the moorland is used by the tenants amongst themselves?—I do not.

2309. Having regard to the existence of this freedom of the moorland, how many years' purchase on the present rental do you estimate the property would bring?—Twenty-five or thirty years' purchase.

2310. Having regard to the freedom of the moorland, do not you think that thirty years' purchase would be easily obtained for it?—Probably there would be.

2311. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have there been any applications for leases from the tenants on this property?—No, but I think they would be very glad to get leases.

2312. I suppose if the Commissioners were raising the rents it would be a fair opportunity to give leases?—I think it would be an equitable thing to give leases if the rents were raised.

2313. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Do you think that if the property were to be sold, the tenants are of a class that would be able to purchase those holdings?—I do not think so. One or two might.

2314. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Then it is not a place where a tenant would be likely to make money?—No.

2315. Why do you make a distinction between your duty as agent to an ordinary owner, and as agent to a body like the Charitable Commissioners, with regard to a recommendation of raising rents?—A private owner stands on a different basis from a charitable Corporation. I do not know how they might receive such a suggestion from an Agent. They might think he was going beyond his province. The Court of Chancery does not expect a Receiver to make such suggestions.

2316. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Is the moorland of any value for game?—I lately let the shooting for £2 a year, which it produces at present.

2317. Who rents it?—Mr. West, a gentleman in the neighbourhood.

2318. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You agree with the statement of the Commissioners of 1857 that the soil is very light?—Yes; it is very poor soil, and ill-adapted for tillage.

2319. How far is it from any market town?—Aughtam is only two miles from the lands. It is not a market town, but it is a railway station. The nearest market town is Rothbury, about seven or eight miles distant.

2320. Is the neighbouring land, which you say is let a little higher, of the same quality, or of better quality than the lower part of this property?—The land I speak of is within about two or three miles of it; it is rather better land.

2321. Is that land let at the valuation?—About the valuation.

2322. Is it let in larger holdings than this?—Yes.

April 6, 1905.
 Mr. Henry
 Guinness.

2333. Is it nearer Rathfrum than this?—Yes.
 2334. Even supposing there were no raising of the rents, do not you think it would be fair to give leases?—I think not.

2335. Do not you think it would encourage the tenants?—I think if they got leases the rent should be raised.

2336. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You think that you should get a better rent if you gave leases?—Yes.

2337. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How much did you increase the rent in cases where there was a change of tenancy?—Nothing worth speaking of.

2338. Would it bring it up to the valuation?—No.

2339. LORD JUSTICE FRANKENBERG.—Did you yourself raise the rent, or what persons were gone through?—I consulted the Commissioners.

2340. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Was it they suggested the raising of the rent?—No; I think not.

Mr. John J.
 Brennan.

MR. JOHN JOSEPH BRENNAN continued.

2341. CHAIRMAN.—Your father, Mr. James Brennan, is agent over some of the estates of the Commissioners of Education?—Yes, the Cavan Estate and the Fermanagh Estate.

2342. The Fermanagh estate belongs to the Enniskillen school?—Yes.

2343. How long has he been agent over that Estate?—For thirty-five years.

2344. And over the Cavan Estate?—About twenty-eight years.

2345. What is the average of the Enniskillen School Estate?—8,405 acres (Irish).

2346. What is the present rental?—£3,157 8s. 2d.

2347. What is Griffith's valuation?—£2,602 15s.

2348. What would you estimate as a reasonable rental for the estate?—I think Griffith's valuation would be a fair rental.

2349. Have you any agencies yourself?—Yes; I am agent over Lord Belmore's Fermanagh estate.

2350. Is Griffith's valuation the rental there?—It is about it; in some instances the rent is a little higher.

2351. On the whole, Lord Belmore's estate is not so below Griffith's valuation?—None that has been recently relet. The rental of some portions of the estate, where old leases exist, is much below it.

2352. What is your general practice as to rents on the estates of private persons?—The rental is a shade above Griffith's valuation. I am also agent under the Court of Chancery over an estate in the county Fermanagh, very close to the school estate. In 1871 the valuation was contested between tenants and myself, and Master Fitzgerald held that a shade above Griffith's valuation would be fair.

2353. On the other estates, over which you are agent, how is the rental increased?—I have never on any property made a change except on the fall of a lease.

2354. Are there any leases on the Enniskillen School Estate?—There is only one, and that is of a tenement in the town of Enniskillen.

2355. Have there been many changes of tenancy during the thirty-five years that your father has been the agent?—Not many. The tenants have clung to the soil.

2356. Where changes have occurred, what steps have been taken to get new tenants?—We always tried to avoid getting tenants in from a distance, but in some instances they come in notwithstanding.

2357. LORD JUSTICE FRANKENBERG.—That was by purchase?—Yes.

2358. CHAIRMAN.—Is there tenant-right all over that estate?—There is tenant-right all over the county.

2359. What amount is generally paid per acre?—About £5 per acre is the ordinary rate in the county.

2360. LORD JUSTICE FRANKENBERG.—What on this estate?—As high as £30 per acre.

2361. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—What is the average?—From £10 to £12, I should say, would be the average.

2362. CHAIRMAN.—Is the Enniskillen estate let for the value per acre as compared with the other estates you speak of?—It is cheaper.

2363. Have the tenants made many improvements?—Some have, but generally speaking, they are too poor to do so.

2364. Have the Commissioners assisted the tenants to improve their houses?—Not that I am aware of.

2365. What number of tenants are there on the estate?—About 320.

2366. What kind of houses do they live in?—Generally thatched. There are some slated, but very few; they are almost all of the nature of cabins.

2367. Have you ever suggested to the Commissioners a re-valuation of any of the farms?—I recollect that my father suggested to Mr. Porter that in consequence of some bog having been cut away, and a good deal of additional land so made, a re-valuation should take place.

2368. Was any action taken thereon?—No.

2369. Is there any turf-cutting on the estate now?—Yes.

2370. How is that managed?—Each tenant has a portion for himself, but if anyone has too much the custom is to take a part from him and hand it over to another, who may not have enough. There has never been any dispute about it.

2371. It is a permanent tenure?—Yes, and it is the only estate that I know of where the letting is in anything more than the season.

2372. Then they have permanent occupation both of the turf bank they cut from, and also of the part they have cut away?—They have; but letting the turf banks has been a very recent change. It has come into question only since the Land Act—at least, in my experience. Immediately before the Land Act passed, on any properties of which I had the management, I took up the bog and set it by ticket, but on this estate the old custom continues.

2373. Has there been any land reclaimed by cutting out bog?—Large quantities.

2374. Does that fall into the tenants' farms?—Yes. In some instances. Lately where anything of this kind has happened we put a rent upon it, but a good deal of it was reclaimed years ago.

2375. Is there any of the property, reclaimed in that way, which pays no rent?—There is a good deal.

2376. Is any of the land occupied by squatters?—No, there are no squatters on the estate. In 1863 there were a number that had been there for nearly a century, but I went over the estate, at the time improvements were allowed, and I made every squatter as it pay a triffr.

2377. Is there any timber on the estate?—No.

2378. Is the estate of any value for game?—The mountain in Lord Enniskillen shoots over it, but it is not very large.

2379. What do you consider the property would sell for on the present rental?—It would bring thirty-five years' purchase.

2380. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is not that very high?—Property sells very high in Fermanagh.

2381. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Mountain property?—Well, twenty-five to thirty years' purchase.

2382. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What did the Castle-wood property sell for?—Twenty-two to twenty-five years' purchase, but, remember, that property was let at a very high rate.

2383. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you known any property to bring thirty-five years' purchase?—Not lately, but I did some years ago. The Church lands went to twenty-two and a half years' purchase, but they were all highly let. The clergy always let their lands pretty high.

2384. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Thirty-five years' purchase would be rather an extraordinary

April 2, 1878.

Mr John Z.
Benson.

price for the property?—Not at its present rental; but it would ruin the tenants to sell it.

2375. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—That is to say, the rents would be raised by anybody else but the present landlords?—They would be raised considerably.

2376. CHAIRMAN.—Have you any map of the estate?—There is a very large map, which was made in 1816.

2377. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Was that the occasion when the estate was valued for the Commissioners by Sherrin and Co.?—I think so. The valuation then put on the land was £2,040 7s 10d, Irish, equivalent to £2,714 4s. 2d, British.

2378. I believe there is a great difference in the quality of the lands included in this estate?—Very great.

2379. The Commission of 1837 reported that on the portion of the estate nearest to Kinniffan comprising some townlands, and parts of one or two others, the soil is of comparatively good quality?—Yes.

2380. What is about the ordinary letting price of land of that class near Kinniffan?—From £1 to 30s. an acre.

2381. The remaining portion is described as thin and light. What is about the letting value of such land?—About 14s. an acre, exclusive of the mountain.

2382. How much of the entire of this estate would be worth from £1 to 30s?—In round numbers I would say about 1,000 acres.

2383. How much mountain is there?—440 acres.

2384. Then leaving out the 440 acres of mountain, considerably more than half would be worth 15s. an acre, and about 1,000 acres would be worth from £1 to 30s. an acre?—Yes.

2385. The tenants have been, as I understand, substantially left to manage themselves upon this estate?—Well, yes, in a very great measure.

2386. Has there been any ordinary supervision, by the landlords of the estate, beyond the mere collection of the rent?—About eighteen or twenty years ago the late Master Lyke, then one of the Commissioners, went over the estate.

2387. Was that the last time that anyone in the position of a landlord went over the estate?—It was.

2388. Was anything done on that occasion?—No.

2389. LORD J. FITZGERALD.—What was the exact date of that visit?—It must have been about 1861 or 1862, after he ceased to be Master in Chancery.

2390. Was anything like the ordinary notion of a landlord ever done, such as examining the boundaries of farms, and seeing the condition of buildings?—Nothing except through the agent.

2391. What does the agent do in that way?—My father and I have often gone round and looked over the estate, and seen how things were.

2392. In what condition are the buildings on this estate?—Tolerably fair, where the people are in good circumstances, but where the people are poor, they are wretched.

2393. Notwithstanding the very low rents now the country on the estate poor?—They have been poor for generations.

2394. Have they proceeded with the process of subdivision?—They have.

2395. To what do you attribute their poverty?—I attribute it to subdivision.

2396. Has any control ever been exercised in reference to that matter?—Dr. Kyle would never allow a notice to quit to be served, or any harsh proceedings to be taken, but notices were served on the parties not to do so.

2397. Have they done it after they got the notices?—They have.

2398. Were any proceedings taken upon that?—No.

2399. In how many instances have you served notices without following them up?—I have known myself of twenty or thirty.

2400. Then it has become a practice on the estate to serve a notice, and do nothing on it?—It is the practice; but in some instances the notices have had the desired effect, and stopped subdivisions.

2401. I believe that on all properly managed estates subject to tenant-right there are regularly established rules and practices with regard to tenant-right?—Yes.

2402. Are there any such rules on this estate?—

None.

2403. You are aware that one universal incidence of tenant-right is, that on the cessation of a wife, all arrears of rent are secured to the landlord?—Yes.

2404. Have sales taken place on this estate frequently?—Not frequently; but there have been some.

2405. Have these sales been communicated to the agent, or any opportunity given to settle the rent?—The rent in arrears is settled in every instance.

2406. I find in the report of the former Commission—

“The arrears due on this estate up to the 1st November, 1864, when the agent finished his account in October, 1864, amounted to £9,324 3s. 9d., equal to nearly four and a half years’ rent of the whole property. . . . It appears by the accounts, that in the year 1840 arrears to the amount of £122 2s. 2d. were cancelled by order of the Board, again in 1845 arrears to the amount of £166 15s. 4d. were cancelled in like manner. In the years 1846, 1847, and 1848 allowances were made to the tenants for potato failure to the amount of £1,213 12s. 5d., besides £298 9s. 3d. allowed them in the same years for distress. In the years 1849 to 1853 inclusive an abatement of ten per cent. was allowed on the rental.”

What arrears are now due?—Only £638 7s. 9d., considerably less than half a year’s rent.

2407. When was the reduction of that large amount of arrears arranged?—In the year 1853.

2408. Were the arrears wholly written off or paid?—They were discharged in this way.—Each tenant took in that year and the following one year, in addition to the year’s rent, an extra half-year’s rent; and they expended on improving their farms a further half-year’s rent; and thereupon became entitled to a clear receipt; and in consideration of their fulfilling those conditions within the period the rent was forgiven.

2409. Have you found any practical difficulty in collecting the rents regularly since you made that very good arrangement?—Very little, except in some few instances where the tenants are very poor people. Part of the present arrear stands in this way.—I had a great deal of trouble in getting some of the tenants to work up the half-year’s rent, which it was arranged should be spent on improvements; and, in any case where I considered there was not value for it, I did not make the allowance.

2410. Then this £638 7s. 9d. may include some of the old £9,000 still carried on?—It does.

2411. The next matter in the former report is this—

“In consequence of the tenants being in arrears, the receipts for rent were only given on account, and no receipts were given up to a particular date, so it is difficult for the tenants to know how they stand as to arrears, and it is also difficult to check the agent’s account, but from Mr. Benson’s character I have no reason to doubt that it was faithfully kept.”

Are the receipts still given on account?—No; they are all given “due and ending.”

2412. When was that set right?—About twenty years ago. I think it was in consequence of this report.

2413. Your account up to November, 1877, was not furnished to the Commissioners until the 8th October, 1878?—It is only very rarely that such an interval has elapsed; I do not know when it happened before.

2414. Mr. O’SHEA’S EVIDENCE.—You told us that you had known £20 an acre to be paid for the tenant-right on this estate?—Yes, for holdings of three or four acres.

2415. The holdings are generally very small?—They are; there are some large holdings, but the majority are very small. The average rent of each tenant would only be about £7 a year.

April 5, 1849
Mr. John J.
Benson.

2414. On what principle do you make the allowance for the poor's rate?—One half the rate on the amount of the rent.

2417. You do not allow the full half of the poor's rate?—Certainly not.

2418. What is the average poor's rate in the district?—From 10s to 1s in the pound. On one electoral division it is 1s. 6d.

2419. Has there been any expenditure by the Commissioners on this considerable tract of country in the way of general improvements to the estate, such as roads or artificial drainage of any kind?—Not for a long time. A good deal of the estate would be improved by drainage. The roads were all put in thorough repair in 1863 and 1864.

2420. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The Inspector of Estates in 1847 reported:—

"The farms in general are very small, too small to support a family in moderate comfort, even if there were no rents charged for them, particularly as there is no manufacturing carried on in the neighbourhood to afford employment to these members of the family not occupied on the land. The impoverished condition of the greater portion of the estate has no doubt arisen from the practice of subdividing holdings. Many farms have been divided two or three times in the course of the last twenty or thirty years."

Is that still the description practically of the estate?—It is.

2421. He proceeds:—

"The practice has been attended with another very injurious result. It has caused many of the farms to be divided into a number of scattered patches, in this way—a small lot of meadow is sometimes divided into four or five portions, each too small to be separately fenced, and these small portions are distinguished by marks which the owners alone can recognise."

Out of the 337 holdings on the estate, how many are, in that way, broken up into separate patches?—I could not exactly tell. It is a mountainous estate, and there are many well regulated estates in the same position. The land on the hills is very bad, then, three comes a valley, and you must give the man on the hill a patch of it.

2422. In the same report I find:—

"A few of the farms, particularly on the lowlands near Keshilleen, are carefully cultivated, but the system of agriculture pursued on the great majority of the farms is so bad as possible. It is a usual custom to sow oats two or three times after potatoes, till the land is completely exhausted, and then leave the ground to 'rest,' as they term it, without sowing any grain seed in it. In this state it remains three or four years nearly unproductive. It is a common practice to burn portions of the land and divide the manure. It is also common to take soil off the fields to high houses. Both these practices are very injurious, and should be prevented."

Have those practices ceased?—They have entirely. The tenants all sow artificial grasses.

2423. The same report also states:—

"There is plenty of limestone on the estate, and a lime-works was erected many years ago for the use of the tenantry. For several years the lime was not worked, but during the last three years it has been used occasionally, and lime supplied to the tenantry to a small extent. If the ground was thus properly drained, the facility of procuring lime would be of great value to the tenants."

Have they been using lime lately?—Not for tillage purposes, but small quantities have been burned for putting the houses in repair.

2424. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Do you make an annual report, on the state of the property, to the Commissioners?—My father makes a report along with his annual account.

2425. Has he made suggestions for improvements on the property, or for arrangements with regard to the management of the property?—I do not think there has been anything of that kind lately.

2426. Mr. O'SHEA.—Your father made some suggestions as to the Commissioners aiding in preventing subdivision?—Yes.

2427. They were not acted upon?—There were no steps taken.

2428. Do you think the tendency to subdivision has decreased lately?—I think it has, but it has been carried much too far.

2429. You said the rent might be fully raised to Griffith's valuation?—Yes.

2430. Do you think that this would be a feasible time to do so?—I think not; some of the tenants are very poor, and they have felt the late depression very much.

2431. You spoke of the high price given for tenant right—in some instances £30 on one?—Yes.

2432. I believe the poor population is very thick?—It is.

2434. To what do you attribute so high a price?—To the tenants believing they have fixed of course under the Commissioners below the value, and moreover there is a great desire in the locality to get land. The people have nothing else to do.

2435. It is not the agricultural value of the land?—It is for agricultural purposes they buy it.

2436. Do not you think then on agricultural point of view it is too high a price to give?—I do. I think it is rather too high. In fact there is undue competition.

2437. You would not advise the Commissioners to take advantage of that undue competition and the high value which is affixed to the land, by the high price given for the tenant-right, to raise the rent in proportion to that?—Undoubtedly not, that would ruin the tenants.

2438. Have they asked for leases at all?—No.

2439. Do you think it advisable to offer them leases?—I do not think they would take them.

2440. With a higher rent and a clause against subdivision?—I think under the circumstances that it would be a good plan to do it.

2441. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—But you say they would not take them?—Not now, as the estate is present state.

2442. Mr. O'SHEA.—Do you not think it would be a good thing to enforce strict clauses against subdivision at the time you come to raise the rent, and then give leases?—I think you would ruin the condition of the tenantry by so doing.

2443. Is there a National school on the property?—There are five National schools.

2444. Have you, as agent for the Commissioners, the right of appointing the masters to these schools?—No, none whatsoever.

2445. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Are they vested schools?—No.

2446. Mr. O'SHEA.—Do the Commissioners of Education help to keep them up at all?—No, they have refused to do so.

2447. I see that on the northern portion of the estate there was a school kept by Bernard Maguire for which he received £10 per annum?—He has died, there was no success appointed and a National school has sprung up in the place of that school.

2448. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Why did the Commissioners refuse to support the school?—As well as I recollect—in is a good many years ago—they said they had not power to grant money to a National school.

2449. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—That was a primary school?—It was.

2450. And it is now maintained by the National Board out of the money granted by Parliament for primary Education?—Yes.

2451. Mr O'SHAUGHNESSY.—No draining was done by the Commissioners?—No, not in my time.

2452. Has any been done by the tenants?—A little; in isolated instances.

2453. Considering their small holdings, have they spent large sums on the drainage?—Well, they have; some of them have improved their farms very much.

2454. Is that part of the work done on consideration of the rental of the half-year's rent?—Oh, no; private enterprise.

2455. Is the general improvement of which you speak also distinct from that which is?—Quite apart from the expenditure on the estate.

2456. Have they increased the value of their holdings within the last twenty years?—A great number of them have, especially among the poorer classes. The system of farming is wonderfully improved, they grow more green crops and use artificial food more than they did twenty years ago.

2457. Do you think that the rent which they pay at present was an adequate rent twenty years ago?—I think it was a moderate rent in 1859, the times were then beginning to improve.

2458. You think the rent might now be raised, from its present amount, to Griffith's valuation?—I do. That would be about £500 a year additional.

2459. How much of that increased value of £500 a year has been effected by the activity and little improvements done by the tenants?—I think, independently of the improvements made by the tenants, that the estate would be fairly set at an increase of £360 a year.

2460. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—That is, an increase of £500 a year might be put on the rental, without pressing the tenants in any way, or charging them any rent for their own improvements?—That is my opinion. Any estate in Fermanagh, let at Griffith's valuation, is fully let without charging the tenant for his improvements.

2461. Do you know any other instance in which a whole estate is let below the valuation?—Not where there is power to raise the rents.

2462. Mr O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you know any estate where the owners have allowed the unimproving process of subdivision to go on?—A private person would not allow it.

2463. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—I believe it is the case in Fermanagh that the most miserable portions of the whole county are those where the tenants have freeholds?—Unquestionably.

2464. A considerable portion of the county is in that position?—There is, but they have been sold out since that time, and the new men have gone on quite a different system, and improved very much.

2465. Dr. HARRIS.—Is there much bog?—Not very much, there was a good deal, but it has been cut away.

2466. And the land appropriated by tenants without rent being charged?—Generally, but in some instances rent has been charged.

2467. The tenants do not pay rent for the bog?—Never.

2468. Is there a piece of bog attached to each farm?—There is. It is not the custom in Fermanagh to charge for bog.

2469. Mr O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You know the county very well and the town of Enniskillen?—I do.

2470. Are the middle classes, including shopkeepers and farmers holding from twenty to a hundred or a hundred and fifty acres of land, all Protestants, or partly Protestants?—The great majority of that class are Protestants.

2471. Would you say that thirty per cent of the shopkeepers and farmers are Roman Catholics?—Oh, yes, fully.

2472. Forty per cent?—Yes; but the Roman Catholics in Fermanagh do not hold as large farms as the Protestants.

2473. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—That is to say the Roman Catholics are numerically forty per cent, but if you take the large holdings only into consideration a greater proportion are Protestants?—Exactly.

2474. Of the class of people who would be likely to send their sons to a school such as Portora, about what proportion in Fermanagh are Protestants?—Oh, they are all Protestants. I do not know a Roman Catholic in Fermanagh of that class now.

2475. Among the upper or better class of shopkeepers and tradesmen, what are the proportions?—There are from thirty to forty per cent. of Roman Catholics.

2476. Mr O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Where do the Protestant shopkeepers and farmers send their sons to school in Fermanagh?—In my day a good number used to go to Portora as day boys, but now the Model School seems to have attracted them.

2477. Why have they given up Portora?—The parents think that the education they receive at the Model School fits them better for the life they have to lead; that the education at Portora is of too high a standard for people of their class.

2479. Do they send them in large numbers to the Model School?—Not in large numbers. The master of the Model School is a very clever man. He is a Roman Catholic.

2480. Have you any idea how the Roman Catholic Bishop of the diocese regards the Model School?—I have heard him spoken of as a very liberal-minded man. He was never opposed to the Model School.

2481. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Suppose this property were put into the market, are there any tenants on it who would be likely to purchase their holdings?—I do not think there would be more than ten.

2482. Dr. CURTIS.—In 1857 the population on the estate was stated to be 2,142 persons?—I do not think there are so many now.

2483. There were then 419 houses on the estate?—There are only about 350 houses now, so that, as a matter of fact, the population has decreased.

2484. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—The condition of those who remain has improved?—Oh, yes.

2485. CHAIRMAN.—What percentage do you get?—Five per cent.

2486. Is there a bailiff under you?—There are two.

2487. What do they get?—£9 ds. 7d. a year each.

2488. I find in the accounts £4 allowed to them for looking after the bogs and distributing the lime. How often do you get reports from them?—They never make a report except something special happens.

2489. How often are the rents collected?—Yearly.

2490. How often do you see the estate as a rule?—Once a month—I live close to it.

2491. There is a small part of the estate adjoining Portora school. Do you know anything of that, or is it within your province to inspect that or to inspect the school-house for repairs, or anything of that sort?—No, that is not in my province. About twenty-three years ago there was drainage carried out at Portora, and I inspected all that work for my father.

2492. In connection with the bog, do you repair the roads or do the tenants do that for themselves?—We sometimes expend a few pounds; indeed this year there will be rather a large expenditure, as owing to the frost the roads have been cut up.

2493. Has any attempt been made to assist tenants in emigration, so as to make the remainder more comfortable?—There has not been any assistance given for emigration from that part of the country.

2494. Were there any restrictions as to cropping?—None.

April, 1878.
Mr John J. Brennan

April 8, 1915.
Mr. John J.
Benson.

2495. Are the tenants allowed to grow as many corn or flax crops in succession as they please?—There is no restriction.

2496. You make no periodical report as to the crops on the various parts of the estate?—None. We were never called upon to make one.

2497. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUESON.—The tenants have given up the wasteful process of cropping, formerly practised, but not through any action of the landlord?—Exactly.

2498. On the estates of other persons, for whom you are agent, are there any steps taken to supervise the agriculture of the tenants?—Yes; I look over the estates.

2499. Do you know any other instance where the tenants are under no restrictions as to the treatment of the land?—I do a great number.

2500. Estates belonging to individuals?—Yes.

2501. Do you think such estates are properly managed?—I do not. It is a great advantage to suggest to the tenants the various improvements that have taken place in the sowing of seeds and the proper treatment of land.

2503. Nothing of that kind was done on this estate?—Nothing.

2504. CHAIRMAN.—Have you ever suggested to the Commissioners that it was desirable to try to have rules?—I never suggested it.

2505. Are there any estate rules on this estate?—None that I am aware of.

2506. Is there any contribution from the Commissioners to the National Schools on the estate?—None.

2507. Do the school-houses belong to the Commissioners?—They belong to tenants on the estate.

2508. Who keeps them in order?—They are a private speculation by the schoolmaster and schoolmistress, but if it was on the estate of a private individual the schools would be supplemented.

2509. Would you recommend that a house should be supplied and kept in order?—Yes; I do that on Lord Belmore's estate.

2510. What is the extent of the Cavan estate?—It is 571 Irish acres.

2511. What is its rental?—The rental is £543 7s. 1d.

2512. What is Griffith's valuation?—£342 gross.

2513. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUESON.—How much of that is for buildings?—I cannot say.

2514. CHAIRMAN.—Has any change in the rental been made during the twenty-eight years that you and your father have had the agency?—None that I am aware of.

2515. Has there been any change of tenancy?—I only remember one.

2516. Is there any Ulster tenant-right, or tenant-right of any kind, on the estate?—The custom of the neighbourhood has been held to be binding in Cavan by Mr. Sergeant Robinson, the County Chairman.

2517. What is the amount usually given?—From £5 to £10 an acre.

2518. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUESON.—Do you say where it has been allowed in Cavan, that it has been established over any large portion of the county, or is not Cavan one of the counties where it is disputed?—It is disputed. The custom has been allowed on Lord Farnham's estate.

2519. Is not Cavan a county in which you are obliged to prove that the particular estate is subject to the custom?—Yes, sir.

2520. Has tenant-right been acknowledged on this estate?—Yes.

2521. CHAIRMAN.—What amount has been paid, as far as you know, where there have been changes?—It has brought from £5 to £10 an acre.

2522. Is that more or less than the average?—About the average.

2523. Have you any professional knowledge of any other estates?—Not in Cavan.

2524. Is there any bog or moorland on this estate?—None. It is all arable land.

2525. Do you think, judging from your information obtained in the neighbourhood, that the rent is a fair and reasonable rent?—It is a fair, reasonable rent, having regard to the present depressed times.

2526. Just taking the last ten years?—It is a low rent.

2527. If you had been asked, a few years ago, to suggest a fair rent, what rent would you have named?—I would have put it at an acre on it.

2528. Dr. HAIR.—Is Griffith's valuation higher or lower in Fermanagh than in Cavan?—I think it is higher in Fermanagh.

2529. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUESON.—I believe that the land on this estate is very much better than on the Banaskillen estate?—It is very much better.

2530. Dr. HAIR.—This land would let decidedly above Griffith's valuation?—It is let already above it.

2531. What is the general proportion throughout the county?—Some is let at Griffith's valuation, and some above it, but, as a general rule, the land in Cavan, let by ordinary landlords, is let above Griffith's valuation.

2532. Is it as much as ten per cent. above it?—No, about five.

2533. Is there any portion of this estate sufficiently near the town of Cavan to be fit for town plots?—There is one townland.

2534. Have there been any changes on that portion?—No.

2535. Are there any fields held by sheepkeepers for grazing?—No.

2536. Is not that the custom on estates round about Cavan?—Yes, where the landlord gets the land into his own hands.

2537. But this land has been held by tenants for many years without any change?—It has.

2538. Are the tenants all resident on the place?—They are.

2539. There are none occupying houses in Cavan that have this land as an accommodation?—I think there are one or two men that now keep houses in Cavan, that have farms on the estate, what I would call town parks.

2540. Have you ever suggested to the Commissioners any change in the rent?—No, none on the Cavan estate.

2541. Your remuneration is on the same terms, five per cent. on the collection?—Five per cent.

2542. Have you a half?—Yes.

2543. What does he get?—£2 4s. 3d. has been the salary from time immemorial.

2544. What do you think this property would sell for, if put into the market on the present rental?—It would bring thirty years' purchase.

2545. How far do you reside from the estate?—About eleven miles.

2546. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—Is the part of the land adjoining the town of Cavan that on which the school is built?—The school adjoins the town, but the land on which it stands was not originally part of the estate, and is not contiguous to any portion of it. It was obtained many years ago by exchange, when I believe the Commissioners gave three acres for one. The nearest portion of the estate is within half a mile of the town of Cavan, and the most distant part is about two miles.

2547. £542 7s. 1d. is returned as the amount of the rental, and for the year ending 1st November, 1877, you received out of that only £323 6s. 5d., and the arrears returned as then due were £1,450 10s. 8½d.?—Yes.

2548. How long have these arrears been hanging over the estate?—From time immemorial.

2549. Has any attempt been made, such as was carried out on the Enniskillen estate, to reduce these arrears?—None.

2550. Is there anything connected with the position of the Cavan estate to make it more or less difficult to come to an equitable arrangement with the tenants to get rid of the arrears?—At the time it was done on the Enniskillen estate the tenants on the Cavan estate were poorer.

2551. What do you say of them at present?—They have improved.

2552. Do you think the estate could be improved by resuming portions of those arrears, and possibly collecting portions?—I think after allowing them another year—because things are not very prosperous at present in the country—they could pay a year's rent out of the arrears.

2553. If the matter had been taken up at any time within the past ten years, could the arrangement have been carried out to the benefit of both landlords and tenants?—It might.

2554. Was it on your father's suggestion that the arrangement was made on the Enniskillen estate?—It was.

2555. Did he make a similar suggestion with regard to Cavan?—He did not, because the Cavan tenants were poorer. We talked it over, but, at that time, he did not consider it justifiable to attempt it, and no suggestion to carry it out was ever made either by him or by the Commissioners.

2556. In Mr. Mackenzie's report, made in 1857, in reference to this estate, he says:—

"According to the new general valuation of Ireland the value is £237 3s., and for the school-house and land on which it is erected £100 per annum, £50 being for the house and £50 for the land."

Could there be any mistake in the value you gave us?—I think not. At that time a great number appealed from the valuation, and I know that in many instances it was reduced. The school-house and land on which it stands is not included in the £542 which I stated as the present value.

2557. In the same report the rental is stated to be £557 7s. 11d., and this comment is made:—

"The rate at which this property is at present let is actually very low for land so near to the town of Cavan, and I think it is let below its full letting value."

Do you concur in that opinion now?—I think it is cheap.

2558. What percentage might be added to the present rental, without preventing the tenants unduly or charging them anything for their own expenditure?—I think it might be raised from ten to twenty per cent., which would bring it up to the ordinary letting value. I must say of the Cavan tenants, that they improved their land wonderfully, they are most industrious people.

2559. Making full allowance for that, do you think the rental may be raised ten per cent?—Unquestionably.

2560. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—The Inspector of Estates to the former Royal Commission reported:—

"The arrears up to 1st November, 1854 . . . amounted to 41,670 15s. 3d., equal to three years' rent of the whole property. With the exception of the bulk, there was no tenant owed less than one year's arrears of rent, while there was one who owed eight years, three who owed seven years . . . The difficulty of ascertaining the correctness of the arrears charged to the agent's account is very great, in consequence of the fact that many of the holdings mentioned in the rental have been subdivided; and, further, one tenant occasionally holds small portions of two or three different holdings . . . In this way the accounts have become very complicated."

Do you still continue the same system of returning the arrears and receipts there referred to?—No.

2561. What alterations have you made?—We take from the accounts the amount of the arrears due on each farm, and we give a receipt for the actual money paid, showing on the back the arrears remaining due; so that each tenant on getting his receipt sees the amount of arrears due on his holding.

2562. Then there is no tenant on the estate getting a clear receipt?—I think there is one, a man named Young.

2563. On the average, each tenant has three years' arrears on the back of his receipt?—Very nearly.

2564. Will not that in itself prevent the carrying out of the ordinary tenant-right on the estate?—I think, having so large an arrear hanging over him, would militate against the tenant.

2565. He cannot, without the knowledge of the agent or landlord, sell, or he would be bound to pay the arrears?—In every instance we make them pay up the arrears.

2566. Therefore, you put a penalty of three years' rent on any tenant who sells his holding?—Unquestionably. I have heard my father say that from the time he got the agency he acted in that way.

2567. LORD R. CAMPBELL.—The report of 1857 states that the greater part of those arrears accrued in the four years from November, 1843, to November, 1849?—I think that is not accurate. I know that in the last years the tenants were in a most wretched state, but I often heard one, named Lamb, declare that the arrears had been due for a hundred years.

2568. DR. HARRIS.—There were two or three years during which no rents were paid. Were those forgiven to the tenants or added to the arrears?—Added to the arrears.

2569. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Mr. Minland also reported, as to this estate, in 1856:—

"The evil practice of subdividing farms has provided very much on this estate, and has not been checked as it should have been."

Has there been much further subdivision?—Not lately.

2570. The report proceeds:—

"This, I think, is the chief cause of the poverty of so many of the tenants . . . It has also caused as usual the fields of the different holdings to be intermixed."

Is there much of that intermixture on the Cavan estate?—There is.

2571. You gave an explanation of that which, so far as it went, was perhaps a good one, with regard to the Enniskillen estate. As this is a small land, how do you explain the intermixture except by want of control?—That is the cause of it.

2572. Is it not most wasteful, both for the tenant and the landlord, to allow the farms occupied by the same man to be separated from each other?—Unquestionably—great disadvantage to the tenants. It leads to continual squabbles, and would seriously cripple the tenants' ability to pay rent.

2573. There are on the estate sixty-six holdings. Of these how many are thus intermixed?—From ten to twenty are intermixed.

2574. Have you a survey of this estate?—Yes; a map and survey made in 1816.

2575. Have the holdings been surveyed at any time since?—There has been no survey.

2576. Are you able to tell who is the tenant of any of these detached pieces now?—I know by visiting the estate and going over it.

2577. There is not in your office any written evidence—examining your own people testimony no longer available—nor, so far as you know, in the office of the Commissioners any means of ascertaining who is tenant on these holdings?—No.

2578. If it were necessary to recover possession of the property, have you any means of giving evidence, except by parole from your own observation, who are tenants on these pieces?—There are no other means.

2579. Have you had experience of the difficulties in the way of taking any legal proceedings where the estates are so circumstanced?—There is always a difficulty, and we must be very careful; moreover, the tenants have great trouble in managing their farms by themselves. There is a good deal of litigation about rights of way, but I generally manage to settle it.

2580. I find in your account this entry:—"Cash paid Thomas Edwards for survey and making a sketch of a disputed piece, 7s. 6d." Was that a passage disputed between the tenants?—It was.

2581. Did that arise from intermixture of holdings?—It did.

2582. I find in the report of the Inspector of Estates in 1856 this suggestion:—

"Before any improvement can be expected on this estate some arrangement must be made for reducing the large arrears hanging over so many of the tenants. I would suggest that the same plan should be adopted which I have pointed out in my report on the Enniskillen school estates; but whether that plan or some other be adopted, nothing, I think, can be clearer than that while a tenant feels himself liable to be called on at any moment for a large sum of rent, he will neither improve his land nor pay any rent he can avoid."

That suggestion was made more than twenty years ago. Was any communication made by the Commissioners to your father at any time as to the desirability of such an arrangement?—None.

2583. This report proceeds:—

"At the same time that some arrangement is made as to the existing arrears, the tenants must be given to understand that if the arrearage rent is not punctually paid arrears will be at once taken to enforce it, and no tenant will be suffered to remain on the estate who does not pay the rent."

Was anything of that kind done?—The tenants have all got notice that they must pay the rent, and it has been fairly paid.

2584. There is not a single tenant on the estate who is not at the present moment liable to ejectment for non-payment of rent?—Not one.

2585. And not only that, but unable to redeem, unless he pays three years' rent?—True.

2586. The last passage in the report I have been quoting from is—

"It is absolutely necessary that a more vigilant and energetic system of management be pursued on this estate than has hitherto been done."

Has any change in the system of management taken place within the last twenty-two years?—None.

2587. We have been furnished with an advertisement, published in November, 1877, for the sale of a farm on this estate (vide Appendix No. 2). Do you know the holding?—I do. It belonged to Lamb, and was sold to a man of the name of Mr. Harrow.

2588. What did the interest sell for?—I do not know. I did not hear what it brought.

2589. Did you get any money out of the transaction?—Yes; we got a large sum of money. Edward Lamb owed six years' rent which had accrued during his own tenancy, and that was all paid up, as well as one year of the old arrears, which, however, is not collected; it is in the hands of the present tenant.

2590. I find in your last rental these entries:—

"John Lamb, 49 11s. 7d. yearly rent. £32 2s. 6d. arrears due 1861 and John Lamb, 427 18s. 10d. yearly rent, and £194 2s. 6d. arrears due. Since the 22nd of November last I have urged John Lamb to pay his rent like the other tenants on the estate, but in vain. I was obliged to proceed against him by ejectment last year. It was only in October of that year I was enabled to get the rent which I accounted for in July. At the time of taking out the ejectment this year I told the County Court Judge that I would settle a year's rent of his holding. I would be satisfied, and this in the hearing of Lamb. It is not far west of me; he refused to pay, but, as I have been assured, a disinclination to pay rent."

Do you know whether Lamb, who had been twice served with ejectments, had reduced the arrears?—I had to turn him out through the sheriff, but he afterwards came in and paid.

2591. Did he pay up the whole arrears?—No; I took one year's rent in cash, and his bill to the Commissioners at twelve months for the remainder of the arrears then due, in order that a settlement might be effected. I must say he is an extraordinary man. He expended the current year's rent, each year, in improving his farm. If I had not made that arrangement with him and given him some time, I would have forced him into the market, and ruined him.

2592. In these dealings with the Lambs, which were somewhat complicated and involved a good deal of money, what communication, if any, did you carry on with the Commissioners?—The matter was mentioned to Dr. Kyle, and he desired that Lamb should be told that the Commissioners would order an ejectment against his second holding. Although there was a decree outstanding against one holding, they would order an ejectment against the other, unless he paid. Having so informed him, and finding he took no notice, I ventured on my own responsibility to turn him out. I had no authority whatsoever from the Commissioners to execute that decree.

2593. The minutes of the Board on the 31st October, 1878, are—

"Canon Estate.—Read letters from the agent stating that Lamb and others had refused to pay the year's rent since the arrears due by him be now forgiven, and asking instructions. Ordered that Lamb, &c., be ejected for non-payment of rent."

You received that order?—Yes; the ejectment was brought, but Dr. Kyle having told my father-in-law he would be satisfied with the current year's rent, Lamb was let back.

2594. When was he turned out?—In the month of February last.

2595. Mr. O'BRIENQUESTED.—How the bill fallen due yet?—No.

2596. What do you think is the prospect of its being paid?—As good as money in the funds. The man is comfortably off, and after the settlement he wrote me a letter of thanks.

2597. Lord JAMES FLEMING.—Have any works been executed at all, in the estate of estate improvements, on this property?—None.

2598. Is it an estate on which money could be judiciously and productively expended in that way?—I do not think it could.

2599. What is the general nature of the buildings upon it?—The houses are tolerably comfortable, but in a rude they are shabby.

2600. Does the £100, mentioned in the rental as lodged by the person who wished to become the representative of Edward Lamb, refer to the holding offered for sale?—Yes; the entire holding was subject to a rent of £27 18s. 10d. The portion for sale was stated to be liable only to £19; the remaining portion of the holding is in the possession of the same John Lamb who was turned out by the sheriff. Edward Lamb was a wretched fellow. He wanted to desert his wife and two children; and when the rent was arranged there was only £15 left out of the £100. We sent that to the Roman Catholic Bishop for the wife and children, and I had a letter from him thanking me for even so much.

2601. Do you know what became of Edward Lamb himself?—I believe he has gone abroad.

2602. You have no doubt but that Lamb got a considerable sum for his interest?—There is no doubt of that. It is quite usual to give a good deal more than what they settle upon as the value of the farm. They come to me and name a certain sum, and I know that when they leave me, there is much more given.

2603. I believe that is a perfectly well-established part of the Ulster tenant-right custom?—Oh, yes. They would so much think of taking a farm at the office terms than of cutting off their head.

2604. CHAIRMAN.—Are there any restrictions as to cropping, or does your evidence in reference to Fermanagh apply equally to this estate?—It applies equally to both. There is only one observation I should like to make as to this estate:—The tenants on it have to bring their turf some seven or eight Irish miles. They are very badly off for fuel and they always complained of the drawback that is to them.

2605. Is there a National school on the estate?—There is one.

2604. Do the Commissioners make any grant towards its support?—None.

2607. Are any of the other estates, in the neighbourhood of the town, let on town parks?—Yes.

2608. Is not a higher rent than obtained?—Twice the rent; but I would not think it fair to a tenant taking out his livelihood from a farm to put an increased rent on him for being adjacent to a town; because when a man goes to market in Ireland, whether he goes on rail or on foot, he spends the day.

2609. Would it not have been possible, in past years, when there was a good deal of emigration, to have made these town parks for the benefit of the estate, and the advantage of the inhabitants of the town?—The people have always clung to the land.

2610. They have not done so on other estates?—I know that is so; but on the school lands they have been known to be in the greatest watchfulness, and still to hold on to the lands.

2611. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Has John Lamb a lease?—No. There is no lease.

2612. As I understand, what he does with the profit of the farm is to spend it on improvements, and pay you the rent?—True.

2613. Do you not think if he had a lease, and was able to his improvements, he would make a more judicious and fair application of the rent?—I think it would be much easier to collect the rent.

2614. You are aware that in many parts of Ireland the rent is generally one-fourth or one-third over the valuation?—Yes, generally.

2615. You do not think it would be fair to apply that principle in Fermanagh?—I do not think the northern landlords treat their tenants as harshly, I might say, as the southern. There was always a more friendly feeling between the landlords and the tenantry in the north of Ireland.

2616. As a general rule in Fermanagh it would be an unsafe thing to say that the rent ought to be one-third above Griffith's valuation?—It would be a very unpopular proposition to make.

2617. I suppose there is a large body of Roman Catholics, of the farming class, in Charv?—Very large. Both among the farmers and shopkeepers.

2618. The Roman Catholics have got a boarding school in Charv?—They have got a very fine college.

2619. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Do you state positively that an application was made to the Commissioners to grant assistance to the National schools on the Fermanagh property, and that the assistance was refused?—The schoolmaster applied for assistance, and my impression is that he was refused.

2620. I find this entry on the minutes of the Board for April, 1863:—

"Read letter from agent for Enniskillen school estate stating that B. Maguire, master of the Deanebrook school, had died. That J. Cassidy, master of Drumacree school, was willing to build a schoolhouse at about a mile from the former school of Deanebrook, and to settle his daughter there as a teacher, without any cost to the Board if permitted to do so, and that there would be no loss to the Board on the rental. Resolved—That permission be given for a school-house only?"

That permission has been given, and the school-house has been built.

2621. Lord JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—But not by the assistance of the Commissioners?—They did not give a shilling towards it.

Mr. THOMAS HUGH FERRIS recalled.

Mr. Thomas H. Ferris.

2622. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Do you produce the new lease of Banagher school-house?—Yes. It is dated 16th July, 1857, from Henry Treach to the Commissioners, and gives them the premises as described, to hold for seven years, from 24th June, 1858, at the yearly rent of £50.

2623. Lord JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—It contains a covenant to keep the premises in repair. Is there any difference between the terms of this lease and the former lease?—I think not.

2624. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Was any fine paid for the renewal?—None.

2625. Could not the Commissioners have got a larger term?—Yes. The landlord wanted them to take a longer lease, but they preferred having a short one for the present.

2626. What was their motive in declining to take a longer lease?—I have heard the locality is not very much improved of.

2627. Do you think the motive was that possibly Banagher might be abandoned, and the school removed somewhere else?—I can scarcely take upon myself to say so. Perhaps the Commissioners thought it desirable to renew it if it could be done, but I do not think there is any power to do so.

2628. With respect to the general management of the estates the Commissioners of 1857 say:—

"We have already called attention to the defective manner in which the Royal school properties have in various particulars been managed by them. The plan of appointing local agents was judicious, but we think that, in addition to this arrangement, systematic inspection, conducted by a qualified agent of the Board and occasionally by some of the Commissioners themselves, was essential."

Has that recommendation ever been considered by the Board?—I do not know, at any rate no such action has been taken.

2629. The same report contains this passage:—

"It appears from the provisions of the Acts of Parliament, under which the Commissioners of Education were constituted, that it was part of their duty to take as annual account of the assets and liabilities of the Royal School estates."

Do you know whether that is done?—The agents' annual accounts and our own accounts would constitute accounts of the assets and liabilities of each estate and school.

2630. Lord JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—On what principle do you not as charging items in the annual account sent to the Treasury?—We charge nothing at all against those agents except there is an item for law-costs, and even then only for costs of administration.

2631. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Is there any rule laid down by the Board as to what expenses should be charged to the Treasury?—There is no such rule that I know of.

2632. Lord JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—To what amount was the cost of the new lease of Banagher school charged?—They have not yet been paid, but the practice would be to charge them to the Banagher estate account.

2633. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—The Commissioners in 1857 further say:—

"It also appeared in evidence that since 1837 considerable sums for the payment of law costs had been debited to several charities, which ought properly to have been charged on the Consolidated Fund, and that payments had been made out of the funds of other endowments without any legal authority to warrant such an appropriation."

Do you consider that the costs of drawing a lease, such as that of Banagher, ought to be charged against the estate, or to the Treasury?—I could not give an opinion on that point.

2634. The Commissioners who reported in 1857 insisted, very strongly, on the duty of your Board as to the preservation of foundation deeds and other documents appertaining to the endowments. Have any steps been taken in reference to this recommendation?—When the late Mr. Follenstone (who was solicitor to the Board) retired, he handed over a number of leases and other documents, which we have in our custody.

Mr. Thomas
H. Fleming.

2635. Have you got the title deeds of the various properties?—I do not know.

2636. Several of the schools are of private foundation. I suppose you hold the title deeds of the properties belonging to them?—I should say so. There are a number of old legal papers.

2637. Have you any list of the various deeds in the custody of the Commissioners?—We have a list of those handed over to us by Mr. Fetherston.

2638. Where do you keep them?—They are in a tin box at No. 8, Clause-street, which house belongs to Dr. Kyle's representatives.

2639. Have the Commissioners any office at present?—It has been arranged, with Dr. Kyle's representatives, that the office is to continue there for a short time, but the meetings of the Commissioners have been held at the Provost's house since Dr. Kyle died.

2640. Have the Commissioners all the deeds and documents which appertain to the endowments under their charge?—I cannot say all, but I know they have some—for instance, the losses of the Diocesan school-boards.

2641. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Was the list that was furnished on the occasion of Mr. Fetherston's retirement handed over by him or his representatives when the documents were given up to the Commissioners?—Yes, it was, in fact, a voucher of what he was giving up.

2642. Have you ever made a list of what are called your manuscripts of title?—I have not, but they are all there.

2643. Is there any other list by which all the documents of title that you possess could be now checked?—No. I think not.

2644. At what date did Mr. Fetherston give up the papers?—About 1865.

2645. Who was then appointed solicitor?—Mr. Collum.

2646. Has there been any checking of the manuscripts of title since then?—I am not aware that we ever checked them since.

2647. LORD R. CURZON.—In the report of the Commissioners of 1857 this passage occurs:—

"The whole course of our inquiries has convinced us that a careful attention to the preservation of foundation deeds and other documents of the same nature is most important in relation to educational charities; and we are of opinion that the omission of the Commissioners of Education to take charge of all such as belonged to schools whose properties were vested in them, and to keep a full and accurate record of the manuscripts of those placed under their supervision, was a serious oversight, and one that proved how repeatedly they had apprehended the real meaning and policy of the Legislature."

Have the Commissioners of Education taken any steps, since that report was made, to keep a full and accurate record of the manuscripts of the endowed schools placed under their supervision?—Beyond getting that list from their late solicitor I think not. It was checked at the time and all the documents were handed over.

2648. When Messrs. McCumbe and Fetherston were applied to, by the Commissioners in 1854, for the foundation deeds, their answer was:—

"Since the receipt of your letter of 22nd March, requesting to be furnished with the deeds of foundations of endowed schools under the Commission of Education in Ireland, we have made a careful search in our office for deeds of the class indicated, and beg to inform you that we have not in our custody any such deeds, and it is not in our power to state in whose custody such deeds will be found."

They cannot therefore have handed you over any important deeds?—I should say not; but I know that we have all that they handed over.

2649. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Who has the key of the box in which the deeds are kept?—The key is in the lock, where it was usually kept during Dr. Kyle's lifetime.

2650. LORD R. CURZON.—Was there no strong room?—None. A strong one might be useful, as in case of fire the deeds might be burned, unless some one opened the box and saved them. We have also a lot of old papers, not of the least value, which are stored away in garrets in the back corridor.

2651. Do you think the method of keeping the title deeds which you describe is "the careful attention to the preservation of foundation deeds," which was insisted on so strongly in the report I have quoted?—I think the deeds are perfectly safe. I do not think that any body would touch them.

2652. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—The 11th Section of the 3 Geo. IV., c. 79, provides:—

"Whereas . . . divers powers are granted to the said Commissioners of Education to visit and regulate certain schools of private foundation and endowment . . . existing in Ireland, . . . and it is expedient to extend the said powers to all such schools of private foundation and endowment which may at any time exist in Ireland, be it therefore enacted that all and every of the powers by the said recited Act, granted to or vested in the Commissioners of Education, for visiting and regulating such schools of private foundation and endowment as were existing at the time of the passing of the said Act, shall extend to all schools of the same kind and description as the said Act mentioned, which have been or shall be built, erected, founded, or endowed in Ireland at any time after the passing of the said recited Act or this Act."

Has there been any system established in your office, either by inquiry from the Commissioners of Charitable Donations or otherwise, with the view of ascertaining whether any fresh endowments have been created?—We recovered a small sum for Athlone school, through the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Esqueats a considerable time ago.

2653. We have ascertained since our Commission was instituted that Mr. Woods, of Milverton, has endowed a Protestant school in the county of Dublin within the last few years. That is a school within the express words of your Act of Parliament. Did the Commissioners become aware of that?—No.

2654. Is there any instance within your recollection of the endowment of a Protestant school becoming known to your Board?—A great many years ago Lord Mountmellick came to the office and suggested that a school of his at Kilworth should be vested in our Board. We sent them forms for a long time, but ultimately they have ceased to return them.

2655. Did you ever take any steps in the matter?—No. The school at Kilworth is considered somewhat of a parochial school.

2656. LORD R. CURZON.—How many years have you been without the returns?—I think we got them up to two years ago.

2657. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Are you aware that in the city of Dublin, particularly in the older parishes—St. Catherine's, St. John's, and St. Peter's—there have been, at various times, endowments given to the parochial schools by Protestant parishioners?—No.

2658. Has any action been taken in reference to the reassignment of any parochial endowment by your Board?—No. I was not aware that the Board had any control over parochial schools.

2659. Was any notice taken, by the Commissioners, during the passage of the Irish Church Act through Parliament, of the fact that it in substance treated the property of the diocesan schools as if it was Church property?—Not that I am aware of.

2660. Was attention called to this: that the effect of the Act was to hand over the value of the life interests to the schoolmasters themselves and to the Representative Church Body, and to leave the residue of the property of the diocesan schools in the hands of the Church Temporalities Commissioners?—I think the matter as to the diocesan schools was talked over by the Board; but no decided action was taken, at least I cannot find any minute on the subject, prior to 1873.

2661. What minute is there at that date?—

"28th July, 1873.—The Secretary laid on the table, the opinion of the Solicitor-General (Mr. Law) on the case laid before him as to the Limerick Diocesan school, and the diocesan schools in general; as many important legal question were involved. It was advised that this matter do stand over until some of the legal members of the Board is present.

I cannot find that it ever ceased to stand over.

2469. When does the subject appear to have been again considered?—The next minute as to it is of a meeting on 20th November, 1874, at which the Lord Chief Justice was present.—

"Secretary having reported the death of the Rev. Mr. Hall, his diocesan schoolmaster of Limerick, and the very many legal questions that might arise in reference to the school premises, in consequence of the abolition of diocesan schools; and having stated that several parties were desirous to purchase or to rent the school premises, it was ordered that a fully stated case as to the rights, &c., &c., of the Commissioners as to the school premises be laid before Council by the solicitors, and that as a case in reference to the school had been heretofore submitted to the Right Hon. Hugh Law, when Solicitor-General to the late Government, this case be also sent to him."

2470. What is the next minute as to this matter?—Under date 29th January, 1875.—

"The Secretary laid on the table the various documents in connection with the school premises held from Messrs. Watson, &c., by the Commissioners, and the cases as to the powers of the Commissioners in reference thereto, the late diocesan schoolmaster having recently died, and Mr. Law's opinion as to same, together with several letters from the Rev. Mr. Gregg (now in possession of the school premises), senior of the parties in which the school premises are situated, stating his anxiety to purchase or to take a lease of them for the purpose of opening a school there. Considerable discussion took place on the subject, and the opinions of Mr. Law having been carefully considered. It was resolved that Mr. Gregg should be permitted to remain in possession as caretaker for the board for a period of two years, without being charged any rent during that period.—Mr. Gregg undertaking to give up quiet possession to the Board if called upon to do so—on condition of his putting the house into repair. After the expiration of the said two years this Board will accept Mr. Gregg as their tenant at a moderate and farrent, such rent to be from time to time invested in public securities, and dividends thereon also to be invested to the credit of this endowment, and made to accumulate for that purpose."

2471. Has Mr. Gregg gone under rent since?—Not that I am aware of.

2472. Is he still in possession?—I think he is keeping a school there.

2473. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What has become of the diocesan schoolhouse at Ballynaggs?—That school is carried on at present by Mr. King, the master, who has not emigrated.

2474. What has become of the Derry diocesan school?—That was combined with Foyls College. The diocesan endowment was merged with the Foyls College grant from the Irish Society. A return furnished to our Board by the Church Temporalities Commissioners, shows that Dr. Robinson emigrated and received £1,035 10s 4d, and the school is now carried on with the Irish Society's grant.

2475. Has the diocesan schoolmaster at Downpatrick emigrated?—Yes, and I think the schoolhouse has been handed over to the lord of the manor.

2476. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Were the Commissioners the owners of the school premises?—I cannot say.

2477. Did they receive anything for the premises?—Nothing; I think the lord of the manor has established a school there in place of the diocesan school.

2478. Do you get any returns from it?—No; it would be a private school.

2479. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—In the case of the Monaghan diocesan school, Mr. Hine emigrated. The annual value of the buildings was stated to be £48; what has become of them?—There is a caretaker in charge for our Board. There was some grass which was sold, and the proceeds helped to pay the caretaker.

2480. Is the Eligo diocesan school still in operation?—Yes; Mr. Skelke is carrying it on.

2481. Do you know anything about the schoolhouse at Tassat?—There has not been a schoolhouse there within my time. The books show that twenty years ago the old schoolhouse was sold and the proceeds invested in £420 4s 6d Government Stock. The dividends were paid half-yearly to the master of the school.

2482. Did the master of the Tassat diocesan school carry on the school until he emigrated?—He still carries on the school.

2483. How long is it since there has been a diocesan school at Tassat?—It is a long time.

2484. MR. O'SHEA.—The returns made to us show that in 1878 although the master received £64 per annum, he had no pupils and no school?—He is a very old man, and still occupies the house.

2485. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The master of Wexford diocesan school emigrated and received £418 15s; are there any school buildings?—There is no house.

2486. MR. O'SHEA.—The annual value of the schoolhouse was returned in 1857 as £44 18s 7d, but the Assistant Commissioner reported that it was then in such a state of repair as to make it dangerous to the inmates?—I suppose it disappeared.

2487. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you know of its being in existence?—All I can say is that in the return prepared by Dr. Kyle there is entered "no house."

2488. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Make inquiry and inform the Commissioners whether there is any building at Wexford of which your Board might be the owners?—I will try if I can get the information by writing to some person in Wexford.

2489. Is there any diocesan schoolhouse at Carlow?—None now; the former house was sold about 1857, and is represented in our books by a certain amount of money.

2490. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—What entries appear in your books respecting that matter?—The index to the minute book contains these entries:—

"Old schoolhouse demolished. The master suggests the sale of same, &c." "Rev. D. H. Scott states that he is about to try an arrangement as to old schoolhouse with the Town Commissioners." "Memorial as to purchasing the site and ruins of the old schoolhouse for a work market." "Treaty for sale of old schoolhouse and premises going as" "£300 accepted as the purchase-money of the old schoolhouse and premises." "Names of parties to whom conveyance of old schoolhouse and premises is to be made will be forwarded to solicitors." "Draft conveyance before the Board and settled." "Conveyance to the Town Commissioners of all school premises at Carlow executed. The £300 lodged. Receipt produced." "Docket of transfer of £223 3s 10d of Government New Threeper Cent. Stock to the Board (for this school)."

2491. What was the date of that investment?—12th October, 1857.

2492. What has been done with the dividends on that stock?—The Rev. Mr. Scott, the then master, rented a house and carried on the school until after the passing of the Church Act, when he emigrated. We paid him the dividends as long as he carried on the school. The moment he ceased to do so the dividends were allowed to accumulate, and have been added to the stock.

2493. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Did the Board consult any local valuator?—I think so. I am sure the master was carefully done.

2494. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—I find on that subject this minute, dated 22nd February, 1858:—

"Read a letter from Ven. Archbishop Stopped, forwarding resolutions of certain clergymen, stating their opinion that the ruins of the old schoolhouse in Carlow ought not to have been sold by this Board, and calling attention to the unsatisfactory state of the diocesan school."

Was any action taken on that?—No. That was merely a complaint with respect to what had been done.

2495. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are there any school buildings at Waterford?—No.

2496. MR. O'SHEA.—This is the minute of your Board, of 25th October, 1863:—

"Read letter from St. Thomas Larceny, forwarding a most generously signed appeal from Waterford, praying the establishment of a diocesan school in Waterford; and also

Arch. B. B. B.
Mr. Vincent
R. Fleming.

April 8, 1878.
 To Thomas & Fleming.

A letter from the Lord Bishop of Cuthbert to His Excellency in support of the prayer of the memorial, and it appearing that, although a warrant had been returned for closing Waterford and Limerick schools into one, to be held at Dungarvey, none ever had been established: It was ordered that the Secretary do take the necessary steps to have a diocesan school established at Waterford, in compliance with prayer of the memorialists, &c., by preparing warrants, &c., &c."

Was a school then established there?—Yes; and Mr. William Valentine was appointed master in 1863.

2696. LORD JERVIS PRIDGES.—How long did he continue as master?—He commenced in 1871, and received £1,585 6s. 4d.

2697. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—When he was appointed was he provided with a schoolhouse?—No, he rented a house for himself.

2698. Is there a diocesan school-house in Cork?—I think not. Dr. O'Brien was the diocesan schoolmaster. He had the school in his own private house, and he commenced and compounded.

2699. Is there a diocesan school at Mallow?—Clayton diocesan school used to be held there, but there was no house, and the diocesan school has ceased to exist.

2700. In the report of the Commissioners, in 1857, the estimated annual value of the school-house is returned as £1. What did that represent?—It must have represented something, but I do not know what.

2701. Was there any school-house for Roman diocesan school?—None. That school has also ceased to exist.

2702. LORD JERVIS PRIDGES.—We have been informed that a private school has been founded in what was formerly the diocesan schoolhouse?—If there is any school there now it must be of a private nature.

2703. Have your Board, during the four years Mr. Gregg has been in possession of the old diocesan schoolhouse at Limerick, received returns from him from time to time?—No. I think not.

2704. Have you ever forwarded the papers with a view to getting returns?—No. I think that Dr. Kyle was under the impression that it became a private school.

2705. The minutes of your Board show that Mr. Gregg was put into possession as a caretaker for two years, upon conditions that he should put the house into repair. Were any steps taken to ascertain whether or not he had fulfilled that condition?—None that I am aware of.

2706. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is the Board aware that there are premises at Limerick which belong to them, or has the matter passed out of their recollection?—I do not suppose that individual members of the Board remember anything about it.

2707. Mr. O'SHAGHERNESS.—What was the general course pursued when no answer was made to your applications for returns?—We sent duplicate forms.

2708. If the duplicate forms were also unanswered, what course would the Commissioners pursue?—In one or two instances Dr. Kyle wrote to the agent as patron, to try to ascertain something about the school, but I do not know that it ended in anything more.

2709. There was no regular course of directing inquiries in the locality?—I think not.

2710. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What is the actual balance in the funds or in the bank to the credit of the Navan and Ballyryan endowment?—There is £5,498 7s. 2d. Government New Three per Cent Stock to the general credit, and £903 11s. 2d. like stock to the joint credit of the Commissioners and the G. S. and W. Railway Company in the books of the Court of Chancery. The railway took portion of the estate for the purposes of its line, and the stock I have mentioned represents the purchase money.

2711. What is the amount of cash belonging to those schools?—On the 31st December, 1878, there was a cash balance in favour of Navan school, of £723 8s. 6d., and in favour of Ballyryan school, of £1,068 10s. 3d.

2712. How long has that money been accumulating, and lying idle?—It accumulated from year to year.

2713. LORD JERVIS PRIDGES.—When was your last investment in Government Stock?—In May, 1874, we invested £3,380 1s. 6d. in the purchase of £3,259 3s. 6d. stock for this account. We used not to separate the accounts of the two schools at that time, but we have done so since.

2714. When was Mr. White appointed head master of Navan school?—The former master, Mr. Logg, died in 1873, and Mr. White was appointed immediately afterwards.

2715. On what occasions was the condition of the Navan and Ballyryan schools taken into consideration by the Commissioners?—Occasionally a master would ask that repairs should be done. Whenever anything of that kind, connected with the school, occurred it came before the Board, and everything was done by their orders.

2716. The Board have been, for a period of forty years, paying about £500 a year to masters for Navan and Ballyryan, although the number of pupils seldom exceeded ten, and was often as low as three or four. Can you show, from the minutes, that the Board has ever taken the educational condition of those schools into their particular consideration, or taken any steps to remedy their condition, or to make the endowments more fruitful?—I think there was a visitation at one of those schools a very long time ago.

2717. In the report of 1857 those schools were most particularly mentioned. Did the Board take any steps after the publication of that report?—I do not think that any steps were taken.

2718. Navan has not been a successful school?—As far as I have heard there are not the elements there to make it a good school. Day boys are not to be had in the town.

2719. The population of Navan is principally Catholic?—I believe so.

2720. The master is a member of the Church of Ireland?—The present master is a clergyman, but his predecessor was a layman.

2721. Did your Board hold any formal meeting, to consider the report of the Commission of 1857?—I think not.

2722. Had that report any effect?—It had. We began a new system of keeping the accounts, and improved very much.

2723. Were there any differences in the attendance of the Commissioners?—I do not think there was.

2724. Do CURRIE.—With regard to Armagh school I find this passage in the report of 1857:—

"In the Armagh Royal school it appears to us that the pupils have a right to require a course of education suited to prepare them for the universities; but as we see no reason to believe that the foundation was intended for the sole benefit of boys proceeding to college, we are also of opinion that it ought to furnish a complete English and commercial education suited to prepare boys of the middle class for civil and mercantile employment, even though they should refuse to receive any special instruction."

Mr. Moses Morgan stated that he made suggestions to the Commissioners, to have separate schools for these persons, and that he received no reply. Is there any record on the minutes of such a communication having been received from Mr. Morgan?—No, I think not.

2725. In reference to a question you were asked as to the Commissioners present on 27th September, 1877, have you been able to ascertain from the entry in the rough minute book whether there was a third Commissioner present on that day?—I find that Mr. Berkeley was present.

2726. Is the survey of the Armagh estate, which you have protracted to-day, the one made on the suggestion of Mr. Wynn?—Precisely.

2727. Was that kept in the office of the Commissioners?—The agent kept it, but when the Commis-donors asked about usage I wrote to the agent desiring him to send it up forthwith.

2722. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERBON.—As your evidence has now concluded, I think it but right to say that under the exceedingly difficult circumstances in which you have been placed since Dr. Kyle's death, and though called upon suddenly, you have given your evidence with great clearness and intelligence, and have given no information in the least willing way. With regard to your own particular department—in the business of the office—namely, the keeping of the books and accounts, everything appears to be excellently well done. I have seldom seen a better set of account books.

2723. Mr. Fleming.—I am extremely grateful to your lordship.

SEVENTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9, 1879; 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Board Room of the Governors of ERASMUS SMITH'S SCHOOLS, No. 40, Hancourt-street, Dublin.

Present.—The EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; LORD JUSTICE FITZGERBON; RICHARD O'SHEA, M.P.; and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CREED MEREDITH, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE VICE-CHANCELLOR OF IRELAND, the TREASURER of the Board of ERASMUS SMITH'S SCHOOLS, examined.

The Rt. Hon.
the Vice-Chancellor.

2724. CHAIRMAN.—My Vice-Chancellor, when does your connection with the ERASMUS SMITH'S SCHOOLS date from?—If you permit me, I would first wish to say a very few words—stating my reasons for offering myself voluntarily for examination to-day. I do so, in the first place, as treasurer and chairman of this Board, and, therefore, I feel it my duty to afford the fullest information possible to the Commissioners as to the entire working of our system. I am particularly anxious to have an opportunity of doing so, in order to vindicate the Governors from the very grave charges of neglect in the management of their schools, brought against them in the speech of the noble lord in moving for the Commission. I am able to show that those charges are not sustained in point of fact. I am quite certain they were made from misconception. The facts stated in the report of the Commissioners of 1858 were taken up by Lord Randolph Churchill, and he asserted that the same state of facts continued. There is no statement in that report complaining of the bad attendance of the Board of these schools, and the books will show that before 1858 there was scarcely any occasion for complaint on that head. There was always a good attendance. The chief head of complaint that was considered to exist against us was this—that the accounts were kept according to a bad system, and that the same practice that prevailed as to the accounts, as mentioned in the report of 1858, continued down to the present time. These matters of fact can be entirely disproved, and I am certain that Lord Randolph Churchill, when his mind is satisfied, will say that those grounds of complaint against our body do not exist. With this statement I shall give you every information on the subject, either in the form of answers to questions, or if you wish I can state, under different heads, the information I can give, and then answer any questions the Commissioners think fit to ask.

2725. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERBON.—We have taken up the different endowments, and beginning from 1267 have ascertained the constitution of each body, the amount of teaching given, and the management of the estates. We will gladly hear any statement you make—I was appointed a governor of this corporation on the 19th January, 1876, and treasurer and consequently ex-officio chairman on the 10th May, 1872.

2726. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Whom did you succeed?—Mr. John Barlow, who had been for twenty-two years treasurer, and for thirty years a governor of the school. I may be allowed, perhaps, to state that from the time I was appointed treasurer, on the 10th May, 1872, I was absent, only on one occasion, from any meeting of the Board, and that was in the summer vacation of 1875.

2727. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERBON.—What is the composition of the Board?—There are under the charter seven ex-officio members, namely, the Lord Bishop, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Lord Chancellor, the Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, the Chief Baron, and the Provost of Trinity College; there are also twenty-nine elected or co-opted governors, namely, the Earl of Erme, the Earl of Longford, the Earl of Meath, the Earl of Courtenay, myself, the Bishop of Kildare, the Bishop of Meath, and the Bishop of Tuam, the Rev. William Coarneyham Greene, the Dean of St. Patrick's, the Archbishop of Dublin, Lord O'Neill, Sir Arthur Guinness, Bart., M.P., Sir Edward B. Boscawen, Bart., William Digges La Touche, Edward Pease-father, q.c., Colonel Taylor, M.P., Anthony Lodge, William Boscawen, Ion Vane Hamilton, M.P., Henry M. Pilkington, q.c., Thomas Vesey Nugent, the Hon. Judge Harrison, J. C. Stronge, Rev. H. R. Poole, &c., Lord Monck, the Earl of Belmore, the Dean of the Chapel Royal, and the Earl of Rosse. The Earl of Rosse was elected on the 26th April, 1878.

2728. What is your quorum?—Five.

2729. How are the co-opted members elected?—By the vote of the entire Board.

2730. Is there any limitation as regards religious denominations?—No. At present two of the ex-officio members are Roman Catholics. The ex-officio governors, with the exception of the Provost, do not attend very regularly. I had in a return of the attendances for the last five years. [Vide appendix No. 5.] There is another body called the standing committee. The members of it are elected by the governors from amongst themselves. All the administrative duties are, in fact, performed by that committee. They send everything to the Board that appears to them of such importance as to require the opinion of the entire Board upon it, but the actual practical work is almost entirely done by the standing committee. I am, as treasurer of the Board, chairman of all committees. In July, 1873, we tried the experiment of appointing a number of sub-committees. We appointed a schools committee, a finance committee, and a legal committee; and we classified the business that was usually transacted by the standing committee under those three heads. During the period these sub-committees were in existence there was scarcely ever any necessity for holding a meeting of the standing committee, but the meetings of the Board were, of course, held as usual. However, we found that the system did not work well; it multiplied meetings without any good object being attained; and accordingly, in the month of April, 1874, we returned to the old system of a standing committee, which has since that time been the sole committee.

2731. What are the stated meetings of the Board and of the committee?—There are two meetings of the Board fixed by our Charter for the first Tuesday in May, and the first Tuesday in November. As chairman, I arrange, at the beginning of each year, the dates at which the other ordinary meetings of the Board, and the ordinary meetings of the standing committee shall take place. In addition, whenever any occasion arise, I have the power, as treasurer, of summoning special meetings of either the Board or committee, and practically we held a great many meetings, both of the Board and of the committee, besides those that appear on our ordinary meetings. We have cards printed and distributed to the governors showing the meetings fixed. On the card for the present year there were six meetings appointed. In addition we have had several other meetings already. There are also fourteen meetings of the standing committee appointed at the beginning of the year.

2733. Have you any quorum of the standing committee?—There is none prescribed, but practically we require three. I have done the business with only one other governor, but that happened on very rare occasions.

2734. What is your general average attendance?—We had during the last five years forty-five meetings of the Board, and ninety-three meetings of the standing committee. The average attendance at the Board exceeded nine, the average attendance at the standing committee exceeded five. Ours are not mere formal meetings; they generally last for from two hours and a half to four hours. Ten of our body are very regular attenders. I, myself, out of the 138 meetings held in the last five years, attended 127 times; the Provost attended 35 times; Rev. Mr. O'Brien, 87; the Dean of St. Patrick's, 69; the Archbishop of Dublin, 76; Mr. La Touche, 58; Mr. Pennefather, 73; Mr. Pilkington, 66; Mr. Nugent, 57; Mr. Stange, 39; and Rev. Mr. Poole, who was only elected in 1874, attended 48 times.

2735. The substantial attendance is that of those who are not ex-officio governors?—Certainly.

2736. In general, as I understand, the standing committee have to do the routine business of the Board, both with regard to the estates and to the schools?—Quite so.

2737. CHAIRMAN.—What particular matters have to be referred to the Board?—All elections, both of schoolmasters and free pupils; any matters in the management of the estates that require particular consideration; and applications for new schools, or proposals to discontinue existing ones.

2738. LORD B. CROMWELL.—And matters of finance?—Matters of finance are chiefly transacted by the standing committee, by whom all payments are made.

2739. If any new outlay were contemplated, would that be referred to the Board?—Any serious outlay would, but anything that did not come to a large amount would be done by the standing committee. The seal of the Board cannot be utilized except at a meeting of the Board itself. The seal is kept in a box of which I have the key, and no person can be had to it, except I am present. It is never produced except at a meeting of the Board at which five members are present. All the appointments of schoolmasters, even to the English schools, are under the seal of the governors.

2740. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—How business, in any instance during the past five years, been left undone for want of a quorum, either of the Board or of the standing committee?—Never once. During the five years we never failed in having a quorum, and since I was appointed treasurer there was only one meeting of the Board summoned, at which there was not a quorum present. That was either in August or September, 1873—a meeting from which I was myself absent, being out of town.

2741. Have you found, in the working of your Board, any practical inconvenience you can mention?—None whatever.

2742. Has the system of the standing committee in addition to the main Board been a matter of long standing, or an improvement introduced lately?—There has always been the standing committee.

2743. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any power, vested in the Board, of reversing the decisions of the standing committee?—The arrangement of business is that reports are laid on the table at the meetings of the Board. It is part of the regulations under which the standing committee is now acting, that all their acts are subject to review of the Board; but no case has arisen in which any decision of the Committee has been altered by the Board. Now as to the keeping of our accounts. For the last twenty years our accounts have been kept by a perfect system of double entry. We have a very competent accountant, at a salary of £150 a year, who is thoroughly conversant with book-keeping, and keeps our accounts according to the most approved system—by journal and ledger and a regular system of double entry. The registrar is our principal executive officer.

2744. LORD B. CROMWELL.—Who is the registrar?—Mr. Brennan.

2745. Is he a salaried officer of the Board?—He is, Mr. Brennan has £200 a year as registrar, in addition to the position of bursar of the Harcourt-street School, for which he gets £50 a year.

2746. What is the name of the accountant?—Mr. Barnes.

2747. Is any money of the Board receivable by the registrar?—All our rents are lodged directly by the agent to our account in the Bank of Ireland, and all dividends on our stock are received by the officers at the Bank, and placed to the credit of our account there. Payments made by cheques on the Bank at Ireland agreed by three of the governors. The registrar receives all the cheques, but he receives no money from the Board except for payment of sums under £5. Every payment exceeding £5 is made directly to the party to whom it is payable, so that the petty cash disbursements are all for which money actually goes through the Registrar's hands. A check that I have myself introduced in this—Very large payments are made quarterly for the salaries, &c., at English schools through the country, amounting to about £100 a quarter. Formerly a cheque for the amount of those payments was handed to the registrar, who drew the money and paid them himself. I introduced a different system: I have a pay sheet made out for the standing committee before each quarterly day of payment, and a cheque is drawn, in favour of the secretary of the Bank of Ireland, for the amount of the bank post-bills required for payment of all the schoolmasters' salaries. Those post-bills are made out in the Bank of Ireland, each in favour of the person to whom the money is to be paid, paid for by our cheques to the bank, and handed to the registrar. These are sent by post, and the registrar receives the transmission by the receipts of the various parties, which he is bound to produce. Of all petty cash payments he is bound to keep an account in his books and vouch before the auditors. His cash-book, through which every transaction passes, is handed by him to the accountant, who makes the entries in his day-book and posts from that, into the journal and ledger, to the different accounts.

2748. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—The Comptroller in 1857, reported—

"It appeared in evidence before us that no balance-sheet had been prepared from the time the ledger was opened in November, 1843, until the period of your inquiry, and that the ledger contained some erroneous accounts;—for instance, a stock account, a general account of income and expenditure, an account of each estate belonging to the governors, an account for each agent of the Board, an account for the law agent, an account of expenditures for law costs, and an account balance."

And further:—

"A sum of £1,811, according from the sale of lands of the charity to railway companies, and the dividends arising on that fund had been audited for seven years from the accounts?"

That is entirely reversed, and there has been a separate account in the ledger for twenty years, since the attention of the governors was called to the matter by that commission. The money, which represents land taken by railway companies or other bodies, constitutes capital and is kept to a separate account. We have a large amount, about £15,000 stock, the produce of savings, which comes under a different heading, and is available for any extraordinary purpose. We have only one agent, and his accounts are brought in every year on the 30th April up to the preceding September and November gale days. It is part of the registrar's duty to examine and vouch each account, and to note anything that appears in the way of extraordinary items, or any variance between that and the previous account, and, at the first opportunity, to bring such matters before the standing committee. The standing committee investigate all such cases. The accounts are checked with the vouchers sent up by the agent, who is held to stand at the vouching.

2749 Who is the agent of the Board?—Mr. Walter How.

2750. Is he paid by a per centage?—He is paid four per cent. on the amount received.

2751. Where does he reside?—On our estate at New Dublin, county Limerick, but he collects the rents on all our estates.

2752. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Has he a sub-agent?—There is a halfpenny paid on each estate, but there is no sub-agent. The agent is responsible directly to us for everything.

2753. CHAIRMAN.—What is paid to the halfpenny?—The halfpenny on one of the estates has £10 10s a year; another halfpenny has £25 a year, on the southern estate. On the western estate the halfpenny's salary is £15 a year. As soon as the accounts have all come in, and been vouched, they are submitted annually to audit.

2754. LORD JUSTICE FERGUSON.—Explain your system of audit?—Our audit is done for us every year without fee or reward by two of the Governors, Mr. William Digges La Touche and Mr. Thomas Vesey Nugent. Mr. La Touche was for a long time managing partner of La Touche's Bank, and he is now managing director of the Munster Bank in Dublin. Mr. Nugent is one of the Governors of the Bank of Ireland, and is a gentleman of large experience in matters of accounts.

2755. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How long have they been auditing the accounts?—Certainly since 1873. They were audited before that, but these two gentlemen have been auditing since the month of April, 1873.

2756. LORD JUSTICE FERGUSON.—With respect to audit the report of the Commission in 1857 states:—

"Mr. Thorp, to whom the keeping of the accounts was then intrusted for a number of years, said that he did not understand at all what was meant by double-entry book-keeping, and admitted that he did not know what assets were. The only check upon the accounts then kept, was the audit of Mr. Backus. Chairman and Treasurer, his audit was confined to vouching the actual receipts and expenditures of money, but did not regard the form in which the accounts were kept, or test whether they were in conformity with the charter and the rules of the Government. Thus, the last page of the registrar's account, which Mr. Backus signed as auditor, contained a column of figures referring to the folios of a ledger that was only half posted, and that had never been balanced. Mr. Backus stated that he never thought that these figures in the column referred to the vouchers; and when informed that they referred to folios in the ledger, he said:—'I know nothing of it, as I never looked into the ledger in my life. I am not an accountant, I am not a book-keeper, and, if I did look at it, I fancy I would not be much wiser than I am at present. I am glad to have the opportunity of saying I never looked into a page of it.'"

Was it far then, that the present audit has been substituted?—Our accountant informs me that the accounts continued to be audited by Mr. Backus as long as he remained in office, but from the time I became treasurer in 1872 there has been a regular audit of the accounts by two of the Governors. One of the recommendations of the Commission in 1858 was that the Treasurer should not be Auditor. I have never audited the accounts. I do, however, look into the ledger to see that the accountant is doing his duty. The accounts are left to the uncontrolled audit of Mr. La Touche and Mr. Nugent, who are selected as the two best men we can get for the office.

2757. Do they audit the agent's accounts, as well as the general accounts of the Board?—They do.

2758. Where there is any large error, what steps have been taken?—do you overcharge the agent?—We have never overcharged the agent. We call upon him to explain why such an amount of error has occurred, and if he is not able to give a satisfactory explanation he is censured; but we have had, practically, scarcely any serious loss in the way of ineffectual returns. Our lands are, I think, let very low. Mr. Nugent, one of our auditors, is auditor of the accounts of large landed estates, in England and Ireland, for some of our nobility and others, who avail themselves of his services. The result of the audit is, of course, embodied in a balance sheet. We have, for the last few years, printed our balance sheet each year, showing the exact state of income and expenditure, and also of our stock, in the largest sense of the word, and a copy of that is sent to every Governor. In the last balance sheet, which is the one up to the 1st May, 1878, an improvement has been introduced. It shows, in the outer column, the corresponding amounts of the preceding balance-sheet.

2759. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What is the gross income of the Erasmus Smith's Estates from land?—The gross income from the Southern estates (Lincoln and Tipperary) for the year 1878 was £3,335 18s 11d.

2760. That was returned on the occasion of Mr. Marland's report in 1857 at £3,642 6s 1s.—There has been an increase of nearly £300. The gross rental of the Western estates—which include under that head, though, perhaps, not quite correctly, Galway, King's County, Sligo, and Wicklow—is £3,830 3s 3d.

2761. That was returned on the former occasion at £3,413 14s 6d.—The increase there is over £400. There is a small estate in Dublin, consisting of three houses and a plot of ground in Great Brunswick-street, the gross rental of which is £47 8s 10d.

2762. LORD JUSTICE FERGUSON.—Have you any other landed property except these three estates?—None.

2763. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What was the amount of income, arising from these estates, actually lodged in bank, to the credit of the Governors, for the year 1878?—The amount lodged to our credit on foot of the Southern estates was £3,383 8s 6d, which was rather under the average income, as there were some tenants in arrears. From the western estates the lodgements amounted to £3,868 2s 3d, which was also rather under the average; it had been £3,526 the year before. From the Dublin property in 1878 £56 8s 10d was received, which included an arrear from the former year.

2764. What income does the Erasmus Smith's foundation derive from invested money?—The dividends received for the year 1878 were £474 1s 5d. We had £15,507 18s 4d of Government stock to the general stock account, including £3,310, which represents the lands taken by railway companies, &c., and we had to the account of Lord Redensale's charity £573 6s 1d.

2765. What does that consist of?—It consisted of treasurer's poundage. Formerly the treasurer was entitled to receive poundage. During the time that Lord Redensale was treasurer of the Corporation he made a payment of his poundage to the governors, and it has since stood to the credit of Lord Redensale's charity fund.

the 1st May, 1878!—At that date there was a balance against us, overhead, of £768 1s. 1d.
2767. In the report of Lord Power's commission, 1870, I find this passage:—

"The income of the trust is now about £9,000 a year, with a large accumulation in the bank amounting to about £90,000."

Was that statement made after an inquiry such as is being held at present?—It was before I was connected with the Board, and I am not able to say as a matter of fact.

2768. How was the amount of stock reduced?—We will be able to show, when we come to the foundation of the Harcourt-street school, that we were obliged to sell out stock. There was also another transaction which I will mention at a later portion of my statement.

2769. What was the total expenditure by the government on grammar schools in 1878?—£3,482 11s. 2d., which was nearly double the ordinary amount, because £1,982 of that sum was spent on repairs.

2770. In your account for the year ending 1st May, 1875, I find grammar schools charged at £1,721 6s. 8d., in 1876, grammar schools (including £1,300 for repairs at Galway) £3,429 13s. 5d.; in 1877, £3,363 12s. 7d. (including repairs £955 3s. 7d., and £1,399 2s.), and in the last year £1,462 11s. 2d., including £1,982 2s. 7d. for repairs. So that it would appear that, out of four years, there has been an exceptional expenditure in three—I will give you full details of a very large expenditure when we come to the head of "grammar schools." I prepared a financial statement shortly after I was appointed treasurer, which was laid before the Board on the 26th December, 1873. That stated, I think accurately, the account of our finances, both receipts and expenditure, at that period. It showed the rental of the southern estates to be, in round numbers, £6,500 a year, and the outgoings to be about £1,350, leaving a net rental of £5,150; and the rental of the western estates to be, in round numbers, £3,450, and the outgoings to be about £550, leaving a net rental of £2,900, and also rents of some premises in Dublin about £50 a year. These sums amount to £8,500. The improvement of the drainage is nearly complete, and there will be, in consequence, in less than two years, an addition to the above of over £200 a year. Then there are the dividends on Government Stock £469 a year, showing a present net income of £9,069 a year. The estimated yearly expenditures are as follows:—For grammar schools (including exhibitions), £1,530, for English schools (exclusive of extraordinary repairs), £4,500; and for our Lonsdale-street or Great Brunswick-street school, £70.

2771. Is that an English school, or a grammar school?—It is rather of the class of English. We put it down as an English school.

2772. CHAIRMAN.—Is it a commercial school?—Yes, with the benefit of a higher education. The £70 a year has been since increased; for we find it a most useful school. The Inspector's salary for the inspection of our English schools is £300 a year. Payments to Trinity College and Christ's Hospital (charity payments) £650 a year; maintaining twenty boys in the King's Hospital, also a charity payment, about £750 a year; and establishment charges, including rent, taxes, salaries, pension to a late regent, and incidentals, about £700 a year, making the total of our disbursements about £8,210 a year. In addition, there has been heretofore an annual yearly grant in aid of the Harcourt-street school, at that time about £400 a year, but considerably larger now. That made the total expenditure at that time about £8,610.

2773. The expenditure on the grammar schools, in 1877, was returned as about £950 a year. At what date did the government begin to increase their expenditure on those schools?—I cannot exactly say. It was before I became a member of the Board. I can, however, mention two items. Supplemental exhibitions were established on 12th June, 1861 (in addition to the statutory exhibitions), amounting to £110 a year; and there was also £500 a year added, as an additional allowance for assistant masters at Ennis school, in the year 1872.

2774. Within recent years the government have laid out large sums on repairs?—Yes, there has been a great change made in that respect. The total expenditure on the grammar schools, in the year ending 1 May, 1864, was £1,572; out of which £140 was for repairs. The expenditure in 1865 was £1,890, of which £497 was for repairs. The expenditure in 1866 was £1,310; no repairs. In 1867, £1,466; no repairs. In 1868, £1,463, of which £180 was for repairs. In 1869, £1,482, of which £230 was for repairs. In 1870, £1,590, of which £30 was for repairs. In 1871, £1,357; no repairs. In 1872, £1,326, of which £12 was for repairs. In 1873, £1,736, of which £303 was for repairs. In 1874, £2,249, of which £909 was for repairs. In 1875, £1,721, of which £478 was for repairs. In 1876, £3,429, of which £1,943 was for repairs. In 1877, £3,363, of which £3,003 was for repairs. In 1878, £3,482, of which £1,982 was for repairs. And in 1879, up to the present date, the amount for repairs has been £960 4s. 10d.

2775. LEAD JUSTICE FIRST CLERK.—Looking to the report of 1857, the largest sum of money expended on the grammar schools, in any half-year from 1846 to 1855, did not come up to £600, and in one half-year it was as low as £318. What was the nature of the change that has so largely increased the former expenditure?—The first thing that called our attention to this question, since I was treasurer, was in reference to the Tipperary grammar school, at the time that Mr. Matthews was the head master. An expenditure had been made which it was supposed had put it into a sufficient state of repair at that time. Our attention, however, was called to its state on the 26th October, 1874. An inquiry into the general condition of the school, including repairs, was ordered by the government. The then head master had allowed the school to go down in every respect, the buildings that had been recently repaired to get out of repair, and the numbers in the school had gone down. Immediately after the inquiry was ordered the head master died, and it became useless to prosecute it. In the month of January, 1875, a new head master (Mr. Lindsay) was elected, and has since continued, and brought the school up to be the most prosperous of all our grammar schools. When he was elected, the school being in a very defective state of repair, it became necessary for the government to put it into repair. The former agreement with all our head masters was, that each bound himself to keep the school premises in thorough and substantial repair at his own expense. Mr. Matthews died in such circumstances that, even if the Board deemed it, there would have been no chance of enforcing that agreement against his representatives, and they were, therefore, bound out of the funds at their disposal to put the school into proper condition for Mr. Lindsay. At the same time the state of the Galway school, which was a very fine building erected in 1813 at a cost of upwards of £8,000, both structurally and educationally was also brought before us, and it was found to have gone down altogether. The premises were completely out of repair, and the school most inefficient in every respect. We felt bound to take immediate steps to remedy that, we did so by, in fact, calling for the resignation of the then head master, who was allowed a retiring pension of £100 a year, in consideration of the very long service that he had rendered to the Board. We then sent down our architect, who reported to us what particular repairs were necessary. We have a regular architect for the inspection of our schools, Mr. Syme, attached to the Bank of Ireland, and for many years architect to this body. We directed that his specifications for the repairs necessary at Tipperary and Galway should be carried out.

2776. CHAIRMAN.—How were those repairs carried out?—Contracts were advertised for, subject to the approval of the architect. Tenders were sent in, and the tender which the Board considered the most advisable was accepted, and the works were executed under the supervision of the architect to the Board. Prior to that, in 1872 or the beginning of 1873, Mr. Whitty, our head master at Drogheda, complained to us that the premises, which were very old, and were not built for a school, were getting into very great disrepair, and he submitted to us that the repairs necessary were of a class that he could not reasonably be expected to make himself—that, in fact, the state of the premises was due more to wear and tear of building, and to deterioration from age, than to actual culpable disrepair. I myself went down, with our architect, and inspected the premises. They were very fine buildings, but old; the principal house particularly old. I then submitted a proposition to the Board that we should put the premises into repair. The architect made a report on the state of the buildings. Contracts were advertised for and tenders sent in. We began in 1873, and the premises were put into good tenable repair, but a great many things would be of importance as improvements to the buildings that were not carried out at that time. In 1873 the expenditure in Drogheda school was £463; in 1874, £227; and in 1875, £478. Then I took up the case of Tipperary school, the expenditure on which, in 1874, was £261, and that sum, put it into a state of repair that has kept it in very fair order ever since. But I may state, for fear of misapprehension, that, two or three years before that, there had been a large expenditure by the Board, upon repairs at Tipperary school.

1777. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Was that in 1869?—I think it was in 1868 or 1869, indeed I believe there was some expenditure in 1865.

1778. There appears, from the balance sheets, to have been a large expenditure on Galway school in 1876 and 1877?—Yes; £1,900 in 1876, and £1,830 in 1877. There was also an expenditure of £118 upon Tipperary school in 1876, and in 1877 £655 was expended upon Ennis school.

1779. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUESON.—Was that expenditure, so very large in the last five or six years, made under a new system?—It was.

1780. What was the change?—We found that although there was a great deal at Galway school that might fairly be attributed to negligence on the part of the master, it would be impossible to get any payment from him. It occurred to the Board that the system we were proceeding on was a mistake; that it was bad policy to leave the repairs of valuable buildings like those in the hands of the schoolmasters, and that it would be a great deal better to relieve the schoolmasters from all liability of heavy repairs. We have put the four schools into thorough repair, and we relieved the head masters from expenditure on the schools to that extent; but still we thought it desirable that they should be made responsible to us for the internal repairs, which would be more within their own control, and much less heavy in amount than the external repairs. Accordingly, we altered the form of our agreements for any head masters appointed since that time, and instead of putting them under a covenant to keep the premises in repair, we have agreed to keep them in repair at our own cost, and we require that the masters shall be responsible for the internal repairs and for any actual mischief done. In addition to that we decided upon having periodical inspections by our architect.

1781. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—This change of policy took place in 1874?—I think practically we began to do the work about 1874; but there was a report made by us, on the subject, on the 31st December, 1877, which, I think, led to the formal alteration that was made.

1782. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUESON.—Had there been any periodical inspection, or ascertainment by the Board, of the condition of the buildings, until your attention was called to the state they were in?—Not that I am aware of.

1783. Then your attention, in fact, with these schools down to the period of the change was that you paid the master a salary, and did not interfere further?—We looked to the repairs.

1784. That is to say, you made him liable for them?—Yes; but, in point of fact, that turned out perfectly unworkable.

1785. And further, the buildings had got into disrepair without your knowing it?—There is no doubt of that. Practically we changed that from the time I told you of, taking the expenditure into our own hands. But the first time there was any formal resolution passed as to the change of the relations between us and the head masters was on 13th July, 1877, when, by resolution of the Board, the treasurer was requested to confer with Mr. Symes, the architect, as to the possibility of the Governors taking on themselves the keeping of the grammar schools in repair, and the probable annual cost, and to report on the subject to the Governors. Accordingly, the following report made by me to the Governors was adopted on the 21st December, 1877:—

"I beg to report that in pursuance of the resolution of the Governors of the 13th day of July, 1877, I have communicated with their Architect, Mr. Symes, as to the suggestions made to them as to the keeping in repair of these grammar schools. He is of opinion, as stated in his letter to me of 20th September, 1877, that the cost of painting all the external wood and iron work with two coats of paint would be, for each school, from £50 to £70, and the cost of colouring the outside walls would be, for each school, except Drogheda, from £20 to £25, the cost of Drogheda being only about £5; he considers that it would be sufficient to have these works done once in every four years. I should, however, recommend that the painting should be done once in every three years. Mr. Symes is of opinion that a sum of £5 a year, or an average, over the expense of keeping in repair the roof and stairways of each school. It thus appears that an annual expenditure of such would keep all these schools in sufficient external repair, except in the event of serious injury by storms or other casualties.

"At present it is supposed that the head masters are the persons to have these repairs executed at their own expense, but the experience of the last few years has been simply sufficient to show that their obligation to do so is practically null. The neglect of the head masters of Galway and Ennis schools especially, to have the necessary repairs executed, has involved the Governors in very heavy expense. There has been, until very lately, no inspection of these schools for any purpose, and the recently established system of inspection, though very valuable, can as to the condition of the school buildings, cannot be expected to equal that of a professional architect.

"I beg, therefore, to recommend the Governors to take upon themselves the repair of the exterior of all their school buildings, except the making good of damage to the glass of the windows, and any injuries occasioned by the negligence or neglect of the master, for all of which the head masters should still be held liable. The head masters should be relieved from their present liability to make other external repairs, but they should be held strictly to the performance of their duty to keep the interior of the school buildings in thorough repair and cleanliness, renewing the paper and paint whenever necessary.

"I also recommend a careful inspection of the school buildings by the architect of the Governors, once at least in every three years, at a fixed payment for such inspection; he should on each occasion make a complete report in writing on the state of repair of each school, showing the condition of the premises, the repairs, if any, required, and the estimated cost of having such repairs effected.

"I have no doubt that the action thus recommended would save the Governors from the necessity of expending much larger sums to make good injuries occasioned by neglect, and would secure the proper preservation of their school buildings at a comparatively small cost.

"(Signed) HENRY RYAN CHATTERJEE, Treasurer.

1786. Have you that system in operation now?—We have.

1787. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What is the expenditure on the English schools?—The average expenditure for everything, in 1872, was about £4,640 a year; at present it is only £3,537.

The Rt. Hon.
the Vice-Chancellor.

2788. How many English schools are there now supported by the Board?—106.

2789. Have you, since 1857, founded any new English schools?—Very few.

2790. Have you discontinued any?—Several.

2791. What is the cost of inspection of the English schools?—We pay £200 a year to one inspector who pays his own travelling expenses.

2792. Does he employ assistants?—No; he does the whole work himself; Mr. Rudkin is the inspector.

2793. CHAIRMAN.—Does he inspect the grammar schools?—No.

2794. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is he a layman?—Yes. He has himself had a great deal of experience in teaching.

2795. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—He was master of a school in Baginbun?—He was. He was appointed as inspector many years ago.

2796. Did he succeed Mr. Hamilton?—I believe he did. Mr. Hamilton was, as you will observe by the report of 1858, both register and inspector, and the Commissioners strongly and properly objected to that system being continued. Accordingly, immediately afterwards, the two situations were separated. Mr. Thorpe was appointed register, and Mr. Rudkin inspector of English schools. In the month of December, 1872, I found a heavy arrear of rents remaining uncollected. We were continually obliged to overdraw our bank account, even before any of those heavy repairs came on. Accordingly the Board were obliged on the 20th December, 1872, to authorize the sale of £5,000 of their Government Stock to meet current expenses. At that time Mr. Arthur Barlow was the solicitor to the governors.

2797. Was he any relation to Mr. Barlow, the former chairman?—His brother. Mr. Barlow could not be got to attend to the business of the Board. At that time there was a very faulty system, also pointed out by the Commissioners, of the solicitor to the Board having a good deal to do with the management of the affairs, and a great deal of the arrears were occasioned by parties, whose names were returned by the agent to Mr. Barlow as being heavily in arrear and able to pay, not having been made pay. Everything that could possibly be done was done by us to induce Mr. Barlow to get in those arrears. However, he failed to do so. It is right to say that Mr. Barlow is now dead. He was a gentleman of very advanced age, and there was not the slightest ground for imputing anything of want of integrity to him—it was merely unwillingness to work. It was necessary then to make a change; and accordingly on the 25th May, 1873, Mr. Barlow was changed, and Mr. Mansell was appointed our solicitor in his place, a gentleman who, I believe, is one of the first solicitors in Ireland. Mr. Mansell set to work at once, and in a very short time he collected almost the entire arrear, that was due to us. The result was that we were enabled within a year, namely, on the 15th December, 1873, to replace out of the money so collected £1,700 of the stock we had sold out the December preceding. When we appointed Mr. Mansell he was confined strictly and exclusively to the transaction of the legal business of the Board. He never attends the Board, except for the purpose of transacting legal business whenever there is any. He takes no part whatever in the management of the affairs of the Board. It was the practice under the former system that the solicitor should be present at all the meetings of the Board, and take part in their transactions. Another matter that was very properly commented on by the Commissioners of 1858, was the system of taxation of costs. At that time Mr. Fetherston was solicitor, and there was practically no taxation of costs. The Commissioners of 1858 state that—

“No one attended at the taxation of his bills of costs, extending over so many years, except on the last occasion, when he selected, as the solicitor to represent the governors in the taxation of his costs against them, his son

The system we now pursue is this:—When the bill of costs comes in, it is submitted to Mr. De Malynes, solicitor to the Bank of Ireland, a totally independent solicitor, who goes through the items and reduces them, if they require reduction, and they are very moderate for the work done.

2798. Are they paid annually?—Sometimes Mr. Mansell does not send in his bill within the year, but occasionally he is paid annually.

2799. You do not pay your solicitor a salary?—No, only his bills of costs.

2800. I see there is no charge for law costs in 1878, and in 1877 there are these items—Law costs, £75 5s 3d., representatives of Arthur Barlow, £544 12s 6d. In 1876 I do not find any charge, and in 1875 the amount was £147 15s 10d.—There was a payment, under those accounts were made out, of a bill of costs, in the course of the present year, £186.

2801. That would give an average of £100 a year, excluding the payments to the representatives of Mr. Barlow?—I don't say much that our costs will average that amount.

2802. Does that include the costs of any proceedings for the recovery of rents?—Yes, to this extent:—a case of any importance is referred by the agent to Mr. Mansell for the recovery of rent in arrears, and if it is at all within the civil bill jurisdiction, Mr. Mansell, who does not practice at Roden, as in the habit of commencing with some local solicitor, he pays him his costs, and charges them to us. Sometimes Mr. Hore himself employs a local solicitor, in trivial cases, and charges the costs in the accounts of expenditure on foot of the costs, but the amounts charged are very small. We have had very few proceedings against tenants. The real expenses we have been at were in getting things into order.

2803. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Can you tell me whether the Governors contemplate—they have not been able to do it yet—any expenditure under one of the trusts of the charter—namely, if any considerable surplus should accrue, the money to be expended in beautifying the school-houses?—We have no such view. The way we render “beautifying” is by keeping them in good and decent repair.

2804. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—What system have you with regard to any expenditure of the same kind on the English schools?—The arrangement, as to the English schools, is that half of all repairs must be paid for from local contributions.

2805. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How long has that arrangement been in force?—It prevailed before my time. The practice is this: first of all our Inspector, Mr. Rudkin, has to report, at every half-yearly inspection, on the state of repair of the school buildings. Then the situation of the Superintendent, who is generally the clergyman of the parish, is called to any observations on the state of repair, and very frequently they originate applications themselves, by asking us will we contribute. We direct them to prepare an estimate, which they forward to us. If the proposed repairs are proper structural ones, we then inform them, according to the regular practice of the Board, that we will pay half, provided the other half be paid by local contributions. They get the repairs done, and send up a report that they have been executed, and a receipt showing that half the cost has been provided from local sources, and thereupon we remit them the other half. In that way the schools are kept in repair. Then, at the next inspection, the repairs so executed are examined by Mr. Rudkin, and, if any fault is to be found, he informs us.

2806. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Then the check you have in the interest of the Superintendent in seeing that the local half is economically spent?—Quite so.

2807. You have no professional inspection of those buildings?—No. There was no one sufficiently independent to warrant employing an architect, but the Registrar and I go through the reports to see whether the repairs required are such as ought to be properly paid for, in part, by us. That applies to all our English schools, except one or two. I was one matter which has taken place in the present year that I wish to mention to the Commissioners. The Barlow Board of Galway required a site for a new cemetery, and, under their powers of selling land compulsorily, they took a portion of our land, the payment for which amounted to £389 3s. 1d. On the 14th January, 1879, this resolution was passed:—

"The Standing Committee at their meeting on the 24th January, 1879, reported to the Governors that in consequence of the heavy expenditure of the last two years on substantial repairs and permanent improvements of the grammar schools, all of which have been paid for out of income, the Governors have been obliged frequently to advance their bank account during the last two years to a large amount, and they recommended, for the purpose of meeting this in future, that a sum of £1,000 stock be now sold, and the proceeds placed to the credit of their bank account."

That was a mere temporary advance, because when the sale was paid by the agent that was cleared off, but it is an unpleasant thing to be under a compulsion to the bank, so I recommended to sell out £1,000 stock. That came before the Board, and at the same time the £500 and odd was paid in for the Galway cemetery, and the resolution proceeded:—

"Resolved—That instead of selling the stock, as recommended by the report, 1869 3s. 1d., lodged to the credit of the Governors as the purchase money of the site of the cemetery of Galway, be applied to the current expenses, and as much of the same sum per cent. at the price of this day, as is equivalent to the same sum, be carried to the credit of lands, railway purchases, &c."

We just moved selling out and buying in, and transferred it from the general account of our savings in stock, to the credit of the account for lands purchased by railways. We were obliged to draw upon the accumulations of former years to pay off part of the expenditure on the grammar schools which I have mentioned. That was the only sum taken out of the capital for any such purpose.

1808. You appear to have had in 1878 a considerable amount in your favour, because I see "bank interest on deposit receipt £59 10s. 1d. 1—Yes; at the same time that Mr. Maxwell collected the arrears, which enabled us to replace the £1,700, there was a considerable additional sum amounting to £2,000, received, and knowing the expenditure for the grammar schools was going on, instead of investing that sum in stock, we put it on deposit receipts, which we cashed from time to time, and applied the money in payment for the repairs.

1809. Have you had large balances lying to your current account, for any length of time, in the bank?—Practically not, latterly only as much as kept us going.

1810. You have invested the rest?—Yes.

1811. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Your working balance seems to be about £500?—Sometimes we are at the wrong side of the account, but on our last Committee day we had £600.

1812. Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—You never had £1,000 lying idle for the whole year?—Never. The only sum that could be lying in bank was the £1,000 we put on deposit receipt, and got interest on.

1813. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—What is meant by the Treasurer's poundage account?—The treasurer was originally entitled to a poundage on the costs. That was discontinued by Lord Rosedale; and in the last charter the right of the treasurer to receive poundage was put on end to, and it was provided that the poundage then should be kept to a separate account, and should be free funds, at the disposal of the Board, for any purpose they thought desirable. One of the recommendations of the Commission in 1858 was that the payment of the treasurer's fees should be restored, and that the treasurer should be, in point of fact, a paid officer of the Board. In my opinion no necessity whatever exists for anything of the kind. The treasurer of this Board, with the assistance of the book-keeper and register, ought to be ready to do the duties without any remuneration.

1814. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Is your treasurer elected annually?—Yes, nominally; under the terms of the charter. The next officer is our register. When I came into office Mr. Thorpe was register, but he had been for some time previously in such a state of health that he was quite incompetent, and I had decided to accept the trusteeship of the Board, until Mr. Barlow had undertaken to see that a new register should be appointed. I could not have gone through the work of the Board with Mr. Thorpe. He was pensioned off at £100 a year. I was allowed by the Board, very generously, to appoint my own nominee to the office, and I appointed the late Mr. George Clatterton, a relative of my own, and though he was so, I may say he was one of the most efficient officers a public body could have. He was appointed at a salary of £180 a year, when the additional duty was thrown upon the register of settling the agent's accounts, a task formerly performed and charged for by the auditor, the Board added £30 to the register's salary, which brought it up to £210, and subsequently in January, 1875, it was raised to £260 a year, at which it has since continued. The register gives security to the amount of £500. Mr. Clatterton died in February, 1877, and in March, 1877, Mr. Brown, our present register, was appointed, giving like security.

1815. What had been his occupation before?—He was a Rugby man, and is a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, and a magistrate, and was called to the Bar. I was very fortunate in securing his services.

1816. Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—Is his whole time given to the Board?—His whole time. I certainly think, that for a gentleman of position, our register's salary of £260 a year is not extravagant.

1817. He has also a baronetship for which he receives £50 a year?—Yes.

1818. Has he any other emolument?—None whatever.

1819. Has he rooms?—He does not reside in the house, but he has one of the unused bed-rooms, at the top of the house, whenever he requires a room in town. Mr. Brown, our accountant, has £150 a year, and I should be glad to express my opinion of him—he is a most efficient and valuable officer, and most willing and attentive.

1820. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Who was accountant when you were elected chairman?—Mr. Barnes had been for many years before I was elected.

1821. Did Mr. Barnes succeed Mr. Thorpe?—There was one other book-keeper in the interval; he either died or resigned.

1822. Have you any other staff for the management of the Corporation?—None; the register does secretary's business, in fact he is the general officer, and does the whole working business of the schools, being immediately in connection with the treasurer.

1823. Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—What other member of the staff is there?—Mr. Radkin is inspector of the English schools at £500 a year. For that he is bound to make two inspections of every English school annually. One of these inspections is made at a stated time, and the other at an uncertain time. There are printed forms which have been in use for a long time, and are very well prepared. (Pvide appendix No. 4.) He makes a separate return for every school each half-year.

1824. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—When was Mr. Radkin first appointed?—In 1869.

1825. Do you think that his appointment was consequent on the report of the former Commission?—I am sure it was.

1826. Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—Who inspects the grammar schools?—By a resolution of the Board on the 16th April, 1875, an inspector of grammar schools was appointed at a salary of £100 a year and his travelling expenses. For that sum he is bound to inspect twice a year the Drogheda, Galway, Tipperary, and Bunna schools, and also this school at Harcourt-street. He is bound, also, to examine at the annual examinations in Harcourt-street, for which, before his appointment, a fee of £10 10s. was paid to one of the fellows of Trinity College. In this inspection we were equally fortunate. We appointed the Rev. Thomas Gray, F.R.C.D., as our permanent inspector. He makes an inspection of each school at a stated period, and also an inspection as a surprise at an uncertain period similar to the other inspection. His reports to us are most valuable and interesting. He examines every boy in the school, he also examines the buildings and reports in detail, in a most valuable way, everything connected with the school. I think that is one of the greatest improvements we have made.

2827. There was nothing of that kind before!—Nothing; and that was one of the matters most directly commented upon by the Commission of 1858.

2828. Mr. O'BRIEN.—His inspection is so minute that he discovered a leak in a boiler, on one occasion!—That was at Bunna. It cost us something to repair it, but if it had not been discovered in time it might have cost us a good deal more.

2829. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—How does he hold his office?—During pleasure; all our officers hold in the same way. If putting with them, we would deal with them on fair terms, whatever be the power we have. None are corporate officers, but merely nominees of the Governors. We agreed to pay Mr. Symes, I think, about £10 for his inspection.

2830. I understood you to say that he now inspects the grammar schools only?—He inspects them every three years. The first inspection under the new statute is to take place this year.

2831. He is paid a fee for that?—Yes. He sent us in a statement of what his charges would be. We had him before the committee, and thought he was very moderate indeed.

2832. CHAIRMAN.—Is he to be paid on the percentage system?—No. I think two or three grammar schools he is actually engaged, and I think about £10 10s. for each inspection.

2833. The inspection of each school?—Yes. That would be one in three years. He wanted himself to have an inspection once in four years. He is always most reasonable in his demands.

2834. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—I presume he gets his perquisite when works are executed under his direction?—Decidedly.

2835. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What other pensions do you pay?—We pay a pension to a Mr. Killeen, who is a retired master of our Galway school. We have in two or three instances given pensions to masters of our English schools, after very long and meritorious service. One man from Ardigham School whom we pensioned off on £30 a year was a most excellent master; he had been upwards of forty years in our employment.

2836. What is the amount of the pension that Mr. Killeen gets?—£50 a year.

2837. Was he head master of Galway?—No; second master.

2838. Dr. CURRY.—There was also a pension to the head master of Galway School?—Yes, Mr. Halliwell, who retired on £160 a year, was pensioned off in my own time.

2839. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—After how many years service would the board allow a pension?—We have had so very few instances that we have no rule; it is a matter of discretion. In a case of great merit, if a man had worn himself out in our service, we would feel it right to grant a pension.

2840. What is the tenure of office of the masters of the grammar schools?—During pleasure. We have a printed agreement which was prepared by counsel.

2841. Were any special directions given to Mr. Gray, when he was appointed inspector?—There is the minute of the meeting held on the 16th March, 1877:—

"Read a letter from Mr. Gray, dated 16th March, 1877, suggesting to the governors the examination, in the Holy Scriptures, of the boys who attend the grammar schools. Ordered.—That Mr. Gray be directed, at each inspection, to hold an examination in the Holy Scriptures and Church Catechism; but as boys shall be required to attend such examination whose parents or guardians shall object thereto."

That was the only special direction given to Mr. Gray, as to his inspections.

2842. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—You have diverged to that extent from the original charter?—We have. Whether authorized or not, I do not know.

2843. Are your minutes read at each meeting?—Yes, read and signed. I have the rough book before me, with one column for the business to be done, and another for the rulings of the Board. I take down all in my own handwriting. It is more like a detailed than an ordinary minute book. That is transmitted by the Registrar, external, and put into order on the fair book for next meeting. The minutes are there read, and, if not objected to, I sign them, having checked them, whilst being read, with my own rough book.

2844. How is the attendance reckoned?—I take down myself, at the head of the minute of each meeting, the names of the members attending.

2845. At the end of the year do you make out a table of the attendance?—We have not done so.

2846. CHAIRMAN.—Does not each governor lose his place at the Board, if he does not attend once in two years?—That rule has never been acted upon. It has seemed to us whether it would not be desirable to act upon it, because some have never attended at all, but when we have a working body I do not think it necessary to put the rule in force. The general body is too unwieldy, and we get on better, and do more work, with a small number than a large one.

2847. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—How many members of the Board would have fallen under the disqualification?—There are two each at any one, and I think three bishops and another noble lord, and at least one M.C. Of course the rule could not apply to the ex-officio members.

2848. How do you classify your schools?—I divide them into three classes—first, the grammar schools, secondly, the Harcourt-street and Great Brunswick street schools, which I put together, and thirdly, the English schools.

2849. What statutable exhibitions have you?—There are a number of exhibitions under our charter, or rather under the Act of George I., subsequent to the charter—twenty of £8 a year, Irish; and fifteen of £6 a year, Irish. The exhibitions are free of rent for their rooms in colleges. The first charge that was made by the Governors was to increase these exhibitions to £12 a year and £10 a year respectively, but in 1861 a new arrangement was come to, and it was then provided that the increased exhibitions of £12 and £10 should cease, and that, in their stead, the original twenty exhibitions of £8, and fifteen of £6, should be resumed. It was then further provided:—

"That, for the benefit of the four grammar schools of the foundation of Edmund Smith, at Drogheda, Sligo, Tipperary, and Galway, and the pupils thereof, and for the encouragement of learning therein, one of the said exhibitions of £8 to be (supplanted at £8 Irish) shall be increased to supplemental each year, by an additional grant of £12 12s. 6d., to the sum of £20; and one other of the said exhibitions shall be increased or supplemented, by an additional grant of £12 12s. 6d., to the sum of £20."

Those supplemental exhibitions are not attached to any particular grammar school, but are open for competition to first year's students of Trinity College, who have been for three years previous to their entrance, pupils of any of our four grammar schools. The examination for those exhibitions takes place with the examinations for the Royal Scholarship. We have a return of the examination of all the boys together, and our boys on many occasions held higher places, in comparison with the boys coming from the royal schools.

2830. Under your printed regulations you offer an additional £10, making the amount to £50, if any of your boys come out first of the entire class. Did any succeed in getting that?—I do not recollect that ever happening.

2831. You have a standard of positive merit, I presume?—Yes.

2832. Have you had these supplemented exhibitions filled every year?—No. I have known occasions where we refused to give the entire £50, in consequence of the highest answers not having sufficient absolute merit. The examination, over which we have no control, is conducted entirely by the authorities of Trinity College. Returns are sent to us showing the numbering of all the boys who have gone in for all the exhibitions, including ours. We generally refer the returns to two or three of our Board who have particular acquaintance with those matters, such as Archdeacon Lee, Mr. Poole, and some others of the fellows of College, whom we consider the best qualified persons to judge. They report to us as to whether they think there has been sufficient merit to give the exhibitions. There is a provision in our rules that, unless there is absolute merit considered sufficient, no boy should be entitled to receive an exhibition.

2833. Is the £50 paid only for the one year?—It is tenable for five years.

2834. What is done with the remainder of the statutory exhibitions?—Formerly they were given away by the Board of Trinity College as they pleased.

2835. To any of the students?—To any student of sufficient merit in college. In fact the rule was this:—We had the first right, and if we did not exercise it, Trinity College disposed of them. Lately we have been looking into the matter more closely, to see if there are any boys from our schools who had failed to get the supplemented exhibitions, but had answered fairly in the examination, and if there are we send an order to the Board of Trinity College to award statutory exhibitions to them.

2836. Do you know the standing of the students to whom they are given, or is it left entirely in the hands of the Board?—The regulation in the Act is that they shall go—

“To the like number of poor scholars, members, or students of Trinity College, impotently, and they shall be otherwise provided for, removed, or take the degree of Master of Arts in College, or be of standing to take such Master of Arts degree.”

They are tenable up to that time.

2837. Does your Board exercise any control in selecting them, on the ground of poverty?—No; I never knew that to be gone into, we left the entire disposal of them to the Board of Trinity College.

2838. As far as you know they give them to students who have been distinguished at the degree examination?—Mr. Poole tells me they are usually given after the degree examination.

2839. The Commissioners of 1857 remarked about these exhibitions—

“The small college exhibitions of £10 a year, which are reserved for the competitors of pupils from the King’s and the grammar schools are quite too inadequate in amount to offer the necessary stimulus to exertion. A judicious suggestion has been made to diminish the number of exhibitions, and increase the pecuniary value of each.”

Do the governors agree to that statement?—In the first part of it we quite agree—that they are inadequate, and to remedy that inadequacy, the supplementary exhibitions were created, in 1851, soon after that report.

2840. In fact having no power to reduce and consolidate the number, as the next best thing you augmented the value of two each year?—Yes.

2842. CHAIRMAN.—Are the subjects of examination for those exhibitions fixed entirely by the college authorities?—Yes, subject to our approval; for instance we had a recommendation from them, a few months since, about a change proposed in the course for Royal scholarships, and we adopted the recommendation of the Board of Trinity College, to allow the same change to be made for our schools, as was about to be made for the Royal schools.

2843. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Did it ever occur to the Government to frand any exhibitions at the Queen’s University?—Never.

2844. Dr. CROFT.—Are those exhibitions usually won, or do they frequently remain vacant for want of sufficient answering?—I do not remember that occurring except upon one or two occasions. The boys of Harrow school, for a long time, carried off the majority of the exhibitions; but lately that has not been so.

2845. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—This is one of the regulations for the Royal scholarships in Trinity College—

“A Royal scholarship becomes forfeited by the holder of it incurring any heavy collegiate expense, such as public education, or participation, failing to proceed regularly with his class, or failing to obtain in any year other one honour of the first rank or two honours of the second rank.”

Are there any similar regulations in reference to your exhibitions?—The same rule verbatim attention to the Harrow school’s exhibitions.

2846. What are your arrangements at present with reference to payments for the grammar schools?—The Head-Master gets a salary of £108 a year, and an allowance of £100 a year for Assistant Masters. For a time an additional £100 a year for Assistant Masters was allowed to Harrow school, but that was discontinued on the appointment of Mr. Whitty to that school, on Mr. Palmer’s resignation in June, 1877.

2847. Mr. O’BRIEN.—Why was it disallowed then?—We thought that the question was a general one, and we did not see any reason why Harrow should have an advantage over the other schools.

2848. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What is the salary of the Head-Master of Harrow-street school?—£409 a year, and a capitation fee on every boy over 150. That is the regulation under which we are now advertising. The present Head-Master has resigned, on appointment to a living in England. The original arrangement with him was the same, and a capitation fee for every boy over 200.

2849. Are the exhibitions open to the boys from the Harrow-street school?—In February, 1878, a resolution was passed by the Board to throw open all the exhibitions for competition, to the boys in the Harrow-street school, as well as to those in the four grammar schools. We were anxious to encourage this school, which is a very important one, and we thought that it would be a stimulus to it, to throw open the exhibitions; but we resolved that as that would be taking away, to a certain extent, from the existing rights of the grammar schools, we should fund an additional exhibition of £20 a year, thrown into the common lot, and competed for by all together. That was objected to by the Head-Masters of the grammar schools. In a memorial, which sets out some very important considerations in reference to the grammar schools, and which was presented to us in February, 1878, it was pointed out that the £20 exhibition was not equivalent for the admission of this school to competition with the other schools—that the Harrow-street school had more advantages than the others—that a very large staff of Assistant Masters was provided—that it was in Dublin, where the best possible students could be procured, and that, in point of fact, it was undesirable to open those schools to competition with it. They then gave very strong reasons for that, and suggested some remedies. At the same time the Masters of the grammar schools complained very much of the inadequacy of payments to themselves, and the allowance for their Assistant

Masters. That was submitted to me, and I made this report upon it:—

"The Treasurer begs leave to submit to the Governors the following observations upon the memorial of the Head-Masters of their grammar schools in relation to the recent action of the Board admitting the Harcourt-street school to participate in the competition for the Governor's exhibition in Trinity College. The memorial deserves careful consideration, not only as expressing the unanimous opinion of the Head-Masters, but also because of the reasons on which that opinion is based. The Governors will probably be disposed to think that the disadvantages to the grammar schools apprehended to result from the statute in question are over-estimated, as the number of pupils to whom the competition for exhibitions has been thus thrown open, is not nearly so large as the Head-Masters seem to consider. The number of pupils educated in the Harcourt-street school has not hitherto been at all so great as to equal those of all the grammar schools together, and, what is still more important, the great majority of them are, and are likely to be, educated for commercial pursuits, and would therefore not become competitors for the exhibitions. But still there is much force in the representations of the memorial, which hangs before the Governors some considerations which did not occur to their minds, or at least were not fully considered, when the statute was made.

"The motives which induced the Governors to grant this additional advantage to their Harcourt-street school were not induced by any view to increase the numbers attending it, by encouraging the withdrawal of any pupils from their grammar schools, nor does there appear to be good reason to anticipate that the change will produce any such effect. Their object was to improve, as far as in their power, the education of that institution, and it is only necessary to refer to the memorial of the Head-Masters to see that the Governors had good grounds for hoping that this result will be thereby effected." They also considered that the competition for exhibition between the pupils of that school and their grammar schools would have a wholesome effect upon all. They were of course aware that the increased competition might probably diminish the number of those pupils destined by the grammar schools, and they were not indisposed to provide against this loss. The Governors cannot admit that educational benefits granted by them to any of their schools, provided that nothing is thereby taken from the benefits already enjoyed by the latter. In the present instance, however, there has been a subtraction from the benefits enjoyed by the grammar schools which the Governors will probably not object to make up for. There appear to be two modes of effecting this, namely, by increasing the number of supplemental exhibitions, leaving the competition open to all the schools; or by founding separate supplemental exhibitions for the Harcourt-street school, and excluding its pupils from competing for the present supplemental exhibitions. Looking to the general interests of education the former has advantages, as it preserves the enlarged field of candidates, and the wholesome competition between the grammar schools and Harcourt-street school, and thus tends to raise the standard of proficiency in all. Looking to the personal interests of the Head-Masters, and the existing privileges of the grammar schools, the latter has advantages, for it would leave masters as regards these schools just as before the statute, and thus remove all cause of complaint.

"To accomplish the former, it would be desirable to supplement, in addition to the present, two of the Statutory Exhibitions to £60, and two to £35, at an annual cost of £100 to £60, giving one of each alternately each year, to be completed for, and held upon the same terms as at present.

"To accomplish the latter, it would be desirable to appropriate four Statutory Exhibitions, and supplement them, say to £30 each including the statutory amount, one to be given each year if desired; to be completed for at the general examination for exhibitions, by boys, who for the three years preceding their entering the university, have been educated altogether at the Harcourt-street school, and subject to this proviso, that in no year shall any of such exhibitions be granted without the special order of the Governors, unless the answering of the highest candidate from Harcourt-street school shall be equal to that of the second highest candidate from the Grammar Schools. The same conditions should attach to the holding of these exhibitions as apply to the present exhibitions. The cost of this whole set of these exhibitions are still would be £90 per year.

"The statements in the Memorial as to the insufficiency of the gross allowed for, or rather towards the salaries of the assistant masters, are certainly well founded, and as appears to the Treasurer, who has been favoured with a private communication on the subject from the Inspector of Grammar Schools, that nothing would tend so much to promote the efficiency of these schools as to increase such allowances. In the present state of the Governor's finances, caused by their recent very large outlay on the balance of the Grammar Schools, the Governors cannot recommend any increased expenditure, but if, and when, there shall be any funds available for the purpose, we would commend this portion of the Memorial to the favourable consideration of the Board. The founding of school exhibitions may also be worthy of consideration, if funds should become available for the purpose.

"The Treasurer cannot regard in the same light the application for an increase of the salaries of the Head-Masters. In fact the small salary of £100 a year has not for a long period of years brought more than an insignificant portion of their emoluments. They derive the principal portion of their incomes from the payments of their pupils, with the rates of which the Governors have not interfered. As the cost of living has increased, so have the charges by the head masters; and if the rates now charged are insufficient, it will be for the head masters, if they should deem it to be for their interest to do so, to submit to the Governors a proposition to increase them. It appears to the Treasurer that it is for the interest of the Governor Schools that the head masters should remain dependent for the main portion of their emoluments on the payments of their pupils. The subject of the repairs of the school buildings having been referred to in the Memorial, the Governors will bear in mind that they have by a recent arrangement relieved the head masters from liability to all external repairs, a change which must substantially diminish their expenses."

The result was, that we rescinded the resolution about the exhibitions, and allowed those for the grammar schools to remain exactly as they were under the rules of 1861, and we have supplemented five of our statutory exhibitions by the amounts required to bring them up to £30 a year, one to be given each year to the best answerer from Harcourt-street school, at the ordinary exhibition examination, and to be taxable for five years.

2870. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Has there been any competition as yet for those exhibitions?—Not yet.

2871. Do you desire to say anything as to assistant masters?—I think that a great defect in our arrangement as to our grammar schools, is the insufficient allowance for assistant masters. I think if we use our way to increasing the allowance it will be a very great advantage indeed.

2872. MR. O'BRAUGHEN.—You have power to do so?—We have.

2873. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Do you exercise any control at all in the selecting of under masters for the grammar schools?—We do not make any direct appointment of under masters; we leave the whole arrangement to the head masters, and give them the allowance. All we require is that they shall vouch the payment, to the extent of the £100 a year that we allow, by the receipt of the assistant master for so much cash.

2874. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any superannuation allowance to the head master?—There is as to the subject. There is one case, which I have already mentioned, of the Galway head master, Mr. Halliwell, retiring on £100 a year, and also a case in Galway where an under retired, and still gets £60 a year.

2875. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—I find this passage in the report of the Commission of 1867:—

"When Mr. Barlow (the chairman and treasurer) was examined as to the complaints with respect to the grammar schools, he stated that the Governors left the grammar schools to the control of the masters themselves, assuming that they ought to have a greater interest in their welfare than the Governors had."

Would that opinion be laid down by the Governors at the present day?—It certainly is not my opinion, and I am sure it would not be the opinion of the Board. I can give you a practical proof of that. The report of Mr. Gray, the inspector of our grammar schools, is submitted each half year as it comes in, first to the standing committee, and afterwards to the Board of Governors; and, if anything occurs in the way of delinquency in the answering of the boys, the registrar is directed to communicate at once with the head master, and to call his attention to the complaint by the inspector of the answering in the particular subject. We also exercise control over the changes made in the grammar schools, none of which can be altered without the sanction of the Government.

2876. For boarders?—Either for boarders or day boys.

2877. As to free scholars. The original charter founded three schools—Drogheda, Galway, and Tipperary—and provided that they should be free schools for twenty poor children, to be named by the founder or the Governors, and for all the children of the tenants of Errisna Smith, without limitation. Do the present Governors consider themselves bound to nominate twenty free pupils to each of the grammar schools?—We do not. The practice has not been to consider that compulsion, but practically we have never rejected any boy who applied for admission to any of the grammar schools as a free pupil, and who was thought as eligible candidate. The number has never come up, in any recollection, to twenty in any of our grammar schools, but the reason of that has been that there have not been so many applicants. Practically there has been a great change in educational matters in Ireland since that charter was passed, and great facilities have been afforded to the poor, for obtaining education that is more suitable to them than the education provided in our grammar schools. We have acted upon two rules in the admission of free pupils to those schools. The first is, not to admit any boy the circumstances of whose parents do not require that he should receive a free education. We feel bound to be particular in that respect, lest we should be taking away too much from the endowments of the head master, who should be receiving fees. Secondly, we do not admit boys, as free pupils, who from their very baneful class of life, or from other circumstances, would not be suitable to associate with the ordinary pupils educated at our schools. We must exercise a discretion in each particular case.

2878. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIBSON.—Have you any Roman Catholic pupils attending those schools?—Yes; we have a number at the different schools. When Mr. Flynn was recently appointed to Ennis school he took there, with him, three Roman Catholic boarders.

2879. Where was he appointed from?—From Dandel. I think he took thirty or forty boarders. The distinctions his boys have obtained are quite surprising. We are very fortunate in having secured his services.

2880. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do the Governors nominate the free boys in all cases, or leave it to the head master?—The head master has no opinion in the matter. He is bound to take the free pupils that we direct him to take. That is part of his agreement.

2881. What steps should a parent take who wanted his son educated first?—He should fill up a printed form, provided for the purpose, and send it in to the head master, who would transmit it to us.

2882. Is there any question of religion entered into?—None whatever. We are very glad indeed if Roman Catholic boys come to us.

2883. Do these regulations apply to Harcourt-street?—No; it is quite on a different footing.

2884. How many free pupils are being educated, at the expense of the foundation, in the four grammar schools?—There are seven free boys in Drogheda, only two in Tipperary, eight in Galway, and five in Ennis.

2885. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Of what religion are these boys?—In Drogheda there is one Dissenter and six of the Irish Church; in Tipperary there is one of the Irish Church and one Roman Catholic; in Galway there are five of the Irish Church, two are Dissenters, and one is a Roman Catholic; and in Ennis there are four of the Irish Church and one is a Roman Catholic.

2886. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Your charter required that the masters and scholars should be approved of by the bishop of the diocese, and sign the first two canons of the United Church. Is that provision still in force?—I am not aware that the approval of the bishop is ever sought for now, but the masters and assistant masters must be members of the United Church of England and Ireland.

2887. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIBSON.—I presume if the bishop made any objection to a master you would take it into consideration?—Certainly. The canons are signed, but we had a question as to what were to be considered the first two canons.

2888. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Another provision of the charter was, that money was to be expended, if a surplus occurred, for binding out a number of children as apprentices to Protestant masters, and for clothing poor children in the grammar schools?—That has never been done in modern times.

2889. There was an important rule of the foundation, by which the masters were bound to entertain the scholars on each Lord's Day in the cathedral of Archbishop Under?—Yes.

2890. What has been the policy of the Board, since your connexion with it, on the question of religious instruction?—The practice has been very much that of non-interference. We put into the hands of the masters the rules to be observed, including the following:—

"On every day all pupils who have attained a suitable proficiency, shall read to the master, or assistant, a portion in the Bible; the master or assistant shall then examine the pupils as to their understanding what they have read, and explain the sense in plain language. The pupils, whose parents are members of the Church, shall be instructed in the doctrines of the Church of England (Archbishop Under's or Bishop Dixon's catechism is recommended), and as other catechisms shall be taught or admitted into the school."

These regulations are given to every head master, and should be kept by him. The Government have been aware that Roman Catholic boys attend the schools, and they have never in any way interfered with the discretion of the head masters in regard to these boys, nor should they compel the head masters to carry out that regulation in reference to those boys whose parents would, on conscientious grounds, object to their children being present at religious instruction of which they disapprove; and to that extent perhaps we have not acted up to the full requirements of our charter.

2891. The policy of the Board has been that no steps of them shall make the endorsement absolutely exclusive endorsement?—Certainly.

2892. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The first regulation is with regard to reading a portion of the Holy Scriptures?—Yes.

2893. That, as I understand, applies to all the pupils?—It does; but the catechism instruction is limited to the Church of Ireland pupils.

2894. Then all the pupils who have attained a suitable proficiency, should read to the master a portion of the Bible, whether they be Protestant or Catholic?—Yes.

2895. And the master should then examine the pupil, whether Protestant or Catholic, as to his understanding what he had read, and explain the sense in plain language?—Yes; that regulation exists, but we have never asked any questions of the head master on the subject.

2896. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIBSON.—The Board are quite aware Erasmus Smith devoted his property for exclusive education, and repeated the directions through his son, that it should be exclusive?—Yes.

2897. You give an exclusive education to all Protestants who come to the schools, and, if Roman Catholics come, you take no notice of the fact?—That is our course.

2898. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you ever suggested to the masters that they should not apply the first rule, compelling all boys to read a portion of the Bible and listen to an explanation of it, to the Roman Catholic boys?—We never gave any direction to that effect, because we did not think, that under the charter, we would be justified in doing so; but we have reason to believe the head masters do not insist on the rule being carried out, with respect to children whose parents object to it. In reference to the duty of the Inspector of the grammar schools we passed a resolution of the 18th March, 1877, by which it was ordered—

“That Mr. Gray be directed, at each inspection, to hold an examination in the Holy Scriptures and Church Catechism; but no boy shall be required to attend such examination, whose parents or guardians shall object thereto.”

2892. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are bound under the charter to make the rule, and you have given a very liberal construction to the enforcement of it.—We have not looked to the enforcement of it.

2893. Lord R. Chelmsford.—A great many Roman Catholics have been educated under the Erasmus Smith's foundation.—Several have, for instance the present Chief Justice Morris was educated at the grammar school in Galway. We are very glad to hear of boys of any religious denomination coming to our schools, and taking advantage of them; and we never do anything to interfere with them.

2901. Mr. O'Sullivan.—Has your Board, to your knowledge, since 1857, made any application to Parliament, with a view to extending your powers, or enabling you to alter the conditions under which education is carried on?—No, we made no application.

2902. Therefore it was impossible for you to make any alteration in your first rule, with regard to the reading of the Scriptures in your schools?—Yes.

2903. The provisions with regard to religious instruction, which I find in the original grant from Erasmus Smith, made in the year 1657, run as follows:—

“It was the intention of all parties that the said school-masters, to be installed as aforesaid, should be obliged twice a day to pray with such scholars as he or they shall respectively teach, and that he or they shall punish each of the said scholars as from time to time shall be absent from the said service of prayer without his coming, and that the said schoolmaster shall likewise catechise his or their said scholars every week on some week day in the Catechism published and set forth by the Assembly of Divines.”

I suppose you are aware that the Catechism of the Assembly of Divines was the Catechism prepared, during the troubles between the King and the Parliament, by the Presbyterian Divines at Westminster?—It may be so.

2904. That is what Hunt says:—

“In 1648 the Parliament had summoned an Assembly to Westminster, consisting of 121 divines and 39 laymen, selected in that party for piety and learning. By their advice sermons were made in the Thirty-nine Articles, or in the metaphysical doctrines of the Church; and what was of greater importance, the Liturgy was entirely abolished, and in its stead a new directory for worship was established, by which, suitable to the spirit of the Puritans, the steepest liberty both in praying and preaching was bestowed to the popular teachers. By the schism language and covenant disunity was sown in destructive of all true piety.”

It would appear then that Mr. Erasmus Smith was a person who adhered to the policy of the Assembly of Divines at Westminster. I now turn to the charter, which dates from about the twenty-second year of Charles II. Erasmus Smith prayed the King to grant him a charter, giving his trustees and successors the possession of a Corporation, and enabling them to hold those lands for the purpose of carrying on schools?—Yes.

2905. The King, in giving the charter, introduced certain provisions on the subject of religion. One was that the rules, statutes, and ordinances to be made by Erasmus Smith or the Governors, should be subject to this proviso, that they should not be—

“Repugnant to one prerogative royal nor contrary to the laws and statutes of our said realm of Ireland, nor to any ecclesiastical canons or constitutions of the Church of Ireland, which then shall be in force.”

Thus it appears, that when Erasmus Smith got this charter, he got it on condition that he should give up the provision, that the religious teaching of the Assembly of Divines should be followed in his schools. Does it not appear from this, that nothing contrary to the ecclesiastical canons or constitutions of the Church of Ireland, and therefore, nothing contained in the decrees of the Assembly of Divines contrary to those ecclesiastical canons should be introduced into his rules?—All I can say is, that we work this instruction as if it was in connection with the late Established Church.

2906. You have read the report of the Commissioners of 1857, on the subject of these schools?—I have.

2907. They say in their report:—

“That the Erasmus Smith foundation, though originating in the intentions of a private individual, might, nevertheless, from the repeated interpositions of the Legislature and the Crown, be considered as a public institution.”

Do you agree with that suggestion?—I am not prepared to give an opinion upon that.

2908. Would it, in your opinion, be desirable that power should be given to dispense with the necessity for Erasmus Catholic boys reading the Scriptures in your schools?—I do not think we want any more power, than we at present possess, on the subject, because, practically, that is what has been done, and I have never, during the entire of my connection with the schools, known any serious questions arise, or any difference of opinion exist with regard to religious instruction. We are perfectly aware the schools were established by Erasmus Smith, in connection with the Established Church of the country, now represented by the Irish Church; but we have been most anxious not to interpose unnecessarily, as to the religious instruction of the children, further than to see that the Protestant children are instructed, according to the directions of the founder, in the Church Catechism; and that all those who will receive it are instructed in the Holy Scriptures. We have never interfered with the action of any master as to the religious instruction of the school, and we should be very glad to have persons of different religions educated in our schools, and educated together. That can be done by seeing that the requirements are fulfilled in reference to the children of our own persuasion, in connection with whom Erasmus Smith appears to have instituted these schools, and at the same time allowing an objection, in the nature of a conscience clause, to the children who differ from our religious views. I think it would be a great advantage to the boys of this country if they could be educated together.

2909. That is a matter of opinion?—I am giving you my opinion.

2910. Chairman.—Mr. Gray in his report on the Tipperary School says:—

“Scriptural instruction from seven to eight o'clock, every morning; prayers are read immediately after, and then all go to breakfast. At nine o'clock the regular school work commences. Consequently no day boys are present at the Scripture classes?”

The same rules as to the teaching of the Scriptures, and the Church Catechism, adopted at Tipperary, are also adopted at all the other schools.

2911. Mr. O'Sullivan.—You believe the regulation, obliging every boy to read the Scriptures, is not enforced?—I believe not.

2912. Is there any society against its being enforced?—None whatever; except that, if the parent of any Roman Catholic boy, attending one of the grammar schools complained, that he was coerced to attend instruction in the Scriptures or Church Catechism, I have not the slightest doubt we would disapprove of such action on the part of the master.

2913. Have you inquired, since you joined the Board, whether this rule has been enforced?—There has been no actual inquiry about it, but we are quite aware that it has not been enforced.

2914. And the non-enforcement act with your approval?—It has not met with our approval.

2915. The charter provides that the rules, ordinances, and statutes to be made for the government of the schools, must not be contrary to any of the ecclesiastical orders or constitutions of the Church of Ireland which shall be in force. I suppose you recognise the fact that the Church of Ireland, as understood by that, has ceased to have legal existence?—Yes.

2916. That being so, how do the Governors, at the present day, construe the provision that your ordinances and statutes must not be contrary to any ecclesiastical order or statute of the Church of Ireland?—I have never had occasion to consider the question, but I should say this, at the moment, that I should equally read what was analogous from the pre-existing system in the present, and I would act on what I found was analogous as representing what was required by the charter.

2917. The King introduced a provision to protect his Church in Ireland, that Church has ceased to be the King's or Queen's—under these circumstances do you think that the provision, introduced by the King, can be held to exist in favour of the disestablished Church which has ceased to be the King's Church in Ireland?—Probably not legally.

2918. Have you, since the disestablishment, obtained the approval of the Protestant archbishop or bishop of the diocese for your new schoolmasters?—There have been several requests in my time, and I am not aware that any approval was obtained. It may have been an opinion on our part, but I think it has not been done.

2919. As I understand, you have done everything to refuse a perfectly fair system, in dealing with the Roman Catholic pupils in these schools?—I trust we have. I was educated myself at Mr. Humblin's school, in Cork, with boys of all religious persuasions. A great number of boys of the Roman Catholic religion attended the school. We all got on remarkably well together. We never got into any religious disputes or differences. That is a policy I should like, so far as I am concerned, to exist in the schools with which I am in connection.

2920. Has your attention ever been called to the question whether the three Roman Catholic boarders, whom Mr. Flynn has taken to Water, read the Scriptures?—No, because Mr. Flynn has been very recently appointed, and it is only within the last few weeks that he has taken possession of Bante school. We would not think of confiding any obligation on the part of Mr. Flynn to insist on these boys reading the Scriptures if their parents object. Much as we value the training to all who listen to them, we would not wish to interfere in those who do not wish to listen. I have ascertained that a Roman Catholic boy, educated in our Tipperary school, entered college from it, and got a mastership and an exhibition.

2921. Was he educated as a boarder or a day boy?—A day boy.

2922. Having regard to the words of the charter, which are held to make these institutions Protestant—intensely, to the words in that—

“No part of the statutes, or rules, or regulations shall be contrary to the ecclesiastical orders of the Church of Ireland, that shall be then in force.”

And also having regard to the disestablishment of the Church, would you consider it illegal to appoint a Roman Catholic as master to one of these schools?—I think it would be contrary to our charter.

2923. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Are there not other clauses?—There are. I think it would not be in our power to appoint a Roman Catholic either as headmaster or assistant—so far as we appoint assistant masters.

2924. Mr. O'SHEA CHAIRMAN.—I believe the appointment of assistant masters is—constantly at least—in your hands?—Only as to one rather. The charter empowers the Governors to appoint one usher. What has been done—except in the case of Mr. Horne, the senior assistant at Galway, who was appointed by us as our usher, and is paid his salary direct—has been to allow the appointment and dismissal of assistant masters to remain entirely with the head masters, without any control of the Board over them. If any objection were made to us, or if we became aware ourselves of any improper appointment, we would insist on exercising our powers, but, if nothing of that kind arose, we leave the matter with the head masters. Our practice is different with regard to Harcourt-street school.

2925. Have the Government, either before or since your connection with the Board, attempted, in any way, to render the character of those schools less sectarian?—They have never interfered with these schools in any way, nor have they the power to do so, except by Act of Parliament.

2926. King Charles II. altered the character of the schools from his teaching of the Assembly of Divines to that of the United Churches of England and Ireland. There has been no such attempt made since, to alter the character of the schools, either by Parliament or by the Crown, to your knowledge?—No.

2927. Suppose it was attempted to give you power to appoint Roman Catholic masters in these schools, would you consider that a greater departure from the intentions of Erasmus Smith than the departure insisted on by Charles II.?—I really could not answer that question.

2928. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—It does not appear that that was a departure at all, because Erasmus Smith was alive at the time?—He was.

2929. Mr. O'SHEA CHAIRMAN.—Charles II. insisted on having the masters approved of by the archbishop or bishop?—Yes.

2930. By the very people to whom the Assembly of Divines objected. Suppose Queen Victoria and her Parliament insisted, not on compelling you, but on giving you power, to appoint Roman Catholic masters as well as Protestant masters in the schools, would you approve of such a change?—No, I would not. I consider this to be a Protestant institution. I am a Protestant myself, and I, therefore, deem that it should be maintained in the same religion that I myself profess, and which has always been the religion on which the schools have been worked.

2931. LORD R. CRUSCHILL.—Would you not be glad, as chairman of the Board, to see the Roman Catholic youth of this country participate in the benefits of the endowment?—Certainly.

2932. Would not the number of pupils attending the grammar schools, be largely increased, if further facilities for the attendance of Roman Catholic youth were instituted?—I doubt it very much because, no doubt, there exists among the Roman Catholics of this country a strong prejudice against sending their children to be educated at schools under the control of Protestant masters, and I doubt very much that many of them would be induced, by the endowments our schools would afford them, to send their children there to be educated.

2933. In your opinion the Board are by law precluded from changing their negative attitude for one more positively in favour of the Roman Catholics?—I think they are, so far as I can form an opinion on the abstract question.

2934. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Your attention has been called to the report of 1807?—Yes.

2935. You are aware that the original document, mentioning the Assembly of Divines, bears date at the time when the bishops were in disgrace. The charter was in 1609; in a letter to the governors in 1685, Erasmus Smith says:—

“My end in founding . . . schools was to propagate the Protestant faith according to the Scriptures . . . Therefore it is the command of His Majesty to exclude the children out of the Free-schools Under the Cathedral, and expend the same unto them, which I humbly desire may be observed, upon the penalty of forfeiting their (the masters') places.”

You observe that in that document, after the restoration, he referred himself to the command of His Majesty to catechise the children. When you are asked whether it is contrary to law to appoint Roman Catholic masters, do you understand by the word "law" the wishes of the founder?—I do.

2936. Does your experience enable you to refer to any instance in which an application has ever been made to Parliament, to violate the intentions of the founder of a charitable institution?—I am not aware of any.

2937. Has this endowment ever received property from any source except the original bounty of Erasmus Smith?—It never has.

2938. In reference to another passage read from the report of 1857—which is the report of the majority of the Commissioners—Mr. Eschsché, who dissented, after stating there was no difference of opinion as to some other of the recommendations, said:—

"From the foregoing premises I respectfully submit—That the subject of providing superintendence and control for the Endowed Schools of Ireland has been improperly considered by the majority of the Commissioners, inasmuch as their recommendations are based on an arbitrary definition, and not on a due consideration of the intentions of the founders—the definition being as framed as to confound Church and Protestant Endowments for purposes to which the founders were directly opposed—and that solely on account of their liberality in admitting Dissenters and Roman Catholics into their schools. . . . For these reasons I have felt it to be my duty to dissent from the report. I conceive it to be vicious in principle, bad in law, and defective in not making adequate provision for the better regulating, managing, and governing of the Endowed Schools, and for the general promotion in connection with such schools, of Academic Education in Ireland."

So far as you have been able to form an opinion from the documents of Erasmus Smith, do you consider that it would be beside his intentions if it came to be a Protestant endowment?—I think it would.

2939. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Have you a regular scale of charges for boarders?—Yes, the charge at Drogheda is £52 a year with certain extras. There is a reduction to brothers, or in the case of clergymen's sons, and for day boys at the classical side £12 a year, and at the commercial side £6. In Galway £51 a year for boarders, and for day boys £7 10s. 6d. for English and Mathematics, and one modern language, and £1 10s. 6d. each for any other language. In Tipperary the charge for boarders is £53 10s. 6d.; the charge for English, Latin, and Greek for day boys is £8. In Ennis the charge for boarders is £55, and for English and Mathematics for day boys £5. There are also certain extras, such as French, German, and Drawing. We do not interfere, except so far as to prevent the masters from asking any undue increase. If any alteration is made, we expect that it should be submitted to us. I do not know, however, whether any rule is extant on the subject.

2940. Do you give the children of the tenantry on the school estates any facilities for education?—We never had an application from them for any of our grammar schools.

2941. I suppose the tenantry are principally Catholic?—The great majority are.

2942. And therefore it is not quite possible to fulfil the intentions of the founder in that respect?—I think not possible.

2943. Do you think that they have rights under the charter?—They have clearly.

2945. Do you not think that if the tenants were aware they could get an education for their children for nothing, they would prefer to take advantage of it rather than have to pay for it?—I think they would, but they can get more suitable education now for nothing at the national schools. The present facilities for education did not exist in the days of Erasmus Smith, and indeed, the necessity for resorting to his schools has been entirely done away with by affording facilities for national education.

2946. CHAIRMAN.—You have now this Harcourt-street school which did not exist in 1857?—Yes, in the report of 1857 it is stated that Erasmus Smith's son, Samuel Smith, conceived the project—of the rents of his father's estates, assigned to the trustees, was sufficient for the purpose—that they should be applied to an academic institution in the city of Dublin. That was still further considered in 1793, when it appears that a Bill was actually prepared and submitted to the Government for the purpose of carrying out that intention, but the matter was allowed to drop, and so remained until 1862, when it occurred to the Government that as they had a considerable surplus for educational purposes, it would be desirable to establish a first class school in the city of Dublin. The model taken was the high school of Edinburgh. The matter was long considered, great difficulties presented themselves, in the first place, under the provisions of the statute, which directs the application of our surplus, it should be applied to the foundation of one or more English schools. An English school would not answer the requirements of a city like Dublin, where a school, to be successful, should be much more akin to a grammar school. The plan proposed was that this school should be established consisting of two sides, one for all the parts of education that could fairly be considered within the limits of an English school, carrying that education to its fullest development, to be provided for out of the funds of Erasmus Smith's foundation, and then the trustees' surplus, which comes to between £250 and £300 a year, and the pupils' fees could be applied to the payment of the grammar or classical side of the school. Accordingly that plan was carried out. This house was purchased in 1858 for £4,000, subject to a small bad rent, and an expenditure of about £5,400 was made upon building a school-room, and adapting the wing to a school for 500 boys, with class-rooms, school-room, and all the necessary changes. In addition to that we furnished the house for the head master, which brought up our entire expenditure upon this school to £7,750. For the purpose of paying that amount we sold out £5,000 Government Stock, the proceeds of which left a deficiency of over £2,500, which we paid out of income. We then resolved to appoint a first class head master, at a salary of £400 a year with this fine house—with the exception of this room and the room overhead, and the two front offices—as a residence, which we furnished for him. We also undertook that he should receive a capitation fee of £1 10s. for every boy over 200. Advertisements were published in the newspapers, and a great many candidates applied. The gentleman elected was a Catholic man, the Rev. Mr. Crawford, who is now living on. He has continued head master up to the present.

2947. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Can the head master take boarders?—No; he was expressly precluded from taking boarders. We appointed a staff of assistant masters, the best that could be procured. To the senior assistant master Mr. Forster, we paid £380 a year; he was a gold medalist in Trinity College. We also paid £200 a year to our senior classical master, also a distinguished university classical man. To our third master we paid £150 a year, to our fourth £115 a year, and to our fifth £110 a year.

2948. What were they?—They are classical and science teachers combined, for the younger classes. The senior classes are taught by the head master and the first and second assistants. The three other assistant masters teach the boys in the junior forms. In addition to that we have a modern languages master, Mr. Oscar Knabner, to whom we pay £100 a year for teaching

French and German. We have also a drawing master who gets £60 a year. The emolument of the payments to our staff of masters comes to nearly £1,400 a year. We have twenty free boys in the school, which number is always full: they are elected half yearly by the Board of Governors. The school has not been so great a success as I think it ought to have been. The number of pupils has never much exceeded 130, including the free boys. The Governors contemplated that the attendance should be at least 300. We have an annual examination, which is held by practical scholars, fellows of college and others, who are accustomed to examinations. They get ten guineas for each examination, and are employed each summer before vacation. There is £40 given in books, as prizes to the boys.

1848. Is there not a great deal of complaint on in Dublin, in the class of secondary schools?—I believe there is considerable competition, but we thought, that, considering the advantages given in this school, we should not have been at a loss by it.

1850. LOUIS JUSTICE FERGUSON.—What are the charges for boys attending the school?—Our original prospectus, published in 1870, stated:—

"For the general course will be £7 per annum, two or more brothers to be received at £5 per annum each, together with a contribution fee of 3s. 10 to the library fund. For the several optional courses.—Latin and Greek £3; French and German £2, advanced mathematics £3, engineering £4; natural science £2; drawing £2."

The general course includes trigonometry, algebra, and the ordinary elementary subjects of mathematics, history, and geography.

1851. LOUIS B. CHEVREUIL.—What would a boy have to pay for an education in English, Latin, Greek, modern languages, and physical science?—If a boy wants an education in Latin, Greek, French, German, and advanced mathematics, he will have to pay £15 a year. Without advanced mathematics one could have instruction in Latin and Greek, two modern languages, and elementary mathematics, for £12 a year.

1852. The higher mathematics would be too much advanced for a young boy?—Quite so.

1853. Do you know what the charges are in the High School at Edinburgh?—I cannot say.

1854. LOUIS JUSTICE FERGUSON.—If you have any references on that subject, we would be anxious to have them?—A collection of the prospectus was obtained, at the time of the foundation of this school, from the high school, Edinburgh, and a very important one from Manchester. I was not a Governor at the time. The then Governors calculated the scale of charges, which has been since considerably modified, and very much reduced. The original arrangement not having worked as well as was desired, a minute was made by the Board on the 11th March, 1873, as to the principle on which the school should be carried on, viz.—The authority of parents to be restricted to deciding whether a boy is to learn classics, including Greek and Latin, composition, and the elements of one modern language. Each boy, if learning classics, to study the full course, unless on case of special application, to be approved of by the Board of Governors. Each assistant-master to be employed, unless in case of emergency, on a special subject. On the 12th December, 1873, the consideration of the position of this school was referred to the Schools Committee, with directions to them to inquire into the cause of the diminution of the number of paying pupils, and of the large amount due in respect of the school to the general fund of the Governors, and to suggest any remedies that might occur to them.

1855. It was not a case of slow increase, but the number had been bigger and had diminished?—It had slightly fallen off at this time. On the 15th December, 1874, a report was made by the Schools Committee, and observations recommended, which were afterwards carried out. This further report was also made:—

"Your Committee having carefully considered the subject of the Harcourt-street school referred to them by order of the Governors of the 5th day of March, 1873, report as follows:—1. They recommend that the school shall consist of a house and an upper division, the former to comprise the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd classes of the present school, and the latter the classes above these. 2. That in the lower division of the school there shall be one general course of instruction for all the pupils, which shall comprise a sound and suitable English education, and such instruction in Latin, Greek, French, and elementary mathematics, as the head master shall appoint, and with a discretionary power in him to exempt any pupil from learning any one or more particular branch, if special circumstances shall render this desirable. 3. That in the Upper division of the school shall be afforded an advanced course of English education, and also full and efficient courses of instruction in Latin, Greek, advanced mathematics, natural sciences, French, and German: the English educational course to be compulsory upon all the pupils of this division, but the other courses to be optional. That arrangements be made by the head master to enable each of the pupils in this division as desire to fit themselves for commercial or other pursuits not requiring a high classical or mathematical education, to obtain special instruction in book-keeping and other suitable subjects. 4. That the regulations of the time table, the arrangement of classes, and the course of instruction shall be in the control and direction of the head master, subject only to the following conditions:—(a.) That the fundamental principle on which this school has been founded be maintained, viz.—That the primary object of the instruction given be to impart a sound and comprehensive English education to every pupil."

There then follow a number of consequential arrangements, after which comes the scale of fees, viz.—

"Thus for the general course of instruction in the lower division of the school, and for the English course in the upper division of the school, there shall be charged a single fee of £1 12s a quarter for each pupil, subject to a reduction of 3s each per quarter in the case of two or more brothers. That the following shall be the fees per quarter for the optional courses in the upper division if taken separately, viz.—

—For Greek and Latin, or either, 12s.; for advanced mathematics, 10s.; for natural sciences, 10s.; for French, 7s. 6d.; for German, 7s. 6d. In the upper division of the school for each pupil as desirous to take, in addition to the English course, a full course of Greek, Latin, advanced mathematics, and natural sciences, there shall be a single fee of 43s per quarter charged for all these subjects. For such as desire, in addition to the English, to take a full course of advanced mathematics, natural sciences, French, German, book-keeping, and other commercial instruction, there shall be charged a like single fee of 43s per quarter. Drawing shall in all cases be optional, and at an extra fee of 12s per quarter."

1856. LOUIS B. CHEVREUIL.—Are there, in Harcourt-street school, pupils of both religious denominations?—Several, both Protestant and Roman Catholics.

1857. Is there a large number of Roman Catholics?—Not large; they only bear a small proportion to the number of Protestants.

1858. MR. O'HUGHENESS.—As to the fees mentioned in the last paper you read, are the £3 for Latin and Greek, and all the other fees for optional courses, in addition to the £7?—Yes.

1859. Then it would be about £10 per annum if a boy were educated in every branch?—No; £12 for everything. This is the report of the Schools Committee, of the 15th December, 1874:—

"The Head Master has frequently complained of the difficulties in the way of framing a suitable time-table for the several classes; and he attributes those difficulties to the system of optional courses, which prevents the classes being kept together. It appears to the Committee that those difficulties might, with a little systematic action, be much reduced, but still they find that, under the present regulations, prescribed by the Governors, they cannot be wholly got over. The leading principles on which the school was founded render it necessary that optional courses should be part of its system; and the Committee would not recommend, even if it were open to do so, that they should be either dispensed with or made compulsory. They have, however, arrived at the conclusion that the system may in this respect, be modified with advantage. They recommend that all the instruction afforded up to a certain standing in the school should be compulsory; that in the very junior classes it should be confined to an elementary English education, as at present, and as it must be of the nature of the case; that in the next class the rudiments of Latin should be taught to all, in addition, of course, to scriptible English mathematics; that in the most glass instruction in Latin should be proceeded with, in addition to before, and also that French should be commenced, and that an additional charge should be made for such instruction. These three grades will, on the average, cover three years' attendance, and will bring the boys to in or about the age of thirteen. After this the education afforded may fairly branch off into two great divisions; one for boys desirous of continuing their classical instruction and fitting themselves for college, or for parents for which such instruction is necessary, and which should, of course, be continued with continued education in English, and also may be combined with advanced mathematics, natural sciences, and modern languages, or any of these subjects. The other great division should consist of boys intended for business, or for parents not requiring a high classical education. They may be permitted, and indeed should, in general, be required to give up instruction in Latin, and confine themselves to modern languages, English, and the mathematical and natural sciences. The system pursued, and is successful, in many of the large English schools. Drawing should, in all cases, be optional, but it should not be allowed to interfere with other subjects. From the first three classes upwards the extra charges for optional subjects, as specified in the present prospectus, should continue to be paid."

The present table of fees is, for the general course, £1 15s. per quarter, with a reduction for two or more brothers. Full course, including English, Latin, Greek, advanced mathematics, and natural sciences, £3 per quarter.

2930. That does not include modern languages?—No. With the exception of French and German, all the subjects are taught for £13 a year. There are many who want the £7 education, and, in addition, will take Latin and Greek; they will have to pay £10. Those taking advanced mathematics, in addition to the English course, have to pay £3. The charge is £1 10s. a year for each modern language, and for drawing 10s. a quarter.

2931. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—The headmastership is about being vacant. What course have you taken with regard to filling it up?—We have advertised.

2932. From what area have you invited competition?—From all the Universities. The only requirement is that each candidate must have a University degree.

2933. Have your Board considered at all, the causes of the failure of the public to take advantage of this institution to the full extent?—I entertain an opinion on the subject.

2934. LORD B. CAMPBELL.—What is that?—I really think that though Dr. Cresswell is a very admirable head master, he has failed to get up the school to the extent that he ought.

2935. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—I was about to invite your attention to very strong evidence of a number of gentlemen, in which they appear periodically to have agreed, that, in this country, wherever an attempt has been made to place an Irish school under an English master it has failed!—I am afraid that the same cause has existed here.

2936. I understood you to say that Dr. Cresswell is a graduate of Cambridge?—That is so. He is a good master, a good scholar, a good teacher, and a thoroughly upright man; the boys like him very well. The only complaints ever made to us were as to some faults of manner—nothing else.

2937. Does any other cause suggest itself?—Nothing whatever. We have investigated the question to the utmost of our power, and we are unable to assign any other cause for the school not being more numerously attended.

2938. LORD B. CAMPBELL.—Has Dr. Cresswell had disagreements with the Board?—Nothing that I can call disagreements.

2939. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—I understood you to say that you have devoted the Treasurer's portfolio to this school?—Yes, altogether.

2940. In the printed accounts for the year ending 1st May, 1875, I find these charges:—"Harcourt-street school, £244 10s. 6d.; House 40, Harcourt-street, £230 10s. 3d." I understand the house is practically the residence of the master?—The whole house is available for the residence of the master; but the present master is an unmarried man, and therefore does not require so much room. This room, which is used for the drawing class, and the room overhead, which is the ordinary Board-room, are occupied.

2941. What has the expenditure on Harcourt-street school been?—In 1874 there was received for fees (130 pupils) £244 3s. 6d., and in addition the Governors had to pay £749 11s. 10d. In 1875 (133 pupils) fees produced £245 13s. 4d., and the Governors had to pay £788 8s. 3d. In 1876 (140 pupils) fees produced £1,037 12s. 3d., and the Governors had to pay £244 6s. 7d. In 1877 (136 pupils) fees produced £1,045 5s. 1d., and the Governors had to pay £593 3s. 5d. In 1878 (138 pupils) fees £273 11s. 6d., and the Governors had to pay £901 11s. 2d.

2942. How is it that separate costs appear in the accounts for Harcourt-street school, and for 40 Harcourt-street?—The expenses of the house, such as rent, taxes, &c., which are very heavy, are not charged to Harcourt-street school in the accounts. There is also a porter kept here, whose salary is not charged to the school account.

2943. You told me that in 1878 £273 11s. 6d. was received in fees and £901 11s. 2d. was the additional expense of this school to the Board. In the annual printed account Harcourt-street school is put down for £763 5s. 3d., omitting the house altogether, and besides that there is transferred to the Treasurer's portfolio fund £260 10s. 9d. The best way to explain about the Treasurer's portfolio fees would be to have the account in the ledger submitted to you. The actual transaction of taking money from that account for payment of the deficiencies in the Harcourt-street school accounts has never passed through the books, and the Treasurer's portfolio goes on, to the present time, without any apparent appropriation. The reason of the discrepancy in the accounts is that the accounts are brought down to different periods. The account showing £763 5s. 3d. is for our financial year ending 1st May. The Bursar's account of the school expenses is brought down to December in that year, and moreover any sums paid otherwise than through the Bursar, such as fees for Examinations, &c., are not included in the figures I gave you.

2944. What is the actual cost of the school?—The Harcourt-street school costs about £1,500 a year, including the fees received from pupils.

2945. MR. O'BRIEN.—But I understand you to say that you do not charge the rent and taxes against it?—No. They are charged in a separate account.

2946. Then you do not include either in the expense of the school?—We do not.

2947. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—As it stands in the books the expenditure, shown under the head of Harcourt-street school, would be on the assumption that Harcourt-street school owned the house and paid neither rent nor taxes?—We never charged the school with either rent or taxes; we have taken that on our own funds irrespective of the school altogether.

2948. Then to arrive at the real cost of the Harcourt-street school it would be necessary to add to the actual outlay, the interest on the £7,000 or £8,000 expended upon the undertaking?—That is so.

2949. From what class of life are the free boys in Harcourt-street school drawn?—A great many from the smaller or middle-class shopkeepers. Some are the children of waiters in shops, some of conducting clerks to solicitors, and some of persons who have not better days, but are not now able to pay for their children's education.

2950. Do you think them as to locality?—No, not at all.

2951. MR. O'BRIEN.—As to age?—The free boys must be, at the date of admission, between ten and thirteen years of age.

2952. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you anticipate the extension of the residence for the free class?—Yes, always; about a month before the elections.

1861. How long do you keep the free boys at the school?—For five years.

1864. Do the Governors see the boys before they are admitted as free pupils?—The boys must always attend. Our custom is this: the elections take place in the months of June and December. Advertisements are inserted in the Dublin newspapers, stating that there are so many free places, to be given away by the Governors, on a certain day, and directing applicants to send in on a printed form, to the Registrar, before a given day, the particulars of their case. The form contains a number of questions—Is the father of the boy seeking free education living, if not, who has applied on his behalf; the name of the applicant, his profession or calling; name of the boy, his age, circumstances of his parents or guardians, and a reference to some person of known respectability and position in the locality, &c. With these forms are sent in any recommendations the applicants can present. They are then laid before the Standing Committee, who go through the list, circulating those they do not think deserving. The revised list is submitted, with all the papers, to the Governors, who proceed to hold an election to fill the number of vacancies existing. The Board go into the consideration of all the circumstances of the boys, who are examined separately on the day of election.

1865. What is the average amount of competition?—There are generally from fifteen to twenty candidates for five or six places. Sometimes, however, it has so happened that we have had only the exact number, and all who were eligible got in.

1866. Is there any reference in the application form, to religious persuasion?—None whatever.

1867. Have you had many applications except from Protestants?—We have had many applications—I do not think many from Roman Catholics.

1868. Are there any free Roman Catholics now?—I do not think there are.

1869. Mr. O'BRIENHURST.—Have there ever been any free Roman Catholics since the foundation of the institution?—I cannot say, but I will ascertain.

1870. How there have been examining of the Governor?—A great deal too much. Dr. Croswell recommended that these places should be awarded by competitive examination, but my opinion is entirely opposed to that. It is better to ascertain what the more deserving cases are, and who are the people requiring assistance. I think competitive examinations have been evidence in every branch.

1861. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any inquiry as to the progress of the free boys, after they have been elected?—Always, the head master reports on them every half-year. Several have been struck off through inattention and idleness.

1862. Mr. O'BRIENHURST.—The incapacity to pay is the main point considered at the election?—It is. There are many cases in which it is a great charity to admit boys to a school like this—for example, the children of those who have been better days.

1863. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Has the number of eligible cases far exceeded the vacancies?—It has. To meet that, this resolution was passed by the Governors as to free boys—

"That the number should not be strictly limited to twenty, and that if any particularly pressing case appeared, the Governors should be at liberty to take in, although the number of twenty was filled up."

1864. Mr. O'BRIENHURST.—How that power of exceeding the number of twenty been made use of?—It has on one or two occasions.

1865. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any restriction on the head master having boarders, provided he does not utilize the house?—There is an actual prohibition against his having boarders at all. This opinion was very strongly maintained by my predecessor, on these grounds: if a limited number of boarders were introduced it might lead to greater attention being paid to them, as being much more profitable to the master. And it would not be desirable in a school like this, intended to be a day school, to introduce boarders.

Very recently, when arranging the terms for the election of the new head master, the majority of the Board were in favour of having no admission made in the rule on this point.

1866. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Do you hold this house in perpetuity?—We bought Mr. Hutchinson's interest. He was the owner either in fee-simple or for a long term of years.

1867. CHAIRMAN.—Why should the total emolument of the master, in such a school as this, depend on the number of boys, a practice which does not seem to exist in any of the grammar schools?—This being entirely a day school, we thought it desirable to make it the interest of the master to have as many pupils as possible. We fixed 150 as the number which was to be covered by the salary of £400 a year, and if the master could raise the numbers above that he was to be a participant, with the Governors, in the profits, by getting a percentage on the amount of money received, and in that way we gave him a direct interest in the number in the school. We started on this system, but found it did not work. The boys never came up to the number at which capitation fees would commence, and so we adopted—entirely with the consent of the head master—a new system—namely, to reduce the salary to £300 a year, and to give a capitation allowance on every boy in the school, including the free boys, in order to prevent any difference between one set of boys and the other. We found, however, that that plan never brought the salary up to what it had been before. Instead of the £300 a year we took off, the capitation fees only amounted to about £100 as to £180 a year.

1868. Would not the same arrangement induce more life into the grammar schools?—The master of each grammar school has a very good and direct profit out of his boarders. He gets the whole of the fees.

1869. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What arrangement do you contemplate now?—We intend to start with a salary of £400 a year, and to give a capitation fee of £3 a head on every boy over 100.

1860. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Has the advertisement attracted men of the highest University distinctions?—No doubt of it. Applications have been received from England, and from all parts of Ireland. The difficulty will be to select, so many as to good.

1861. DR. CURRIE.—Is the school being opened on at present?—Yes; but these are the Easter holidays. We have a large class going up for the intermediate education examinations.

1862. Mr. O'BRIENHURST.—The regulations require that the school should be opened with prayer, and every boy is expected, by these regulations, to be present at prayers. You have had Roman Catholic boys in the school?—Several.

1863. Have they made any complaint on that subject?—No; the way that was arranged was, that any boy, whose parents objected, was not required to come in until prayers were over.

1864. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—You make the regulation, and if the parent does not object you enforce it against the boy?—Quite so.

1865. You have a school in Great Brunswick-street?—Yes; an excellent school. It was formerly known as the Lombard-street school. It is more of a commercial school than the Harcourt-street school, and the terms are much lower. Mr. Fetto, the master, is a very excellent teacher.

1866. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What was the date of the foundation of that school?—1811.

1867. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—It is not included in Mr. Galt's Report?—He does not suspect it, but Mr. Baileys does. We have a number of free boys in that school also, and their election takes place at the same time, and under similar circumstances, as that for the Harcourt-street school. It very often happens that boys who have been disappointed in getting into Harcourt-street school have been placed by us in the Brunswick-street school.

1868. That school was reported on, in 1857, as being very satisfactory?—I can say the same of it now. On the 22nd December, 1875, the Board resolved that arrangements be made with the master to receive a number of free boys, not exceeding ten, for whom the Governors would pay, at the rate of £5 a year each. We found that to be beneficial, and so much sought after by the lower middle classes, that we thought it would be a great advantage to increase the number of free boys in that school, and on the 21st April, 1876, when the matter was again before us, Mr. Forde wrote on the subject of the addition to the number of free pupils, and proposed that we should raise his salary still further, by making it £100 a year. The Governors accepted his proposal, and raised his salary to £100 a year, on the terms of their having the right to nominate five additional free pupils.

3009. What numbers attend that school now?—The report by Mr. Rodkin of the inspection made in January, 1879, stated the numbers on the roll to be sixty-five, of whom fifteen were free pupils; there were fifty-two present at the inspection.

3010. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What number would the school accommodate?—Between eighty and ninety.

3011. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you repeat that house?—We do; we expended £340 on it within the last three years.

3012. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What are the charges made by the master to the paying pupils in that school?—£4 a year, which I believe covers everything.

3013. MR. O'SHEAVERNEY.—Do the same regulations as to religious duties, and the same forbearance as to Roman Catholics exist there?—There are no actual rules in force there as to religious instruction.

3014. Or as to prayer?—Not that I am aware of. [Adjourned to next day at 11 o'clock A.M.]

EIGHTH DAY—THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 1879; 11 o'clock, A.M.

At 40, Harcourt-street, Dublin.

Present.—The EARL of ROSS, Chairman; LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD; RICHARD O'SHEAVERNEY, Esq., M.P., and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D., with JAMES CREED MEREDITH, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

THE RIGHT HONORABLE THE VICE-CHANCELLOR OF IRELAND, recalled.

The Rt. Hon.
the Vice-Chancellor.

3015. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—In 1857 there were sixty-one pupils on the roll at Drogheda school, and at present there are only twenty-three; what is the explanation of the falling off in numbers?—I forget who was master of Drogheda school in 1857, but Mr. Whitty, who was appointed master in 1871, had a very good school there, and he, on the resignation of Mr. Barnes, who was the head master at Ennis school, was transferred to that school in the month of October, 1877, and he took with him the greater number of the pupils from Drogheda. He was succeeded by Mr. Chubbuck, and Mr. Aldhouse was subsequently elected to the head mastership of Drogheda school. He had to begin the work over again, and to make a school for himself. That is the principal reason for the falling off in the numbers. Another reason was the local situation of the schoolhouse. We are bound by our charter to have the school in the town of Drogheda; and some would not like to send their boys into the town to school. Another very important reason is that Armagh Royal school, a very prosperous one, is close to Drogheda, and a great many boys from the district are sent to Armagh.

3016. Is the report of the Commission of 1867 I find this passage:—

"We recommend that the master of Drogheda school should provide a course of English and commercial education for boys intended for business, even though they may refuse to learn classics."

Has that recommendation been carried out?—It has; and in the list of charges for day boys at Drogheda there are separate charges for the full course and the commercial course. The fees for the latter are about one-half of those charged for the full classical course.

3017. Does the Board contemplate taking any further steps to raise the condition of the Drogheda school?—We are very anxious, as soon as we can afford it, to increase the allowance made to the head masters of all the grammar schools, for assistant masters. We do not ourselves take any part in providing the number of assistant masters required. That has, hitherto, been always in the discretion of the head masters. All we require is that the money shall be honestly applied to their payment. As soon as we recover our financial position, after our heavy expenditure on repairs, we will be able to enlarge the payments for assistant masters. That is the principal change we have in contemplation.

3018. I find that in Ennis school, in 1857, there were fifty-eight pupils on the roll, and last year there were only thirty-nine. That seems a large falling off?—Yes; we have had a change of masters at Ennis also.

Mr. Barnes was not head master so far back as 1857. He was appointed much more recently, and had a very good school there at one time. It was then, I think, the best and most successful we had; but, from one cause or other, it fell off very much. Mr. Barnes resigned in 1877. We require half-yearly returns of the number of boys in our grammar schools, and by the return made in June, 1877, we found that the numbers in Ennis school had fallen to nineteen boarders and three free boys. The Board then ordered:—

"That the head master of Ennis grammar school be informed that the Governors are much dissatisfied with the falling off in the number of pupils, that they hope the improved views of the school buildings, on which they have recently expended a very large amount, will increase the number, otherwise they regret they will feel it their duty to consider the necessity of making a change in the head mastership."

3019. Had that any effect?—No; it had no immediate effect, but on the 1st October, 1877, Mr. Barnes resigned.

3020. I suppose, before passing that resolution, you made some inquiries as to the cause of the falling off?—We did.

3021. Were there any reasons assigned?—Yes.

3022. Were they personal reasons applying to Mr. Barnes?—They were.

3023. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—I find in Mr. Gray's report, presented just at that period:—

"I inspected Ennis Grammar School on Monday the 9th September. I found nineteen boys present in the school, viz.—thirteen boarders, three sons of the head master, and three day boys. Two boarders were reported absent. . . . Since the school opened, on August 24th, the whole work of teaching had been carried out by the head master and his eldest son, as, owing to the peculiar circumstances of the present case, the assistant school master had left at three days' notice, and an assistant school master, who had been engaged, ultimately declined to come. Notwithstanding these disadvantages the boys seem to have worked fairly."

So there was a failure there in consequence of the assistant master's conduct?—The assistant master did not continue because they were not paid.

3024. In 1877 you transferred Mr. Whitty from Drogheda to Ennis. Had that a good effect?—It had for a while. Mr. Whitty took the great majority of his Drogheda boys to Ennis, and the school increased. He was a master in whom we had considerable confidence. We thought that at Drogheda he had worked very well, and that when we transferred him, by transferring him to Ennis, that school would flourish under his management, but unfortunately it did not do so.

3025. You give a higher allowance for assistant masters at Ennis than at your other schools?—We did so, until Mr. Whitty went there, and then we reduced it to the same level as the others.

3026. Do you think Mr. Whitty's failure there—for it ultimately turned out a failure—was owing to the reduction you made in the sum granted for assistant masters?—Certainly not.

3027. Were the reasons in his case also personal?—Shortly after his appointment there was an outbreak of sanitation in the school, which had an injurious effect for some time, and afterwards he was not so fortunate as Mr. Burns.

3028. Mr. O'Brian.—Did he remain there long?—Only from October 1, 1877, to January 17, 1879, when, without giving us any notice, he shut up the school and left. He had got some appointment elsewhere, and we never heard anything more about him.

3029. Whom have you now appointed?—Mr. Flynn, who was head master at the Durdalk school.

3030. In what way did you consider it promotion, to transfer Mr. Whitty from Drogheda to Ennis?—We thought that there would be a much better chance of success, from the situation of the school.

3031. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Mr. King was the immediate predecessor of Mr. Burns?—Yes.

3032. And lived to a great age?—He had a pension from us for a long time.

3033. You are aware from the records that, under him, it was a very distinguished school?—It was.

3034. And his pupils obtained high distinctions in College?—Yes.

3035. Lord B. Cresswell.—The Commissioners in 1857 remarked: "We are of opinion that the Government should place the school-house in a suitable state of repair."—That was very fully done.

3036. How Mr. Flynn's appointment to Ennis school already had a satisfactory effect?—Very satisfactory, so far as we have had time to judge. We have the greatest hopes of Mr. Flynn's management of Ennis school. He was most successful in Durdalk, and his pupils were most highly distinguished in the University, and at the different competitive examinations.

3037. Are the Board satisfied with the condition of the Galway school?—We are thoroughly satisfied, so far as the management and teaching of the school go, but we are not satisfied, nor is Mr. Biggs, the head master, satisfied with the number of boys attending the school. He thinks, and we think, that, from the advantages held out by him, and his assistants, at Galway, we might have expected a larger attendance. Mr. Biggs, I believe, is a first-class master—one of the very best schoolmasters in Ireland. He had a very large school at Passmoreton, and he took nearly all his boys from Passmoreton to Galway. As these boys are going out of the school, we do not find proportionate numbers coming in to replace them.

3038. Can you assign any reason for that?—I do not know the locality myself, but I am told that the neighbourhood of the school does not supply a sufficient number of boys who would take advantage of it. I say so, once for all, that we attribute, in a great measure, the want of greater success of our grammar schools to the great tendency that exists in Ireland amongst the better classes to send their sons over to English schools for education. The great majority of boys, whose parents can afford it, are now sent for education to English schools.

3039. Does that apply to the middle classes, for whom I will assume the Erasmus Smith's schools were originally founded?—It is very hard to answer that question, the state of the country is so different now. The education to be given in the grammar schools was such as would be suitable for the middle classes.

3040. Do you think your reasoning applies to the middle class?—It certainly does apply to the wealthier portion of the middle classes.

3041. Chairman.—The most profitable class of pupils go away?—They do. I know that a great many merchants and professional men, composing a large proportion of the middle class here, send their sons to English in preference to Irish schools.

3042. Lord B. Cresswell.—The report of the Assistant Commissioner as to Galway school, in 1857, states:

"There were no boarders, either in attendance or on the roll, at the time of my inspection, although the buildings, erected in 1819, at a cost of 45,000 for 100, afford ample accommodation for boarders, and although the Queen's College, with its large endowment, holds out considerable encouragement to grammar school education in Galway."

Do you think that the institution of one of the Queen's Colleges in Galway ought to be a considerable encouragement to a grammar school in the town?—I think it operates in rather the other direction, as, in my opinion, it takes very much the place of a really good school, so far as the advanced classes in school are concerned; and, instead of being sent to the school, boys would be sent to the college in preference.

3043. Dr. Curtis.—Are you aware that six years scholarships in the Galway College have been obtained by pupils from Galway school?—I was not aware of it. I am very glad to hear it.

3044. Do not you think that encouragement might be increased, if some of the Erasmus Smith's exhibitions were opened for competition to students entering the Queen's College?—I never considered the question. It never occurred to my mind before. I should not like to answer it off-hand.

3045. Even in Mr. Hallowell's time several scholarships were obtained by students of the Galway school?—I see no reason why they should not. Galway school possesses very great advantages, and ought to be a good feeder; but I am afraid that the Queen's College takes away a good many boys who would remain a longer period in the school, if the college were not so near.

3046. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—A considerable number of the pupils in Galway school, until comparatively recently, were Roman Catholics?—Yes.

3047. Are you aware what facilities for education there are in Galway at present?—I know nothing about Galway.

3048. Lord B. Cresswell.—How many boarders would your school buildings accommodate?—The accommodation in the dormitories at Drogheda is for eighty, at Galway for fifty, at Tipperary for sixty, and at Ennis I should say for about sixty.

3049. I find that in 1857 there were only twenty-one pupils on the roll at Tipperary school, and that in 1878 there were ninety-two. Can you explain this great increase?—The number of pupils had fallen very low in 1857. The decrease continued to such an extent that on the 30th October, 1874, an inquiry was directed by the Government as to the state of that school, and the matter was referred to the schools committee. That inquiry was about being proceeded with when Mr. Matthews, the then head master, died. We ascertained that he had become addicted to habits of intemperance. We then appointed Mr. Lambay.

3050. Where did he come from?—Newport, in the county Tipperary. He had a very high character from that school, and he fully justified our expectations, and brought the Tipperary school up to be the most successful and flourishing of all our grammar schools. In consequence of the huge increase, the number of his boarders, he has been obliged to take a house, as a residence for the additional number he cannot accommodate in the schoolhouse.

3051. You increased the allowance for assistant masters in Galway to £150 a year?—I forget to mention that yesterday. A representation was made by Mr. Biggs of the disadvantages he was under at Galway, and he stated that in consequence of the decrease in the number of his pupils he had been obliged to reduce the salary of a very deserving master, the teacher of modern languages, who had been for a great number of years in the school. We thought it only fair to Mr. Biggs to give him addi-

General assistance, and, as a first step, we granted him £50 a year.

3052. I find that the charges for boarders in the Erasmus Smith's grammar schools average between £30 and £50 a year. What would the charges be in these schools, if they led to emolument?—I suppose the masters could not afford to take boys, and to give them the same education they get now, under £55 or £60 a year, and probably not so low as that.

3053. LORD JUSTICE FINLAYSON.—In addition to that there is an important element to be taken into account. Do you think it possible that any private master could supply the capital involved?—I think it impossible, because the buildings themselves must have cost from £8,000 to £10,000. If the master had not our buildings he would be obliged to charge an additional sum, taking the rent into consideration.

3054. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Cannot the masters fix what charges they please?—Within certain limits they can, but, if anything unreasonable is suggested, the Board interferes.

3055. CHAIRMAN.—Would not the result of there being no endowments be, that schools would not exist, except in populous places, such as Dublin or Kingston?—That would be the necessary consequence. Tipperary could not afford to support a school without an endowment, Galway could not possibly do so, nor could Drogheda.

3056. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you make it compulsory on all boys attending your grammar schools to learn English—that is to say, to study English history and literature?—Yes, in all our schools, and in Haicourt-street it is essential that they shall have a thorough good English education.

3057. It is quite plain that the higher class of education was at least one of the objects intended by the founder of these schools?—I take it to be so.

3058. It is also plain that it was his desire to afford every facility to those who wanted merely, what is called at the present day, an English education?—Yes.

3059. Are those boys who only desire an English education in the best sense taught separately, or are they taught along with the others?—There is no actual separation made, there are a number of courses that may be considered open, for instance, in Drogheda boys must learn a certain set of fundamental courses, and they may then have an option—they must learn Latin of course, but then they need not go on with Greek, or take any advanced instruction in Latin, or in mathematics—and they can go in for a commercial education. It is practically the same wherever there is a demand in the grammar schools.

3060. Do you find that many abandon the advanced classes, and confine themselves to a commercial education?—I do not think they do. I think they all go on with the general school course, so far as the reports of our inspectors go.

3061. The higher classes sent, as you say, to send their sons very largely to England?—Yes.

3062. There is a class—quite as much Protestant as Catholic—of shopkeepers and farmers who would not require a very high classical education. Does it not appear to you that it would be very desirable to give them as much encouragement as possible, to make use of these schools as English schools, as distinct from grammar schools?—I do not think that it was ever in the contemplation of the founder that they should be anything but grammar schools.

3063. But in addition to being grammar schools the founder intended that they should give an English education—in fact, they were to be grammar schools for such as wished to enter college?—That observation would be very likely to apply to day pupils, but I do not think that boys, such as you mention, would be likely to pay the large sums that must be charged at boarding schools.

3064. Could you not devise some plan, which would attract a much larger number of day boys in these small towns, by giving greater encouragement to the English and commercial branches of education?—It might, perhaps, be done by establishing a higher and a lower school, and making a distinction in the course of education, and in the charges; that, however, would amount to two separate schools in the same building, and there is this matter to be taken into consideration, that they are sufficiently well supplied with that species of education in the National schools.

3065. Surely you do not think that the National schools supply an English and commercial education adequate for the son of a large shopkeeper, who is intended to follow his father's business?—I should suppose the ordinary schools do not.

3066. It would be very repugnant work for such a boy to follow the advanced grammar school course in your schools?—Beyond a certain point I think so, but my impression is, that the day boys can obtain such an education as you refer to in our grammar schools at present, and that it is certified of, so far as the boys come to our schools, by the class that you speak of.

3067. Might you not carry out the very desirable object of filling your schools with such boys as might be permitted by their religious feelings to go there, by offering a purely commercial education, for, of course, the attention of boys must be diverted from their commercial education by the prosecution of classical studies?—In my opinion there is a certain point up to which boys must be educated for all purposes. Every boy intended for commercial pursuits would be fit for the better of getting an elementary knowledge of Latin. I think English history and geography necessary for all persons, and all these branches of a really good education they have in our schools, and they have the advantage of learning the modern languages.

3068. Do a large percentage of the boys in your grammar schools avail themselves of the opportunity of learning modern languages?—I think the majority do.

3069. Are the modern languages taught by one of the assistant-masters, or is a foreign master, residing in the town, engaged?—The head master says, that it is almost impossible to get a resident in the town to teach modern languages as a visiting teacher. There is not the demand that would support a really good man, and we would not have any of inferior attainments, as that, as a rule, our head masters are obliged to take foreigners as assistant-masters, allowing them, in many cases, to have other incomes after school hours.

3070. Have you ever been asked to consider, whether you have power, under your charter, to attach any of your exhibitions to the Queen's College?—We have not. Under the statute our exhibitions must be in Trinity College.

3071. Are all your head masters clergymen, as well as Protestants?—No. Mr. Lindsay is a clergyman, and so is Mr. Aldhouse. Dr. Paggi and Mr. Flynn are both laymen.

3072. The number of your day boys is rather small at the different schools?—Very small. We have been always disappointed at the number of day boys not being larger. Even the number of free places is not fully availed of.

3073. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Could the masters, with their present emoluments, afford to take a greater number than twenty free scholars?—I do not think they could.

3074. LORD JUSTICE FINLAYSON.—I understood you, that applications had not been made for the full number?—They have not been made.

3075. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you think it necessary that application should be made, before a boy is appointed a free scholar?—We do. We never volunteer to put any free boys on the list.

3076. Is the policy of the Board to attract the sons of gentry, and to raise the standard of their schools to the kind of schools that you will find at Eton, Harrow, or Winchester, or is it rather their policy to make them middle-class commercial schools, such as are to be found in several of the English towns, such as Reading, Birmingham, and Leeds?—Our policy, as to the four grammar schools, is, that they should be sufficient for

The St. Hans,
man.

the highest classes, and at the same time we take care that no charges should be made, which would prevent children of persons not in affluent circumstances, taking advantage of our schools. We desire to provide for the wants of the country, as far as our means allow, in two different channels. First, to give a superior education in the upper and middle classes in our grammar schools; and secondly, to provide for the poor by means of our English schools.

1047. Mr. O'SULLIVAN.—Do you offer prizes in your schools, apart from the exhibitions?—There are medals awarded.

1048. Are any of those medals, or small prizes, confined to the commercial, as distinguished from the classical, branch of the school?—I think not. They are for general proficiency. We always leave it to the head masters to send up a return of the boys entitled to receive the medals, which are of no intrinsic value.

1049. Is there any provision for the rudimentary teaching of natural sciences?—The rudiments are supposed to be taught in all our schools.

1050. The twenty-four day boys in Tipperary school consist of twelve members of the Church of Ireland, ten Roman Catholics, and two Presbyterians. From what classes do these boys principally come?—They are the children of the townpeople.

1051. Then they are probably boys, the majority of whom require a good commercial education?—Yes; and I believe they get it.

1052. Do not you think that it would be possible, by encouraging the commercial side of your school, by prizes—and perhaps a little of the arts that educational bodies use to promote their schools—to attract a greater number from the town of Tipperary?—I think that is a matter which requires the attention of the Government. And if we find that it is not satisfactorily carried out at present, it would be our desire to make any improvements necessary for the purpose.

1053. LEON E. CHURCHILL.—Of course the Board have fully considered the subject as to how to fill their schools, and with what classes?—Certainly we would be most anxious to do it.

1054. The policy of the Board is to attract all classes down to a certain level?—Yes.

1055. The Board are not satisfied with the state of their grammar schools?—With some of them only.

1056. I find in the report of 1857 this passage:—

"According to our view of the primary object of these schools, they were founded, mainly, for the benefit of persons in the middle rank of society, and were designed to provide an education suited to the wants of persons of that class."

Do you agree with that statement?—No; not to the full extent. In my opinion the schools are very usefully employed in educating the higher classes.

1057. There is also this further passage:—

"The restriction of the grammar school course to studies (suited by pupils intending to enter the University, would have the effect of practically excluding the majority of the middle-class pupils, who look forward to a commercial career. In recent times the master would have a direct interest in limiting the admission of day and free scholars (whenever it can) through accommodation for the reception of a large number of boarders. Parents in the ranks of the gentry are now less willing than they were in former times to place their sons at schools attended by boys belonging to the middle and lower classes."

Do you agree with these opinions?—As applied to boarding schools I do. The gentry of the country will not send their sons to boarding schools where they are to associate with persons who are very much inferior to them in position.

1058. Do you think that would at all account for the disappointment the Government experience with respect to their grammar schools?—It may be one of the causes, but it is not the whole cause. As far as the day boys are concerned we do afford them all the advantages a commercial education should require—that is, to a certain extent an elementary classical education, which I look upon as necessary for boys with any pretensions to become educated for commercial purposes.

1059. The report of 1857 continues:—

"We fear that out of this feeling has grown a corresponding inclination on the part of schoolmasters to discourage attendance of those whom their own wealthy patrons would wish to see excluded. In short, it becomes the interest of the master to make his school select. He may do this in different ways. He may raise the charges payable for day scholars to such an amount as practically to exclude the sons of all except the wealthier contents in the neighbourhood; or, as we have already intimated, he may render the school service essential to the wants of the pupils proposing to follow the possible of trade and manufacturing. He may also throw difficulties in the way of the admission of free scholars, or actually refuse to receive them."

Do you think that those observations apply to the grammar schools on Erasmus Smith's foundation?—I think they do not, for our head masters have shown no desire to raise the charges to such an extent as to exclude the sons of all but wealthy residents. On the contrary, I find them willing to throw open the advantages of these schools at very moderate charges. Moreover, they have not the power to do so. For instance, when Mr. Lindsay was appointed to Tipperary school he was about to fix £10 as the fee for day boys, while the sum previously charged in the school was only £3, but on the matter coming to the knowledge of the Board, they informed him that they would not sanction the proposed increase, and he at once consented to their wishes. As to the suggestion that the masters may render their schools unattractive to the wants of the people, I do not think that is the practice in our schools. A good commercial education is afforded; and as to the masters throwing difficulties in the way of free scholars, or actually refusing to receive them, they have no power to do anything of the kind. That is entirely in the hands of the Government. Our present head masters have shown great liberality, and are willing to admit any free pupil who has a fair claim.

1060. LEON JERMAN FRITHGUM.—Was Mr. Gray asked to report specially as to the free pupils?—Yes. We directed him to report on their condition. We thereby ascertained whether a boy's conduct and diligences entitled him to remain as a free pupil.

1061. Do you know if he investigated whether they were properly treated?—He did, and if he saw any difference of treatment he would inform us, but it is only fair to say that no such complaint has been made.

1062. From your experience of the management of schools, and from what you have told us about the boys following the masters from one place to another—as from Dundalk to Ennis, and also from Parnassstown to Galway—do you think the locality, considering it to be healthy and not subject to any immediately inconvenient conditions, has much to say to the success of a school?—I can give you one instance, that of Doctor Buge, who took a very large number of boys with him from Parnassstown to Galway. He is one of the first schoolmasters in Ireland, and has a most efficient staff, and notwithstanding that, he has not been able to keep up a large number of pupils in Galway, when those boys, who went with him from Parnassstown left, their places were not filled.

1063. You think, therefore, that locality, in that case, has been the weight that has pulled the school back again?—To a certain extent I think it has.

1064. You mentioned that a great number of boys were drawn away from our Irish schools to English schools; what is your experience as to the proportion of those who have succeeded at the learned professions, and in competitors, that have been educated in Irish schools, as contrasted with English?—The majority of those of all professions in Ireland, have been educated in Irish schools.

1065. Do not you think that as there is this large field to be filled up, there must always be a very general field for the useful action of education in Irish schools?—Certainly, and I should be very sorry to think it was not so.

3106. Would it be possible to maintain a provision for the education of those intending to follow the learned professions, but for the existence of endowed schools?—I do not think it would. There are not in the country private schools that would furnish the supplies to our professions.

3107. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you think that the existence of endowments prevents private enterprise?—I am sure if they did not exist schools would be started by private enterprise, but in that case there would be a great deal more indifference.

3108. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—With regard to the amount that would be paid at private schools, do you know any thing of the prices paid to Roman Catholic schools, to Jesuits, and others?—I do not.

3109. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—But you are aware they get what is outside political economy altogether—masters to teach in them for nothing?—There are some very admirable schools taught by Roman Catholic clergymen.

3110. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you know that the charge at Dulwich School, including washing, and repairs of clothes is forty-eight guineas a year?—It is a very low charge; I suppose the board must be of an inferior description.

3111. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The staff are not paid, they do their work for nothing, but the building is supplied?—I do not know the details or how the boys are treated.

3112. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you consider endowments of any value in an educational point of view?—I think they are of great value and of great importance, and I hope we will be able to make them more valuable.

3113. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—What steps are in contemplation for that purpose?—We have nothing in immediate contemplation, until we recover from the very heavy expenditure incurred to put our grammar schools into thorough order, and the additional expense in improvements; we hope hereafter to have a fair surplus of income available, and to apply that in improving the condition of our grammar schools. The Government are quite awake to the necessity that exists for increasing the allowance of the assistant masters. My theory is, that the head master should be, in a great measure, dependent upon what he should make by his scholars. This gives him a very direct interest in keeping up his numbers, and the efficiency of his school. He should be assisted to the greatest extent to enable him to have a really efficient staff of assistant masters; and we hope to do better for them as soon as ever our funds permit.

3114. Did the boarding school, from the beginning, form a part of each of these grammar schools?—I cannot say, but at any rate during the entire of the present century, all the schools except Galway have been boarding schools.

3115. The deed of foundation, and the various charters do not point to any boarding institution?—Not at all.

3116. They rather point to day schools?—I think so entirely.

3117. The boarding school is now looked upon as indispensable, because it is difficult to maintain a day school in the locality?—Quite so.

3118. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—What surplus do you anticipate that you will have hereafter?—We contemplate having in a short time, at least £1,000 a year free, and available for additional educational advantages, at the same time keeping the buildings in thorough repair: that we are determined to do.

3119. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The more you strengthen the day school in your institutions, the more you approach the intentions of the founder?—I think so too. As the Commissioners are aware, the establishment of English schools was not within the original intentions of the founder. They were afterwards carried out by our act, authorizing us to apply any portion of the surplus, after paying the necessary outgoings for other purposes in our charter, in the establishment of English schools through the country, which schools became synonymous practically with parish schools. These schools we established in different localities from time to time; the majority or them, at least any schoolhouses erected by the Government, have grants of lands, generally about two acres, made to the Government by proprietors who were anxious to have a school, under our Board, established in their locality. By these grants we are bound, in most cases, to expend a certain sum, generally about £300, in the erection of school buildings, and we are bound to maintain the schoolmaster, and instruct the children in the school, according to the religious opinions of the founder. We paid a salary generally of £30 a year. In most of the grants there was a clause of forfeiture in case of the school being discontinued; in which case the property was to be taken back by the landlord. In a short time, it came to be the case that the English schools were the largest source of expenditure, the amount being in the proportion of more than two to one, as compared with the expenditure on our grammar schools. In the year 1872, the attention of the Government was called to the want of system in our arrangements with reference to our English schools throughout the country. There was no classification of the schools. The masters or mistresses were not paid with any regard to the amount of work they had to do; in fact, every school stood upon its own particular circumstances.

3120. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How many English schools had you in 1873?—About 120. Accordingly, the matter was brought before the Government on the 25th October, 1873, and a resolution adopted:—

“Resolved.—That a Committee be appointed to inquire into the application of the funds of the Government to the maintenance of the English schools, and to report to the Board whether any and what changes should be made in the present arrangements, having regard to the requirements of the country as to religious education.”

This was after the Disestablishment of the Church, when, of course, there was a very great change in the resources of the Church with reference to education. The Committee appointed were—myself, as Treasurer, the Lord Primate, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Earl of Courtown, Lord Plunket, the Dean of St. Patrick's, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Provost of Trinity College, Sir Edward Brough, Bart., Rev. William C. Greene, William Digges La Touche, Edward Penndorfer, &c., and Anthony Leboy. We considered the question in all the bearings, and we made a report, which came before the Government in January, 1874.

3121. Read that report:—

“The Committee appointed by the Resolution of the Government, dated the 25th of October, 1873, having considered the several matters referred to them by that resolution, report as follows:—

“1. The subjects of their enquiries and recommendations may, for convenience, be divided into three parts. 1st. The present condition of the English Schools, and the improvements which may be made in these systems of management. 2nd. The general policy to be pursued by the Government in reference to those schools, and 3rd. The widening the contributions of pupils to the King's Hospital, Queen's College, or Queen's College, useful for the encouragement of the English Schools, and bringing them into connection therewith.

“First Part. 2. The condition of the English Schools has been shown to be in many respects unsatisfactory, no classification of their status, and the teachers are paid without any regard being systematically paid to the numbers and importance of the schools. In many instances the salaries of the teachers are insufficient, and very great difficulty has been experienced in retaining them in the service of the Government. The more efficient they are, the more inducements exist for them to seek more remunerative employments. The superior advantages held out to them by the Board of National Education have led many of their best masters from the schools of the Government. No means exist by which teachers can be prevented to more important posts when they show superior capacity, nor any by which, on the other hand, those who prove to be, or who become from age, unsuited for the management of the larger schools, can be removed to others which they would be competent to instruct.

"3. The Governors in most cases require the salaries paid by them to teachers to be supplemented from local resources, but these requirements appear not to have been established or regulated upon any principle, and are very unequal in their effect.

"4. To remedy these and other defects, the Committee recommended the adoption of the following system—

"(a.) That the English Schools be classified according to the average attendance of pupils at the last term inspection, as follows, viz.—

- "1st class, when such average attendance has exceeded 70
- "2nd class, when it has not exceeded 70, and has exceeded 50
- "3rd class, when it has not exceeded 50, and has exceeded 30
- "4th class, when it has not exceeded 30.

"(b.) That the amount of the salaries of the teachers shall be regulated by the classes of the schools to which they are appointed, and shall be as follows, viz.—

- "1st class, Master, £80. Mistress, £45.
- "2nd class, Master, £50. Mistress, £40.
- "3rd class, Master, £45. Mistress, £35.
- "4th class, Master, £40. Mistress, £30.

"These salaries are proposed on the assumption that residences are provided for the teachers, free of rent. Where that is not the case, the cost of free residence should be taken into consideration.

"(c.) That in cases where the salary at present paid to any existing teacher is more than that which would be payable under the foregoing scale, no variation shall be made in the salary till the next vacancy occurs; but that, if any such teacher shall be offered promotion to a higher class of school in which the remuneration of the teacher would be equal to that at present paid to him or her, and shall refuse to accept such offer, the Governors reserve to themselves the power to reduce the salary of such teacher to the amount payable under the foregoing scale.

"(d.) That in any case where the salary at present paid to any teacher is less than that which would be payable under the foregoing scale, a pro-rata increase up to the amount which would be payable shall be made if the Governors shall consider the teacher to merit such increase, and if the funds available for the purpose so permit.

"(e.) That each child attending an English school shall pay one penny per week, school fee. That these fees shall be the property of the teacher, and shall not be taken into account in estimating the salary. That they shall be collected by the teacher, whose duty it shall be to require the payment of them. That the teacher shall have no liability to request payment in any case, and that the superintendent shall have power to remit the same, and shall do so only in cases where he is satisfied of real inability to pay them.

"6. (f.) The Committee further recommended that as a general rule the Governors shall require that one-third of the salary of the teacher shall be supplied by local contributions, the Governors contributing the two-thirds. But that the Governors shall take into consideration the special circumstances of any district which shall be satisfactorily shown to them not to be able to contribute its proportion.

"(g.) That if a district shall fail to contribute its required proportion, the Governors shall either refuse to employ the teacher, and either employ one of an inferior class, or else close the school.

"8. That premiums for good attendance be discontinued after the 1st January, 1874.

"9. Second Part.—That the enquiry appended to the Committee to involve consideration of such general impurities as to require a full statement of the reasons which have led them to the conclusions presented to the Governors be adopted. That statement is as follows:—

"10. The circumstances of the country with regard to the primary education of the poor have been materially altered since the establishment of the system of English schools by the Government. These schools were first authorized by the Act of 10 Geo. I., in the year 1733, and have increased so much in number as to require an expenditure upon them of nearly £5,000 a year. They have been always established and conducted in connexion with the Church of Ireland, the superintendent being almost invariably the incumbent of the parish in which the school is situated. They are open alike to children of all religious denominations, provided that they conform to the regulations of the schools. They are now, however, staffed at, as might be expected, almost exclusively by Protestant children only, and of these the great majority are members of the Church of Ireland.

"11. The recent disencumbrance of the Irish Church has seriously interfered with the means of education of Protestant children. The burden of maintaining the parish schools, which has been largely borne by the clergy, cannot possibly be supported by them out of the slender stipends which they will in future receive. The parsonage, who must now support their Church out of their own resources, will in very many places, have too heavy calls upon them for this purpose, to be able to contribute adequately to the education of the poor. The salaries of parish clerks, who were also very frequently masters of the parish schools, afforded a substantial aid, but these will no longer be available. It is evident that from these causes there will be great difficulty in continuing to provide means for the education of the Protestant poor in most districts of Ireland. To meet this difficulty, as far as possible, the available resources of the Government may legitimately be applied. The other demands upon them, most of which are paramount to those of the English schools, must prevent their being able to apply to the latter any amount so much exceeding the amount now expended upon them. The only mode, therefore, of increasing the utility of the Government schools will be to direct their grants to those places which stand most in need of help, and which cannot procure it elsewhere.

"12. Another great change in the circumstances of the country as to the education of the poor has been the establishment of the system of National education. Its many and great advantages have not been stated of as largely as they might have been by the members of the Church of Ireland, for reasons which it is not either necessary or expedient to enter upon here. The Government have not, however, failed to observe the increasing tendency, probably induced in great measure by the necessity of the case, to except aid for parochial schools from the funds of the National Board. In places where the members of the Protestant children are sufficient to enable them, under the rules of that Board, to receive payment of the salaries of competent teachers, in addition to the school requisites and other aid afforded in such cases, the Committee are of opinion, that the parsonage having the power to avail themselves of grants from the funds supplied by the State, should not draw upon the limited amount at the disposal of the Government. If this were done it would enable the Governors to apply their funds to the maintenance and assistance of schools in localities where the numbers are too small to entitle them to adequate grants from the National Board. In very many of such localities the numbers are too few to entitle the schools to any aid, in others there are Protestant children sufficient to entitle them to partial assistance, such as payment of the salary of a monitor and supply of school requisites, or to the latter only. To such localities the assistance of the Government should be specially directed, and assistance afforded to supplement both local efforts and partial aid from the national funds. If this be not done the children of the Protestant poor must, in many districts, be left altogether without education, or obliged to obtain it in National Schools not under Protestant patronage. Most of these schools in those of the provinces are under the patronage and control of the Roman Catholic clergy, and, although the rules of the National Board in the nature of concessive classes may be obeyed, still it is impossible to avoid the danger that must arise from the influence flowing from such patronage, and from the large preponderance of children of the Roman Catholic persuasion, upon the general religious tone of a school.

"13. The Committee are fully conscious of the difficulties and opposition the Government may have to encounter in carrying out alterations in their existing arrangements with a view to give effect to the principles they have here expressed. They do not recommend the Government to make any sudden or violent changes, and they rely upon the good sense and Christian feeling of those who may be affected by any such alterations to yield such co-operation for the general good of the poor members of their Church.

"14. The Committee therefore recommended the Government to decline to afford assistance to any schools not already maintained by them, in localities where adequate funds from other sources can be obtained, and also, as opportunity shall present themselves, to withdraw the grants from

April 10, 1873.

April 18, 1877.—SchooLs which they shall consider to be in a position to obtain sufficient support either from private contributions, or the public funds. Any salary or stipend should be applied to the sustenance of localities not thus favorably circumstanced.

"15. The Commission recommended that in any case in which grants shall be so withdrawn from schools where the premises are vested in the Governors, such premises should not be voluntarily surrendered by them, and that under suitable regulations, the use of them should be permitted to patrons, approved by the Governors who may choose funds for the support of schools therein from other sources, the Governors also occupying as at present to keep such premises in repair.

"16. They also recommended that no separate schools for males and females shall be maintained in any district where the average attendance is less than twenty; and that in such cases the male and female schools be united under one teacher, either male or female, as the Governors shall deem best. The salaries of such teachers should, of course, be fixed according to the scale above recommended with regard to the number of pupils in the endowed school.

"Third Part.—17. The Commission reports that it would tend materially to promote the efficiency of the English schools if the whole or a part of the nominations of boys to the King's Hospital, Westminster, now made by the Treasurer of the schools, were offered as exhibitions to pupils educated in these schools. The Treasurer has expressed his desire to relinquish his right of nomination as far as may be necessary for the purpose of giving effect to this proposal.

16. (a) The Commission accordingly recommended that four nominations to the King's Hospital be offered each year for competition to the pupils of the English schools of the Governors, provided no vacancy occurs, and, if not, then such less number as the vacancies shall amount to.

(b) That an examination for such purpose be held in Dublin once in each year, at a time to be fixed for that purpose, which shall be open to all boys who shall have been educated entirely in the Governor's English schools for not less than two years next preceding.

(c) That the examination shall be held in the Irish Scriptures, Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, English Grammar, and Geography, and shall be conducted by such persons as the Governors shall appoint.

(d) That no candidate be eligible whose age will be less than eleven or more than twelve years at the time fixed for his admission to the King's Hospital.

(e) That each exhibition shall be tenable for not more than four years from the date of admission to the hospital, except as hereafter provided, and the holders of them shall be removable at any earlier period by resolution of the Governors. The Governors may, in any special case, by resolution, stating the reasons for the same, extend the time for holding an exhibition for not more than six months after the expiration of such four years, provided that so doing be not contrary to the regulations of the hospital.

(f) No boy shall be allowed to retain his exhibition who shall not by diligent and good conduct prove that he deserves to do so.

(g) That it shall not be necessary to avoid the full number of nominations at any such examination, if there be not a sufficient number of boys found properly qualified, and that no boy shall be nominated unless he shall be considered upon the result of the examination to have sufficient promise merit.

(h) That no boy shall be so nominated unless he shall be considered by the Governors of Erasmus Smith's Schools to be suitable in manners, habits, and other views, to associate with the other inmates of the hospital.

(i) That the Schools Committee shall have the charge of everything out the foregoing propositions, and shall be empowered to make and amend, from time to time, all such regulations for that purpose as they shall deem expedient.

(j) That the Treasurer shall retain his right to nominate to any vacancies not required for the foregoing purpose."

I may state, in explanation, that the persons having the control of our schools are—first, the patron, who is generally the gentleman through whose family we get the grant; and then the superintendent of the school, generally the clergyman of the parish.

3112. He corresponds to the manager under the National Board?—He does. He has the selection of the Master and Mistress, and has charge of the daily inspection of the school, and also of the religious instruction. In reference to the third part of the Report I have just read, there were thirty boys maintained by the Governors in the King's Hospital down to 1871. Twenty of these were chamber boys, whom we were bound to keep, the other ten were called Treasurers' boys, i.e., boys whose maintenance was paid for out of the Treasurer's pecuniary. These ten were discontinued when Harcourt-street school was founded.

3113. Did you nominate those ten?—I had the sole nomination of those boys. We pay somewhere about £30 a year each for the maintenance of the twenty in the Blue Coat Hospital. They receive a first-class commercial education, and some of them are taught Latin, and they are provided for by apprenticeship when out. Up to the date of that report I had the entire nomination of those boys, and I proposed that a certain number of the vacancies should be placed at the disposal of the Board for the purpose of founding exhibitions at the English schools. The report was adopted, and accordingly a classification was made by the Governors of the English schools, and a circular was sent round to all the patrons and superintendents—which is carrying out the first part of the report as to the discontinuation of the schools—with a power requirement as a general rule, of local contributions to the amount of one-third to the payment of the salaries, and pointing out that unless that contribution be maintained the grant may be withdrawn from the schools. On that system we have been working ever since.

3114. Do you advertise?—Yes, the circular was sent to all our patrons and superintendents, and the arrangement has been got into complete working order. There are two classes of school premises—one the vested schools, in which the majority of our English schools are held. These are schools built by the Governors upon grants in perpetuity. There are a number of other schools—probably little more than half—that we call non-vested schools. In those schools the property of the premises in which the school is held does not belong to the Governors, but to private individuals, who apply to us to take the schools under our charge, and put them under our system.

3115. LORD JUSTICE FRYER.—Then your assistance in the case of the non-vested schools is confined to advances of money and executing works on the building?—We put them on exactly the same footing, under the classification I mentioned.

3116. Since 1857, have any school sites been vested in the Board?—None.

3117. In how many of the localities, in which you present 105 English schools exist, are there schools under the National Board?—In most of the localities there are National schools; but we do not encourage sending our Protestant children to National schools under the patronage of a Roman Catholic.

3118. MR O'SHEA.—A Roman Catholic layman?—Either layman or clergyman. We would not withdraw our grant from an existing school on the ground that the children that are educated in it could also receive education at a National school in the immediate neighbourhood under the patronage of a Roman Catholic. We consider that our English schools are essentially Protestant, and, further, that they are Church of Ireland schools. As such we received them, and as such we keep them.

3119. LORD B. CAMPBELL.—How many of your present 105 schools exist in localities where there are already schools under Protestant patronage?—Several, almost entirely in Ulster. In some instances there are in the very same town or locality a school under the Presbyterian patron, a school under the Roman Catholic patron, and side by side with these one of our English schools.

3120. You told me yesterday that besides discontinuing a great many of the English schools some few had been recently founded?—Yes.

3121. Were they founded in localities where schools already existed?—In localities where there were National schools, already existing, but not under Protestant patronage. The patronage in the National schools is, of course, equivalent to management.

3122. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What books are in use in those schools?—I think almost entirely the books of the Commissioners of National Education.

3123. In several of the larger towns, for example, in Dundalk, you have two very large schools—in the boys school seventy pupils, and in the girls school fifty. Of course there are schools under other denominations in the town. In the Dundalk school one of your old schools, or one recently established?—Dundalk is one of the old schools.

3124. I find that sixty-one boys and seventy-four girls attend your school in Dungannon?—We have a very fine school in Dungannon.

3126. Lord R. CURZILL.—What are the total numbers attending your 105 English schools?—The males on the roll in 1878 numbered 2,508, and the females 2,419, total, 5,217. Of that number the Irish Church were 4,163, Protestant dissenters, 251, and Roman Catholics, 143.

3127. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What is the total cost of those schools?—The expenditure on them in the year 1878, for which I have given the numbers, was £3,688.

3128. You say that, in substance, you pay two-thirds of the expenses of those schools?—We give two-thirds of the salaries and pay half the expense of the repairs.

3129. Then we are to make the work in adding one-third only from other sources?—They cost something about £4,500 on the whole.

3130. That would show an expenditure on those schools, which educate 5,217 children, of under £1 a head?—That is so.

3131. Lord R. CURZILL.—The report you read complains that the masters and mistresses were situated away by the superior salaries of the National Board?—Since that a new system has been established by the National Board of paying by results, and the amount that can be earned by a good teacher under the National Board now, will in a great many instances considerably exceed the amount we can afford to give them.

3132. You have not adopted the system of paying by results?—We have considered it, but never adopted it, save to this extent, that a portion of the salary, usually, consists of a gratuity of £5 a year, which depends entirely on the report the inspectors make of the state of the school. If he is quite satisfied he allows the full gratuity; if not, he allows a reduced amount, and if he thinks the master not entitled to any gratuity, he stops the entire.

3133. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What has been the result of your arrangements as to the Blue Coat Hospital?—Some very good boys go up. The examination is held every summer—in June—by two of the undersecretaries of Hiscourt street school, who are paid two guineas each for holding it, and generally one or two of the Governors, who can spare time for the purpose, are present during the examination. Bro. Mr. Gwynne and Rev. Mr. Poole, &c. &c. very often attend. Some of our boys have done uncommonly well after getting into the Blue Coat Hospital.

3134. What is the extent of the competition?—We have not had so much as I would expect.

3135. I presume the masters would have an opportunity of knowing reasonably well beforehand the chances a boy would have?—They are always informed beforehand what number of vacancies are to be given away. A day is fixed, and there is a course prescribed for the preparation of the boys for the purpose of the examination.

3136. What is the largest number of competitors you have had?—Not more than five or six.

3137. Lord R. CURZILL.—I suppose your inspector does all he can in his annual inspection to see whether there are candidates, and to make known the advantages?—I am sure he does.

3138. Do any of your 105 English schools receive grants from the National Board?—None.

3139. What is the process now that precludes them from so doing?—They do not adopt the rules of the National Board. There is no such thing as a concurrence change in our schools.

3140. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Your schools are conducted in accordance with the original deed, which directs the Church Catechism and certain portions of Scripture to be taught?—They are.

3141. Lord R. CURZILL.—In your object now to come to the assistance of the Dissatisfied Irish Church, and to prevent the Protestant children, in certain localities, from being obliged to resort to the national system of education?—From being forced to accept the national system of education under the management of persons who are not members of the Irish Church.

3142. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Would there be an equal objection where the manager was a Presbyterian or a Methodist?—I am sure there would.

3143. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—That is, you would not withdraw your grant, on the ground of the existence of a school under the patronage of a dissenting minister?—I may say positively that we would not withdraw our grant, unless we could say to the Superintendent, who is generally the parochial clergyman, "You have such a number of children as will enable you to obtain an adequate grant and adequate remuneration under the National Board. Therefore you must put yourself under that. We will no longer pay you."

3144. You would withdraw your grant if there were the means of establishing a school under the National Board, of which, according to the rules of the Board, the superintendent of your school would be himself the person?—Certainly, and we have done so in many cases.

3145. Do you think there will be any further reduction in the number of your English schools?—Yes, but it can only be done gradually. In many localities, where we have schools at present, we will be in a condition, by and by, to compel them to put their schools under the National Board, but we will probably have calls upon us in other directions, because poor localities that have not a sufficient number of children to obtain grants may ask us for assistance, and we have in a few cases since the making of our report given assistance under such circumstances.

3146. Are there many localities, particularly in the southern provinces, where there is no school available for a not inconsiderable number of Protestant children, except one under Roman Catholic patronage?—There are a great many such localities, from which we have had applications, with which we would have been glad to comply if we had the means.

3147. You have not fixed a limit as to numbers?—No. We have given a grant where the numbers do not come up to 20, but a small school must be on inefficient one.

3148. The smallest I have found, looking over Mr. Radkin's returns, has an attendance of 21?—There is one case in which the number has gone so low as 14, and in George school there are only 6 children. That is a school which, if there were any possible means of providing for the children elsewhere, ought not to be continued.

3149. Lord R. CURZILL.—What does the master of that school get?—That school is only under a mistress, and she gets £25 a year, of which we pay two-thirds and the locality one-third.

3150. Are there monies in your schools?—We appoint a monitor in any of our English schools where the number of pupils exceeds 45, and an additional monitor for every 30 over that number. In mixed schools, where there are male and female pupils together, under a master, we also employ a mistress at a small salary to teach needlework, and assist in the teaching of the younger children. She is something of a better class mistress, and gets about £12 a year. A mistress gets 28.

3151. I suppose the Commissioners may take it, that whereas, in 1857, the first object with your Board was the English and the second the grammar schools, in 1879 that is totally reversed, and that your first object is now the grammar schools, and your second the English schools?—I would not like to go so far as that, I think we ought to have equal regard to two considerations—one, making our grammar schools efficient, the other, devoting an adequate portion of our income to the maintenance of English schools, in localities where they cannot have education otherwise. My individual opinion is, that the grammar schools have not yet received a sufficient share of the funds of the Board, and that we ought to equalize more nearly the application of our funds, and give a larger share to the grammar schools than they have at present. That may entail the reduction, to a certain extent, of the amount paid to English schools.

3152. You do not consider that the established national system of education, now so widely diffused, has at all interfered with the necessity for the Erasmus Smith's Board to keep up English schools?—I think it has interfered with it to a very great degree, but not altogether.

3153. This is the report of Lord Power's Commission on that point:—

"The National system now provides all parts of Ireland with the means of primary instruction, open to all denominations, raising the people. Secondary instruction is still deficient. It is precisely this secondary instruction which Erasmus Smith's endowment was designed to supply; and we think that the trust funds may be devoted to the purpose with great advantage."

I do not go the full length of that, for in my opinion the National Board has not provided primary education to the extent there mentioned. For this reason: I think that if the National Board had been worked upon the original plan, and that the schools had been all vested schools, and retained under the entire control of the Board, who should take care to impart to all pupils attending these a thorough secular education, and should also require that the children of the different religious denominations attending should obtain religious education from their own teachers, and if they interfered the assistance clause, and prevented interference with the religious instruction of the children, in that case there would be no ground for maintaining the Erasmus Smith's English schools. That has not been the working of the system which is becoming practically a denominational system in all the provinces except Ulster. There is now scarcely anything like mixed education in the National schools.

The great majority are under the patronage of the Roman Catholic Clergy; and I do not think it can be said that education is provided, in the schools of the National system, for Protestant children, if they must be sent to a school where the manager is a Roman Catholic clergyman, for one of the fundamental principles of the Roman Catholic religion is that the Church stands at the head of everything; and every endeavour that can be made is made to bring into the fold of the Church those outside it, and in addition to that, I do believe that the very large preponderance of Roman Catholics in schools under such management, would lead, indirectly, to affecting the religious opinions of the few Protestant children that would attend them.

3154. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you ever known of any attempt, by a Roman Catholic Clergyman or patron, in those National schools, to interfere with the religion of the Protestant pupils?—I never have; for

I have no experience whatsoever on the subject, nor have I any reason for thinking, as a matter of fact, that such interference has taken place.

3155. Do you complain rather that the tone is calculated to bring boys over to the Catholic Faith, than of any direct violation of rules?—I should not be at all disposed to complain of Roman Catholic Clergymen objecting to Roman Catholic children attending one of our English schools where the Scripture is read, and the Catechism taught, but I should myself prefer, if feasible, that children of all religions should be educated together, so far as secular matters are concerned.

3156. Lord E. CHURCHILL.—Does the necessity for Erasmus Smith's Board expending large sums yearly for primary education arise, in your opinion, from a distinct departure by the National Board from their original scheme of education?—Certainly.

3157. Lord Justice FRYGEBORN.—This is a question of great importance, and one on which strong opinions are entertained by different people.—"Qual volens, rursus credens." You are not one of those who in this matter advocate the refusal by Protestants of what they can get?—On the contrary; I to the utmost of my power, advocate their accepting it.

3158. You believe that Protestants can get a good primary education, under the rules of the National Board, in secular matters?—I think they can, and also have full opportunities for religious education from their clergy.

3159. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—According to the system of the Board?—According to the existing practice.

3160. Lord Justice FRYGEBORN.—Are you aware that, according to the rules of the National Board, they will not establish one National school within a certain fixed distance of another, except a certain number of children are actually in it?—I believe that is so.

3161. Are there many places through Ireland, according to your experience, where there are some Protestant children in a neighbourhood, in which there is a convent National school, and perhaps also a monastic National school?—A great many.

3162. Are you also aware that, according to the rules of the National Board, where the numbers are small the assistance is very limited?—Very limited. They begin by supplying school requisites; where the number of children attending is between fifteen and twenty-five, a monitor's salary, from £12 to £15 a year, is paid, and they require an attendance of from thirty to forty pupils before they give an allowance for a master, even of the lowest grade.

3163. Are there a large number of localities in Ireland where there are Protestant children, too few to reach the number necessary to get assistance for a new school from the National Board, and who would have no school available except one in a convent or monastery?—That is the case.

3164. Do you think an education under the rules of the National Board, satisfactory to Protestant parents, could be had for their children in monastic institutions?—Certainly not. I am not disposed to sympathize with the objections that have been raised to putting schools under the National Board, merely from an objection to the principle. I think that the children of Protestants, whether Irish Church or Protestant dissenters, can be educated with perfect safety, and with full attention to their religious instruction, in schools under the National Board, provided they are under the management of persons of their own religion.

3165. Do you think that in the case, or could possibly be the case, in a school where the actual building belongs to a monastic institution?—Certainly not.

3166. Lord E. CHURCHILL.—Is it only a matter of opinion, or is it based on positive experience, that a satisfactory education cannot be had by a Protestant child in such a school?—I think it is a matter of positive fact, that Protestant parents will not be satisfied with allowing their children to go, for their education, into a convent school.

3167. Although it may be under the rule of the National Board?—Although it may be under the rule of the National Board. I do believe that the National Board system has practically become a denominational system.

3168. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In the south and west of Ireland?—Yes.

3169. And in the north you say denominational systems—in the phernal?—Yes. In the other provinces, I believe, they chiefly consist of schools under Roman Catholic managers, and that the other schools are not mixed schools, but under Protestant managers where Protestant children go, and practically in that way it has worked out now to be a denominational system.

3170. I suppose you are aware that in the south and west there are a great many schools, frequented by Roman Catholic children, under Protestant management?—There are, and there are Protestants in schools under Roman Catholic management.

3171. You would not call that a denominational development of the National Board?—Certainly not, but there are exceptional cases. The great majority are the other way.

3172. You have not had any evidence before your Board that Protestant parents have been unable to obtain education for their children, owing to the fact that the only schools in their neighbourhood were convent schools?—If you were to ask me to point to particular instances where this existed, I could not do so, but I believe such instances do exist, and are very numerous.

3173. LORD JERVIS FRYGEMAN.—You have told us already that you are aware, from the applications that come to you, that there do exist, in fact, a large number of places where such schools as you establish are usually employed in teaching a small number of Protestant children in the midst of a Roman Catholic population?—I am aware of that as a fact.

3174. Before establishing a school, do you endeavour to ascertain that there are, as a matter of fact, a sufficient number of children to take advantage of it?—Certainly, and we refuse to found a school, or take up a school, if we are satisfied that there is a sufficient number of Protestant children in the district to enable the persons who apply to us to obtain a good from the National Board under his own management.

3175. LORD JERVIS FRYGEMAN.—You only found a school where there are a smaller number of Protestant children than that for which the National Board will pay a master and take a school under its control?—There is not any general rule on the subject; but the principle on which we act is, not to grant aid from our funds where we think it can be obtained from the National Board.

3176. LORD JERVIS FRYGEMAN.—The Commissioner who reported on this subject in 1837, said:—

"From 1830 to 1843, . . . they founded fifty-two new schools for the poorer classes, whose education was then most amply provided for by the large Parliamentary grants to the National Board. . . . But it must be observed that this wider development of the system of the English schools diminished their power to promote the education of the middle classes."

Do you now found schools whose education is provided for by the Parliamentary grant?—In no instance.

3177. Or from any ambition to establish schools superior to those of the National Board?—Certainly not. I think the National Schools are admirable ones; and if our schools are kept up to the standard of the National Schools, we ought to be very well satisfied.

3178. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—There are 150 Roman Catholics attending your schools?—Yes; that is the return, viz., 1 in Angharady; 3 in Bandon; 16 in Ballycary, county Wexford; 7 in Colton, county Louth; 1 in Derrydon; 12 in Doon, county Limerick (I think they are chiefly our tenants' children); 7 in Lisnas; 1 in Lurgan; 6 in Mountcharles, county Donegal; 3 in Mountnewton; 7 in Mullafery, county Mayo; 10 in Newtownhamilton, 6 in Oveston; 15 in Ruchill, county Antrim; 4 in Seafert, 1 in Tamlaght; 1 in Templemore, 24 in Upper Cumber, county Down; 2 in Tyran, and 23 in Gortin, county Tyrone.

3179. Many of the places, where you have a number of Roman Catholics, appear to be in districts where it is more than probable that it would be difficult to provide a sufficient number of Roman Catholics to bring a school under the National Board?—That may be so; I don't know the fact.

3180. In those schools you have a rule compelling the reading of the Scriptures, and the teaching of the Church Catechism?—Yes.

3181. And you enforce it?—We cordially enforce it, so far as Protestant children are concerned.

3182. Do you enforce it on the Roman Catholic children?—The Catechism is not taught. The rule in our English schools is this:—

"On every day all people who have attained a suitable proficiency shall read to the master or assistant a portion in the Bible, the master or assistant shall then examine the pupils as to their understanding what they have read, and explain the sense in plain language, without entering into any controversial matters."

3183. You spoke of the influence of Roman Catholic schools on the loss of Protestant children attending them?—Yes.

3185. Do not you think that there must be a greater influence, on Roman Catholic children, in your English schools, where actually religious instruction, to some extent, is given to them?—I think not. My opinion is that as the Holy Scriptures are taken to be the common basis of both religions, Roman Catholics should, with perfect safety to their religion, afford to have the Scriptures read by their children, and that that would not amount to proselytising. If we went beyond that, and gave instruction in the tenets of the Protestant faith, that would undoubtedly be very dangerous to the Roman Catholic children if they attended such Protestant schools; and the converse would apply if Protestant children attended Roman Catholic schools. But, to say more, one great difficulty in the way of Protestant children attending schools under Roman Catholic patronage is, that in almost all those schools there is a vast preponderance of the Roman Catholic element; and whatever way the large preponderance is in a school, in that direction will the religious tone of the school necessarily turn.

3186. There is not merely the reading of the Scriptures, but explanation is given by the teacher, in your schools?—Yes.

3187. Suppose the text involves a doctrinal, or rather a controversial, aspect of religion, do not you think there may be danger to the Roman Catholic mind in the explanation?—There may be.

3188. Although you cannot see any great danger to Roman Catholic children in your Protestant schools, still you would not wish to see the Scriptures read and expounded in the Roman Catholic schools, to Protestant children, by a Roman Catholic master?—I confess I would not.

3189. Have you ever insisted on the application of the rule, as to the reading of the Scriptures, in the case of Roman Catholic children?—Our desire is that it should be observed with respect to all children.

3190. You have no wish to depart from that rule?—We have not. I consider our schools are strictly Protestant schools; but, at the same time, we will be very glad to receive Roman Catholic children into them, and to pledge ourselves that no proselytising shall be permitted there. As in the other case, there will naturally be some tendency to religious influence, arising from a large prepon-denance of the Protestant persuasion, and possibly from the teacher being a Protestant.

3191. And that you think it desirable to object to in the case of a small number of Catholics as a Protestant school?—I do.

3192. In the grammar schools you do not insist on the observance of the rule as to the reading of the Scriptures?—That is so. The children of the better class must receive a large amount of religious instruction at home. Their parents will not have discharged their duty to them if they do not personally instruct them; and they will also be in a position to see that their religious instruction may be usefully left in the way I stated yesterday in our grammar schools. But I do not think the same safeguard exists in the English schools. In my opinion, no education can be really beneficial except it be based on religion. I think, therefore, that religious instruction should be secured to every child, as a most material part of his education. I believe that that object cannot be satisfactorily attained in reference to the poor children whose parents, from ignorance or godlessness, are not so capable of instructing them in religion as the parents of the better class, or may not be so active in looking after their religious instruction, or may have motives to induce them not to look to it. For these reasons it is more important to insist on the strict enforcement of religious instruction in our English schools than in our grammar schools.

3193. Do you say that the children of the lower class come, as a rule, more untaught in religion than the children of the upper class?—I do.

3194. That being so, is there not greater danger to the Roman Catholics in the English schools from the reading of the Scriptures, than in the grammar schools?—I think it very probably so. I should wish to state that as the questions I am now answering to Mr. O'Shaughnessy, with very great pleasure, to the best of my ability, I am merely stating my own individual opinions, and I am not in the slightest degree offering an opinion supposed to emanate from any other member of the Board but myself.

3195. Do you think that it would interfere with the religion of the Protestant pupils, in your English schools, if you were to extend the same rigorous regulation, with regard to Roman Catholic boys, to the English schools that you do to the grammar schools?—I think that it would not be safe to do so. I think that in that case we considered we were bound—though, perhaps, that is not a very logical way of answering the question—by the original constitution of our schools and the wishes of the gentlemen who provided the property. I believe if we were strictly to abide by the directions of Erasmus Smith, we should insist on religious instruction, according to the tenets of our Church, being imparted in all our schools, whether grammar or English schools; but the practice of the governors has been, not to look to it so closely in the grammar as in the English schools.

3196. LORD B. CECILIA.—If you did not keep the English schools shut for the children of your own Church, there would be no necessity for them?—I think none whatever. The necessity would cease at once. If we did not preserve the strictly Protestant character of our English schools, I think the reason for their existence would cease.

3197. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—And with that reason would cease the existence of any of the Protestant schools in the locality?—Certainly.

3198. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—So far as Protestant children are concerned, the religious aspect of the school would not be altered, by allowing Roman Catholic children to escape the instruction in the Scriptures?—I think that is so.

3199. Can you, then, point out any reason why the same latitude which you allow to Roman Catholic children in the grammar schools, should not also be allowed to Roman Catholic children in the English schools?—I can give no logical reason for it; but I think the reasons I have given, as matters of expediency, may perhaps warrant us in pursuing a different course in the two cases.

3200. You are desirous to have Roman Catholic children at these English schools?—We will be very glad to have them if they wish to come; but we do not make any efforts to bring them in. They come in perfectly voluntarily, as we offer them no inducement except education. There is no attempt at proselytizing in any shape or form; but the schools are open, and Roman Catholic children are welcome if they come. The schools, however, were established mainly to benefit the Protestant children of the country.

3201. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—Are you not bound by the deeds of foundation of your English schools to teach the Scriptures to all the children?—The deeds of foundation were from individuals granting fees, and generally putting in under contracts to build a school-house, to keep it in repair, and maintain the master at a certain fixed salary, and teach the children in the Scriptures and church catechism in most of them, and in default of doing this that there would be power to remove possession.

3202. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is the class of boys that go to the Blue Coat Hospital socially as high as the day boys, in your grammar schools?—I think as high as the day boys, but not as high as the boarders.

3203. Is the commercial education in the grammar schools as high as is afforded at the Blue Coat Hospital?—The education in our schools is rather higher.

3204. Is the Blue Coat Hospital a purely Protestant institution?—It is.

3205.—Do you think the removal from Roman Catholic children, in your English schools, of the compulsion to read the Scriptures, would interfere with the faith or religion of the Protestant children?—Certainly not.

3206. Do you not think that it would be fair to give the Roman Catholic children attending your schools some security, in the nature of an exemption from the rule, against the prepossession of Protestant feeling in the schools?—If you asked me in reference to a perfectly free foundation, I would say, I see no objection to that exception.

3207. What weight with you are the dispositions in the will of Erasmus Smith?—The dispositions of Erasmus Smith, and the general principle on which the schools were established and have since been conducted. We get them under a course in which they had been originally founded and since carried on; and we have not considered ourselves at liberty to depart from that system in the particulars you have mentioned, which are supposed by us to be the essentials of the foundation, in some branch of the schools.

3208. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—This matter was before Mr. Smith's own mind, in his lifetime, long after he established the schools. He says:—

"My design is not to reflect upon any, only I give my judgment why these schools are so constructed, which was, and is, and will be (if not prevented), the many Papish schools, their neighbours, which, as success, do drive the true. If parents will exclude their children from prayers, exercises, and exposition is commanded, I would let it, for to remove that leave us to make these schools of Papery. I beseech you to command him that shall be provoked and aggrieved, by your license to oblige them that desire these duties, and expel them, which will oblige."

Do you know any instance where a strong wish of that kind, expressed by the owner of property given for charitable purposes, has been over-ruled either by law or by Act of Parliament?—I think not; and I should feel myself bound judicially if I were sitting a judge, to give effect, to the utmost of my power, to the wishes of the founder.

3209. When you told Mr. O'Shaughnessy this was not a free foundation, did you allude to the fact that the property you were disposing of was not the government's but Erasmus Smith's?—Certainly.

3210. LORD R. CRENSHAW.—Do you not consider that the government themselves totally altered the original bequest of the founder?—In some respects I do. There are several matters connected with the original constitution of the schools, which show that Erasmus Smith intended the grant to be applied to necessities among one of the three states of the country. By degrees those necessities altered, therefore the reason for applying the funds altered too; and by imperceptible degrees the schools became altered, in some respects, from the original directions of the will. For instance, I think there was no intention, originally, that there should be any boarding schools. I think also the schools were originally intended for persons of a poorer class than those attending our grammar schools, but that has grown up gradually and imperceptibly for a couple of centuries from the changes in the circumstances of the country; and this Board has gone on adding itself to the requirements of the age, without any actual step that can be called a wilful violation of the wishes of the founder.

3211. LORD JEREMY BENTHAM.—There are changes in keeping with the circumstances of the country. Does your answer remain the same in reference to such a change, as a change from being a Protestant to a Roman Catholic clergy?—That would be a fundamental change, and, moreover, I would say it would be a fundamental change, to change what was fundamentally a religious institution into a secular institution.

3212. CHAIRMAN.—Do you consider that there is any obligation on the government, to select for a school a locality where the scholars are situated, in preference to any other locality?—I think that ought to be a very important element in the consideration of the government. If an application were made to establish an English school, their own estates would have the first claim, and if the want existed and the application were made, the government would establish it.

3213. LORD JEREMY BENTHAM.—What is your practice as to making new lettings, or renewing the lease from time to time?—Our agricultural leases are, under our charter, twenty-one-year leases.

3214. In 1857, the government had generally given twenty-one-year leases on the Galway estate; but there were no leases at all upon the Limerick and Tipperary estates?—Yes.

3215. Does that renounce so still?—Not to the same extent. There are some leases, but the great majority of holdings are from year to year.

3216. Where a tenancy from year to year exists, or when you are applied to for a lease, how do you ascertain the value of the land?—We always require our agent to report to us his opinion of the fair letting value of the farm, and we direct him to let the farm at its fair letting value.

3217. Have you had frequently before you changes of tenancy?—Very frequently, and we investigate every case separately.

3218. Does such a thing happen as the agent himself making a letting to a new tenant and retaining him, when in possession, on his rental?—I do not know any instance of the kind, and if there were it would be a dereliction of duty. The Board, not the agent, should make the lettings. I may say the practice seems to exist of making a revaluation of the estate every twenty years. It originated very much in the twenty-one-year leases; and the tenantry on the estate, when the period of twenty-one years is drawing to a close, expect a revaluation, and there has been no practical difficulty experienced in bringing up the rents to any fair increase. We have a revaluation in contemplation at present.

3219. I find by the report of 1857, that the practice of letting the lands on leases had formerly existed without preventing the houses from sub-letting?—The old form of lease was objectionable on two grounds—there was no covenant against sub-letting, and none to prevent the tenant from exhausting his farm by improper cultivation.

3220. Are the present leases open to those objections?—Certainly not, there are strict clauses, against assigning or sub-letting, without the consent of the government, and there are the usual covenants for good repair, good husbandry, and so forth.

3221. It is stated that up to the year 1840, almost the entire of the Limerick estate was let to middlemen. Is that estate let to middlemen at present?—No. We deal directly with the tenants and discontinue any letting to middlemen; we have to the utmost of our power prevented the yearly tenants from selling their interests.

3222. Where a tenant is anxious to leave, what course do you take?—Compel him to surrender.

3223. Have you ever given any sum of money to tenants when giving up possession?—In very few instances; it cannot be considered the practice of the estate.

3224. Have you made any expenditure for improvements?—At one place we have been at very great expense for arterial drainage.

3225. Was that carried out by the Board of Works?—Yes, compulsorily. We carry out improvements in drainage ourselves as well, and have made a good many drains.

3226. Where you do draining and work of that sort, what steps have you taken, first to ascertain the necessity of the work, and then that it is of value?—We send an engineer to report. A contract is taken in the usual way, and our agent is responsible to us to see that the contract is fulfilled.

3227. Have you both a contractor and an engineer, independently of your agent?—In heavy cases we have; but not, of course, for trifling drains which would cost only £40 or £50. These are done by contract under the agent.

3228. Have you in all cases made the expenditure under contract?—As far as I am aware we have. There may have been some small jobs carried out by day work, but it is generally done by contract.

3229. There is an Act of Parliament empowering you to give renewals of leases on your Galway estate?—Yes, Moore's Act, which authorises 41 year leases.

3230. Is the whole of the Galway estate let on leases?—No; only what is within the borough, as Moore's Act.

3231. Are any of the town lots held by tenants at will?—A few of them are.

3232. Are there any steps taken to get the highest rent?—The agent is bound to see to that, when any holding becomes vacant, and he must communicate with us, as he has no authority to make a letting.

3233. The Sligo estate is stated in the report of 1857 to be valued according to Griffith's valuation, at £285 17s 1d, and this statement is made about —,

"Before the last letting the portions of the estate near the town of Sligo were let at £442 17s 9d, which was £156 9s 6d more than the present rent. The former rent seems to have been rather high, and the present too low. The latter is to be accounted for by the time at which the present leases were made, in 1851, when the value of land was very much depressed. The leases are for twenty-one years. There are no arrears due on the Sligo estate, but for the years 1847 to 1850 some leases were sustained by part of what is now unrented."

What course has been taken as to the Sligo estate?—There were some leases made very recently. One to the Right Hon. John Wynn, another to Sir Robert Gore Booth, and some to other tenants. The rental is now £455. We never let without a valuation. The Galway lettings were on the valuation of Mr. Bessington, of the firm of Bessington and Gale.

3234. CHAIRMAN.—In the case of the drainage of an estate, I suppose you recover part of the annual payments from the tenants in the usual way?—They repay a large portion of them; but, unfortunately, the Malabar drainage has turned out to be a more expensive job than we intended.

3335. What surveys or maps have you got of your estates?—We have beautiful surveys on which we are working up to the present time, and a succession of maps, by reference to which Mr. Mansell was enabled to establish our rights in an important matter.

3336. Have you a fine proof town?—We have. It was constructed by Mr. McCurdy. Our manuscripts are kept there.

3337. Is Mr. McCurdy your regular architect?—No, Mr. Symes. He was appointed by Mr. Bowley, but Mr. McCurdy was employed as the architect for the heavy work we had upon this house, which cost us nearly £4,000.

3338. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Looking at the survey you have produced, I find it is not only a survey and statement of quantities, but that it contains a description of each holding?—It is a most useful document.

3339. Have you had a tenancy book made out?—Yes; Mr. Mansell has prepared a most perfect book, containing an abstract of all leases and documents relating to the property of the Board.

Mr. John
Mansell.

Mr. JOHN MANSSELL, examined.

3240. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are the solicitor to the Board of Governors of Erasmus Smith's schools?—I am. I was appointed to that position in 1873.

3241. When was the list of tenants, which you have produced, prepared?—In 1876. We had some difficulty in getting up all the tenants' leases. There were 1,400 or 1,500 tenants, from time to time, to different persons. I had to classify all those, and they were scheduled and placed according to the rental. There is a rental number on each lease, according to which it is placed in the suit. The number in the margin of the rental refers to the number of the lease, so that it can be got at whenever required.

3242. When was the form of the twenty-one-year lease settled?—Immediately after my appointment.

3243. Did it vary from the form in evidence up to that time?—It did.

3244. There was a new form of lease having regard to the Land Act of 1870?—Quite so.

3245. Are the tenancies from year to year created by writing?—Yes; we have a form on which all new lettings are made.

3246. Have you been engaged in any proceedings against tenants?—When first I was appointed, there were very large arrears of rent due by some of the tenants, and I threatened proceedings against them. The effect was that I got in almost all the arrears.

3247. Were you able in all cases to recover the amount due?—There was one instance of a very poor tenant, and the governors accepted a reduction.

3248. What amount of rent did you recover, by your action at that time?—Upwards of £2,000 of arrears.

3249. Had there been any proceedings taken in the Civil Bill Court?—There had.

3250. How were those taken?—The matter was generally reported to me by the agent, and where there was a suitable case for proceedings in the Civil Bill Court, it was placed in the hands of a lead solicitor.

3251. Have you had any judgments at all?—Two or three; but there was only one instance in which we executed a distress.

3252. You furnish your bill of costs to the governors direct, and are paid by them?—Yes.

3253. You have great experience as solicitor in large estates, including those of the Representative Body of the Church of Ireland?—I have.

3254. In case it became necessary for you to identify, in any legal proceeding, the actual land held by any tenant, what documentary means do you possess of doing that?—If he holds under lease there is not the slightest difficulty, because there is a map attached to every lease.

3255. In case of tenancies from year to year what maps or surveys have you to refer to?—The last map was made in 1840, and by that the land held from you to year can be identified quite easily. There is a number on the map and a reference to each holding.

Mr. William
Henry Rodkin.

Mr. WILLIAM HENRY RODKIN, examined.

3256. CHAIRMAN.—You are inspector of the English schools under the Board of Erasmus Smith?—I am sole inspector. I was appointed in 1859.

3257. How often do you inspect the schools?—Twice a year.

3258. You examine them through the whole course of instruction?—The entire course, from the most advanced to the youngest child in the school, and both in secular and religious instruction.

3259. Of course your examination in religious instruction is confined to the Church members that attend the school?—None but Church children are required to repeat the catechism; but under the rule of the Board, in reference to Scripture, the teachers are required to examine the children as to their understanding what they have read, and to explain the sense in plain language, without entering into any controversial matters. I require the strictest adherence on the part of the teachers to that position of the rule which forbids them to put any question of a controversial nature. If a verse occurs in the reading of the Scriptures in which a controversial point is contained, the teacher must put no question on that verse, but pass on to the next, merely questioning the children on the plain text. I myself appoint the particular portions of Scripture which are to be prepared against the next examination. I generally give one book in the Old Testament and one book in the New, and I confine them altogether to the historical books—from Genesis to Joshua in the Old Testament, and the Four Gospels and the Acts of the Apostles in the New. I never give them the more abstruse portions of the New Testament. I have never had any complaint against any teacher of a breach of that rule; but such a complaint been made, I would have reported to the governors, who would have taken immediate action upon it.

3260. What amount of time do you spend in examining each school?—On an average between three and a half and four hours.

3261. I suppose you spend the working portion of your time inspecting the schools?—I have no other occupation.

3262. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I believe you occasionally inspect schools, for some of the other educational bodies?—If I have any spare time during my holidays, I do so.

3263. What schools have you inspected besides those of Erasmus Smith?—St. Peter's, Dublin, which is a large parochial school.

3264. It is endowed with a considerable amount of property under the direct charge of the clergy of the parish?—I believe so.

3265. Both boarding and day schools?—Yes.

3266. Have you inspected any other schools?—Yes. Schools in the dioceses of Cabel and Waterford.

3267. Lord R. CROMWELL.—Are those still in existence?—Yes; but there are not many.

3268. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I believe you yourself had a large and successful day school in Dublin?—I had a day and boarding school.

3273. What was the largest number you had, counting day scholars and boarders?—About 150. I had two houses in Regent-street, and in addition had to build a large school-house which cost me £700.

3274. At that time there was also a very large school in Harcourt-street?—Yes, Mr. Flynn's.

3275. Was your school a high class classical and mathematical school?—Certainly; I prepared my pupils for the university. Some of the first men in Dublin have been educated by me.

3276. Was Mr. Flynn's school of the same class?—Yes.

3277. How many were attending it?—It was generally a larger school than mine.

3278. After Mr. Flynn's death what became of it?—It was continued by several gentlemen. Mr. Dundas had it, and after him Mr. Rice.

3279. You are aware that it diminished in numbers, and finally ceased to exist?—I believe so.

3280. There was a third school, at the immediate neighbourhood, in Stephen's-green?—Yes, Mr. Dundas had a school there before he took up Mr. Flynn's.

3281. Had he also a large school of the same class?—I think so.

3282. From your experience of these schools, can you tell whether there is, in your opinion, a class of boys, to the numbers the Government expect, who would take advantage of the higher education given in the school established here?—I think from this particular locality, which is a densely populated one, there ought to be a larger number attending the school than at present.

3283. Do you think the supply of boys exists, if they could be attracted to the school?—I think so.

3284. Is the state of education in the larger English schools under this Board better or worse than it is in the parochial or other schools which you have examined?—I have had very extensive and varied experience in the matter of schools, not only in Ireland but also in England, and I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that there are no schools under any Board in the United Kingdom superior in point of efficiency to the English schools of the Erasmus Smith's Board.

3285. If one of those schools should fall below the proper level of merit, what steps would you take in the matter?—My practice is, in the first instance, to warn the teacher that unless there be an improvement his gratuity will be reduced. The full amount of gratuity allowed is £5, and I have the power of reducing it to nil. If that has not the proper effect I make a report to the Governors. They generally send a letter of caution, and if that has no effect they remove the teacher. No teacher is ever removed without sufficient warning.

3286. Are the teachers removed if, after warning, the efficiency of the school does not come up to what it ought to be?—Certainly.

3287. Have there been many instances in the last three or four years?—Not in the last three or four years. When I was first appointed, twenty years ago, I found the schools in a very low state of efficiency, so much so that in the case of twenty or twenty-five teachers I found it necessary to warn them, and about half of them were removed in consequence of there being no improvement in their schools, so that gradually we have introduced a very fair class of teachers, and the changes have been less frequent than they were some years ago.

3288. To what do you attribute the improvement?—To the efficiency of the teachers and the attention of the superintendents, and perhaps I may take some credit to myself.

3289. I believe there was no inspection before you were appointed?—There was; but only once a year. The gentleman who then inspected, was registrar as well as inspector. He had a double duty to perform, and of course could not pay the attention an inspector ought to pay. My idea of inspection is this, that I should not go to the school merely for the purpose of finding out its merits or demerits, but for the purpose of co-operating with the superintendent and the teacher to effect as great an improvement as possible, for which purpose my practice is, before leaving the school, to call the master or mistress aside and point out whatever defects I notice in the school. I do not speak to them publicly, not wishing to degrade them in the presence of the children, at the same time I keep notes of any defects that exist, and at next inspection I expect each of those defects to be corrected. In that way the teacher has every opportunity of making the improvements I consider necessary. If my instructions are not attended to I have the means of punishing him by reducing his gratuity.

3290. What effect do you find produced by that course?—In some cases the desired improvement has not taken place, but in the vast majority of cases attention is paid to my instructions.

3291. Do you after each inspection fill up one of the forms you have handed us (vide Appendix No. 6)?—Certainly.

3292. By whom is the summary, which has been handed in, prepared?—By the Registrar.

3293. I observe that in that summary, any observation you make, of an important character, is noted in the margin. Do you communicate directly with the superintendents of the schools?—I fill up my report, sign it, and send it to him, and there is a space at the foot where he can make any observations he desires.

3294. You make two inspections in the year, one with notice, and the other without notice. Do you find any great difference in the state of the school when you go in unexpectedly?—Not with regard to efficiency. There may be a difference in the attendance, and in the appearance of the children, and probably in the neatness and cleanliness of the school-rooms. When notice has been given, I find the school-rooms swept out, and the children get an extra polish, which does not always show itself when I visit without notice.

3295. What condition do you generally find them in when you visit without notice?—Indeed very fair. The teacher sometimes asks me when I will pay him the next visit, and I answer, "You may expect me from this day forth." They are thriftpoke on the whole.

3296. CHAIRMAN.—Who examines in sewing?—I do. I profess to be a judge of sewing. It was at my suggestion that needlework was introduced into the course. In mixed schools where girls are taught by a master, the governors make an allowance for the teaching of needlework by a mistress.

3297. LORD JAMES FLEMING.—Is that allowance availed of?—In every instance where the numbers reach thirty, the governors pay two-thirds of the salary.

3298. What prizes are given for efficient conduct of the schools?—In addition to the full gratuities, the teachers of the twelve best conducted male schools, and of the six best conducted female schools, as selected by me, each year receive a prize of £1 worth of books from the governors.

3299. Is there any rule against persons residing in the locality offering prizes?—Prizes are very often given from local sources, by the clergy and others interested in the schools.

3300. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—What is the number of pupils at present attending the Erasmus Smith's English schools?—Our last returns state 5,217.

3301. What is the average attendance?—About 3,500 every school-day except Saturday. Saturday is not included, as, being a half-day, the attendance is not so good.

3302. LORD JAMES FLEMING.—What number of schools are there in each of the four classes under which they are arranged?—The returns will show. It was at my suggestion that these schools were classified. I found that there were complaints from some of the masters that they were not adequately remunerated. The teachers of large schools such as New-towards, in which we have, in the girls' school alone, 178 on the roll, formerly received the same salary as the teachers of a school with only 12 or 14 children. I, therefore, suggested to the governors that the schools should be classified, so they are at present, and that the teachers of the larger schools should be paid proportionately.

3289. Lord R. CHICHESTER.—Are the numbers of children attending the schools increasing or decreasing?—They are latterly diminishing.

3290. On account of the number of schools being diminished?—Not so much that. There has been a great deal of emigration, and moreover, children are taken from school at an earlier age now than formerly. This is one of the reasons why I am very strict in requiring the very young children to be properly educated.

3301. How long has the number of schools under the Enamene Smith Board remained at 105?—Three or four years.

3302. Do you know of any schools that are ultimately to be discontinued from any cause?—I cannot answer for the intentions of the governors, except in one case—Mallaghary—the clergyman wrote to me that he was unable to raise the sum required by the governors, from local contributions, and also, that there were other Protestant schools in the neighbourhood.

3303. What is the rule as to payment?—Each child is required to pay a penny a week at least, many pay twopence or threepence, according to their circumstances. The superintendent of the school arranges with the master how much he is to charge, but if there are children in the parish, who are entirely unable to pay, they are admitted free, on the nomination of the clergyman of the parish, or of the patron. At present we have 1,879 free pupils in our schools.

3304. Are the books used in your schools those of the National Board?—When I was appointed they were mostly the books used in the Church Education Society's schools, but they were becoming inadequate, and errors occurred in many of them, so I have gradually introduced the National school books which I found to be the best.

3305. Is there any further information you can give us?—With regard to the reports before you, the scale is one that I introduced into them; it gives the number of children in each class, the subject taught, the quality of the answering, and the total number at the bottom. In several of our schools an advanced course is taught, not merely reading, writing, and arithmetic, but also geometry, mensuration, book-keeping, and algebra, so that they are not altogether elementary schools. Those who desire an advanced course, have an opportunity of following it.

3306. If, in the course of your inspection, you find a boy of superior talents, do you feel it your duty to give him facilities for obtaining a higher education?—The only facility I could offer, is to suggest to the master that he be prepared to compete for admission into the Blue Coat school.

3307. Could you not try and bring him on for examinations under the Intermediate Education Act?—The teacher can do that, and at this moment, there are several teachers preparing children for examinations under the Intermediate Education Act.

3308. Lord Justice FRYMASON.—In these very large proportion of boys in your schools did enough to go in under that system?—I think they remain longer for the purpose of settling at the required age, which is very desirable; for in the present day children are taken away from school much too early.

3309. Do the masters consult you about settling boys forward for the places in the Blue Coat school?—Yes—I am frequently asked to give my opinion of a boy's chance.

3310. CHATELAIN.—Is there any local custom to which boys can be sent for examination?—No, they have to come to Dublin at their own expense, which is one of the reasons why there are not more candidates.

3311. Lord Justice FRYMASON.—Are many, who would have a fair chance, kept away by that rule?—I think so. In the case of many boys I have asked the masters "why not send such and such a boy to compete," and the answer has been, "his friends cannot afford it." I think a rule might be adopted to allow portion of the travelling expenses to any candidate who answers fairly. On one occasion a boy, although he was not successful, had answered remarkably well, and the Governors kindly allowed him his expenses. The teachers of the successful boys act, as a mark of distinction, given certificates, which are generally respected in the school.

3312. Lord R. CHICHESTER.—When engaging teachers, do you require that they should have been trained in any particular institution?—The greater number are trained either by the Church Education Society, or by the National Board, many, however, of our best teachers have not been trained as such, but have a natural aptitude for teaching. They must all be examined by me before being appointed.

3313. Have any of them been trained in your own schools?—Many of them have been. Some of them have acted as monitors, and eventually have been appointed teachers.

3314. Lord Justice FRYMASON.—The certificate awarded to the teacher of a successful boy is engrossed on parchment, and framed?—Yes.

3315. Has any change been made by the Board, as to the supply of books?—At the time of my appointment, the books that were supplied to the schools were paid for, in equal proportions, by the Board, and the clergyman of the parish, and considered the property of the Governors, and could not be taken out of the schools by the children, to enable them to prepare their tasks at home. The consequence was that each child came to school totally unprepared in the business of the day. I suggested to the Governors to change the system altogether—that they should continue to pay half, and the superintendent the other half, but that the books should be sold to the children at half price; in which way the superintendent recovered what he had advanced. The books then become the property of the children who take them home, and prepare their lessons properly. The Governors' bookkeepers supply them.

3316. How is the supply arranged?—I ascertain, on each inspection, what books are likely to be required between that visit and the next, and enter in my report such as may be wanted. An abstract is made from my report and sent to the bookkeepers who forward the supplies to the different schools.

3317. How is the school furniture supplied?—Sometimes the Governors sent towards it, but, as a rule, the school furniture is expected to be supplied from local sources.

3318. Who are the bookkeepers to the Board?—Messrs. Sullivan, Brothers, Malborough street.

3319. Is there, in your opinion, anything in the system of these schools that obstructs their usefulness or that should be altered for their improvement?—I think it would tend to their improvement if the salaries were slightly raised; but I don't know whether there are means for doing so. I would rather suggest that the gratuity should be increased.

3320. That is a portion depending directly on the state of efficiency from time to time?—Exactly; it would act more as a stimulus to the teacher. I would suggest that the present £3 should be doubled rather than that anything should be added to the fixed salary. I also think more assistant and night be afforded to some schools. I think the number forty-five, which the Governors request to be present, before a monitor be granted, might be reduced. Forty-five is a large number for one teacher to have charge of, considering that some of the children are pretty well advanced, and others are really beginners. If they were all of the same or nearly of the same standing, it might be different. In Novice schools the boys number 150, and the girls 170; and I think an assistant would be very useful there.

3391. Are there any assistant teachers now in any of those large schools provided from local sources?—No assistant teachers—merely paid monitors.

3392. There are assisted by the Board?—The Board pays two-thirds of their salaries.

3393. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You know the sum the Board expends per annum on the English schools?—I heard £1,400 mentioned as the sum.

3394. Have you made any calculation as to what addition would be required to carry out the improvements you suggest?—Very trifling. It is only in the large schools I would suggest additional teaching power.

3395. Can you state the amount approximately?—Certainly; to give a gratuity of £10 instead of £5 would require an addition of 2500 a year.

3396. LORD JAMES FINCHAM.—That is if every one earned the full amount?—Yes.

3397. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What proportion does the full gratuity at present?—About three-fourths. In some instances I have to stop the whole of it.

3398. In how many cases last year was that necessary?—There were very few.

3399. If the gratuities were doubled as you suggest, and the assistant teachers provided for the larger schools, I suppose the increased cost to the Board would exceed £500 per annum?—Probably it would.

3400. Do you think that that expenditure is now, or will be soon, essential to the efficiency of these schools?—I think it would certainly be conducive to the improvement of the schools.

3401. Is it essential that that expenditure should be incurred on the schools to keep them up to a proper standard of primary education?—I am very well satisfied with the general condition of the schools at present as to efficiency; but, I am certain, it would improve them still further were the additional rewards given. Taking them as a whole, there are no schools in the United Kingdom in the same state of efficiency, and no unprejudiced impartial person, witnessing their examinations, would deny that fact.

3402. Do you think you will be able to maintain that efficiency without any further expenditure?—So long as I am over them, I can answer for their success, at the same time, their efficiency would be still further improved by the means I have suggested. I think, with regard to the candidates for the Blue Coat school, the present minimum age, eleven, might be changed to ten. I am certain there are children in our schools of only ten years of age who would successfully compete for those places.

3403. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any further matter you desire to mention?—In the matter of spelling I have adopted a system which I would not mention at all only I think that it would be well that it should be followed in other quarters besides the Erasmus Smith's schools. On children of five or six years of age coming to school first, I do not allow them to be taught the letters of the alphabet alone. We all know what a laborious thing it must be to teach children to be taught such sounds as A and B and C, to which they can attach no meaning; but, if you combine these letters with others, so as to form words which a child can understand, there is a degree of interest excited, and much labour saved, both to the teacher and the children. For instance, I would have a whole class of little children ranged round a board with a card suspended on it containing little words, such as a, it, and so forth, they keeping their eyes fixed upon these letters. In learning the letters they are learning to spell. Having learned that such a letter is an a, and another is a t, and i spells it, let them repeat simultaneously, the teacher watching that every mouth is going, and every eye fixed upon the letters. In a very few weeks the children will have learned the whole alphabet, and to spell and read little words. With regard to writing, no matter how young a child is, I require that he should at once have a slate and pencil and begin to form letters. As soon as he is able to form all the letters of the alphabet, he is required to write from dictation words of two or three letters. If a child is able to spell g a, go, why should he not also write g a, go, and therefore it becomes a lesson in writing as well as in spelling. I have chosen of children of six, and six and a half years of age, writing dictators, and writing it well. They are not allowed to scribble, but are required to write their best. With regard to the progress in reading, the system I introduced was this; I required every beginner to spell aloud each word from his book. The principle is this. A child by constantly repeating aloud the correct way of spelling a word, has that way fixed upon his memory. Thus, if he spells, field, fold, he cannot help remembering that that is the right way of spelling the word. Then, dictation is kept up from the time a child enters till he leaves school. With regard to dictation, we have adopted an additional plan. From the youngest to the most advanced, all are required to write it. If a mistake is made, the child is required to enter the misspelled words, when corrected, in a book, which I have had prepared for that purpose. Then the teacher is required to examine each child weekly, from his own book, on all the words he had misspelled. When I go round, I examine each child from his exercise book.

3404. Have many of your scholars gone up for competitive examinations?—Several.

3405. Do any go on from the English schools to the grammar schools on free grants?—I have sight of them when they leave the English schools.

MR. WALTER HORS EXAMINED.

MR. WALTER HORS.

3406. CHAIRMAN.—You are the agent over the estates of the Governors of the Erasmus Smith's school?—Yes.

3407. How long have you held that post?—I was appointed agent over the whole of their estates in 1863, and have continued so ever since.

3408. How often do you receive the rents?—Half-yearly. In some cases the half days are March and September, and in others May and November.

3409. The system is not uniform?—No; even on the Limerick estates the half days vary.

3410. Have you tried to make the system more uniform?—There has been no alteration in that respect since I became agent.

3411. LORD JAMES FINCHAM.—Are the rentals for the year ending 1st November, 1877, and furnished by you to the Board in 1878, the last you have sent in?—They are now furnished for 1878.

3412. Do you account only once in the year?—Yes.

3413. Do you visit the estates for the purpose of collecting the rents, or do you call on the tenants to come in and pay them?—I go to Galway to collect the rents there. I notice the tenants of the Limerick and neighbouring portions of the Tipperary estates to come in and pay in the office at Dublin, where I reside, on the Limerick estates. To receive the rents of another portion of the Tipperary estates I attend at Drumlish, near Thurles, which is the nearest town to the lands.

3414. The rental shows that on 1st of November, 1876, the arrears due were £3,692 14s 0½d; the arrears on the 1st of November, 1877, £3,806 5s 10½d; and the receipts during the year, £6,412 7s 1½d.—There is what is called a dead half-year or hanging rent on the property. That is I only receive the half rents on the 1st of November.

3415. What I refer to is that there was an arrear due on the 1st November, 1877, and you do not appear to account until May, 1878, when you would have collected another half-year's rent; therefore, should not the hanging half be left out of the account?—When I

April 13, 1878.
Mr. Walker
Barn.

furnished that account I had not received the hanging gale.

3343. When did you furnish the account?—In the end of April, and I did not begin to receive the rents until soon after the first of May.

3347. You furnished the account within a month before the usual time for receiving another half-year's rent?—Yes.

3348. How do you transmit the money to the Board?—According as I receive the rents I remit money to the Bank of Ireland to the credit of the Commissioners.

3349. The receipts for the year were £6,412 7s. 14d., and I find your lodgments were May 24th, £1,400; on June 28th, £500, August 10th, £500?—Yes.

3350. Does not your method of dealing leave a very considerable amount of money in your hands during the whole year?—No, there is scarcely any balance in my hands, except sometimes about £500 or so.

3351. In May you collect a half-year's rent?—I can not get in all the rents at once, and, moreover, the estate is liable to considerable charges; there is a drainage charge and rent charges to be paid out of the receipts. I have paid £300 for the Mulhous drainage before I received any of the rents from the tenants.

3352. Is not the result of your mode of dealing that the collection of the month of May remains in your hands the entire year?—No.

3353. Why not?—My accounts are furnished at the end of April. I begin to receive the rents in May. I have nothing in my hands when I furnish my account, and when I receive the rents I pay off the charges, and then remit money according as I receive it to the Governors.

3354. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is there any rule regulating the amount of money you keep in hands?—There never has been any.

3355. LORD JEREMY FITZGERALD.—I suppose the great bulk of your collection is half in May and the other half in November?—The greater portion of it; but some of the tenants are backward in their payments, and I receive the rents from them whenever I can get them.

3356. CHAIRMAN.—How long do you wait without taking legal proceedings?—I generally give them a month or two after the first of May to pay the rent due in the preceding November.

3357. LORD JEREMY FITZGERALD.—The Southern estate comprises over 4,300 acres. Have you any stated time for visiting it?—I live in the centre of the Limerick estate and go about according as necessity arises.

3358. Have you any system with regard to advances to the tenants to enable them to improve their holdings?—Since the passing of the Land Act, the Governors do not make advances to their tenants for general improvements, but they make allowances for such necessary works as sinking main drains, making river embankments, and repairing bye-roads.

3359. Is there any periodical examination of the condition of the farms and holdings?—Only my seeing them occasionally on going over the property. I go very constantly to Drumbane, which is the poorest part of the estate. I walk over it and see the condition of the property.

3360. Do you make any systematic inspection with a view, for example, to see whether the crops are put into the land in proper season?—The Limerick estate is almost entirely grass land. There is scarcely any tillage except a few potatoes or a small crop of oats.

3361. What arrangements have you made with the Limerick and Tipperary tenants with reference to fuel?—There is a bog on the Limerick estate which we let to the tenants at so much for the bark, and they make the turf themselves.

3362. Who manages that?—The bog bailiff, who is employed for measuring and letting the turf bunks.

3363. Do you let them by the season?—No. Each man gets a ticket for a particular position. It is cut out very often. It was formerly set to people outside the estate, but I recommended the governors not to continue that custom, fearing the supply for the tenants would run short.

3364. Have you a bog-ranger?—Yes. There are two bog-rangers.

3365. Is it their duty to see that the bogs are properly cut and that there is no trespass?—Yes.

3366. There appears in your account a large item for river embankments, £141 12s. 6d., what is that for?—That is for the Mulhous Drainage, which is a fixed expenditure.

3367. There also appears "11th August 1877, paid Michael Walsh, £62 10s.," what was that for?—That was the balance of a sum of £505 10s. allowed by the Governors for building an embankment to protect their tenants from injury, to which they are liable from the floods of the river Elbow.

3368. How was that work carried out?—By contract.

3369. Did you advertise for tenders?—We got the best contractor we could, Walsh, the contractor for the Mulhous drainage.

3370. You know the letting value of land in the neighbourhood in which the Southern estate is situated?—Yes. I valued some of the farms there.

3371. Are the rents upon the Southern estate full rents, or, if not, how much are they below what would be a full rent there?—In some cases they are quite full rents, in other cases they may be low.

3372. Are they fair rents all round?—All round, having regard to present prospects, I think they are.

3373. CHAIRMAN.—Not taking merely the present state of things, but regarding ten years or so as a average?—The system on these estates was to let for twenty years. The tenants signed agreements containing restrictions as to subletting and against letting their land in any improper manner.

3374. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are the lands let very much below the valuation, as a general rule?—Often above the valuation.

3375. LORD JEREMY FITZGERALD.—What is the tenement valuation. £4,535 18s. 11½d. is the rental?—Griffith's valuation of the Limerick lands is £3,195 5s., and of these the rental is £4,477 4s. On the Tipperary estate, for certain holdings about the town of Tipperary, Griffith's valuation is £39 15s., and the rent is £167 5s. 1½d. The townland of Boleahadrig, close to the town of Tipperary, is let at £214 8s. 2½d., and Griffith's valuation is £272 15s. In Drumbane, the rent is £243 1s. 1d., and Griffith's valuation is £704 16s., and in Gortacoolough, where the rent is £63 2s. 7½d., Griffith's valuation is £71 5s.

3376. On the last townland you have mentioned, where the rental is £63 2s. 7½d., the acres amount to £91 11s. 4½d.—Both this and Drumbane are wretchedly poor townlands. The people are very poor and have small holdings. It is very difficult to get the rent, but I took proceedings against several of the defaulters, since the last rental was furnished, and from these we took proceedings against, we got the rents, I find it very hard to get the rents from them as all this year.

3377. Is that the portion of the estate in which the smallest holdings are?—Drumbane is wet, cold land, and the holdings are very small. The tenants there depend more upon ellage than those on any other part of the estate.

3378. MR. O'BRIEN.—Where does that lie?—Within four or five miles of Thurles, up towards the hills.

3379. LORD JEREMY FITZGERALD.—Of the Western estate the rental is £3,850 8s. 3d., and the acres upon that amount to £1,060. Does the custom of allowing a hanging gale prevail upon that estate also?—Yes, but there is very little arable otherwise.

3380. There are some weekly tenants?—Yes; the holdings were let by the week, at a time when it was thought that Galway was becoming a rising town.

3381. How do you collect the weekly rents?—They pay half-yearly like the other tenants.

3382. And, although they are weekly tenants, there is exactly a half year's rent due in each case. Do you collect the weekly rents at the same time as the half-yearly?—I do.

3383. What form of receipt do you give the tenants who owe this arrears?—Half-year up to the date they are paying.

3384. Are there any instances in which you give receipts only on account?—No, I never do so.

3385. Are there any cases of arrears accumulating?—Yes, there have been two or three instances; but we served ejectments, and the rent was paid, except in one instance.

3386. Do you keep a separate account for each tenant, showing up to what date the tenant has cleared his rent?—I have my own book, in which I enter every payment as I receive it.

3387. Did you yourself strike off or reduce any arrears?—No; there are some very poor people, and the governors kindly wiped off the arrears they owed; but I never venture to strike off any arrears myself.

3388. Have you had any instance in which the arrears became so large as to make it necessary to enter into any special arrangement with the tenant?—There was one case. A tenant named Harty was rather unfortunate, and never would pay, but he was a respectable man in every way, and I represented his case to the governors. They struck off a portion of the arrears, and he paid a portion. It did not, however, do him much good, as he at once began to treat arrears again, and he has since been dispossessed.

3389. In the report of 1857 on the Galway property, this passage occurs:—

"The lands held by tenants from year to year are immediately adjoining the town and Lough Atinla, and the governors, at the last lettings, probably exercised control of these lands as they say, in the course of a few years, became valuable as building ground."

Has that object been since realised?—No, Galway is not a building town.

3390. The same report states, as to one of the demarcations of the Galway property:—

"The old . . . is well situated for building ground, and must become very valuable as the town of Galway improves."

Has there been any increase in its value since that time?—No, it is let only for the value of the land. It was supposed that it would let for building, but no one has taken it for that purpose.

3391. The great majority of the tenants on the Galway estate hold either under lease or in fee-farm. On what principle do you allow a hanging gale in the case of such tenants?—I never was directed to reduce the rents up to the day, and do not know that the governors would permit me to do so. It was always the custom, even before I became agent, to allow a hanging gale.

3392. The last rental you furnished shows that about a dozen of those who hold for 41 years, or under fee-farm grants, owed from a year's rent to a year and a half's rent. Have you taken any proceedings to reduce those arrears?—Certainly. Most of the arrears, with the exception of the hanging gale, have been paid up. I don't think there are any now.

3393. Do you visit this estate, and examine into the condition of the property at all?—Yes; I go around the houses. It consists of houses in the town of Galway.

3394. That class of property would require more than ordinary supervision. What steps do you take to see whether the covenants to keep in repair are observed?—No more than examining and looking at the houses.

3395. The outside?—Yes.

3396. Is there any inspection of the interior?—No, there has not been.

3397. Are there any covenants to insure, in the lease?—No, I insured one street, called High-street, where the governors got up the house, and the tenants came directly under them. But that was the only case.

3398. There are no covenants with the tenants that they shall insure?—No.

3399. The rental of the Sligo property is £455 5s. 8d. Are the holdings on that property let on lease?—Yes.

3400. The rental shows only an arrear of one holding, viz., £59. Has that arrear been got in?—The Sligo rents have all been paid up this year.

3401. LEON R. CHURCHMAN.—What is the value at the Sligo estate, as compared with the rental?—I have not got the valuation. A great deal of the Sligo property is mountain, held by Sir Henry Gore Booth for shooting.

3402. He does not pay a rent of £147 merely for shooting?—No, he has the side of the mountain, some of which is arable land, and let to under-tenants. The Right Hon. John Wynn, another tenant to the Governors, has also under-tenants. The other tenants on the estate are William Clarke, Arthur Campbell, and Edward Walsh.

3403. When did you visit this estate last?—I have not been there for three years.

3404. How do you collect the rental?—By letter.

3405. There are two large holdings in the county Westmeath, returned on the rental as let to James Cleary and James Reilly. Do they occupy the lands?—They do.

3406. These lands are stated in the report of 1857 to be valued at £389 7s. 6d., but to be very moderately let, the then rent being £415 7s. 4d.—There has been a use on one holding; James Cleary holds at £305 7s. 4d., on a twenty-one years' lease, from 1st November, 1873, which was his former rent; and James Reilly holds at £135, under lease for twenty-one years, from 1st November, 1874.

3407. Have there been any applications for leases?—A few.

3408. Have any taken out leases?—On the Southern estate very few.

3409. There have been a number of leases and grants on the Western estate?—Yes, a great number of the leases have been renewed.

3410. There have been complaints made, from time to time, in the West, about the Board not giving—perhaps it would be a branch of trust to do so—money for general public purposes in the neighbourhood of the estate. Did any matter of that kind come before you as agent?—No.

3411. Have you any authority at all to deal with matters of that sort?—No.

3412. Or to make any allowances?—No, not without being specially authorized by the Governors.

3413. I suppose you are acquainted with the individual tenants on the various estates?—Yes.

3414. What is the average size of the farms on the Limerick estate?—From twenty to sixty acres—some larger.

3415. Would you class the tenants on the Limerick estate, among the poorer class of farmers?—A great number of farmers on the Limerick estate are independent men. On one portion of the Tipperary estate—Salsheading—there are some respectable, independent farmers. But, at Drumbane, they are of a poorer class.

3416. MR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Would you consider the farmers on a portion of the Tipperary, and on most of the Limerick estates, "strong farmers," as they call them?—They are "strong farmers," and pretty well off.

3417. LEON R. CHURCHMAN.—Are they of a class whose children would be amply provided for, educationally, by the National schools; or would they look for a higher education?—I think there are some of them of the higher class of farmers. The National School education would be quite sufficient for them.

3418. Do you know whether their sons go into business?—Yes, they become shopkeepers.

3419. Does the education provided by the National schools, in Limerick and Tipperary, fit the sons of those farmers for the business they go into?—Yes, I think it does. They learn the rudiments of education.

April 12, 1878
Mr. Walker
thos.

April 15, 1855.

Mr. Walker
Hans.

3420. Are the teneantry, on the Tipperary and Limerick estates, Catholic or Protestant?—They are almost entirely Roman Catholic on both estates.

3421. Are you acquainted individually with the tenants in the town of Galway?—I am.

3422. Are they persons whose circumstances in life would justify them in looking for a higher education for their sons, than that which the National schools afford?—Yes, I think so. They only hold sites on which they have, at considerable expense, built houses. They are of the wealthier class.

3423. Do you know, generally, whether they are Catholics or Protestants?—Principally Catholics. I think there is only one Protestant on the estate.

3424. How many tenants have you in the town of Galway?—There are about ninety holdings in the town and suburbs, held by fifty-seven tenants.

3425. Are those tenants of the class you describe as the wealthier class?—Some of them are poorer, but, as a class, the tenants in Galway are very respectable.

3426. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are they of the shop-keeping class?—The shopkeeping and tradesman class.

3427. LOUIS B. CHURCHMAN.—In Limerick and Tipperary, where the teneantry are of the farming class, you think they are not, usually, sufficiently high to justify them in looking for a higher education for their sons than what the National schools provide?—The National schools are quite good enough, but some of the farmers who wish to improve the position of their sons, would send them to a higher class of school.

3428. Have the teneantry any knowledge of their rights as to education at the hands of the Governors of the Erasmus Smith's foundation?—Yes, they have. I have been spoken to by one or two of the tenants on the subject. One was a doctor, residing in the town, but I do not think that he ever made any regular application.

3429. I suppose that the fact of the tenants in Limerick, Tipperary, and Galway being Catholic would rather prevent them from claiming any rights that they may be entitled to under the conditions imposed in the Erasmus Smith schools?—I should say so.

3430. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is your English school at Deemo, in the county Limerick, at the Governor's property?—Yes, there is a very good school there.

3431. A large number of Roman Catholic boys attend it?—I believe some do.

3432. Are they children of the tenants?—Yes.

3433. It is hardly necessary to ask you whether there was any persons put upon them by you, in agent, to send their children there?—Never; certainly not.

3434. Have you any Roman Catholic children in the school at Fallow?—None. There are only fifteen pupils, altogether, attending that school.

3435. CHAIRMAN.—What is the total number of tenants on each estate?—The Governors have, on their Galway estate, fifty-seven tenants, on the King's county estate, one; on the Sligo estate, five; on the Westmeath estate, two, on the Tipperary estate, 150; and on the Limerick estate, 184; making a total of 398 tenants.

3436. I suppose there have been some amalgams. Goss of firms since 1837?—Certainly. Whenever I got an opportunity I sold a small holding to a large one.

3437. I suppose you have a bailiff on each part of the estate, and receive periodical reports?—Of course.

3438. LOUIS JUSTICE FRUGGESSON.—Do you possess sub-division?—Certainly.

3439. CHAIRMAN.—You mentioned with regard to improvements, that, since the passing of the Act there has been some change in the policy of the Governors?—Yes.

3440. If it becomes necessary to repair a house what steps are taken?—That is now done entirely at the expense of the tenant. Formerly, if a man built a good solid house, the Governors used to allow a portion of the expense of the timber and slates.

3441. Is there any sack system as the Governors paying the whole expense and charging five per cent on the outlay to the tenant?—No.

Mr. Edmund
F. Bremer, A.E.

Mr. EDWARD P. BREMER, A.E., continued.

3442. LOUIS JUSTICE FRUGGESSON.—You are the registrar to the Board of Governors of the Erasmus Smith's Schools?—Yes.

3443. Have you a separate account for the Harcourt-street school?—Yes.

3444. The first part of the Harcourt-street school account for 1876, contains receipts from school fees, and at the end you show what the Governors are obliged to pay in addition. Are the school fees paid directly to you?—Yes.

3445. The head-master does not receive them?—He does not.

3446. You make all the payments for the school as you receive the money?—Yes.

3447. How much was the total expenditure on

Harcourt-street school for the year 1876?—£1,381 9s. 5d., to which must be added sums paid for a cricket field, fees to examiners, &c., &c., which increased the total to £1,486 1s. 7d., out of which we recovered, in 1876, £275 1s. 6d., leaving a deficiency, in round numbers, of £700.

3448. Does not that exclude all payments in respect of this house?—Yes.

3449. Besides that expenditure there was an expenditure on this house of £248 9s. 4d., of which a proportion ought to be charged to the school?—Yes.

3450. In that £248 9s. 4d., do you charge anything for either depreciation or interest on capital?—No, it is merely an account of money actually paid.

Mr. Edmund
Bremer.

Mr. EDWARD BREMER continued.

3451. CHAIRMAN.—What office do you hold under the Governors of the Erasmus Smith's Schools?—Accountant and Bookkeeper.

3452. How long have you held that office?—I entered the service of the Board in 1857, and took up the accounts from 1855. I was out of their employment for six years and three months, from 1863 to 1869, during which period I filled the office of chief cashier of the English and Irish Bank, and afterwards of the European Bank. I returned to the service of the Governors in 1869.

3453. From 1869 you continued to be their bookkeeper?—I did all the work since 1855.

3454. Explain your system with regard to Harcourt-street school?—I have nothing to say to Harcourt-street school, but to debit the school account with every charge paid to make up a deficiency.

3455. You do not enter in your books the receipts from Harcourt-street school, or the expenditure upon it as such?—No.

3456. You keep the accounts of the governors' house, 40, Harcourt-street, which is charged in the last balance sheet at £248 9s. 4d.?—Yes.

3457. What capital was sunk in 40, Harcourt-street?—The original cost of this house was £4,000.

3458. Besides that, how much was laid out on the place itself, after the governors got into it?—On building the school, and class-rooms, £3,296 12s. 1d.

3459. Is the account for repairs of the new school included in those figures?—It is, there is not a great goal for the new school buildings. I endeavored to separate the charges, and debit to each account the items which were properly applicable to it.

3460. In your account for 1878 you have an expenditure on 40, Harcourt-street of £348 3s. 4d., and in that for 1877, of £233 10s. 3d. Is there any charge for depreciation or interest?—None whatever. No such charge was ever made.

3461. The Vice-Chancellor told us yesterday, that the £1,298 was partly paid out of the sale of 25,000 stock, and the remainder out of interest?—I believe so.

3462. Is the Harcourt-street school charged with any depreciation or interest?—None.

3463. Was there any other expenditure upon 40, Harcourt-street, for the purposes of the school?—Yes, there was an account for furniture for the head master's apartments, £388 15s. 6d., and £179 8s. 3d. has been expended on repairs since the original contract was completed.

3464. On both sets of buildings?—Yes. There are some trifling matters charged to the school; but to the premises here £179 8s. 3d. has been charged since 1870.

3465. That included the repairs to the portion inhabited by the master. Although you endeavored to separate what you charged against the new building, you did not make any separation between what you spent upon the master's portion of this house, and the part used by the Board?—No, the entire £179 8s. 3d. was spent on the house, and not on the school. The repairs for the school will appear under "The School," in the account, and they are very small. The account of the expenditure on Harcourt-street house for the year ending 1st May, 1878, consists of the following items, Alliance Gas, £2 15s. 5d.; ditto, 12s. 4d.; Consolidated rates, £92 19s. 3d.; rent, half year, £14 17s. 6d.; Jones, oil-stroker, £6 6s. 4d.; ditto, repairs, 5s.; arrangements for sanitary repairs, £10 2s. 6d.; gas account, £1 5s. 7d.; coal for head master, and office, £53 10s. 0d.; Income Tax for 1877-8, £3 5s. 6d.; National Assurance premiums, £3 1s. 6d.; gas account, £3 10s. 3d.; Samuel Bolton, builder, for repairs, £2 13s. 7d.; sanitary repairs, £8 15s. 7d.; and Edward Korney, painter, £10.—Total, £248 9s. 1d.; to which must be added rent for second half year, £44 6s. 7d., charged in error to School Account, but transferred in the succeeding account.

3466. Is the school building erected on the premises out of which that rent is paid?—Yes; but it was merely a garden when the house was bought.

3467. Does the room for the rates include those of the school?—Yes.

3468. Does the insurance cover all?—There is only one policy, and that covers both the buildings.

3469. There is a separate charge of £5 2s. 6d., for coals in the school account; but there is no charge for gas. Do they use gas in the school?—No.

3470. Then that is entirely used for the house?—Yes, for the head master.

3471. Has the porter any duties in connection with the school?—Nearly all his duties are in connection with it; we could do without a porter were it not for the school. He has to be up at four or five o'clock in the morning to light the furnace, as the school, which is warmed by metal pipes, takes several hours to heat in winter. He has to attend to see the boys coming in, and going away, and also at lunch hours, when they are playing, to see all right, and has also to keep the passages and stairs scoured and cleaned, for which he receives a quarterly allowance.

3472. In fact, the porter is the caretaker of the house, and the servant of the school?—Yes.

3473. Mr. O'SHEANESSEY.—The master lives in this house?—Yes; he is an unmarried gentleman.

3474. What amount of room has he got?—He has six or seven rooms altogether.

3475. Everything except the rooms retained by the Board?—There are some empty rooms.

3476. CHAIRMAN.—What rent was paid for your former Board room in Kildare-street?—£50 a year.

3477. The large field adjoining this house is entirely used as a playground?—Entirely.

3478. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Had the Board, if there were no day school, adequate accommodation in Kildare-street?—They had accommodation for the Registrar and his family, besides their Board room.

3479. Is there any resident in this house, except the schoolmaster?—None.

3480. Then, in substance, the greater part of this house is unoccupied?—Yes; all the upper rooms.

3481. Mr. O'SHEANESSEY.—What salary did the Registrar get while the office was in Kildare-street?—£300 a year, increased to £320, and the house.

3482. And his present salary as Registrar is only £300 a year?—Yes.

3483. Has he any allowance for a house?—None.

3484. The present gentleman is better in addition to being registrar?—Yes, and he gets £50 a year as such.

THE RIGHT HON. THE VICE-CHANCELLOR OF IRELAND recalled.

3485. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—How long are the boys detained at the King's hospital, O'Connell-street?—Four years as a general rule.

3486. Dr. CURRY.—Irrespective of age?—They cannot under the rules of the hospital be kept there after sixteen. That was one reason why we decided not to elect any boy over twelve; because the regulations of the King's hospital would not allow any boy entering after twelve to remain his full four years.

3487. Supposing you sent a boy in at ten, would he be turned out after four years?—No. We could continue him up to the age of sixteen. A boy may remain as many years as we choose to pay for him, between nine and sixteen.

MR. WILLIAM DOUGLAS LA TOUCHE, B.A., examined.

3488. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are the former governor of the Erasmus Smith's Board?—I am.

3489. CHAIRMAN.—You render the accounts once a year?—Yes. Mr. Thomas Vesey Nugent and I are the two auditors. We see and check every voucher, check it off with the books, look over every account in the ledger, tot and initial it, so that all the entries are properly made and that they are all put under their proper heads, and then check them off by the balance sheet; check the balance sheet and the ledger, and then certify to the Board.

3490. How long has that plan been going on?—I have been auditor for twenty years. Mr. Parnell was the governor who used at first to assist with me, now it is Mr. Nugent. It is a very full and troublesome audit. There is not a single payment that we do not see a voucher for. We have every reason to be very well pleased with the accountant, and the way in which he performs his duties. I must say that we find everything very clear and well done.

3491. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—The way in which the accounts were kept and audited prior to 1857, is described by a former Royal Commissioner thus:—

"We submitted the books of account of the governors to the inspection of the Government accountant, attached to the service of our commission, and he made such an unfavorable report on the system that we proceeded to examine Mr. Thorpe, the assistant registrar, who had kept the books, and Mr. Butler, the chairman and treasurer, who had audited them. The charters of the governors are very precise in their directions as to the accounts being kept yearly, and in such a form as to indicate not merely the cash transactions, but the assets and liabilities of the governors; some of the trusts only sending in one of an exemplar or rendu, cannot, for this reason, be carried out, unless the assets and liabilities are ascertained. The proper mode of keeping accounts under such circumstances, is the ordinary business mode, by double entry; and accordingly, the governors, about the year 1841, ordered their accounts to be so kept. But it appeared in evidence before us, that no balance-sheet had been prepared from the time the ledger was opened in November, 1843, until the period of our inquiry, and that the ledger omitted some essential accounts, for instance, a stock account, a general account of income and expenditure, an account of each estate belonging to the governors, an account for each agent of the Board, an account for the bursar, an account of expenditure for law costs and an account balance. As we were then unable to obtain a precise view of the condition of the governors' accounts, we desired that the governors should have their accounts stated in books kept according to a proper system of office accounts by double entry, and balanced from half-year to half-year, from 1st November, 1843, to 31st May, 1853. . . . A sum of £5,811, arising from the sale of lands of the charity, to defray expenses . . . was not entered . . . as a special trust fund, which the governors had no power to spend. . . . Mr. Thorpe, to whom the keeping of the accounts was then entrusted for a number of years, said that he did not understand at all what was meant by double entry in book-keeping, and admitted that he did not know what assets meant. The only check upon the accounts then kept, was the audit by Mr. Barker, chairman and treasurer; his audit was confined to reaching the annual receipt and expenditure of money, but did not regard the form in which the accounts were kept, or test whether they were in conformity with the charter and the rules of the governors."

Was it on your becoming auditor, that that system was changed?—Partly. I was appointed auditor immediately after that report was issued, and I was of course very anxious that we should conform entirely to the remarks there made, and that any deficiency pointed out should be made good. Mr. Barker became accountant then.

3492. Then the report of 1857, and the compulsory account taken by the Commissioners at that time, formed the commencement of your new system of accounts?—Yes.

3493. Have the omissions from the ledger, mentioned in that report, been made good?—Certainly. As an accountant of some fifty years standing, I consider that the books are thoroughly well kept. They contain everything quite plainly, and are easily explained to anybody who chooses to consult them.

3494. Are you able to tell what your liabilities and assets are, and what surplus you have?—Certainly.

3495. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You are acquainted with the mode in which the rent of this house is charged in your books?—Yes.

3496. Have you approved, in the course of your audit, of not charging the rent to any extent against the school?—The rent was payable out of the house, as we originally bought it for £4,000. We created the additional landings ourselves, and did not charge any rent for them.

3497. At present a great part of the house is occupied by the head-master?—He has apartments in it.

3498. A certain portion of the grounds is occupied by the school, and the residue is used for the benefit of the school?—Yes.

3499. Have you thought of the propriety of charging some portion of the rent, payable out of the house premises, to the school account?—No. The school has been a very long concern. There has always been a very considerable balance against it, and I never thought of charging the rent, payable for the premises we originally bought, against the school. It is but a small rent.

3500. If a stranger were employed to examine the accounts, and balance the liabilities capitally, do you think he would find it necessary, under the circumstances existing in reference to this school, to charge some portion of the rent to the undertaking of the school?—It might be done, no doubt, and would be a fair charge against the school; but at the same time the rent is so small, as compared with the payments, that I do not think it any great harm to charge it against the general funds.

3501. There would also be the interest on the purchase money and outlay?—True.

3502. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You have not got any account, showing exactly, as between the school and the Board, how much the school has really cost you?—No; we have never charged for depreciation.

3503. Nor for those charges which are necessarily divisible, in some proportion, between the Board and the school?—No.

3504. The reason you give is that there has always been a balance against the school?—Exactly. There was no good in making that balance larger.

3505. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—We had evidence from Mr. Rudkin, in reference to the possibility of a large school, that within a quarter of a mile from this there were formerly three schools with over 100 boys each.—We have a very large school close to us now, which has been raised by the Michaelston connexion—a very handsome building in Stephen's-green. That will, of course, attract boys to it, too.

[Adjourned.]

NINTH DAY—MONDAY, APRIL 21, 1879—11 O'CLOCK A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—THE EARL OF ROSSE, CHAIRMAN; LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; and WILLIAM WILSON, Esq., M.P.; with JAMES CREED MURKIN, Esq., M.A., Secretary.

REV. ROBERT RICE, M.A., ORATOR, examined.

Rev. Robert
Rice, M.A.

3506. CHAIRMAN.—You are head master of St. Columba's College?—Yes, I am called the warden.

3507. When were you appointed?—In the year 1847, having previously served seven years as a tutor.

3508. By whom were you appointed?—The appointment of warden is made by the fellows.

3509. Are they the trustees of the endowment?—No; the constitution of the college is strictly collegiate. It consists of a warden and fellows. The chief business of the fellows is to elect the warden. When they have done that all government is in the hands of the warden and fellows. The warden calls the meetings of the governing body, and presides over them. Two fellows are selected as trustees in whom the property may be vested. They have no more voice in the management, in this capacity, than they have as fellows. Mr. Skirley, of Carrickmacross, and the Archbishop of Dublin are at present the trustees.

3510. Once the Warden is appointed he has the control of the school?—Yes. The points upon which I would call the fellows together, for advice, are the disposal of any surplus there may be, the addition of buildings, and the alteration of the scale of charges; but all the internal administration, the appointment and dismissal of masters, the admission of boys, the discipline, and the regulation of the course of study, is in his hands. I am removable by the private, who is vicar, on a proved charge of immorality, heterodoxy, or crime.

3511. There is no power of dismissal at pleasure?—No, and it requires a majority of the fellows to call upon the visitor to examine into any charge. The number of fellows may not be less than four; it is at present fifteen, including the Bishop of Lincoln, the Bishop of Peterborough, Lord O'Neill, Lord Cranston, Lord Gough, and other English and Irish gentlemen of position, such as Mr. Harley, &c., Mr. Maxwell Glaser, &c., and Mr. Bernadine Hope, &c.

3512. Who has the control over the endowment, the payments for repairs, and other expenses?—We have no income whatever from endowment. St. Columba's was founded by public subscription, the then Pymate (Lord John Beresford) taking the most active part. A lease for 999 years was obtained, which cost £1,500. The rest of the subscription was spent in putting school buildings upon the site. The value of these now, roughly stated by a professional accountant, including both the fixed buildings and the chattels, is £15,000. We now depend entirely upon what we can earn.

3513. The whole of the endowment was invested in buildings, and the purchase of the site in perpetuity?—Yes; and even the site is subject to a fixed rent of £100 a year, which we have to pay. Keeping the buildings in repair, and also the payment of the warden and masters must be defrayed out of the income of the college, which consists of the pupils' fees.

3514. No money passes between the Government and the warden?—None whatever.

3515. Of course it depends on the number of boys, whether you are able to pay your way or not?—Entirely so. We have at present eighty-six boys. Our income, roughly stated, from the fees is £5,000 a year, taking eighty boys as an average, which was the number last year. I am also bound elected in accordance with statute No. 30, which says:

"The warden and fellows shall elect one of their body to be master of the college."

The income of £5,000 is spent in this way—£1,500 is paid to the staff, including myself; £1,000 is the cost of provisions for about 100 persons, including not merely the boys but the masters, who are all boarders, and the servants. Of course all are not resident during the whole year.

3516. The under masters are all resident during term?—Yes, and they are boarded by the college.

3517. They are all unmarried?—The masters are all unmarried except myself. Then £1,400 covers all other expenses, such as rent, servants' wages, coal, gas, laundry, and repairs. When the balance represents what we have to dispose of. That is, our profits, as at present, amount to £400 a year; but they are not the subject of a dividend to the governing body nor to the teaching staff at all. They are spent on improvements. During the last five years we built a handsome new school-room at a cost of £2,000 out of our profits. Before that we employed our surplus in putting out of debt. Dr. Todd was really the person that kept the college up during the bad times. The college had a varied life, in fact but for the late Lord Pymate it would have sunk long ago. He made up the deficits out of his own purse from 1843 to 1855. After that we went on struggling.

3518. What do you receive as your own remuneration?—The warden's stipend is £300 fixed, £5 on each boy, and allowances in the way of board for two, service, and apartments, &c., which are worth, to me and my family, £500 a year more.

3519. Have you any day boys?—Only a few of the sons of neighbouring gentry, whom I allow to come for their convenience. At present I have seven.

3520. What salaries do you give the assistant masters?—They get salaries varying from £220 down to £100 a year, the total they get being £1,000, and they have their board and apartments in addition.

3521. Is that arranged by you?—No, that is arranged at a college meeting, according to Statute 17:—

"The amount of salaries, fees, and emoluments of the warden, tutors, and all other officers created by these Statutes, and also the fees to be paid by students for tuition, board, lodging, or any other matters whatsoever, shall be determined by the warden and fellows, at a college meeting or otherwise."

3522. In the report of the Commissioners in 1857, the annual salary of the warden was stated to be £250, and those of the assistant masters were £100 each to the first and second, £80 to the organist, £63 to the French master, and £50 to the drawing master. There has been a considerable increase?—Yes, both in the salaries and the number.

3523. Have the assistant masters any stipendium?—At present they have only fixed salaries; but there is a scheme which I formerly had in operation, and which I am going to revive as soon as we have profits to dispose of in that way, for I think it would be a more healthy thing that the staff should all have a stipendium fee, as I have. Their incomes should, in part, be dependent upon the success of their work.

3524. When any repairs are required, how are they carried out?—I order them to be done, and, as far as I pay for them out of the school funds. Then, every year, I render an account to the fellows, which is audited by a professional accountant.

3525. I suppose you get tenders for any extensive work?—Yes, I am sure the repairs cost fully £200 a year. We have got extensive buildings, and I received them in rather bad order.

3526. What is the course of education?—It is based on the English public school system, and is precisely what you would find in an English public school—classics being undoubtedly the chief thing. But we gave great prominence to English literature and composition, even before those subjects became so general as they are now.

3527. It is, in fact, more a literary education than one designed to enable boys to earn their livelihood?—It is well qualified to enable boys to earn their livelihood by their wits, as, for instance, at the bar.

3528. What walk in life are most of your boys intended for?—My boys come from three classes about equally divided; one-third are the sons of independent country gentlemen, but it does not follow that all their children will be so, one-third are the sons of clergymen; and the other one-third are made up chiefly of the sons of professional men. I consider that twenty-five per cent of my boys will be, when they grow up, entirely independent; the other three-fourths, or seventy-five per cent, will be dependent, more or less, on their own exertions.

3529. I have heard it said that St. Columba's is the only school in Ireland which gives an English public school education. What is the distinction from the Royal school education?—That question is an extremely difficult one to answer immediately. I have a very decided answer to give; but my answer must not be taken to imply that what I am going to say distinguishes St. Columba's from the Royal schools. I know something about the Royal schools; but I was not educated in any of them myself. In the first place, then, in an English public school the government is different from the government of the Irish schools. But, beyond that, I go so far as to say this—I am speaking now of the first-class schools—that intellectually, and morally, and socially, the English public school is higher than the Irish public school.

3530. Mr. O'Riordan says.—You are now referring, I suppose, to the Royal schools?—I am not thinking of any schools in particular.

3531. But you speak of the Irish public schools?—There are a great many Irish public schools. There may be Roman Catholic schools of the first class.

3532. You did not refer to them?—My knowledge of Roman Catholic schools is next to nothing.

3533. For that reason I assumed that, perhaps, they were not included in your comparison?—I have very little knowledge of Roman Catholic schools. I do not come across the pupils of those schools.

3534. I assume from what you have said already you must be comparatively ignorant of the government of the Jesuit and other schools?—I expect not. When I say the government is different, I am alluding to the management of the boys. There is more freedom; there is more esprit de corps in England. The Protestant schools in Ireland have strict systems of boundaries, and the presence of a sergeant, or some one daries, but they are not of very great value. The University of Dublin has never offered an open scholarship to the public. The University of Oxford gives away £25,000 per annum in the way of scholarships, open to the competition of the whole world, to boys from schools, one fifth of this sum, viz., £5,000 a year is offered annually, each scholarship being tenable for five years. Dublin University never offers anything till a lad has matriculated. The English schools are in the habit of sending to Oxford lads who, if they fail, go up again. The Intermediate Act is doing the very thing Ireland wanted in that respect.

3566. You believe that the Intermediate Education Act, if properly administered, is the best system of encouraging education?—The very best, and may I add that I wish the Intermediate Education Act had two grades to it, that not only should it encourage upper class schools as it is doing, but that there should be a second grade examination for commercial boys, and that they should go in, and get just as much as, or more than, we do.

3567. Do you then believe that it is impossible to conduct in the same school a higher class and a commercial education?—Certainly.

3568. We had evidence here to the effect that primary education on the Christian Brothers' or National schools was adequate for the shopkeeping classes. May I ask if that is your opinion?—I have not the slightest idea. I never deal with that class of people.

3569. Do you think that the commercial education given in primary schools is adequate for the commercial classes of the country?—I should hope not. I should hope the commercial classes would be educated to a higher point, and I think that there should be a commercial type of education distinctly encouraged under the Intermediate Education Act.

3570. You have introduced English to a large extent into your programme at St. Columba's?—Yes.

3571. You give three hours a week to it?—Yes; but history and geography are not included; further time is allowed for them.

3572. Do all the boys partake of the English education?—Every one.

3573. And is it graduated from year to year?—Yes.

3574. Do you find that three hours a week, carefully and steadily pursued, with gradations from year to year, is adequate to give boys a good rudimentary education in English language, literature, and composition?—It is.

3575. That does not interfere with the study of the classics?—It does not.

3576. I find in your weekly course of study, "Natural science, an hour and a half." Do all the boys take part in that?—No, that is charged as an extra, because, otherwise, every fellow in the school would like to go and see a small snake, or see a horse. I wish it to be studied by those who have a desire to know something about it, and I gain that object by making it an extra.

3577. What percentage of your boys take part in that course?—I think about twenty per cent.

3578. Do you find that it interferes with their classical studies?—Not at all.

3579. I gather from you that it is possible for a boy to learn the rudiments of natural science, and to gain a sound knowledge of English language, literature, and composition, in addition to his classical and mathematical studies?—It is.

3580. He may also learn the elements of the science of music?—Yes; but a great deal will depend on the boy's prepositional education. If a boy comes to me at fourteen knowing nothing, he would not be able to do that, but one could easily accomplish it who came at eleven, and had been properly taught by his governor to spell, write, and do sums—that is he has done brains.

3581. I see that there are offertory accounts in your calendar?—Yes.

3582. What does that fund consist of?—The alms given in the chapel by the masters, boys, &c., and in a series of private charity.

3583. In 1873 it amounted to £78?—Yes.

3584. Are you aware whether the endowed schools, with the advantages of their endowments, have ever given anything from offertory funds in this way?—The endowed schools have not got offertory. Mine is the only Protestant school in the country that has a chapel of its own. I am sure they all subscribe liberally to Church purposes.

3585. Do you teach Greek verse?—I do. I think that is the highest classical exercise.

3586. Do you insist upon it from all boys who learn Greek?—No boy could dream of neglecting it. Parents are not in the habit of saying to me, "I cannot have this, and I cannot have that." I think time well spent at that exercise.

3587. Have you any English boys at your school?—Yes, there are three at the present moment, but it is an unusual thing. There boys come to me on private grounds. Two of them are my own nephews, and the third is the son of a Major-General in the army who happens to be in England.

3588. You spoke about the system of having persons to superintend boys during play-hours. Are you boys so superintended?—Not in the least.

3589. You spoke of hours. Have you bounds for them?—I have, to this extent—that no boy may go into Dublin. They may walk ten miles into the mountains if they like, either in parties or separately.

3590. Have you found any evil results arising from that system?—Not the slightest. It teaches boys to manage themselves—self-control.

3591. Have you had occasion to remove boys from your school?—Yes.

3592. Did you attribute that to any cause arising from the liberty so allowed to them?—Certainly not. It has nothing to say to it at all. When you let boys freely over the country folding their guns into public houses, they know that if any of them break the rules, the whole school will be temporarily deprived of liberty, and that gives every boy an interest in maintaining the rules.

3593. And you find they maintain them?—Yes. I do not say our boys are angelic, or better than others. You will always find things happening in schools, under any system.

3594. Are you aware on the subject of Roman Catholic schools derived from any book you have read on the subject?—I have visited one large Roman Catholic school, and am acquainted with some particulars about two others, and I think I cannot state more than what is the fact, that there are rigid bounds and there is the presence of somebody in authority. That, however, is not confined to Roman Catholic schools. Protestant schools have it too, but I shirk it.

3595. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—If you had an endowment and advantages, say, for instance, like the Royal School of Armagh, which has £500 a year for salaries of masters, and has its buildings kept in repair, and exhibitions at Trinity College, what difference should you be able to make in your charges?—I should be able to make a very considerable statement. When charging sixty guineas, we can make them pay for everything, and leave a profit of eight per cent. on our income, and also offer liberal inducements, in the shape of school exhibitions, to boys, it is manifest, that, if we got those additional payments and advantages, we could do a vast deal more; but I cannot reduce it to figures without consideration.

3596. What class generally send their sons to St. Columba's?—In St. Columba's infancy, and until twenty-five years ago, several of the nobility of Ireland had their boys with us.

3597. Do you attribute your large number of boys to the school being so near Dublin?—Not in the slightest. They come from all parts of Ireland, from Malin Head to Roscommon. I attribute the large number of our boys, to this, that we offer in Ireland the Public school system at a considerably cheaper rate than they can get it in England. I am sure we give it twenty per cent. cheaper than the same article.

April 21, 1879.

Rev. Robert
Elliott, M.A.

—to speak commercially—would be given in England. The parents of our boys like the English system, and our masters are English; St. Columba's has a name for being English, which parents like, and some of them do not like sending their boys across the water, and therefore send them to us. I don't think they judge of us by University honours. We don't labour specially to prepare boys for Trinity College, Dublin, we attend more to a general system of education than to preparation for competitive examinations. This Intermediate system will make us prepare more. I don't think our prosperity or adversity speaks either good or bad for any other school. I don't think we have any rival in our particular ground.

3598. CHAIRMAN.—What are your school vacations?—We give two vacations, the same as most Irish schools.

3599. You have no Easter vacation?—No. I do not think that a good practical working system. I see great objections to it. The Intermediate Education Act, however, may drive me to it. If they are going to hold their examinations in our vacation time, I must alter the vacation. Our summer vacation begins on the 24th of June.

3600. Are your buildings suited for a larger number of people than you have at present?—No. We should have to build a new dormitory.

3601. Are the dormitories arranged in separate divisions?—Yes, on the cubicle system.

3602. With an accession to your numbers, do you think it would be an advantage to adopt the English system, of boarding houses managed by the masters?—No. I do not, it would not suit us, for it would make a great leakage from our profits. If a master is to keep a house going, he must marry, which implies very much more expense. Our results are obtained only by the most careful management.

3603. What is your opinion as to suitable localities for commercial education?—It would be a pity, and a mistake, to establish a lot of small day-schools in small towns. Three or four really well-officed boarding-schools made cheap, would give a far better education.

3604. Are the prices given by private liberality of much value, for example—the Archbishop of Dublin's English literature prize, the Lord Rine drawing prize, the Vay Rev. John Grayson's Greek composition prize; the Warden's Latin composition prize; the O'Brien English verse prize; Lord O'Neill's music prize; the Stikley prize for Irish history and antiquities; the Close modern languages prize; the Boucher reading prize; modern history and geography prize founded by the tutors and continued by F. H. D. Daniell?—They range at from two to five guineas apiece, and are given in books. There is also the Todd exhibition which arose in this way.—A public subscription was made to raise a memorial to Dr. Todd who was one of the founders of the college. It amounted to £750, and was invested in the names of three trustees. The exhibition of the annual value of £34, and is tenable for two years in Trinity College. It does not belong to Trinity College, but to us, and we appoint commissioners for it. I should be glad to state that our school has been largely helped, in getting out of debt, by subscriptions from England; and at the present moment we have £3,200 in hand, the result of subscriptions to build a new chapel. The interest of which is accumulating.

3605. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you think you have reached the limit of numbers?—I do not expect to see more than a hundred in my time. Public feeling is set so much in favour of England, whether rightly or wrongly, that a large number go there.

3606. Mr. WILSON.—Where were you educated yourself?—At Uppington, and at Christ Church, Oxford.

3607. What is your knowledge of the Royal schools in Ireland?—I have not professed any knowledge of the management of Royal schools.

3608. You said there was a higher tone of morality at the English than at the Irish schools?—Yes, I say that of the highest schools, and I include my own amongst the Irish schools.

3609. CHAIRMAN.—You mean a score of boys?—I have a knowledge of English public schools, and of my own school, and I say in first-class English schools there is a higher tone in the matter of truthfulness and straightforwardness than in the first-class Irish schools, including my own.

3610. Mr. WILSON.—You only know of your own, you say?—I know my own school best.

3611. You only contrast the English schools with your own school?—No; for I receive boys from the other schools, and I know how they behave, and what their ideas of truth are.

3612. If all the Irish schools were like yours, where would the sons of the commercial public go?—I do not know; none of the commercial public send their boys to me, but, I expect, and hope that there will be good commercial schools founded.

3613. Would it be possible to have, under the Intermediate system, a successful commercial school, and a successful classical school in the same locality?—I do not see any objection. If a good commercial school were founded adjoining mine, I do not think we should hurt one another at all.

3614. Do you think there would be sufficient boys found to form a good commercial school?—The commercial schools should be cheapened boarding schools.

3615. CHAIRMAN.—The population in most parts of Ireland is hardly large enough to establish a good day school?—No. I think Lord Kimberley was perfectly right when he stated at Norwich, a few years ago, that petty local schools will not do. It is far better for a neighbourhood to give up the grammar school in its small town, and establish somewhere in the district a good, well-officed boarding school, but you must subsidize it, and let the promising boys go into a good field of competition.

3616. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Ought not a locality which can provide 200 boys for a commercial school, and 150 for a grammar school, be adequate to support the two?—Certainly, those would be flourishing schools.

3617. Assuming they do not trench on each other's provinces?—They need not do that. I do not think, with such numbers, they would have any temptation. What I dislike in a school of thirty, struggling for existence, and trying to get credit out of every boy that comes. The master of a commercial school, finding a boy can learn Latin, will try to get credit out of him, and the master, in like manner, of a classical school, finding a boy capable of turning a commercial education to good account, will give it to him.

3618. Mr. WILSON.—You do not approve of day schools at all?—Only in large centres, such as Dublin; for example, the High school, in Horsemarket-street.

3619. Then you would force boys to go to boarding schools?—I would. I would make it worth their while to go to them.

3620. CHAIRMAN.—Who manages the fifty-four acres attached to your school?—I have to do that myself as well as I can, as overseer of the college. We keep sheep and cows, but there is no tillage; I keep a farm account. The farm clears the rent, and some times a little more.

3621. Is the value of the land included in the £45,000 which you mentioned?—Yes, and also that of the movable stock.

3622. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Were you obliged, by the programme of the Intermediate Education Board, to make any alteration in your course?—Yes, much to my regret, because the prices offered under the Act are so attractive to my best boys, that I must prepare them for them; and the result has been that I have had to put them back in their classes, and in their mathematics, and also, to some extent in English.

3623. Mr. WILSON.—Have your boys been successful in Trinity College?—They are not successful in obtaining high places at entrance. I never prepare for that, as I set but little value upon it. My pupils are successful at the later examinations. For instance, last Michaelmas Year the first gold medal in natural science, and the second gold medal in metaphysics were gained by a pupil of ours.

3630. Your boys do not go to the Queen's colleges?—Never; and only a small proportion, about eighteen per cent., go to any university. It is a most remarkable thing, that the universities are not attracting now, so far as my experience goes, to the same extent they used formerly to do.

3631. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you refer to the Dublin University?—Universities generally; but it is also true, so far as my school is concerned, of Dublin, and I think the English public schools would give you the same opinion. The universities do not, for some reason or other, attract to the same extent as they used. I think it is attributable to the Civil Service and Military Service. Under the Intermediate Act I regret that they did not give a pass course, and an honor course. Then one could work average boys up to the pass and push the more able boys on, knowing they would get encouragement for their labour. I fear that the result may prove that the talented boy and the average boy will come out equal. The talented boy has not the scope to exhibit himself that I think he should have.

Captain ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY STEWART & JAMES.

Captain Alex.
Montgomery
Stewart.

3632. CHAIRMAN.—You are the agent over the English Royal school estate?—My brother is the agent, but his health has not been good, and I have been acting for him for the last three years; but I have known the estate ever since he became agent.

3633. I believe it is in a very wild part of the country?—Yes; it is in one of the wildest parts of Donegal.

3634. Have you much difficulty in getting in the rents?—It is almost impossible to get the tenants to pay at all.

3635. How often do you collect?—I begin about the end of November. There is a large arrear. Some of the tenants owe ten years' rent and more. They nearly all pay broken sums, and on account.

3636. When are the rents supposed to be due?—They are due on the 1st November.

3637. What steps do you take when they do not pay?—I pick out a certain number of those who do not pay, and proceed against them at the Spring Sessions.

3638. One tenant is returned on your rental as owing thirty-two years' rent?—Yes; I could not say how long that arrear has been on the estate; but I think long before the bad times.

3639. It has not been struck off?—No, the pays something occasionally.

3640. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I suppose just enough to prevent his from acquiring a freehold?—Exactly.

3641. CHAIRMAN.—Have you or your brother ever reported specially to the Commissioners of Education about the arrears?—They see the account, and know the amount required, and I have every year requested that steps should be taken to relieve the tenantry of these arrears. I believe the estate will never prosper until some steps are taken about them.

3642. What is the total amount of the arrears?—£1,319 16s. 2d.

3643. What is the gross rental?—£335.

3644. What is Griffith's valuation?—I think £450.

3645. Do you know anything of the surrounding estates?—Yes; I am agent to other properties, one not more than a mile away.

3646. How is that situated as to arrear?—There is no arrear. It belongs to Lord Lifford.

3647. What steps are taken if any tenants fall into arrear there?—They are proceeded or ejected at sessions.

3648. Does the present rental of the Royal school estate bear a fair proportion to the valuation?—I do not think the tenants would be able to pay a higher rent. They are a wretchedly poor class. However, on the sale of a farm, or anything like that, I put on a small increase of rent.

3649. I suppose if improvements were made by the tenants they would be allowed for?—The improvements most wanted on the estate are roads. Some of the tenants have no way of getting out of their farms.

3650. Have other proprietors, with similarly circumstanced estates, carried out such improvements?—Yes.

3651. More than has been done on the Commissioners' estate?—I think the Commissioners' estate is more unfortunately discommodated than any other I know of. The tenants are poorer, and the arrear is keeping them down. A proprietor living near his estate is able to see what is wanted, and does it; but it is very difficult to get the Commissioners to allow anything for improvements.

3652. There is a tenantry school on the estate?—Yes.

3653. What payment is made in respect of that?—There is a small farm, worth about £1 15s a year, attached to the school, and a dwelling-house, which the master gets rent free, and also a salary of £30 a year.

3654. How long has the present master been at the school?—There is no master there at present.

3655. How long has that been the case?—Since August, 1878.

3656. Has anything been done for the tenants, as regards improvements?—Yes, they were paid for taking drains and ditches—namely a few shillings.

3657. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are there any leases on this property?—None. All the tenants hold from year to year.

3658. The holdings are small?—Wretchedly small.

3659. What course would you, as a land agent, recommend should be pursued with regard to these arrears?—If the estate were any one's I should wipe them off; many of them, I believe, do not exist in reality.

3660. They are a burden to the tenants?—They are a weight to the tenants which they never can get over. A man who owes ten years' rent says £1 more is nothing.

3661. Have you set before the Commissioners the reasons which weighed with you as to the arrears?—I stated that the estate would never prosper, or the rents be regularly paid, till these arrears were done away with.

April 21, 1883

Rev. Robert
Dun, M.A.

April, 1876.
Cape of Hope,
Montgomery
Street.

3684. What was the Commissioners' answer?—I never received any answer at all.

3685. Did you ever suggest the making of improvements to benefit the tenants on the land?—I tried to get 24 to make a road, which would have accommodated 170 tenants families, but I could not get an answer from the Commissioners about it.

3686. What is the nearest market town to those tenants?—Denagel.

3687. There is a want of good roads?—The estate lies on the side of a mountain, and there is only, I may say, a road round the base; but there is no road as yet into the farm.

3688. The want of properly formed roads diminishes the value of the farm produce?—Yes, most of the tenants have to carry it on their backs to the roads.

3689. Of what does the produce principally consist?—Corn and hay.

3690. Would you give £100 for all the arrears due on the estate?—They might be worth that, as a speculation, but I should not like to collect it.

3691. Are the laws well observed in that part of the country?—Very well observed.

3692. In fact, the only tender subject is that of arrears of rent?—Yes.

3693. Mr. Wintour.—Was it the custom on the estate to give receipts up to a gale day, when your brother got the agency?—It was not done in a single instance.

3694. The report of 1887 stated that the amount lodged to the credit of the Commissioners for the eleven years from 1844 to 1855, was only £370 8s 1d—So I have heard. That was in Mr. Wintour's time.

3695. Since your brother became agent, has he succeeded fairly in collecting the rent?—Yes, pretty well. He generally got nearly a year's rent each year.

3696. An observation was made, by a former witness, as to your not furnishing your accounts quarterly or monthly, as requested by the Commissioners?—I never was asked to do so. My brother used to furnish them quarterly, but it was useless, as there was nothing to furnish.

3697. In point of fact, you only got the rents between December and April?—Yes, and lodge the amount to the Commissioners' credit.

3698. Did you address any letter to the Commissioners, on the subject of the arrears?—Yes; when sending up the account for the year 1873, I wrote this letter to their Secretary:—

"Killeshinagh, Lifford,

"25th May, 1877.

"Dear Sir,—I herewith send explanation to your letter, dated 14th December, 1873, which I hope you will think sufficient. If you still think there is any debt against the agent, I shall either send you cheque for it, or debit myself with it, as you wish. In reply to your letter of 15th May, I regret to say that I was unable to get a year's rent out of the estate, though using every exertion in my power, and consulting several accountants, this being a very bad year, owing to the enormous price of hay, and the bad price of mountain cattle. Will you be good enough to charge me with error in account for the year 1876-7, till I am able to go into the matter. I can give no vouchers for seeking debts or arrears, as there are many cases where a number of the tenants, and which allowances I have done away with to better, with the exception of a few which may still be due. As long as the arrears, as shown as due by the tenants—and which have been carried on for a long time, and to a great extent, I believe are not really due by them—are allowed to remain, the Tenant's estate will never improve. I should advise that some arrangement should be come to in this matter. Also, there is a great necessity for the appointment of a leg. atty."

"Yours faithfully,

"A. M. SHERMAN."

3699. Did you ever get any reply to that letter?—None.

3700. Did you afterwards address another letter to the Commissioners?—I wrote again to their Secretary.

3701. On the same subject?—Yes, in answer to a letter from him, complaining of the increase in the amount of arrears.

3684. What was the amount of the arrears when your brother was appointed agent?—About £1,000. That was eleven years ago.

3685. The arrears have increased?—Yes; it is now about £1,200. This is a copy of the letter I wrote:—

"Killeshinagh, Lifford,

"4th July, 1878.

"Dear Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 17th June, I am not at all surprised at the increase of arrears on the Tenant's estate, considering the class of tenants on it, which I believe are the very worst in Ireland—and the very best year that they had last year; and as I have already informed you (but without any notice being taken by you) that unless some steps are taken to relieve the tenants of the enormous arrears which is shown as due by them, and which has been carried on for years—though I believe in numbers of cases not existing—the estate will never prosper, nor will the rents be paid regularly. I enclose schedule of poor rates, but thought that being checked by me would have been sufficient. As to the enormous arrears, which are for claims and debts, and are made up of small sums of a few shillings. There never has been a schedule furnished of these, and I should think being guaranteed on some 30s allowance by the Commissioners' agent should be sufficient. You will see that there is a great reduction in the arrears from last year, as I am doing away with it altogether. The charge of £5 16s 3d made by you against the agent, £4 of which (Callaghan's interest, and Martin for repairing road, which has been allowed) is not due by him. The other charges, with the exception of the £4, error in total, are made up of petty sums of your rate allowances, which on a poor estate like Tenant's, &c. is hard to more than one way to avoid, and which I think should not be charged against him, though at the same time consider him liable for them. The charge of £2 for stamps, &c. I do not consider too high, and has been allowed every year. I have used every exertion to collect the Commissioners' rents, and have spent near £100, and executed two this year (which I suppose must have done before on Tenant's). I wrote you on matters connected with the estate of importance on 20th January last, and received no reply to it."

"Yours faithfully,

"A. M. SHERMAN."

"Wm. Cotton Kyle, Esq."

3686. I believe there is tenant right on that estate?—Yes.

3687. If the arrears were wiped out altogether, or even reduced, do you think it would be possible to get the tenants to sell their interest in each other?—They would be much more inclined to do so, because now if a man were to sell, most of the purchase-money would be engulphed in the arrears.

3688. And you have no power to limit the arrears?—None.

3689. Do you attribute the prosperity of the adjoining estates, to the fact that there are no arrears on them?—Certainly.

3690. Lord Lifford's property is much the same class of land?—Much the same.

3691. What has the tenant right on the named estate been selling for?—It is very difficult to say. I have known it go as high as thirty-six years' purchase. The fair average would be from twelve to fifteen years' purchase.

3692. What steps do you take to recover the arrears, or do you take any?—Every year I have taken steps. I sometimes execute judgments. I have a firm lying off at present, and nobody will take it. It belonged to Alexander Johnson, who was quoted.

3693. If he had sold his interest the rent would have swamped the whole thing?—Very nearly. He owed thirteen years' rent.

3694. Do you think, if the arrears had been wiped off, that it would have been possible for Johnson to have sold the farm?—Certainly, and he would have been glad to do so. I understood that the arrears were wiped off the other estate.

3695. There was a reference in your letter to Callaghan's interest, what was that?—The Commissioners made a loan of £20 to a man named Callaghan to build a house. He repaid £10. Then he built a good large stone barn beside it. My brother wanted to allow him the other £10 for building the barn by striking off the debt of £10 for it.

3734. CHAIRMAN.—When was it built?—In 1875 or 1876.

3737. Mr. WILSON.—Have the Commissioners done as your brother wanted?—No.

3738. Have they refused?—The matter remains in suspense. He is paying interest on the £20. They have refused to allow him the annual, but he hopes to get it in the long run.

3739. What do you say as to the propriety of increasing the rents of that estate?—I should not recommend it at all.

3740. Could you collect an increased rent?—I do not believe I could.

3741. Would it be possible for any agent to do so?—He would have to be an unscrupulous agent, I think.

3742. You consider the tenants are paying rent enough for their holdings?—Yes, I think they are.

3743. It is a sort of mountain pasture?—Yes; rough mountain heather, and small patches of land.

3744. What is received for the shooting?—£15 a year.

3745. Who rents that at present?—Mr. Ray, Lord Dunsinane's agent.

3746. You consider it would be a great advantage to the estate to make roads?—If there was a little money allowed for the management of the estate, so that one could make the necessary roads, and other little improvements, it would greatly benefit the estate, and make it prosperous.

3747. Are there any steps taken to prevent subdivision?—Yes.

3748. I suppose there is a resident bailiff who reports?—Yes, he reports to me. I do not allow any subdivision.

3749. What salary does the bailiff get?—£15 a year.

3750. Is that paid by the Commissioners?—Yes.

3751. How often do you see the estate yourself?—Very often.

3752. The tenancy got rather an indifferent character from Mr. Fleming as to the distribution of whiskey?—I do not suppose they are worse there than their Douglas neighbours, and I do not suppose Douglas is worse than any other place.

3753. CHAIRMAN.—Has there been any emigration from that neighbourhood, or any encouragement given to it?—No.

3754. The farms are very small. How many are there on the estate?—145.

3755. That is something like four or five acres each?—Some are larger, and some smaller; some are only half an acre.

3756. Mr. WILSON.—What would be the average rent of such tenant?—About £2.

3757. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I suppose a great portion of the arrear is due from the farmers' taxes?—Nearly all the arrears come from about that time.

3758. CHAIRMAN.—Why has the tenancy school been shut up?—It is going to be put under the National Board now; but there are some tenants still to be arranged.

3759. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I suppose they generally have a Catholic master for the school?—No; the master has always been a Protestant.

3760. And the tenancy all Catholics?—Almost all Catholics. There are 141 Roman Catholics, one Episcopalian, and five Presbyterians.

3761. Mr. WILSON.—I believe you asked for a Roman Catholic master?—I did.

3762. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—When did you ask?—I wrote to the Commissioners, and stated, that from the number of Roman Catholics on the estate, I thought it would be just that they should have a Roman Catholic master.

3763. What was the answer to that?—I did not receive any answer, so I wrote about it a second time, when sending my annual return.

3764. Was it in consequence of any wish expressed by the tenancy on the subject, that you suggested a Roman Catholic master?—No; the tenancy did not express any wish to me at that time.

3765. Did they subsequently?—They did.

3766. Did you make a suggestion subsequent to their representations to you?—I do not think I did. The matter remained in abeyance. It was not decided what denomination the master should belong to.

3767. How long has the school been vacant now?—Since August, 1875.

3768. Had the people any other school to send their children to?—None nearer than about four or five miles.

3769. Have the children of the neighbourhood been going to school since August, 1875?—The people complained very much to me about the school being closed.

3770. You reported their complaints to the Board?—I am sure I did. I had a long correspondence about it for several months. I suppose on account of Dr. Kyle's death, the matter dropped.

3771. He only died the other day, and the school has been vacant since August, 1875. What have the Board done since that, to provide the children of the neighbourhood with education?—Nothing up to the present; but I believe they are about to appoint a master.

3772. Is he to be a Protestant or a Catholic?—I did not hear.

3773. CHAIRMAN.—Is it usual in that part of the country that the holdings should be so small?—Yes; they are very small in that district.

3774. Mr. WILSON.—You receive 10 per cent for the collection?—I do.

3775. I suppose it could not be done for much less?—It could hardly be done for that.

3776. Do you think any more in the county, but yourself, would take the collection for that?—I am sure there are many who would take it.

Mr. MAURICE CHARLES HINE, LL.D., continued.

3737. CHAIRMAN.—You are at present Head Master of Foyle College?—Yes.

3738. How long have you held that appointment?—In person since last February twelvemonth. I was really Head Master for a year previously; but I did not whilst the premises were being enlarged and repaired.

3739. Before that, you were Head Master of Monaghan school?—Yes, of the Diocesan school of Monaghan.

3740. By whom were you appointed Head Master of Monaghan school?—By Lord Kimberley when he was Lord Lieutenant.

3741. How is Foyle College managed?—It is under a governing body.

3742. Who compose the governing body?—The Bishop of Derry, the Governor of the Hon. the Irish Society, the Mayor of Derry, the Moderator of the General Assembly, and the Deputy-Governor of the Hon. the Irish Society; all for the time being. The treasurer is the Hon. Arthur Plunket, who is the agent of the Society.

3743. Is that a personal appointment?—As the general agent of the Hon. the Irish Society, he is the treasurer of Foyle College.

3744. What is the nature of the endowment?—Foyle College was the Diocesan school of Derry, and after the Church was disestablished and disendowed, the then Head Master, Dr. Robinson, retired, and the Irish Society has been since paying the Master out of their property in Derry.

3745. Does the present endowment all come from the Irish Society?—Altogether.

April 21, 1876.
Captain Alex.
Maitland
Secretary

Mr. Maurice
Charles Hine,
LL.D.

April 25, 1895

Mr. Maurice
Charles Hume,
LL.D.

3746. Does the school-house belong to them?—They look on that as their property, too.

3747. Did it belong to them before the Irish Church Act passed?—They used to maintain the school before the Irish Church Act. The school-house was built, about fifty years ago, by means of contributions from the various London companies, from the Bishop of Derry, and from the neighbouring gentry.

3748. It was not built as a diocesan school—by grand jury presentation?—The grand jury gave something, but only a small proportion of the cost.

3749. I suppose, as far as religion is concerned, it is a mixed school?—Yes.

3750. Are there any Roman Catholics in the school?—There are four day boys.

3751. What number of Presbyterians are there?—I am not quite sure; but Protestant dissenters—Methodists and Presbyterians—number 22, some of whom are boarders.

3752. What is the total number of pupils in the school?—104.

3753. What proportion are day boys?—Forty-seven are boarders, and the rest day boys.

3754. Is that the largest number you could accommodate?—I could accommodate eight or nine boarders more with a little crush.

3755. Has there ever been a Roman Catholic boarder in the school?—Not in my time.

3756. Is the religious instruction given before the day boys arrive?—Before the Roman Catholics come. We begin with a chapter from the Bible, and a short form of prayer; and in the course of the day the boys who want to study the Bible and obtain Scripture knowledge are taught by one of my masters specially. It is an optional class in the case of Dissenters.

3757. There is no religious instruction which everyone in the school must attend?—Not on week days; on Sundays, of course, it is different. There is a prize fund called "the Higgins Memorial Prize," in memory of the late Bishop of Derry—about £5 a year, and a good many boys—both day boys and boarders—study specially for it.

3758. Mr. O'SHEA DONOVAN.—Is that a prize awarded for religious knowledge?—Yes.

3759. CHAIRMAN.—What salary do you receive?—The salary was £500, a year, but on my appointment I declined to accept that sum, and petitioned the Irish Society to give me an increase. As the school was not, at the time, in a particularly prosperous condition, I asked them for eight years to give me an increase of salary, as I thought by that time the school would be on a satisfactory basis. The Society agreed to give me £350 per annum additional for the first two years, and then to reduce that increase by £50 each year, until the salary comes down to the £500 a year. They also pay the taxes for me, which come to about £50 a year, and which my predecessor had to pay himself.

3760. There is no exaction fee on the pupils?—All the fees received from pupils are my own.

3761. What are your charges for day boys and boarders respectively?—For boarders fifty-four guineas a year, but there are deductions in the case of clergymen's sons, and for brothers; the fees for day boys are from £10 to £12.

3762. What subjects are taught for that?—Everything the same as in the English public schools. The only extra are drawing and music, and there is a very small extra for all boys, except twelve, for the teaching of natural physics. Twelve boys are taught these sciences for nothing, by an arrangement between the Hon. the Irish Society and a professor in the Magee College, Londonderry. The rest of the boys pay a small fee of 6s. for the term of lectures. The Society pay the professor a certain sum for giving the lectures.

3763. Have you any free boys?—Not in the ordinary sense of the word "free," but in an extraordinary sense there are fourteen. Every six months there is an examination, and those who succeed may be said to get back their fees for the half-year; boys may go on winning these prizes as long as they are in Foyle College, if they are able. They are called Irish Society scholars.

3764. How are the undermasters paid?—I am quite uncertain, so far as the undermasters are concerned, and I pay them what I please.

3765. The return furnished to us states that salaries to vary from £170 down to £23 16s. 1.—The latter is a non-resident, a clergyman who attends for two hours a day, at three guineas a month. He could scarcely be counted a master.

3766. How many resident masters have you?—Three.

3767. And three non-resident?—Yes. The salaries of my assistants altogether, (amounting £40 a year to the board of each of the residents, which is what the Income Tax Commissioners allow me as a deduction), come to about £800 a year.

3768. You board those that are resident?—Yes. They live in the house regularly; the masters that are non-resident have breakfast and lunch with us.

3769. There is no master whose time is not entirely devoted to the school except the clergyman?—No, and he, besides teaching classes, prepares the boys for the Higgins' Memorial Prize.

3770. You have a French and German master?—Yes.

3771. You have an English, science, and drawing master?—Two English and science masters.

3772. A classical and mathematical master?—Yes.

3773. Magee College is a Presbyterian college?—A Presbyterian Theological college, I think they call it.

3774. How do you hold your appointment?—Under the Foyle College Act of Parliament the head master's appointment and dismissal are vested in the Bishop of Derry, and the Governor of the Irish Society; but from the nature of my endowment, for eight years dropping £50 each year—I don't think they could turn me out at all events for eight years. It was a little oversight in making the agreement with me. The Bishop of Derry and the Governor should be able to dismiss me.

3775. How are the repairs done?—There are some going on at present at the Irish Society's expense, but in future I will have to do them all at my own expense.

3776. Will that be under any supervision from the Government?—Heretofore their surveyor had the supervision of the repairs.

3777. You are to make the repairs at your own expense, and not to expect compensation?—I was told distinctly to expect none.

3778. What is the nature of the repairs that you are expected to carry out—must you add to the buildings?—I do not know about adding to the buildings. I think I shall add to the infirmary; and I have myself just repaired the gate lodge at an expense of £18.

3779. You are not limited to tenants' repairs?—I would not carry out any considerable repairs without consulting the General Agent of the Irish Society.

3780. Were there any pupils at the school, when you were appointed?—About forty day boys and four boarders.

3781. Mr. O'SHEA DONOVAN.—The Irish Society have large estates in the neighbourhood?—I have always heard so.

3782. Do they contribute to other schools in the neighbourhood?—Yes. They contribute to the Calvary school, to the Academic Institute in Derry, and to several minor schools.

3783. In fact, I believe all the income of their estates there, except what is expended on management, is given to those institutions?—I think they put nothing in their own pocket.

3784. The Magee College, I believe, largely sustained by the Irish Society also?—I am not sure, they certainly contribute to Professor Leabody's lectures, but that is the only thing I know.

3785. Are the Roman Catholics who attend at day boys obliged to take any part in the religious instruction?—No. The school begins at twenty minutes to ten, when there is a short form of prayer met, and a chapter from the Bible read; and they come into school when that is over.

3786. Your pupils are intended both for professional and commercial pursuits in life?—Both.

3787. And you give them an education in common?—Yes.

3788. I suppose they all learn Latin and Greek?—A great many do, but not all. There are only three or four who do not learn Latin.

3789. On what principle do you determine who are not to learn Latin and Greek?—Generally by arrangement with the parents.

3790. Do you find a desire amongst parents to get a commercial, as distinguished from a professional, education for their sons?—Very little. Before attending here, I asked the boys to divide themselves into three sections in the school-room.—First, those going to enter professions, Trinity College, or the Queen's University, or the Army or Navy; second, those going to business or commercial pursuits; and third, those who had not decided what course in life they would pursue. Fifty said they were going to professions; and only seven decided for commercial life. The undecided were nearly all small boys.

3791. To what class of life do your pupils belong?—Many of the day boys are sons of business people, but I have also the sons of most of the leading gentry and professional men in the neighbourhood, and also those of the well-to-do farmers.

3792. You have not a very large commercial element in the school?—I was surprised that only seven boys meant decidedly to go to business.

3793. What is the population of Derry?—24,000?—At least that.

3794. Are there not a large number of Protestant and Presbyterian commercial families in the town?—Yes, there are. The Presbyterian element is exceedingly strong in Derry.

3795. Is there any other Protestant or Presbyterian school of an intermediate character in Derry?—Two most excellent and flourishing schools.

3796. What are they?—A model school, which is full of boys, conducted by a very able man indeed—Mr. Todd, and the Academic Institute, which is also flourishing.

3797. Is that a Protestant institution?—The head master is a Protestant.

3798. What class of boys go there?—I think pretty much the same class as come to Foyle College.

3799. Is the education there very much the same as in your school?—Practically, there is no difference.

3800. Is there a similar tendency to learn Latin and Greek?—I do not know. Probably more commercial boys go there than come to Foyle College.

3801. Leaving out the Model school, which is, to some extent, a primary school in its intention; these two schools—the Academic Institute and your own school—combine both a classical and a commercial education?—Yes.

3802. Do you think that, between the three schools, the great body of the Protestant and Presbyterian shopkeepers and farmers in and around Londonderry are provided with education for their children?—I never heard any complaint of want of schools. There is also a private school in Derry, conducted by a former assistant master of Foyle College, for boys preparing for the University.

3803. There is also a Catholic school population in Derry?—Yes.

3804. Is there a Catholic school there?—There is one in course of erection.

3805. There are a certain number of Catholic professional men in Derry?—Yes. There are both professional men and shopkeepers.

3806. Do you know whether they send their sons to the Academic Institute?—I have heard there are no Roman Catholics attending it.

3807. You are not aware of the existence of any endowment for Roman Catholic teaching in Derry?—I really do not know. I called on one of the Roman Catholic masters, with a view to ascertaining, for this examination, but he was not at home.

3808. You were formerly master of the diocesan school at Monaghan?—Yes.

3809. When were you appointed to that school?—In February, 1866, but I did not open till August, 1866.

3810. When did you come to be head master there?—When I went to live at Londonderry.

3811. Did you keep the diocesan school open, from the time you were appointed, until you went to Londonderry?—Yes. In the interval between my appointment to Foyle College and my going into residence I carried on the school there for the day boys—lest they should lose anything—by a locum tenens and three masters under him, and I remained myself at Monaghan with my boarders and day boys.

3812. Did the school of Monaghan continue in active operation up to the time you went to Londonderry?—It did; under myself and my masters.

3813. Was there not some part of your mastership of Monaghan during which you let the school to another master?—I don't exactly know how to answer that question. I was advised by counsel that, during my lifetime, I had a right to carry on the diocesan school at Monaghan, by myself or by deputy. I accordingly advertised in the Times and other papers, both in England and Ireland, for a master to carry on the school, and at last I got an answer, and agreed with a gentleman (Mr. Magill), and I told him he had better pay me £1 a year, merely as a nominal rent, so that the Commissioners could not say that I had actually let it. He agreed to that, but he never came. I had proposed to give it to him during my lifetime, I told the Lord Primate what I had done, and asked him to consider, in one candidate's case, the mastership a title to Holy Orders, and His Grace kindly consented, conditionally, of course.

3814. Why did not Mr. Magill come to the school?—After everything was settled between him and myself, and to the satisfaction of the people in Monaghan—who were glad that the school was to be continued—I got a letter from Dr. Kyle, asking me if it was true that I had appointed a successor in the diocesan school in Monaghan. I replied that it was perfectly true. He then wrote that the Commissioners desired to inform me that I had been guilty of a highly illegal act. I at once wrote to Mr. Magill, telling him what the Commissioners said, and he charged me one £20 for his trouble, which I sent him by return post. I had previously asked the Commissioners what the school in their gift, or in the gift of the Church Temporalities Commissioners, to whom also I wrote; and both bodies said they had nothing to say to it.

3815. Does it continue as a school now?—No, it was shut up. I kept a caretaker there seven or eight weeks at my own expense, and I then sent back the key to the Lord Lieutenant, through a solicitor in Monaghan.

3816. Was it by the Lord Lieutenant that you had been appointed?—It was. The Commissioners had kept up communication with the school for years. They used to send me every summer a form to be filled up, as to the date of my appointment, my name, the number of boys, and so forth. After the Dissolution, I wrote to state that I should decline to fill up their forms—not through want of courtesy, but from other reasons. I really thought they had nothing to do with the school, and I did not send them any further returns.

3817. Did they write remonstrating with you for declining to send them the returns?—I never got any formal reply. I was told, informally, by a friend, that I was wrong, or something of that kind.

3818. Is the building still standing?—Yes, and improved by some £1,000 or £1,500 of my own money which I spent there.

3819. Is it unoccupied now?—It is.

3820. How much land is there about the place?—Six or seven acres.

3821. Have the Church street Commissioners a caretaker there?—I think so.

Mr. Thomas
Charles Hume,
Exam.

April 21, 1875.

Mr. Murray,
Charles House,
L.N.W.

3822. Does he pay himself by selling the grass growing on the lands?—I knew nothing about that. I wrote to Dr. Kyle and asked for payment of the 7s. 6d. week I had paid to a caretaker, at his own suggestion, for about two months. He replied that the Commissioners had no funds applicable to that purpose. I also asked for compensation for my improvements done, and was again told they had no funds in all.

3823. Is the land good?—Splendid, I left it in excellent order.

3824. Is it good land?—Yes.

3825. Do not you think that the costalour, if he gets the produce of the land for taking charge of the premises, is extremely well paid?—I fancy, if he resigned, there would be a great many men applying for the position.

3826. Mr. WILSON.—What was your object in requiring Mr. Magill to pay you £1 a year?—For fear he might look on it as a threshold.

3827. You desired to have the school kept open for the people of Monaghan?—I did, I consulted Colonel Lloyd and the gentry of the neighbourhood, and they were very much pleased.

3828. You had no intention of deriving any profit yourself from the school?—It was not for the purpose of deriving any benefit from the school that I did so.

3829. The endowment of Monaghan school consisted of contributions from the clergy?—Yes, the salary was £125 2s. 6d. paid by the individual incumbents of three different parishes, viz.: Cligher, Raphoe, and Kilmore, and to be collected at the vicarages as well as I could.

3830. You said that the Irish Society put nothing into their own pocket. Do you mean that they spend all the money they receive from their treasury in supporting schools?—They have expended money, I believe, in freeing the bridge and improving Coleraine.

3831. Did you ever hear of an annual charge for dinners in London?—There was a charge imposed up against them of spending all the money on eating and drinking in London, but I know that they did not do so.

3832. How many Presbyterians attend your school?—Thirteen twenty-two Protestants, Dissenters, of those, I think, eight or nine are Presbyterians.

3833. Do any of these eighteen or nineteen attend the morning school?—I am sure they do, it depends on the class each boy is in.

3834. How do you manage as to their leaving at the time of prayers?—They do not leave. Prayers are said at the beginning of the day school.

3835. Are you aware whether there is any endowment of the Academic Institution, Londonderry?—There is. The salaries of the head master and the assistant masters are paid.

3836. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—By whom?—By a local committee. It was got up originally by some leading merchants and others, because Foyle College was supposed not to give satisfaction, being reputed to be exclusively a Church and classical school. Subsidy things were therefore collected, the interest on which is applied in payment of salaries in the Academic Institution.

3837. The Irish Society does not give anything to the Roman Catholic schools?—Not that I know of.

3838. CHAIRMAN.—But they contribute to the National schools, where various denominations are taught?—Yes. I stated that several minor schools were contributed to by them.

3839. Are there tenantry schools on their estates?—I should think so.

3840. Mr. WILSON.—Do the Society give any exhibitions in addition to the free scholarships?—Yes, they give five exhibitions of £30 for five years, tenable in Trinity College. They are examined for at the same time as the Royal scholarships and Erasmus Smith's exhibitions. There are also two exhibitions of £30 a year each, tenable in the school.

3841. You heard Mr. Rice examined here to-day?—I had that facility.

3842. You heard the observation he made, that Irish school boys were untutored?—Well, not exactly. I think he says the boys he takes into St. Columba's school are generally faint.

3843. When is your experience of Irish boys as regards truth?—I have been for thirteen years a head master, and have at present 100 boys in my school; I have never had a case in my hand, and I do not find the least difficulty in managing my boys with the greatest satisfaction, the Derry boys particularly. I found the same case at Monaghan. The day boys were all anxious to come to school and inclined to learn. I have only found it necessary to expel one boy in the thirteen years.

3844. You do not find want of truth among the boys?—Not more than one would find among his own little children.

3845. Have you had any boys from English schools?—Something like fifty.

3846. What has been your experience of them, as contrasted with boys from Irish schools?—They generally know no Greek of any description, and very little Latin, but had learnt to drink beer and to smoke. They were more inclined to be unmoral than boys who had never left the bogs and hills of this country.

3847. Are the free scholars, at Foyle College, boarders or day boys?—Day boys.

3848. Are there any free boarders in the school?—No.

3849. Can the free scholarships be competed for by boarders, strictly the tuition portion of their payments being remitted?—No.

3850. They are limited entirely to day boys?—Entirely. When I went to Foyle College there were two house scholarships of £30 for two years, for which boarders only could compete. These have since been thrown open to day boys also, at my instigation.

3851. What success have your boys had in college?—At the last classical scholarship examination, in Trinity College, a Foyle College boy, sixteen years of age, got first place; the same boy also got first year exhibition. My boys are examined with the candidates for the Royal scholarships and the Erasmus Smith's exhibitions; and one of them got first place at that examination last November, on such notice that one of the Examiners was requested to compliment me on his high answering.

3852. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Are your Masters generally Irish?—I generally have one Englishman, from either Oxford or Cambridge. At present I have an Oxford man, Mr. Billbeck, of Balliol. My first classical master, Mr. Warner, is an old pupil of my own; he came to me at eleven, he got a gold medal and second medalistship in Trinity College.

3853. Mr. WILSON.—Are you a gold medalist yourself?—I am sorry to say I am not. I got a scholarship and the second silver medal in classics, and First of the First honours in History. I also got a medal, at the Historical Society, in History.

3854. Are you bound to have five boys?—I am bound to have fourteen, but these are not "free" in the ordinary sense of the word. The number was eighteen, but I got it reduced to fourteen.

3855. Were not these free places originally intended for poor boys?—I do not know.

3856. How much do the entire amount to?—Dwelling, £1 1s. and music, £1 10s. a quarter; about all lessn. shewing and twelve term meals. The organs of the Catholic Cathedral and the organist of the Protestant Cathedral teach the boys music.

3857. In 1857 the Commissioners reported that they found that navigation was taught in the school. Have you found it possible to continue teaching navigation?—I never pretended to teach navigation.

Rev. JOHN WESTBROOK HACKETT, M.A.; examined.

April 25, 1891.

Rev. John W. Hackett, M.A.

3856. CHAIRMAN.—You hold the office of Secretary to the Incorporated Society?—I do.

3857. How long have you held that office?—Twenty-one years; I was appointed in 1858.

3858. There is also an Accountant in the office?—Yes, the Register, as he is called, is also our Accountant, he has charge of the books, and he keeps them in very excellent order.

3859. What are the office expenses?—My own salary is £375 a year, and at the end of the year, for making out papers for the public examinations of our boys, I am allowed £35 more. The salary of the Accountant or Registrar is £215; then there is a messenger at £50 a year. They are all under the charter.

3860. The affairs of the Society are managed by a large Board?—Yes, by a Board consisting of 113 elected members and twenty-five ex-officio members. His Grace the Lord Lieutenant is President, and his Grace the Lord Primate is Vice-President.

3861. I presume that only a comparatively small proportion of the 137 take much part in the business?—They are scattered all through Ireland, and we cannot expect them to come to perform mere routine duties; but on some occasions we have a large attendance.

3862. There is a Working Committee?—Yes, the committee of fifteen.

3863. How are they appointed?—They are elected by ballot, in the month of February in each year, under the charter.

3864. Is there a large attendance at that meeting?—A very fair attendance; I think that for the last three or four years it has been larger than previously.

3865. What are the average attendances?—The average attendance at the Committee is about ten, and at the Board about fifteen.

3866. The Incorporated Society is an exclusive endowment?—It is.

3867. It was said to have been founded that the children of the Irish natives should be instructed in the fundamental principles of the Protestant religion, and to have been originally of rather a controversial character?—Yes; such is the provision in the Charter.

3868. In fact, they are called exclusive schools, but Roman Catholics are taken in to give them a secular education?—Not quite that. Once they enter our institutions as foundation pupils, they must be instructed in the principles of the Church of Ireland.

3869. But the day boys?—The day schools are more under the charge of the parochial clergy.

3870. The schools under the Incorporated Society are not so much of the grammar school class as those of Brouncker's foundation?—Ours are more primary schools, but they have grown into very considerable importance. The Society Institution is the means of training boys as schoolmasters, and for the Civil Service. Several have gone to Trinity College, where, during the past year, as well as in preceding years, they have obtained high distinctions. Very recently these, amongst others:—Classical scholarship, October, 1877; scholarship, 1877; first of the first honours in Mathematics, October, 1877; first of the first honours in Mathematics, April, 1878; first scholarship, June, 1877; junior exhibition, November, 1877; first of first honours in Mathematics, January, 1878; second science scholarship, May, 1878; first science scholarship, June, 1878; third science scholarship, June, 1878; Irish scholarship, June, 1878; and also one of the Queen's University certificates.

3871. How many went to the Queen's University?—Nine.

3872. Some of the Society pupils have distinguished themselves at the Government examinations?—Yes, at the South Kensington examinations, first class honours in Mathematics were obtained by five, and one got a second class honour; moreover, eight got the Queen's prize in Mathematics. I ought also to observe that, in the preceding year, another boy from Society School obtained the science scholarship of Trinity College.

3873. My O'SHAUGHNESSY.—That is the highest honor he could get?—Yes; and the classical scholarship was won by a boy who came from the Poochle Institution, but finished his training in Society.

3874. CHAIRMAN.—In fact your schools have become quite high class intermediate schools?—I would remind the Commissioners if I answered that affirmatively, without some qualification. We have not, in the slightest degree, changed our mode of education. It is the same as it has been for years; but it is better attended to—the boys are more encouraged, and the masters are of a very high class. In that way talent has been developed. Where boys of capability are found, they have greater opportunities than formerly.

3875. The education given to them is mainly English?—Yes, ours are English Protestant schools, but the boys find an opportunity for classical instruction, in addition to the education designed by the Society.

3876. Your schools are intended to give a thoroughly good English education, and so to develop the mind that the boys afterwards become fit to prosecute other studies?—Yes. In fact, we never aim higher than a commercial education; but genius has developed itself, and fine mathematical talent has been found. Boys can get a high mathematical education in our schools.

3877. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Did these boys, that obtained such high distinctions, as a rule go to other schools before they entered the University?—They passed direct from our Society school, having received previous instruction at our other schools.

3878. At what age do they enter Society?—A boy may gain a place in one of our boarding schools between the ages of twelve and sixteen; and, having passed three years there, he then undergoes a very severe and searching examination, and, if he answers fifty per cent. of the questions put, is given a year at Society. The boys come to Society between sixteen and nineteen.

3879. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any instruction of a technical nature in handicraft, trades, or housewifery?—Housewifery is attended to in our girls' schools.

3880. Is there anything done to teach the boys trades?—No; the education which they receive fits them for something higher. They go into the excise and revenue, attend competitive examinations, and distinguish themselves very much, at times winning high places in the Civil Service amongst many competitors.

3881. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do none go to trades or business?—Many of them obtain clerkships in mercantile establishments.

3882. CHAIRMAN.—The Society took the opinion of the Attorney-General of the day as to whether they were at liberty to receive Roman Catholics into their day schools, without instructing them in the Protestant religion; and he was of opinion they could not. Have they acted exactly in accordance with that opinion?—Our foundation boys cannot be excepted from the rule regarding religious instruction, but when the Government grant was withdrawn from the Society, we could only take a limited number of pupils, in consequence of the reduction in our funds. Then there were large donations partially left, and instead of allowing them to go to loss, we permitted the masters to take pupils for their own benefit, and for advancing education, with certain restrictions on their charges; to such pupils it was considered the strict rule did not apply.

3883. The parliamentary grant has been long since withdrawn?—Long since.

3884. The present endowment is entirely of private foundation?—Yes, we have a sum of money in the funds, and some landed property.

3885. The estates are managed through the office in which you are the Secretary?—Yes, by our land agent, Mr. Phipps.

3886. Where does he reside?—In Athlone, near one of our largest properties—the Rosslagh estate in the county Roscommon. He visits all the estates from time to time, and receives the rents, for which he accounts to the Society.

April 25, 1875.

Rev. John W.
Buckley, M.A.

3883. Have you any rule as to how often he is expected to visit the estates?—No, we leave that very much to his own arrangement.

3890. Are the rents paid yearly, or half-yearly?—They are payable half-yearly.

3891. Do the Board, or the working Committee in Dublin, see the agent?—Yes, he is rarely absent from the meetings either of the Board or of the Committee.

3892. How often does the Board meet?—Quarterly, and the Committee of fifteen meets monthly.

3893. Do any of the Board or Committee inspect the estates themselves?—Yes, frequently. When we go down yearly to inspect our schools and hold examinations, the deputation appointed by the Board for the purpose take advantage of their proximity to the estates, and occasionally go, with Mr. Pilgson, to look over the property.

3894. The examinations and inspections are conducted entirely by the Board themselves?—A committee or deputation are appointed who go through the country. A certificate is required from each boy who presents himself for examination. [Fide appendix No. 7.] I call attention to it specially as you will find a change in it in consequence of a recommendation from the Commission of 1857. The form in use at that time required a statement of attendance at a school for twelve months; and the Commissioners thought that that condition should be removed. It is now not limited at all. Any boy aged from twelve to sixteen may present himself if he gets a certificate, in this form, filled up.

3896. Do they examine in every school, both day school and boarding school?—The institutions they principally visit are the boarding-schools. Some of the day schools are also visited. I go to most of them myself, and some member of the Board usually comes with me.

3897. Are any of your schools under the National Board?—No.

3898. Do you give a grant to any National school?—We do not give aid to any National school as such; for we do not feel that, under our charter, we would be at liberty to do so, but I may instance the case of Strathfield school, which was for years under our direction.—Mr. Cosby, the proprietor of the estate, wished to place it under the National Board; but we said we could not pay the master a salary, as the National system did not embrace the principles of teaching under our charter. We then arranged that an examination in Scripture should be regularly held, and that, contingent on our being satisfied with the proficiency of the children at that examination, we would give the salary as a gratuity to the master: so as not to deprive the school of so much aid, and at the same time not to compromise our own principles.

3899. Are the rents of the Society's estates paid punctually, and free from arrears?—They have been very fairly paid, but, this year, Mr. Pilgson is beginning to lead us to expect that there may be some reductions, and that we shall be obliged to make some allowances to the tenants.

3900. Many of the Society's estates are very small and scattered over the country?—They are.

3901. Is there much extra trouble in managing these estates?—Of course there is. We are very anxious—and the Commission of 1857 recommended—that there should be Parliamentary power given to us to consolidate these small estates that are scattered through the country.

3902. But you have a power under the charter of selling the estates?—Yes, provided we shall not in any wise trench on our capital.

3903. On what terms do you consider that you ought to sell the estates?—In my experience we have had no sale at all of any of these estates.

3904. What is the course of education in the higher schools; are classics taught?—No; we do not expend any money on the teaching of classics, because the endowment is for the promotion of English Protestant schools. But still boys find an opportunity of acquiring a knowledge of classics; as, for instance, the boy who obtained the classical scholarship last year. He worked his own way with very little assistance.

3905. Mr. O'BRIEN.—What amount of assistance did he get at your school?—Some of the masters were able to give him a little classical teaching. His father knew Latin, and taught him the grammar.

3906. Had he to pay extra for the instruction he received in your school?—No; that was a mere labour of love. He was taught out of school hours.

3907. CHAIRMAN.—How far does the mathematical course go?—To that of the science mastership at Trinity College. Sundry school is intended for the higher class of mathematical teaching. The groundwork is laid in our provincial institutions.

3908. That is not the case at the Foscote institution?—The course there is not so high. They are merely taught three sufficient to qualify them to go up for the competitive examination for entrance into Sundry.

3909. There are no modern languages taught?—We do not undertake to teach modern languages, but in some of the schools the masters are competent to teach French.

3910. Mr. O'BRIEN.—You know that, by some extraordinary anomaly, people consider French and German part of an English education?—I believe now that is so, and in Ireland we might be able to repeat it as such. If the Commissioners thought we might venture upon it, it would be a very happy suggestion, and our Board would be very thankful to receive it as such.

3911. CHAIRMAN.—You have some free pupils, are they both day pupils and boarders?—One free pupil are all boarders.

3912. What advantages do they get?—Diet, board, and education. From the moment they enter the school they do not cost their families one shilling. They get three years at one of the provincial schools, and then, if they win their places, they are drafted to Sundry for another year or two.

3913. How many of them are there?—We have in all about 130 boys upon our foundation, and we have eighty-two girls, making a total of 212, assembled in our eight boarding institutions, but gathered from all parts of the country.

3914. How are they admitted?—By competitive examination, before the deputation of the Board.

3915. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Does the number 130 include the boys at Sundry?—Yes; we have 108 boys in our provincial schools, and twenty-two in Sundry, which number is the accumulation of two years; for if a boy has distinguished himself, and the master recommends him, we generally give him a second year to prepare him for the examination for the science mastership.

3916. CHAIRMAN.—You hold examinations at various schools?—We hold the competitive examinations at the boarding institutions, and the children from certain districts are directed to attend at particular schools.

3917. These examinations are conducted by the committee?—They are conducted by the deputation appointed to go round to visit.

3918. How are the accounts kept?—By double entry.

3919. How long has that been the system?—The Commissioners, in 1857, recommended that they should be so kept, and the books were put into the hands of an Accountant. They were arranged on that basis, and thus we have been carrying them on ever since.

3920. How are the accounts audited?—By the Committee of Account, selected out of the Board.

3921. Mr. O'BRIEN.—In the report presented by the Royal Commission of 1857, it was stated that your society was in receipt of dividends on £35,000 of funded property, and that there was no account of that funded property in the books. Is that remedied?—Yes; and a proper distinction is maintained between the income and the capital.

3122. CHAIRMAN.—The same report also states, in reference to your society:—

"The system of audit was also defective. One of the auditors examined before us himself suggested that the Auditing should be done in a public office by responsible persons, who were men of business, viz., generally speaking, clergymen are not."

Is there any public audit?—There is not.

3123. The Executive Scotch Board appoint two of their own members, who may be almost called professional Accountants, one of them being a director of the Bank of Ireland?—One of our auditors also is a banker, Mr. Low. The others are Rev. Dr. Stebbins, F.R.S.E., Rev. Dr. Chasen, Barrister, and F.R.C.S., Mr. Colley, Major Stewart Blacker, Colonel MacDonagh, Colonel Adameson, Dr. Haat, Vice-President of Trinity College, a Member of the Commission, and Mr. Travers Wright, agent over considerable property, all of whom are well fitted for such a duty, and three or four of whom generally attend at a time.

3124. The Commissioners of 1857 also recommended that the schools of the Society should be subject to the inspection of a paid Inspector, visiting without notice, and examining all the pupils?—I visit all the boarding schools in that way myself, and also some of the larger day schools. The smaller day schools we leave very much in the hands of the parochial clergy.

3125. Who appoints the masters?—The Board do. We sometimes advertise, but generally an application comes from some one trained in our own schools, so that, in nearly all our schools, the masters are our own trained pupils, and are familiar with our plans. They are men of high character and principle, whom we feel we can trust.

3126. How do they hold their appointments?—During pleasure?—We have generally an agreement drawn up. Our legal advisers suggest certain conditions, under which the masters enter on their duties, and, if those are not fulfilled, we feel at liberty to discharge them.

3127. You are not bound to them beyond giving ordinary notice?—If the conditions are unfulfilled, of course we are not. There is generally notice given to us by the master, or by us to the master, if it be wished to cease the union. There is one of the masters present who was forty years in the service of the Society.

3128. Is there any reason why the same Inspector should not inspect both the Executive Scotch's schools and your day schools?—Many of our day schools are of a very small character, having only few boys. They are left in the hands of the clergy, except that we go to see them occasionally. I go regularly to some of them myself.

3129. What do you consider each free boarder costs the Board?—Taking into account the expense of the instruction, for instance, the master's salary, the payment for servants, the allowances to the masters, &c., it would come to from £20 to £25 a year each.

3130. You have the estate book here?—We have. It contains the entire statement of the title to each portion of our property.

3131. What maps have you of the estates?—Carefully made maps, taken from the Ordnance Survey, on a large scale.

3132. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Have you the wills under which the various sums were bequeathed to your society?—No, but they are abstracted in the book which I have produced, and which shows the terms of each trust.

3133. Do you know whether any of your present funds represent funds voted to you by the Irish or English Parliament?—Not one shilling.

3134. Mr. WILSON.—When was it that the training in Inchmahy was abandoned?—There were two schools for that purpose, one at Princess George, and the other at Farna. They had been abandoned six or seven years before 1838.

3135. Why?—I am informed that they were failures; but it was before my time, and, therefore, I can only speak from report or hearsay. There were at that time agricultural schools founded, where a much higher class of students than we could provide was trained. Then the farms, implements of husbandry, &c., were disposed of, and the schools were turned into educational establishments.

3136. You never carried out the sale of estates that was recommended by the Commission of 1837?—There was a recommendation by that Commission that we should sell—and we would be very glad if we had—power to sell some portions, and to consolidate our estates, but such power has not been given to us.

3137. You returned 212 free boarders at your schools?—Yes, 130 boys and 82 girls.

3138. How many boys are there altogether at all your schools?—Between 900 and 1,000, including day schools and boarding institutions. The exact number is 943.

3139. In 1837 there were only 450 attending the Society's schools?—Those were boarders, but there were also 490 pupils in the day schools at that time.

3140. You speak of a master who has retired. Have you given him a pension?—Yes; he and his wife were both engaged, he as master, and she as matron. We gave him a retiring pension of £100 a year, and when either of them die the survivor is to receive a proportionately smaller allowance.

3141. Have you always carried out that system?—Yes, after a master has been in our service thirty or forty years we could not turn him out, without giving him some means of support for the remainder of his life.

3142. What is the number of pupils attending the school at Ray, in the county Donegal?—That school has been lately undergoing a change of masters. There were over 100 in it when I was last there, but the numbers have diminished. The former master died, and there was an interval before the appointment of the present teacher, who is an excellent master.

3143. How many Roman Catholics are there attending that school?—The last return gives the number as forty-three.

3144. How many Presbyterians are there?—There are sixty-seven Presbyterians, and but very few children of the Church of Ireland. It is mostly a Presbyterian neighbourhood.

3145. I believe the Presbyterians have no endowment in that neighbourhood?—That I do not know. There are schools at which large numbers of Presbyterians attend, but I believe they are National schools. Presbyterian endowment I do not suppose there is. I never heard of it.

3146. It appears by the report of the Commissioners of 1837 that you had at that time £35,000 Government stock?—Yes.

3147. Has that been much diminished?—Yes, we purchased the quit rents and head rents, to which some of our estates were subject, with portions of it.

3148. The income of the Society is about £11,000 a year?—Yes, in gross; but then there is a great deal of necessary outgoings. We have applicable to the purposes of the society about £5,000 a year.

3149. Do you expend the entire of that money on the schools?—The usual expenses of our boarding schools are nearly £5,000 a year; then there are our day schools, and the salaries of our officers, our law expenses, &c. There is a small margin left, generally £200 or £300 at the end of each year, which we are anxious to preserve as far as to live within our income.

3150. You have a large balance to your credit at the bank?—Yes; but it is on deposit, bearing interest.

3151. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Are any of the forty-three Roman Catholic children in the school at Ray on the foundation?—That is not a foundation school. We only pay the master a salary. It is a mere ordinary day school.

3152. What are the rules as to religious teaching in that school?—We leave it very much, under the circumstances of that school, to the master, but there is certainly no compulsion. I am quite satisfied about that.

3553. That is one of the schools of the Incorporated Society?—It had a very trifling endowment (about twenty acres of land) from the Little family, but they found they could not manage it, so they handed it over to us by deed, retaining a right to send twenty free pupils to the school.

3554. Were there no provisions in the deed, in reference to religious teaching?—I think not; but, when they handed it over to us, it is only natural to suppose that was done in connection with the principle of our charter.

3555. You have other day schools through the country?—There are some old parish schools, in the neighbourhood of which we have some little property, and we are expected, as landlords, to contribute there. We are in that way more subscribers than in any way patrons of the school.

3556. Do you examine them?—We go to see the progress made by the boys.

3557. Do you appoint the masters?—We leave that very much in the hands of the parochial clergy, subject to our veto; but we pay either the whole salary or a large subsistence towards it.

3558. In cases of that kind you do not, as to Roman Catholics, insist rigorously on religious teaching?—We do not; but, in our boarding schools, we carry out the principles of our charter strictly.

3559. Mr. WILSON.—I suppose that, in the school at Ray, the Roman Catholics do not attend the services?—I have myself examined the Roman Catholics there, in the historical facts of Scripture, and both boys and girls answered very satisfactorily. There was, however, no interference with their religious principles, and no attempt at proselytising influences.

3560. CHAIRMAN.—The Commissioners of 1857 stated in their report:—

"The Incorporated Society is entitled to much credit for the excellent system of competitive examinations which it has introduced, and by the result of which the admission of free boarders to the foundation of the three fast-owned institutions is determined. The usefulness, however, of these establishments would be considerably enhanced by the abolition of the rule which restricts the candidates for admission to the pupils of those schools in which Scriptural instruction is duly given to all the children in attendance. The effect of this regulation is to exclude from the competition all those children, no matter what their Scriptural knowledge may be, who have been educated at the National or other schools in which Scriptural instruction is not enforced on all who attend the same. There is no paid Inspector appointed by the Incorporated Society to visit their schools—that duty being gratuitously discharged by an annual deposition of the Society. I think, however, it would tend to increase the efficiency of these schools if a competent person were appointed and paid, on whom would devolve the duty of regularly inspecting two or three times every year the various establishments of the Society, and reporting to the General Board his opinion thereon. There are, no doubt, at the present time, on the Board of the Society several gentlemen of high educational attainments, and it is very creditable to them that they devote a considerable portion of their time each year to the arduous labour of conducting the examinations held in the different schools of the Society. It cannot, however, be calculated, as a matter of certainty, that there will always be on the Board a sufficient number of members able and willing to discharge this duty, for which no remuneration is allowed; and even if it were otherwise, it would not secure the accuracy of employing a paid Inspector, responsible to the Board in the manner in which he performs the duty assigned to him. The disadvantages attending the inspection, as conducted by the annual deposition from the Society, is, that full notice of their intention to visit must be given to the schoolmaster beforehand, so that he has ample time to prepare for their reception, whereas a paid Inspector might visit the school with or without notice as deemed advisable."

I myself go down as Inspector, at times, without notice.

3561. Would not you be under a disadvantage as compared with a professional Inspector, having as opportunity of judging of the relative efficiency as compared with other schools?—The schools have the advantage, that the boys are working honestly for themselves. Their continuance in the school depends on their satisfactory progress, and that is ascertained at the annual examinations. Boys are required to answer questions on paper in the various subjects of education. And, moreover, any member of the Board can go and inspect the schools, and gentlemen living in the neighbourhood regard it as a duty to see what is going on. The conscientious master and the boys' interest combine in their working well.

3562. Does the Intermediate Education Act is any way affect your position?—We hope that it will do so beneficially.

3563. Are your primary schools below the grade required by that Act?—No, we pride ourselves in having primary schools of high character, where we lay the foundation for the future education of our boys.

3564. You do not prepare them for the Intermediate Education examinations?—Not as a rule, but our masters are able to impart the necessary instruction.

3565. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I suppose Santry will be the only one of the Society's schools from which the pupils will compete?—No; I expect our other schools will send in some competitors.

TENTH DAY—TUESDAY, APRIL 22, 1879: 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—The EARL OF ROSK, Chairman; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; and WILLIAM WILSON, Esq., M.P., with JAMES CREED MURKIN, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Rev. HILL WILSON WHITE, M.A., examined.

Rev. Hill W.
White, M.A.

3566. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master of Navan school?—I am.

3567. How long have you held that post?—Since 9th October, 1873.

3568. What number of pupils have you?—Since I came there I have had forty-eight boys. I have eleven at present.

3569. What is the endowment?—£22 5s. 2d. per annum.

3570. That does not include the house?—It does not. There is a large house. I have brought the plan, because I was anxious to give evidence as to the accommodation it affords for boarders. Mr. Mitchell, the architect, stated in his evidence, that there was accommodation for twenty-five boarders. If that were so, there should be no family in the house, as the boarders would occupy all the bedrooms. I have rooms for only four boarders, and my own family and servants, and it is only owing to the fact that my brother is married master that I have room for any boarders at all. There is no playground and no hall-way. I generally have only young men, going to Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin, reading with me for a couple of years. In my house there are only three bedrooms. In the second master's, which adjoins and communicates with mine, there are also three, and in the centre, where the houses communicate, there are two, one being only a closet. My brother was only recently appointed second master. Before that I had only my own house, which, in fact, allowed no room for boarders at all. At first I had eight boarders, because I had four beds in each of two rooms. I had my house quite full, and, if I had more accommodation to-morrow, I would have it full again. I have had to refuse boarders for want of room.

3871. You're a small private school for older boys preparing for the University?—That is what it practically is.

3872. Your total number is eleven?—Yes; ten day boys and one boarder. Three of them are preparing for University examinations.

3873. A large proportion of your boys have gone to college?—I may say they are all of a University-going class, except some of the free boys.

3874. How is your brother paid?—He is paid by the Commissioners £55 7s 6d. a year. He is an Biblical Gold Medalist, and Senior Moderator of Trinity College. He also obtained first of first honours in English Literature. He is a Mathematical and English, and Junior Classical, master.

3875. What honours did you take?—I was a Classical Star, Scholar, Moderator, and Double First Honor Man. I had also obtained first place at Entrance.

3876. Have you any visiting Assistant Master?—I had a French master two or three years ago, who is now Professor in the Alexandria College. I found I was losing largely, so I wrote to the Commissioners asking if they would kindly pay the French master for me. They said they had no funds applicable to the purpose. I had asked what the funds of the school were until I saw a return made to Parliament, upon the motion of Lord Randolph Churchill, by which I find that the net funds of the schools of Navan and Ballymore amount to £279 a year. I have totted up the salaries paid to the masters, and I find that there is a balance of £337 7s 8d yearly, out of which I surely could have got some small help towards paying a foreign master.

3877. Mr. O'Shaughnessy.—Were there not large repairs effected at considerable expense?—I am talking of the net. Allowing for all repairs, expenses of management, and everything, you will find the balance I have mentioned remains.

3878. It is possible that, at some former time, the net income, for several years, was swallowed up by repairs, executed on these schools?—No repairs were executed at Navan school till I went there. There then occurred considerable principally of drainage work. The drainage was defective, and the Commissioners made a glazed pipe drain 144 yards long. They also put new gutters to the house.

3879. How many pupils had you at the time you made the application for assistance towards the payment of the foreign master?—About eighteen. I was contemplating giving up my foreign master. School masters are not paid in this country as they are in England.

3880. CHAIRMAN.—Do you expect payment in advance?—Yes, but it is very hard to get it.

3881. Do you always succeed?—Not always. I have sometimes had a great deal of trouble in getting payment at all.

3882. I believe that is a common complaint?—It is in Ireland.

3883. What fees do you charge?—I charge, at present, for boarders £30 a year, or £10 a month. When I had a number, my fees were £50 and £60, according to age. About forty years ago there was considerable alteration of the premises, and a great deal of money was spent. It was badly managed, and, now, I have heard, £5,000. The place is in the centre of the town, in the best possible position. On a rising ground, with a nice avenue, so that once in the grounds you would think you were in the country.

3884. What are your fees for day-pupils?—Eight guineas a year, but the majority of my day boys have been free. I had twelve free boys out of my total of fifty-eight.

3885. What number of free boys have you now?—I have of present five.

3886. Do you consider you are under an obligation to have a fixed number of free pupils?—I am under no obligation to take a free boy at all. In my charter there is not a word about a free boy. The Commissioners make no allowance to me for housing or clothing, or anything of that sort. The whole endowment is swallowed up in fees and servants keeping this large house in proper order.

3887. Are your boarders all Church of Ireland boys?—Yes.

3888. And your day boys?—All Church of Ireland too. There is an excellent Jesuit Seminary in Navan, and I could not expect to get any boys, except those of my own religion.

3889. Is there any practical restriction in your school?—Not the slightest. I would not have any objection to receive a Roman Catholic boy if he came. It is only exclusive so far as the religion of the master is concerned. It is a private endowment. Another matter to which I desire to draw the attention of the Commissioners, is that by the original deed the salary of the Navan schoolmaster is £10 a year more than the salary of the Ballymore schoolmaster; but now both salaries are precisely the same.

3890. Mr. O'Shaughnessy.—Has there been any change in the allocation lately?—The school was founded in 1685, and the allocation then was £35 a year for Navan, and £25 a year for Ballymore; the schoolmaster at Navan having one-third more of salary than the schoolmaster of Ballymore.

3891. By whom were you appointed?—By Mr. John Joseph Preston, Lord Castlemewagh, and Mr. Parsons Ellington, &c.

3892. The Commissioners of Education had no voice in the appointment?—None. They merely find the appointment. The deed requires that they should approve of the appointment, but that is a matter of form.

3893. Did they ever inspect the school?—Never in my time.

3894. Have they had any connexion with the school, except putting it in repair, and paying the salary?—They have always been most ready to help me in any improvement I suggested, except the suggestion about the master, and Dr. Kyle and he did not think there were any funds applicable to that purpose. The Commissioners also acted very kindly to me about five years ago; I applied for prize, and they gave them both at Mullinabar and Clontarf.

3895. CHAIRMAN.—That is only a small thing?—I am allowed to give as much as £50 a year, but never have asked for so much.

3896. You mentioned that there was a Catholic school at Navan?—Yes, a very good Roman Catholic school.

3897. Is there not a private school also?—Yes; the little Polish school, which has an endowment of about £20 a year, which has to be subdivided.

3898. Are you the clergyman of the parish?—I am the vicar.

3899. Is there not some other private school?—No. There are two convent National schools, and there is the grammar, which I think is endowed too.

4000. Mr. O'Shaughnessy.—Endowed?—I think there is some endowment connected with it. I have heard there was; it is an old school which has been there since 1759.

4001. You read the charter of the Navan endowed school?—I read my deed of appointment, which is a long legal document, and I thought it was a copy of the charter.

4002. It appears that the school was founded for the benefit of the neighbourhood of Navan?—Yes.

4003. Are there many Protestants of the middle class about Navan?—There are hardly any middle class Protestants in Navan. The population of the parish is upwards of 4,000, and the Protestants number only 530, even counting babies.

4004. Of course the main part of the population is Catholic?—Yes. The great majority are Roman Catholics.

4005. Very few Catholics avail themselves of this endowment!—Since I have been there they have never come, they have their own good school with large numbers and great advantages.

4006. Are there Protestant shopkeepers or farmers in the town?—None with children. There are only two Protestant shopkeepers in the town, and both are bachelors.

4007. Do you encourage day boys coming to your school?—Yes, in every way I can. I have five free boys now, all of whom I have invited to come, and some of whom came from a distance. In fact, a short time ago, nearly all my day boys came from Kells, where there are a number of well-to-do shopkeepers, who are Protestants.

4008. Of what class are the free boys?—Some are clergymen's sons, and all are of a respectable class.

4009. You give them a grammar school education?—Yes, an education to fit them for the Universities, the College of Surgeons, or the Bank of Ireland; to all of which some of my pupils have gone.

4010. Mr. Preston's will directed that the master should be a Protestant?—Yes. "An able Protestant." I have been trying to find out what "able Protestant" meant.

4011. There is nothing whatever, in the will, to exclude the Roman Catholics of the neighbourhood from the benefit of the institution?—There is not a word in the will about religion, except as to the schoolmaster; and I would encourage the Roman Catholics, by every means in my power, to come to me, as it would add so much to my income: or I would like them as free scholars if they were of the class to come as such.

4012. Do you make English an important branch in your course?—My pupils have every advantage of a good English education—arithmetic, geography, history, and English composition.

4013. Are any of the Kells boys the sons of shopkeepers and farmers?—They compete the sons of the leading shopkeepers there. Two of them are the sons of an extensive builder.

4014. You take care that a good scientific and English education forms part of your course?—Yes. My late assistant master was first respondent in Trinity College in 1875; he was an extremely good science master. I am confident that, if I had more space, Navan could be made a very successful school, not merely for Navan boys, but that several would come from Kells, who are now sent up to Dublin, if I had a good French, German, and drawing master.

4015. CHAIRMAN.—How do the boys from Kells travel to and from Navan?—By train, they come at 9 o'clock and they can get back at 1.30 or 4 o'clock.

4016. Mr. O'BRIEN.—What part of the building is devoted to school purposes?—The only portion contemplated was the lower story, which is one large room.

4017. Therefore the founder of the charity meant it to be, not a boarding school, but a day school?—The builder of the house gave no facilities for its being used as a boarding school.

4018. When was it built?—In 1829.

4019. Does not the history of the endowment prove, that it was meant rather as a benefit to people living in the neighbourhood, than to boarders coming from a distance?—That is the case in nearly all endowed schools, but as a matter of fact they have developed since the National Board have established their schools through the country. This, like all other endowments, was evidently at first a primary school.

4020. It was evidently a grammar school as I make it out?—I am glad to hear that. I was anxious to establish that it was intended to be a grammar school.

4021. Are you preparing any of your pupils for the intermediate education examinations?—Most of my present pupils are too young; but I will have five or six next year. The only one who is of a suitable age this year is going in for the senior grade examination. He is preparing for a scholarship in Trinity College. I have had, I am sorry to say, to back him in all his work, the intermediate standard is so much lower than the standing standard.

4022. CHAIRMAN.—You are aware there is plenty of spare accommodation in the other boarding schools in the country?—That results from, what I think I may term, a species of Anglomania. Parents think their sons cannot be properly educated in Ireland, as they send them over to England, pay enormous fees, and often get only a second rate education. Since I went to Navan I got two boys, one from Clonsilla and the other from The Charter House, and they, at any rate, appeared to have learned little else than cockfighting.

4023. Do you think that Navan has special facilities for the establishment of a boarding school, over other towns that have plenty of accommodation, such as Enniskillen and Drogheda?—Yes. In some respects. Trains come to Navan from four different directions—Clonsilla, Kingscourt, Drogheda, and Dublin—it is a most convenient place, only an hour and a half by rail from Dublin.

4024. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Would not those few lines of railway supply the materials, from accessible distances, for a day school of thirty Protestant middle class boys?—They would, if I had the advantage of a foreign master. I cannot now offer boys sufficient inducement to stop at Navan, instead of going on to Dublin; besides, many of the middle class Protestants send their boys, as boarders, to Wesleyan schools in Dublin, which are subsidised and able to take boarders at cheap rates.

4025. What is the character of these schools?—First rate schools in every way. Some of the best men in Trinity College have come from the Wesleyan Connexion school in Stephen's-green.

4026. Would there be any possibility of establishing the boarding house system in Navan?—I have been anxious to establish it, but I cannot get lodging houses. There are no houses in the town which could be let for the purpose.

4027. You complain that you have not had enough of assistance in the way of enlargement of the buildings?—Yes.

4028. Mr. WILKES.—Your premises are large enough for a day school?—Large enough to accommodate twenty or twenty-five day boys.

4029. You stated that the boys that came from England had learned cricket?—I suppose it was their own fault. If they had chosen to work they could have done so at other branches of knowledge besides cricketing.

4030. But they seemed to have devoted their attention to cricketing?—I think so. They are doing very well now. Some have gone to Oxford and some to Dublin. One of them came to me as a day boy; he was the son of a gentleman in the neighbourhood.

4031. Do you recollect receiving this letter from Dr. Kyle, the Secretary to the Commissioners of Education?—

"28th February, 1874. . . . The accompanying bill reached me last night, and I, therefore, lose no time in forwarding to you, for certificate, the account. There are many items in the small account for temporary requisites, and which are not such as we intend to supply; the intention of the Commissioners being directed to permanent requisites to replace the antiquated ones. The object was to assist you at starting. I shall not raise this question before the Commissioners, and merely mention it in order that you may not in future expect the account for such matters as copy books, penholders, pens, slates, &c."

Yes, the amount was about 10s. They refused to supply those things even for the free boys. I thought as they were free I should not supply copy books and such things, out of my own pocket, as I have done since my appointment. I get leave them to get maps, and when ordering them, I ordered at the same time a six penny box of slate pencils, a few dozen copy books, and some slates and pens.

4032. The Commissioners had, at that time, faith in the credit of the school.—Their account book, which was on the table here to-day, showed there was a balance of £260 to credit at that time.

4033. The Commissioners of 1857 referred to the bad situation of the school-house?—I could not understand that. It is in the very best part of the town. The Bank of Ireland are going to build their office opposite my very gate.

4034. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How many of your present paying pupils are the sons of Protestant gentry in the neighbourhood?—Three countrymen's sons, and one is son of the manager of the Bank of Ireland. These are all who come from the immediate neighbourhood, there are also boys from Kells, the sons of respectable business people.

4035. From the immediate neighbourhood only four boys avail themselves of this endowment?—No; there are the five boys in addition.

Rev. John

4036. CHAIRMAN.—You held the position of secretary to the Female Orphan House, North Circular-road?—I am chaplain and secretary.

4037. Do you reside on the premises?—No, but I have an office in the institution.

4038. What is the nature of the institution?—It is for female children that have lost both parents.

4039. Has it a church?—There is a church attached to it.

4040. What is the endowment?—There is a Government grant of £500 a year; an annuity of £25 6s. 3d., left by George Barrowes, charged upon land; Miss Every's annuity of £25, which is paid through the Court of Chancery; and the interest on invested capital, which, at the date of the former Royal Commission produced £400 a year; but, since that time, some of the capital was sold out, to meet the current expenses, and the present income from that source is £373.

4041. How long have you held your appointment?—Thirteen years and a half.

4042. What salary do you get?—£500 a year.

4043. How are the orphans selected for admission to this institution?—Each case is brought before the Board on petition, which must be accompanied by certification.

4044. Whose do the Board consist of?—The Archbishop of Dublin, Mrs. Alexander, Gibson Black, Mrs. Black, The Hon. Mrs. Brooke, Rev. Dr. Carson, Mrs. Carson, Miss Darby, Very Rev. Dean Dickenson, Lady Harcourt Fowler, Miss Hann, Mr. T. Hamilton, M.P., Edward H. Kishan, Mrs. La Touche, Miss La Touche, William La Touche, Her Grace the Duchess of Leinster, Mrs. Lloyd, Lady Marsh, the Bishop of Meath, the Countess of Meath, Viscount Monteck, Lady Mary Monteck, Hon. Mrs. Trevelyan, and the Dean of St. Patrick's.

4045. How often do the Board meet?—The regular meetings are held once a month, at the institution, and if any business of special importance arises at any other time, I summon a special meeting.

4046. What is the average attendance?—It is sufficient, according to the Act of Incorporation, which requires three to transact the business, and we generally have more than that.

4047. Is any orphan admitted except a member of the Church of Ireland?—In my experience there never was an application for the admission of any other than Protestants.

4048. In the course of instruction at present the same as it was in 1857, when, as I find by the report of the Commission which then sat, it comprised reading, writing, grammar, geography, arithmetic, needlework, Scripture, and Church Catechism?—Yes, very much; but I think it is much in advance of what it was at that time. We are now able to send several girls in to be trained as teachers. Others go into shops and places of business. The literary education is better than at the time of the last Commission.

4049. What is the present staff of teachers?—We have a matron; a schoolmistress; an assistant schoolmistress, who is also a needlework mistress; and a laundress.

4050. What are their salaries?—The matron gets £54 a year, the schoolmistress £58, and the workmistress £16.

4051. What is the number of orphans in the institution at present?—We have seventy-three at present. We have had, during the year, seventy-eight altogether.

4052. The number on the roll in 1857 was 104?—Yes.

4053. How is it that you have not so many now?—The Board reduced the number some time ago, on account of a deficiency of funds, to a little over sixty, but they are increasing it again now.

4054. In fact the number is regulated by the funds?—Exactly.

4055. The girls are taught and boarded free of expense?—Yes, and clothed. The petition and certificates must show that each child is destitute, and without relatives capable and willing to support her.

4056. At what age are they admitted?—From five years old, and they are not allowed to remain in the institution after they reach seventeen.

4057. How do you provide for them?—In different ways. One, for example, is now the mistress of an industrial boarding school of amiable boys; she is only twenty-four years of age, and was but twenty-one when appointed. The managers of that institution, the Christmans after her appointment, made her a present of £10, in testimony of her efficient management. She told me she attributed her success to what she had learned with us. There is no servant kept in our orphanage, and each girl must do the work of the house to earn, no matter what she is going out as. Another of our pupils, who was also trained as a schoolmistress, and had got first place at the examination for admission to the training school, went to New Zealand, where she was appointed to a school at £100 a year under the Board of Education of that colony. Another is our own workmistress, to which post she was appointed after competitive examination. Another is a confectioner. Others are in service, two being in that of the Provost; they were taken direct from the institution, and Mrs. Lloyd values them most highly. Two others are in the service of the Hon. Mrs. Brooke, of Castleknock, who has the highest opinion of them.

4058. Your pupils are taken from the poorest class?—Yes, but not from the lowest class. The death of the parents left them completely without support. Some of the parents on whom they depended being drunk or in other small positions.

4059. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Artisanal?—Yes, some; but others were in a much higher position. We had one, the grand-daughter of a general officer, another the grand-daughter of an archbishop, and we have had some whose fathers were landed proprietors.

4060. Most both the parents have been members of the Church of Ireland?—Not necessarily so; but as a matter of fact we have in the house only four children of mixed marriages, and they were originally and always had been Protestants, and their last surviving parent was a Protestant. The Board do not admit a Roman Catholic child.

4061. Is there any modified system of competition for admission?—No; nothing of the kind. Description is the qualification.

4062. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any examination to test whether they profit by the education they receive?—Yes; we have an examination every year.

4063. If they do not progress are they retained?—Certainly, for, if they have not intellect enough to profit much by education, they can be trained for situations as servants.

April 28, 1896.

Rev. John
High Cook,
M.A.

—4054. As to the education of the capital which you mentioned, was any opinion taken as to the power of the Board to expend that money?—There is only one fund which the Board have no power to dispose of—that is Barrett's trust fund. The remainder was invested from time to time out of savings, and, of course, could be sold out when required.

4055. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—What method is there for giving the girls an education in housewifery?—The nation is a fast race housewife, and they are under her direct superintendence. The Board considered the question of having a superior servant, but on reflection thought it better not to bring any of the servant class among them.

4056. Are they trained in domestic duties?—Every thing is done by them. Every fortnight there is a change in the employment of the girls. The girl in the kitchen one fortnight is in the school the next, and the girl in the laundry is changed to some other place, and so on in rotation.

4057. Do they also take part in the cooking?—Yes; it is all done by them.

4058. Do you find that you are able to turn out well-trained domestic servants?—We have a great many more applications for servants than we can supply. There are five for next Board meeting.

4059. Are they often returned on your hands as fitful domestic servants?—Never.

4070. Is the domestic training under the sole supervision of the matron?—Yes.

4071. How are any assistants?—The housewife teaches them washing, mending, and dairy-work, and in some measure she superintends other things in the kitchen, but she has nothing to do with the cooking.

4072. Who teaches them cooking?—The girls teach one another. There are three or four senior girls who take them in rotation; and there are two younger ones who act as assistant cooks, so that as soon as the senior ones go out they take their place.

4073. CHAIRMAN.—Do you provide them, when leaving, with clothing different from that used in the institution?—Yes; there is a uniform worn in the institution, and girls leaving get clothes suitable to the positions they are going to.

4074. Do you ever take back girls who have left the institution?—No, that is against the rules; but we look after them. I could give the subsequent history of every girl that went out from the institution in my time, except one, and she was taken away at seven years of age by some of her relatives, and we lost sight of her.

4075. Have you ever had any complaints from the children, as to any of them being above their work?—Never. The only complaints we ever have, are as to their temper, and those are very rare.

4076. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you know whether the £200 a year, you receive from Government, is on the estimate?—It is; we make a report every year, to the Government.

4077. Of course there is great care paid to the religious teaching of the children?—Yes.

4078. And they are carefully educated in the Protestant religion?—Yes.

4079. How any attempt been made in Parliament to reduce this £200 grant?—I do not know; not in my own experience.

4080. The institution is, practically, purely Protestant?—It is.

4081. Do you know what the origin of the institution was?—It was founded by some benevolent people.

4082. Your report states that the first charity sermons were preached by the Rev. Walter Blake, Karwan, when £775 was collected?—Yes, and on another occasion £1,015 was collected after one of his sermons.

4083. Was that the occasion on which, instead of preaching a sermon, he merely pointed to the orphans, and left the pulpit?—The matron is that it was on that occasion, but I believe that was on a different occasion.

4084. As I understand there is no attempt whatever made at proselytism?—No, nothing of the kind. Many people have that thought from the inscription—"I was a stranger and ye took me in." Any person recommending a child for admission, is subject to a penalty of £50, if the child is not a total orphan.

4085. There are no children there who were born into the Roman Catholic Church?—Certainly not.

4086. To what extent do the girls get a history, as distinguished from a domestic education?—They get the education usually given in primary schools, but nothing beyond English.

4087. Such an amount of English as will enable them to be intelligent in reading a book or writing a letter?—Yes, all can do that.

4088. Many people in the upper-middle, and higher classes say, that education is damaging to servants. What is your experience, as to whether an ordinary and substantial education is or is not advantageous, to the servant class?—I think, that when an education of a proper kind, not too advanced, is given, it is beneficial, but that anything in the way of over-education is very damaging.

4089. Do you find that the ordinary rudimentary education, such as you give to girls, makes them more intelligent, and better fitted to discharge their duties?—Yes, and more valued by their mistresses, because, very often, when they go out as nursery maids, they get charge of the teaching of young children.

4090. CHAIRMAN.—What system of inspection is there as regards literary education?—We have annual examinations by outsiders, and also my own inspection.

4091. A professional inspector can see what the progress is as compared with other schools?—We generally obtain the assistance of clergymen, who have a good deal of experience in the management of schools.

4092. Have you had any complaints as regards ill-treatment against girls who have gone out to situations?—No. All girls, who go out, are bound for the first year to their mistresses. We find that a judicious thing, so that the girl may settle down.

4093. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You mentioned that some of the parishes your institution were daughters of men of the higher class; do they also go out and make their livelihood?—Yes, every child has to make her livelihood, and, whilst in the institution, no difference is made between them. Each girl takes her turn at the work.

4094. In what capacity do they generally go out?—If they have not mental powers to go as teachers, or to business, they go as children's maids, or house and parlour maids.

4095. When girls of a higher class are admitted, do you find there is any difficulty with them?—No; they are generally young. If we let them in at twelve or thirteen it might be a very difficult matter to manage them then.

4096. Mr. WILSON.—Your report for the year ending 31st March, 1873, contains in the list of receipts, under the head of "Interest on money invested," "Consols, £161 8s 8d." How was that amount so large?—That was for two years. Our trustees happened to be all out of town the previous year, and the dividends were not received.

4097. At that time you were paying interest to the bank on an overdrawn account?—It was an unusual thing for all the trustees to be out of town.

4098. Who audits the accounts?—The accounts are sent to Government certified by five of the Board.

4099. "Farm produce" is returned in your account as producing £111 8s. What is there in the nature of a farm?—We have about eight acres, from which we supply potatoes and milk for the institution. We pay a rent of about £8 an acre, and are yearly tenants.

4100. You sell the surplus produce?—We sell the cows that have run dry, and the pigs. In fact the amount to which you refer ought to be deducted from the expenses on the other side, which are returned as £224 17s 10d. The difference between the two sums supplies the institution with milk, potatoes, and vegetables.

4101. What is the cost of maintenance of each child for the year?—£9 6s. per head.

4102. Are there any Dissenters on your Board?—No; it has always been a Church Institution, managed by clergymen and laymen.

4103. Of course there are no Roman Catholics on the Board?—No.

4104. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you get any subscriptions?—Yes; our annual subscriptions and donations for the year just closed were £260, 13s. 6d.

4105. You got £300 in 1877?—Yes; that embraced some large donations.

4106. Are the subscriptions keeping up well?—The general depression this year has affected them.

4107. Are you able to lay by anything at the end of each year?—No, we are not. Our bank account has been overdrawn for some time past, and we have been obliged to apply some small legacies to meet the current expenses.

4108. Mr. WILSON.—The balance against you was reduced in 1875?—Yes; we received a bequest of £200 from Miss Roe, which has turned the balance in our favour.

4109. Who are the general subscribers?—Most of them are Dublin people.

4110. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The Institution appears to be very popular and well-supported?—It is. Our annual income is generally very well attended. The collections made at them average from £70 to £100.

4111. Mr. WILSON.—I see the Dissenters subscribe largely?—Yes, they do. Mr. Finlister subscribes, and so do Mr. Drummond, and others.

4112. Do you take in children, except from Dublin?—Yes, from any part of Ireland.

4113. There is no system of life subscriptions qualifying to vote?—No, the governors only have the power of voting. The governors are subscribers of £3 a year each, or £30 a single sum; and then they are elected by the Board.

4114. What would the £200 a year which you get from Parliament come to per head?—About 2s. 6d. per week per head.

4115. The whole cost seems to be 3s. 6d. l.—The whole cost of maintenance is about 5d. a day per head.

4116. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—If you got an equivalent for that £200 a year, in the form of a capitation grant, such as is given to Industrial schools, I suppose it would not make any great difference?—We would rather not be an Industrial school, for this reason, we considered it would be lowering to the class of children we have, and would debas them from the superior situation which are now open to them.

4117. Suppose the Industrial system was extended to meet your wishes?—The name of an Industrial school would be objectionable.

4118. But if the system were extended to embrace Institutions like this, without bringing them to the level of Industrial schools, you object would be satisfied?

—Completely. The Industrial schools in the County Dublin number 7s. 6d. a week, per head,—3s. from the Parliamentary grant, and 4s. 6d. from the county rates.

4119. If the advantages of the Industrial system was extended to this and analogous Institutions by a weekly allowance of an equivalent grant, would it not save the expense quite as well as the annual grant?

—Quite as well.

4120. Mr. WILSON.—Is there anything in the constitution of the charity that excludes Dissenters?—The Bishops were specially summoned to draw up the rules for the management of the Institution, and the whole tone of the Institution from the beginning was "Church." The children were to be educated in the principles of the Established Church.

Very Rev. H. H. DICKINSON, D.D., Dean of the Chapel Royal, examined.

Very Rev. H.
H. Dickinson
D.D.

4121. CHAIRMAN.—To what point, in connection with the Female Orphan House, do you wish to direct attention?—I have known this Institution all my life, my father having been chaplain of it when I was a child. What I wanted to direct attention to was this:—I gathered from Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY's questions that it might possibly be proposed that the Government grant should be discontinued, and that a regulation grant should be given. If that were done, and the Female Orphan House put directly under the Industrial Schools Act, I should hope that such a change would be accompanied by some modification of the present Industrial Schools Act. For this reason: I have had considerable experience in getting children into Industrial schools, and what is necessary under that Act is this—the child must be taken to the Police Court at a time when trials for assaults, drunkenness, or worse, are going on, and then the child is ranked more or less amongst criminals. Thus the whole character of the Institution would be lowered by the introduction of such a case with criminal cases, unless the magistrates were to have a sitting on a separate day. I think it would be a great advantage in all cases of Industrial schools that the magistrates should hold a separate sitting, if necessary always an open court under the Act, but it should be so distinct from the ordinary that the little children should not feel themselves degraded. I have seen little children sobbing and crying, believing themselves guilty of some unknown crime, because they were to be, as the phrase is, "separated," and given into the charge of a policeman, and many accompaniments of crime were shown unnecessarily around children guilty of no crime.

4122. But, as I understood, this Orphan House is on an entirely different footing?—Yes.

4123. The children are admitted into the Industrial schools, necessarily because they are in danger of being criminals and liable to be in the criminal class?—Yes.

4124. The only qualification for this Institution is poverty?—That—distinction—is one qualification, under the Industrial Schools Act; so that if the grant were withdrawn, we should immediately come under the Industrial Schools Act, and the children would come under the category of the destitute, or total orphans. To qualify them for admission they would, however, have to be brought to the Police Court, and would be mixed with others of the lower, and often criminal classes.

4125. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Perhaps I had better explain what was passing in my mind. It is perfectly possible that, with the wisdom of the present day, a direct Parliamentary Grant may be withdrawn from an institution of a purely denominational character, such as this, as we know it is refused to others, and I was endeavouring to discover, if capitation grants—higher and more reliable system—could be applied effectively to such institutions as yours?—That would be by the extension of the English Act to Ireland; but there is at present no suitable Act in Ireland. The other point to which I wished to draw attention was this.—The allowance of 5s. under the Industrial Schools Act is to cover more than the mere cost of food—the general cost of the maintenance of the Institution. We estimate the mere cost of food to be 3s. 6d.

4126. Is not it a fact that your grant of £500 represents per head a less sum than what is allowed for children under the Industrial Schools Act?—It is so, for this reason, that the grant under the Industrial Schools Act is supposed to cover not only the cost of food, but the general cost of the Institution—salaries and house expenses as well, and amounts to 5s. 6d. a week, and the £500 a year would be only 2s. 6d. per head per week, for our average number. They are two different systems. One is a complete grant for the whole expenses, the other, a capitation grant as aid of voluntary effort, but if people knew that there was another source of revenue, I fear the voluntary efforts might cease.

April 27, 1878.

Very Rev. H.
E. DOLAN, M.A.

4127. Mr. WILSON.—There is an entry in your accounts for pew rents in the chapel?—Yes, the chapel receipts, including those at an annual sermon and the usual offertory, are sufficient to cover the salary of the chaplain and the ordinary working expenses of the chapel, salary of the sexton, gas, &c., and generally leave a balance which goes to the Institution.

Mr. Geo. Reid
Answering.

Mr. GEORGE REID ANSWERS, examined.

4128. CHAIRMAN.—You are Registrar to the Governors of the Blue Coat Hospital?—I am.

4129. How long have you held that appointment?—Since June, 1876.

4130. What is your salary?—I get £100 a year as registrar; and besides that I get commission fees for collecting the rents of the Dublin estate. I have also apartments at the hospital. I have prepared a statement which will, I think, give a good deal of information.

4131. Read it.—

"I was appointed registrar and agent to the Institution, (on the retirement of Mr. LEST, who had previously held the office), in June, 1876. The Hospital and School was founded by Royal Charter of King Charles the Second (1670). The objects of the institution, as at present administered, are the maintenance, education, and clothing of the sons of persons in reduced circumstances, members of the Irish Church. The governing body consists of fifty members, of these forty-six are appointed by the Lord Archbishop of Armagh, the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, the Lord Archbishop of Dublin, and the Lord Bishop of Meath, the remaining four being the Treasurer for the time being and three other Governors of the Schools founded by Erasmus Smith. I hand in a list of the present forty-six Governors. (Vide appendix No. 9.) They include the survivors of the Mayno, Smith, and Sherill's Pews, who were Governors at the date of the passing of the Municipal Corporation Act of 1840. The four who now represent the Erasmus Smith Schools are—The Right Honourable the Vice-Chancellor (the Treasurer), the Archbishop of Armagh, the Archbishop of Dublin and Mr. Edward Pennefather. Under arrangement with the Governors of Erasmus Smith's Schools, the King's Hospital maintains, educates, and supports for them twenty boys, in respect of which a ratable proportion of the expenditure is borne by the Governors of the Erasmus Smith's Schools. In addition to the boys nominated by the Erasmus Smith's Board there are the following private endowment rights to nominate viz.—

| | Boys |
|--|------|
| "The Bishop of Meath for the time being, . . . 10 | |
| "The Rector of St. Werburgh's for the time being, . . . 2 | |
| "The Rector of Harold's Cross for the time being, . . . 4 | |
| "Sir Arthur Edward Guinness and his Representatives, . . . 1 | |

"These nomination nominations were given in consideration of bequests and payments to the hospital. Admission is made amongst the other pupils each Governor when it is turn to nominate to one. The qualifications for boys applying for vacancies are as follows.—Certificate of marriage of parents, baptismal certificate or declaration of age, certificate of physicians to the hospital as to health, certificate of the diploma as to knowledge of the Church catechism, and competency to read and write, declaration as to health and clearly habits, and evidence of vaccination. The period of admission is limited to between the ages of nine and twelve. The term of residence is restricted to five years, but no boy is permitted to remain in the Institution after he has attained the age of sixteen years. Boys who have attained the age of eleven must be familiar with the first four rules of arithmetic. Exercises take place in the months of June and December in each year. The course of instruction consists of arithmetic, Euclid, algebra, trigonometry, geography, English history, spelling, definition, book-keeping, instruction is likewise given in French, drawing, and science, and the Governors have recently established a short-land class. Board meetings of the Governors take place five times in each year. A house committee composed of fourteen Governors meets on the second Thursday in each month. An estate and investment committee composed of seven Governors likewise meets, its duties are to consider and advise on matters of finance, control of agents, &c. Five pensioners a quarter of the Board and three of the house, and attendance investment committee. During the past three years there have been sixteen meetings of the Board, 249 Governors attended, giving an average of seventeen of sixteen at each meeting. During the corresponding period there have been twenty-six ordinary and special committee meetings, at which the Governors attended giving an average of seventeen of sixteen at each meeting. Only on three occasions since my appointment was a quorum wanting. Two Governors are nominated to attend divine service each Sunday. They are the visiting Governors for the ensuing week. The following is the dietary.—Breakfast, 8 oz. bread, tea. Dinner—Sunday, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. roast mutton, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. potatoes, vegetables; Monday, rice pudding; Tuesday, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. boiled beef, 3 saggies soup, 2 lb. potatoes; Wednesday, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. boiled leg of mutton, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. bread, 3 saggies soup; Thursday, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. boiled beef, 2 lb. potatoes, vegetables; Friday, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. roast leg of mutton, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. bread, vegetables; Saturday, 3 saggies mutton, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. bread. Supper, 6 oz. bread, 3 saggies milk. The entire number of boys in the school at present is 103. Since my appointment the number has not been below 100. The following is a summary of the existing property and income of the institution:—

| | £ | s. | d. |
|---|--------|----|----|
| "1. The Dublin estate, gross rental, . . . | 1,692 | 10 | 6 |
| "2. The Tipperary estate, gross rental, . . . | 812 | 1 | 6 |

"Numbers 4 and 8 are averages.

"The arrears due on the respective estates on 31st December, 1878, are as follows:—

| | £ | s. | d. |
|-------------------------------|------|----|----|
| "The Dublin estate, . . . | 319 | 7 | 11 |
| "The Tipperary estate, . . . | 18 | 8 | 3 |

| "The Cappaghlin estate, . . . | 87 | 13 | 4 |
| "Total, . . . | £425 | 4 | 8 |

"Of the arrears on the Dublin estate a large proportion has been since paid. For the years 1873-4-5 and 6 the average income was £3,522, the average expenditure £3,524. The excess of expenditure over income was caused by outlay in repairs and improvements to the school-house, offices, and buildings. They are very old and it was essential, for sanitary and other reasons, that they should have a thorough overhaul, the work is being done by degrees. The expenditure involved during the period in question, was upwards of £1,500, & further reason is that large expenditure, for repairs to some of the house property in Dublin, was also necessary. Some addition has been made to outlay in procuring the services of a clerk and master and the superintendence of the late Registrar, since deceased, added £100 a year. The head master, who retired after a service of nearly forty years, has also been granted a superannuation allowance of £200 a year. The following contribute the establishment:—

| | £ | s. | d. |

* In compliance with the desire of the Commissioners I produce the following books, viz.—Rotter Minutes from August, 1844, to March, 1879; Committee minutes from May, 1864, to April, 1879, ledger from July, 1868, to March, 1879. In addition to the salary of £100 a year, which I receive as Registrar, I am allowed apartments, fuel, and light, and the usual agency fees on the rents of the Dublin estate, which I collect."

4132 What sort of inspections or examinations are held, to test the progress of the boys?—There is a yearly examination in every subject, held in June. Examiners from Trinity College and elsewhere are called in to conduct it.

4133 Are those examinations Bachelors of College?—No; they are usually Dr. Ryan of Trinity College, Rev. Hugh Hamilton, and Mr. Lyons, head master of the Metropolitan School of Art. The governors sit and read over a report of the examination, and distribute prizes afterwards.

4134 From the report of 1857, it appears that the course of instruction, at that time, consisted of reading, writing, grammar, arithmetic, and the Catechism. Has there been any change since that date?—The present course consists of arithmetic, Euclid, algebra, trigonometry, English history, dictation, book-keeping, French, shorthand, drawing, and music. It is exclusively a boys' school.

4135 Do the masters get their board, or do they board themselves?—The chaplain boards himself, the assistant masters get their dinner.

4136 In 1857 the income from land was £1,057 1—That has rather increased.

4137 The other sources of income are not notified in the report of 1857?—No, we have fallen in for them since.

4138 Mr. O'SHEATHBURY.—Can you tell when the institution became possessed of the various estates?—It got the Tipperary estate in the seventeenth century. I do not remember the exact date. The tithes at Mullingar were acquired in 1870. The greater part of the Dublin estate was obtained under Royal Charter about 1465, and the Cloghoughlin estate was left to the institution in 1686.

4139 How is the £625 13s. which you receive from the Bismarck Smith's Bequest calculated?—That is the average 5s. maintaining twenty boys, and bears the same proportion to the whole expenses of the institution that twenty bears to the entire number in the school.

4140 How are the governors appointed?—As a vacancy occurs the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of Armagh, the Archbishop of Dublin, and the Bishop of Meath are informed of the fact, and they appoint a successor.

4141 By whom are the committees appointed?—They are appointed by the Board.

4142 Annually?—No, they are standing committees.

4143 An registrar you are also agent over the Dublin estate?—Yes. There are other agents for the Tipperary and Mullingar estates. The rents of the Cloghoughlin estate are collected by the agent to the Commissioners of Education, and they hand over to us one-fourth of the net proceeds of the property.

4144 What fees do you receive on the collection of the Dublin rents?—Five per cent.

4145 Is the property leasehold?—It is both leasehold and otherwise.

4146 Are the rents collected yearly or half-yearly?—The smaller ones I generally collect yearly, the others half-yearly, and in some cases quarterly.

4147 The Dublin estate consists of house property?—Chiefly of ground rents.

4148 Are there any day scholars, or are the pupils all lodged in the institution?—All are fed, clothed, and maintained in the institution.

4149 Do they receive any technical or industrial education?—No.

4150 What walk in life do they usually follow after leaving the school?—They are fit for most of the civil service appointments, and for mercantile offices.

4151 They get a commercial education?—Essentially. They get a first-rate education, and are fitted for anything. Some of them now hold good positions in the Indian Civil Service; others are in the Church. On Sunday last an old Blue Coat boy preached in the chapel attached to the institution.

4152 From what class do they generally come?—Certainly one-half are the sons of gentry in various circumstances, and all are very respectable. A very eminent correspondent of the Times was educated there.

4153 The institution was founded by Royal Charter of King Charles the II.?—Yes.

4154 For the benefit of persons who, by age, sickness, or other tendencies, are reduced to poverty, and also for the benefit of the good education and instruction of youth?—Yes.

4155 There is another institution besides the school?—No, but I believe there was a later Charter. I think there was one in 1672, which left the governors free scope. It was vested then in the Corporation.

4156 CHAIRMAN.—It was vested in the Corporation until that body ceased to be an exclusive one?—Yes. Since the Charter there was an Act of Parliament, two or three years later.

4157 Mr. O'SHEATHBURY.—I find in the papers accompanying the report of 1857 this passage:—

"This Charter gave power to the governors to place masters in the hospital, and such numbers of poor people and children as they thought proper, and also to appoint an orthodox minister (to be approved of by the Archbishop of Dublin,) to read Divine Service, and preach, and teach the Word of God so such as should remain within the same. It enabled them to hold land to the yearly value of £8,000. It provided that they should not alienate the lands or estate which should belong to said corporation to any other use than that of the hospital and free school, and that no lease of houses, or buildings, or ground to be built on should be granted by the governors for any other than a term of sixty-six years, and of lands, tithes, or other benefactions for any other than a term of twenty-one years. By indenture dated the fourth Friday after the Nativity in the year 1680, and made previously to the grant of the above charter, reciting that several persons had contributed sums of money towards the erecting and maintaining of a hospital for the sustentation and relief of orphan poor children, and such other poor persons residing in the city or county of the city of Dublin as should thereafter be thought fit to be placed in said hospital, the Corporation of Dublin conveyed to certain persons therein named, their heirs, &c., the fee-simple of Stephen's-green and Ouseburne, amounting in the whole to the sum of 4174 2s. 11½d. per annum (as hereinbefore mentioned), upon trust, that said persons would legally settle and dispose of said rents to the aforesaid hospital, and charitable use by maintaining and relieving such poor as aforesaid. The deed contained a declaration that the trustees would convey the said lands to such persons as should be legally licensed by his Majesty for the purposes aforesaid, and covenanted that within twenty years within six months after such license should be granted, and that in the meantime, the rents should be applied towards building the hospital, or should remain in their hands to be applied towards the maintenance of said poor, and that no persons should be maintained under the name of a poor, madman, idiot, needy or impotent person out of said rents, until the hospital should be built, finished, and incorporated. There was a proviso in the deed, that if the hospital should not be built and the license for the incorporation thereof obtained within three years next after date of said indenture, then it should be lawful for the Corporation to have again and receive said rents as in their former estate. According to the provisions of this deed the original scheme of the Institution appears to have been "for the sustenance and relief of orphans, poor children, or other poor persons inhabiting or residing in the city or county of the city of Dublin," and not to have partaken of the educational character at all. The Charter, however, extended the original object of the institution in two very important particulars. First, by including within its scope a "free school for the good education and instruction of youth," as well as an hospital for the reception of sick, aged, and infirm persons. Second, by opening the benefits of the charity to all the King's subjects in Ireland, instead of restricting them as contemplated by the deed, to orphans, poor children, or other poor inhabitants of the city or county of the city of Dublin.

That was followed by the Charter of Charles the Second. Was there a subsequent charter?—There was not.

4155. The institution now consists simply of a school?—Yes.

4156. King Charles the Second gave the ground in Osmestown-green?—Yes.

4160. That I suppose is the site of the school?—Yes.

4161. Its estimated annual value in 1857 was £638 16s 5d?—Yes.

4162. That is a state endowment?—Yes.

4163. The next endowment was, that the Corporation of Dublin gave, out of the property not of private individuals but of the city of Dublin, certain property also?—Yes.

4164. What is the present value of the property so given, from the citizens of Dublin, to the Institution?—We receive out of the Stephen's-green property £257 4s. 8d. a year, and out of that at Osmestown-green £164 6s. 3d.

4165. Where does the balance of the £1,692 19s. 6d., the gross rental of the Dublin estate, come from?—We have had premises left by other people at much later periods. For instance, we have property in Church-street and North King-street worth £250 a year.

4166. Is all the property in Dublin belonging to the Institution, except Stephen's-green and Osmestown-green, derived from private endowments?—Yes.

4167. Are the Tipperary premises those that were given in 1675, by John Martin?—They are.

4168. Have you got endowments from any public source, state, corporate, or otherwise, except the land given by the Crown, and the Stephen's-green and Osmestown properties?—We have not.

4169. What is your present net income, after payment of land rents?—About £3,500 a year.

4170. You have stated that the gross rental of the Dublin property is £1,692 19s. 6d. What is the net rental?—Between £1,100 and £1,200.

4171. Has there been any increase in the value of the Stephen's-green and Osmestown premises since 1857?—Very little.

4172. It appears that the Stephen's-green and Osmestown premises, granted by the Corporation, produce about £800 a year?—Yes.

4173. And the school buildings, which stand upon the ground granted by the Crown, are worth about £500 a year?—Yes.

4174. What is the amount of your endowments from private sources?—Horse property, in Church-street, produces £250 a year, in Southfield, £55; in Duns George Orchard, Georgeganman, £62; in Newmarket, £10; and Edgewillya's property, Upper Rathland street, about £250. That is all the landed property.

4175. CHAIRMAN.—Is that gross or net?—Gross.

4176. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Now as to your funded property?—We receive £378 per annum, dividends on £9,541 Government Stock, about £18 from East India Stock, and about £40 from Great Northern Railway Debenture Stock.

4177. £512 is the gross rental of the Tipperary property. What is the net product?—Last year it was £270.

4178. What is the value of the Mullingar property?—£311 gross, and about £265 net.

4179. And Cappoquin?—£166 gross, and about £150 net.

4180. Are you familiar with the nature of the wills and documents by which these private endowments were given?—I am not.

4181. Do you know whether they are all stamped with dissenting Protestant trusts?—I believe so; most of these bequests, certainly all the latter ones, were left by old Blue Coat boys.

4182. Have you received any endowments either wills or deeds of late years, since you, for instance, have been in office of the Institution?—No; but Mr. Arthur Guinness has given as the interest upon £1,000 Debenture Stock, for the formation of a new foundation, in respect of which he and his representatives are entitled to have a perpetual nomination to the school.

4183. Are there any leases against you, on the property you derived from the Corporation, which are likely to fall in within a short time?—I think two or three will expire in about fourteen years.

4184. What is the annual rental under those two or three leases?—The present rental is about £35 or £40.

4185. When the leases fall in, assuming property to remain at its present value, do you think you will get any increase on that unit?—Undoubtedly, but property at the north side of Dublin has gone down greatly in value, and these are not very old leases, as they were only for forty or fifty years.

4186. Are the leases at the north side also forty or fifty years' leases?—Yes.

4187. Are they likely to fall in?—Not in some time, except one, which will fall in next year, and that property is being sold.

4188. What is the rental under the present lease?—£150 a year.

4189. Is it to be let to the same tenant?—Yes, to Mr. Edward Cool Guinness. If we took it up we would have to spend £1,500 or £3,000, on the property consists of two tumbledown houses. The new rent is to be £130, with a clause that the tenant is not to make any deduction in respect of poor-rates or any other tax of any kind; so that I expect we will make by the transaction.

4190. What is the average cost of the boys in the Institution?—About £30 a year each.

4191. Do you know whether there are any sons of Roman Catholics in the school?—There is not one.

4192. There is no attempt at proselytizing or getting in sons of Catholic parents?—None whatever; every boy must be the son of Protestants.

4193. CHAIRMAN.—Must both parents have been Protestants?—Yes.

4194. Mr. WILSON.—You return the interest of £1,100 East India Stock at only £18 10s. 10d.?—That is only the surplus after providing for an annuity, £1000 a year for a life—subject to which we would let the fund.

4195. Of course you took the contribution from the Governors of Erasmus Smith's Schools, subject to the trusts of their charters?—That is an arrangement between the Erasmus Smith's Governors and my Governors, and is sanctioned by Act of Parliament.

4196. What is the Catechism taught in your school?—The Church Catechism.

4197. In the Erasmus Smith's Charter there seems this passage:—

"Also the said masters shall daily once every week, on each Lord's Day, catechize their scholars, and for that purpose shall order use of the Catechism set out by the late Most Reverend Father in God, James Usher, Lord Archbishop of Armagh."

That is not the Catechism you use?—No.

4198. Then the Erasmus Smith's Board is not carrying out their trust, as regards the twenty boys in your school?—Those boys must conform to our discipline.

4199. Is there any Dissenter on your Board of Governors?—There is one, Mr. Musland, Chairman of the Great Northern Railway Company.

4200. Is he a Presbyterian?—No; a Unitarian.

4201. There is no Presbyterian on the Board?—I do not think there is.

4303. Is there in any Roman Catholic?—No.

4304. CHAIRMAN.—The powers of the Corporation were handed over in 1840 to the Archbishop of Armagh, the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of Dublin, and the Bishop of Meath?—Yes.

4305. In the Report of 1837 it is stated:—

"The mismanagement of the funds of this endowment has been excessive, and the system of keeping the accounts was so imperfect, that the very large losses, which have been suffered, long escaped detection."

Has there been improvement in this respect?—Yes, I keep the books.

4306. Are they kept by double entry?—No, not exactly by what you call double entry.

4307. Are the minutes of the Board read in the usual way at the subsequent meeting, and signed by the Chairman?—They are.

4308. How are the cheques for payments signed?—The accounts are gone over and checked by the Accounts Committee, and cheques are ordered to be drawn for the signature of the Board, which meets about a fortnight afterwards. The cheques must then be signed by three of the Governors at the meeting of the Board.

4309. You apparently advertise for tenders?—Yes, we advertise for tenders for coal, provisions, clothing, and books.

4310. Is there any work done in the house?—None, except the repairs of householding, linen, and clothing.

4311. Mr. WILSON.—Are your accounts audited yearly?—Yes. They were formerly audited by members of the Board, but shortly before I was appointed it was suggested that an auditor outside the Institution altogether should be employed, and Mr. Philip Oulton was appointed.

4312. Is there any inspection of the school by the Governors?—The doors are open to all persons who like to visit the place.

4313. CHAIRMAN.—How are the repairs of the premises looked after?—Anything very in point is left to my decision, but all important repairs are executed only by direction of the Committee, who always advertise whenever any large matter is to be done.

4314. Have you a permanent architect, or do you employ one on the percentage system?—In large matters we have lately employed Mr. Drew, but we have made no regular appointment.

4315. He is paid five per cent. on the expenditure?—He is.

4316. Who are the agents for the country estates?—Mr. John White, for the Tipperary estate, and Mr. Richard Lee, for the Mullingar property.

4317. Do the agents come before the Board to report?—No; they account with me and send up vouchers with their reports.

4318. Was Dr. Kyle in the habit of sending you a statement of the Cappuloughlin estate?—He always sent me the account.

4319. Your share of that property is one-fourth of the net proceeds?—Yes.

4320. How do you account for the increase in your funded property since the report of the Commissioners 1837?—Sirvelly's bequest amounted to about £2,000. There is also 1837 Government stock, the balance of Kony's bequest, which is mentioned in the Report of 1837. Mr. Fagan gave us between 1837 and his death sums amounting to £1,100, and by his will he left us £4,700.

4321. How are the other agents paid?—They get five per cent. on their collections.

4322. Are these bailiffs employed on the estates?—I do not think so. We do not pay them.

4323. Mr. WILSON.—Have you increased the rents on any of the estates lately?—The Mullingar cannot be increased, being tithe property. The Tipperary rental was increased £300, and will not bear any further increase. The Cappuloughlin rental does not show whether it has been increased or not.

4324. CHAIRMAN.—The report of 1837 states:—

"In the year 1836, a portion of certain premises was taken by the Commissioners of White Street, who paid for same, according to the valuation of a jury, the sum of £600 15s 10d. The Governors did not re-invest this sum in the purchase of land or otherwise, but applied it to the discharge of current liabilities."

Is there anything of that sort done now?—Nothing.

4325. Mr. WILSON.—Is the money in bank on deposit on current account?—Current account. It is lodged to the credit of the Governors of the King's Hospital.

4326. Does it produce anything?—No; we have generally only sufficient to pay our quarterly accounts. We spend in one quarter what we received in the preceding quarter.

4327. Mr. O'SHAGHERY.—I suppose the rents and dividends are all paid into the bank?—Yes, except that I keep a small sum for current expenditure in the house. I have to pay the servants' weekly money.

4328. Would it not be much more regular that you should lodge your entire receipts, and then get a cheque from the Governors, say for £50, to be applied in making these small payments?—I do not think so. It is very simple as it is.

4329. Mr. WILSON.—Are the Tipperary rents paid annually or half-yearly?—Half-yearly.

4330. The money is lodged to the current account of the Board, and on that there is no interest allowed by the Bank of Ireland?—True.

4331. Do you get the allowance, from the Revenue Sanitary Board, yearly or half-yearly?—Half-yearly. I furnish them with accounts immediately after the 25th March and 25th September, and I generally get the money about two months after. It is lodged in the Bank of Ireland, and may remain unproductive for about a month, being used to pay the accounts the following quarter day.

REV. THOMAS BROWNE GUNN, a. r., examined.

REV. THOMAS
B. GUNN, a. r.

4332. CHAIRMAN.—You are chaplain to the Blue Coat Hospital?—I am chaplain and head master.

4333. What are your duties educationally?—I take my share in the general education of the establishment with the assistant masters, of whom I have two assistant.

4334. What is your salary?—As chaplain and head master, £200 a year, and apartments in the hospital.

4335. As chaplain you have the superintendence of the services, as well as of the general instruction of the boys?—Yes, say I have two services in the church every Sunday.

4336. Have you any control over the Institution, in the way of discipline?—I have the entire charge of the discipline.

4337. The master is under your directions?—Yes, under my supervision.

4338. Your whole time is devoted to the Institution?—Yes.

4339. Are the boys examined by you, with a view to ascertain that there is a fair amount of progress made?—I take a class every day; I also examine every week, and there is a general examination by examiners appointed by the governors, quite distinct from me, every intermediate. These examiners were appointed before my time; they are—Dr. Flynn, in secular subjects, Rev. Hugh Hamilton, in Scripture; Mr. Lyons, in drawing; and Mr. Swift, in mathematics. The Board allow £10 for prices, and I generally give some prizes out of my own pocket in addition.

April 22, 1878.
Rev. Thomas
B. Gibson, A.R.

4239. Is there any technical or industrial training, given in the school?—If a boy is destined by his parents for any particular profession, I turn his attention towards that, outside the school work. In fact I generally have classes quite independent of the school work.

4241. In what subjects?—The assistant master teaches magnetism, electricity, light, heat, &c. I teach botany, chemistry, and zoology, besides English literature.

4242. Have you any special qualifications in those subjects?—Yes, I am a certificated master, in some of those subjects, from South Kensington. I am also a graduate of Trinity College, and a double first honor man.

4243. Is there any competition for the prizes given by South Kensington?—The assistant master obtained something over £50 last year for results in mathematics, and he expects more this year, and something in experimental science besides.

4244. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—What salaries do your assistant masters receive?—My first assistant gets £150, and he also receives fees for those boys whose parents wish them to learn Latin, which, of course, he teaches outside his school-work, and for which he charges a fee of £4.

4245. Who pays that?—The parents of the pupils. It is not provided for by the institution. French and drawing are. We teach the extra subjects I have mentioned in the evening, outside our school work, save English literature, which I have added to the regular school course.

4246. Mr. WILSON.—You are aware there is over £600 a year received by your Board from the Roman Catholic Board?—Yes.

4247. Have you ever read the charter which Erasmus Smith obtained?—Yes.

4248. Your governors take the money they receive from that Board subject to the trusts in that charter?—I suppose so.

4249. Mr. Armstrong has told us that you do not use Archbishop Usher's Catechism in the school?—I think there is no difference. Archbishop Usher was a Bishop of our Church, and I do not think we differ from his Catechism in the slightest particular. I have very often had it in my hand when catechising the boys.

4250. Are the twenty boys, sent to you by the Roman Catholic Board, treated in every respect, as to their religious education, in the same way as your other pupils?—Exactly. I may mention that the Governors have raised the age for the admission of boys to ten. That change will take effect next Christmas. I thought it was impossible for three of us to teach children of nine, and also boys in the more advanced subjects. We have some of the best masters in town. The French teacher is head master of a Military Academy. The Governors have extended his time and increased his salary, so as to give the boys more instruction in French. Many of the endowments which have been mentioned to you, Fagan's and others, were left by former pupils of the school.

Mr. William
N. Hancock,
M.P.

Mr. WILLIAM NEILSON HANCOCK, M.D., SECRETARY.

4251. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the governors of the Blue Coat Hospital?—I am.

4252. Do you desire to make any statement?—I would like to say a word on the question of the religious trust. The first disability in Ireland against Protestant Dissenters was in 1697, which differs from England, where the disability began under 22nd of Elizabeth, 1581. The endowment of the Blue Coat school commenced in 1699, that is two years after the disability. It was thus a grant by the Corporation of Dublin, which, from the very same disability, had become strictly Episcopalian. Therefore, this particular trust, from the very commencement, was exclusively Episcopalian, and has continued so to the present day. It was so created by the Imperial Parliament, in 1849, because, although the Chancellor may now be a Roman Catholic, at the time the Municipal Corporation Act was passed he could only be a Protestant.

4253. Mr. WILSON.—What was the date of the Erasmus Smith's foundation?—Erasmus Smith's was earlier. There is an indenture, dated 1st December, 1657, made during the Protectorate, by which Erasmus Smith conveyed his estates to found five grammar schools. The next question is whether we are bound by the Erasmus Smith's trust with respect to the boys we take from them. That question was, most probably, very carefully considered; because, before the Governors took the twenty boys they got an Act of Parliament. These boys, therefore, are taken under the authority of an Act of Parliament, which provides that they shall be educated like the other boys. At the time that Act was passed, the Blue Coat school was an exclusively Episcopalian endowment.

4254. CHAIRMAN.—The Act of Parliament modified the charter?—Not as to the King's Hospital. We are not bound by any trust prior to that Act of Parliament, under which we take those boys.

4255. Mr. WILSON.—Can you tell us anything of Erasmus Smith's deed?—It bears date 1st December, 1657, and was made during the Protectorate; therefore the original foundation of Erasmus Smith was before the disability of Protestant Dissenters.

4256. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Erasmus Smith conveyed these lands to trustees by deed, in 1657, during the Commonwealth, and the original arrangement under that deed was that the children should be taught the Puritan Catechism. He then came to look for a charter under Charles II., who insisted that the Catechism should be the Church of England Catechism, and if he had been looking for a charter under James II., it would probably have been another Catechism!—Exactly.

4257. Mr. WILSON.—But the original foundation of the Blue Coat school, was, you believe, Episcopalian?—I am merely pointing out, as you criticised the Governors, the exact way the thing stands. Whatever question exists about Erasmus Smith's schools, it does not affect the King's Hospital. It has two Acts of Parliament, one in 1738, and another in 1849, under which the Governors act.

4258. Do you know whether the indenture of 1657 was made to Erasmus Smith?—It was made during the Protectorate. Further than that I do not recollect.

4259. There was no disability on Presbyterians or Dissenters at the time of the foundation of the Royal schools?—That is so. A remarkable thing is that in the original plan of 1657 for these schools, there was a system of religion introduced, but the words which did that were expressly left out in the charter of Charles I., in 1627. That has an important bearing. I had occasion to look into it after the Endowed Schools Commission of 1854-5 was over, and it is upon that view, in connection with several other matters, that the officials of the Commissioners of Education, Mr. Quin and Dr. Kyle, in evidence before the Select Committee on Foundation Schools in 1855, declared the Royal schools to be open, without religious distinction.

4260. That they were not confined to any particular denomination?—The exclusive endowment began with the disability under Charles II. Endowments prior to that are in a different position.

[Adjourned to next day at 11 A.M.]

ELEVENTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23, 1879, 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

APRIL 23, 1879.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—The EARL OF ROOSE, Chairman; and RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P., with JAMES CREED MERRITT, Esq., Q.A.S., Secretary.

Rev. JAMES A. BELL, M.A., examined.

Rev. JAMES A. BELL, M.A.

4261. CHAIRMAN.—You were head master of Bannagher school?—Yes, for eighteen years—from 1845 to 1867.

4262. You gave evidence before the Commissioners in 1857?—Yes.

4263. When you gave up the school you went to another part of the country?—Yes; I was appointed by the Crown, Rector of a parish in Westmeath; but in 1873 I returned, having been appointed rector of Rynagh, which is the parish in which Bannagher is situated. I have been acquainted with Bannagher all my life. The few years I was away caused no interruption in my acquaintance with the place.

4264. We have had some evidence from Mr. Joyce as to the number of boys, the children of Protestant parents, residing in Bannagher and the immediate neighbourhood?—It was in consequence of the report of Mr. Joyce's evidence which appeared in the newspapers, that I thought it my duty to apply to the Commissioners to be heard on this occasion. Mr. Joyce made a mistake—I am sure most unintentionally—as to the number of Protestant boys in the neighbourhood.

4265. Here is his evidence on the point?—

*Have you had Protestant boys there?—Yes, but I have none at present. There are none in the house at present that I know of. I had three of the nephews of Rev. Mr. Bell, the former master; but I had not his own son?—

In consequence of that statement, I begged to be permitted to appear here to-day. As to the number of Protestant boys, I have prepared a list, which shows that we have nineteen Protestant boys in Bannagher and its immediate neighbourhood. I do not mean to say, if the school were such as to give satisfaction, all the boys would be sent there. I do not know the minds of the parents. I wish to distinguish between those who are gentry and those who are of the class that attend Mr. Joyce's school at present. One of the Protestant boys is at Eton, and another (my nephew) at Wellington College. Major Armstrong has two boys at home; two other boys, who were formerly at Caba school, are now at Athlone school; others are educated at home; and some of them are attending my national school.

4266. The boys there are hardly of the class who would go to Caba school, unless taken as free boys?—They belong to a class for whom, I think, that school was not intended, but they are precisely of the class that have been attending it lately.

4267. That is, more of the commercial class than of the higher class who would seek a classical education?—The higher class that would seek a classical education do not attend the school at present. I should never have thought of including in my list the boys who now attend the National School, except that they are exactly the class that have been attending the school since 1874.

4268. That is the class that derive most advantage from the Model National school?—Yes, but they are too far away to attend the Model School, which is five miles off.

4269. In your time, after 1858, what number of boys had you in the school?—The largest number of boarders I had was thirty-three.

4270. Do you remember about what date that was?—About 1853.

4271. At various times in former years the school was either shut up or had no pupils?—Yes; it is an unfortunate thing that in the interregnum between the departure of one master and the appointment of another there has invariably been a break—sometimes of years—which I think is a very serious matter for any school. Under any re-arrangement, it would be very desirable to guard against such a thing occurring in the future, by having some one second in command to carry on the school when the Head Master was removed by death or otherwise.

4272. Was there not a considerable falling off in the numbers before you gave up the school?—The lowest number, dating from the time the school was in full order, was about twenty-five, including day boys. Sometimes I had but few day boys—occasionally not more than seven or eight. Then they would go away, and there would be a break for a few years until other boys came. The greatest number of day boys I ever had was about ten, but just before I gave up the school there was a considerable reduction in the numbers, and finally there was no boy left in the school.

4273. How long did that continue?—It was from the interval between my appointment to the parish of Ballymore, in the county Westmeath, and my resignation of the school. I was appointed under peculiar circumstances to the parish of Ballymore on the 6th of August, 1875, and had made every arrangement to resign the school at the following Christmas, but after I had made all my preparations, and the school had broken up, I received a letter from the Castle, informing me that there was a difficulty in reference to the parish, as it was under sequestration. I was told it would be necessary to have an Act of Parliament to settle the matter. I had nothing to do then but to remain at Bannagher, but the people knowing that I was about to leave did not send their children to my school. More than a year passed away before the matter was settled, and during that time I had no pupils in Bannagher school—not that I ever refused them—but under the circumstances none were sent to me.

4274. It was not in accordance with your wish that this state of suspension occurred?—Not at all. It was a very serious source of expense and inconvenience to me, so I had to drive twenty-four miles to Ballymore every Sunday to do the duty there, and return afterwards. I resigned the school at the close of 1866, and left the place in January, 1867; but a further question arose whether the Incumbent of Ballymore was Rector or perpetual Curate. I had an interview with the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General of the day on that subject, and they said that in a few weeks they would have the whole matter settled. I gave in my resignation of the school, and to my astonishment I found that I was without home or home.

4275. As to the first point, have you any further evidence?—I did not include in my list any boys who had gone back again from Caba House to the National school. Many of these boys are growing up, and it will be necessary for me shortly to remove them from my school, because it is a mixed school, and under a schoolmistress.

4276. Are they all Protestants?—Yes.

4277. Do the Roman Catholic boys of the same class go to another National school?—There has been a large falling off during the last six or eight months. Mr. Joyce gave evidence that his highest number had been fifty-one boys, but that they declined. He had a flourishing school, not, however, of the class which ought to be there, but of another class, and his school was extremely useful.

4278. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—What other class?—The class of tradesmen, farmers, and people of that kind. I do not object to them, but they were of a different claim to those who used to attend the school. In fact, those who attend the school now are more of the class who go to the National schools. I must say I was not perfectly satisfied with the state of the school, although I have reason to believe that Mr. Joyce was of great use in encouraging education in the town of Banagher, by getting together a class of boys and giving a better education than they were receiving in the National schools. For instance, I saw two lads walking together, one of whom I knew to be in receipt of wages at only 3s. a week. Their conversation was on the questions which had been put to them at a competitive examination which they had attended.

4278. CHAIRMAN.—To what do you attribute the failure of the Banagher school?—I attribute it to the mismanagement, or rather to the torpidity of the Clarendon Commissioners.

4280. What should they have done?—They should have looked after the estate, taken care that the land was let at its proper value, and that the school had the full advantage of the rents; and I think they are sadly behindhand in not having any inspector, and in many other respects they seemed to me to be a torpid body. Their principle was to leave the master to himself. They gave him no assistance.

4281. He got his salary whether the house was full or empty, irrespective of success or failure?—Yes; he held his appointment by letters patent during good behaviour, but the Commissioners did nothing to assist or aid him to obtain success, but if the master succeeded, they were ready at any time to help him. I speak from my own experience, as well as from what I heard of the other Royal schools. They gave me no assistance while I was struggling.

4282. The repairs were executed for you?—I never experienced any difficulty as to the repairs. I reported that such and such a thing should be done, or rather I did what was necessary. They knew I would not do anything that was not absolutely necessary. There never was so little spent as during the eighteen years I was master of the school, and the premises were kept in good order.

4283. I see the estates are returned, in the report of 1857, to be of the net value of £131 per annum?—Yes.

4284. Now it produces £179?—Yes, I have in my possession the valuation of the school lands in 1857, when it was £397 2s. 8d. per annum. That valuation contains the acreage and the names of the tenants. He was head master of the school for upwards of twenty years. There is a copy of the Down survey attached to it, and also a letter. The school was so valuable, at that time, that my father paid Dr. Morris £1,000 for the appointment, and for the transfer of the school. I have also his books, which show what rents he actually received.

4285. Mr. O'SHEA.—To whom did he pay the £1,000?—To Dr. Morris, his predecessor, with the consent of the Government. He was appointed by Letters Patent.

4286. CHAIRMAN.—Was the practice of purchasing the schools common in those days?—I do not know whether it was commonly done, but I know it was the Secretary of the Commissioners who suggested it, and it was through him the arrangement was carried out. At that time the master of a Royal school held the estate just on the same terms as the rector of the parish held his glebe lands.

4287. That is not clear proof that the rental had declined more than perhaps it should, because the valuations in those days seem to have been higher on all the estates?—I was to go a step further, and show what was received by my father. In 1857, in his own handwriting, the rental of the school estate is—From Upper and Lower Derry, £128 1s. 11½d.; from Ballinacorney, £92 12s. 8d.; and from Beekmerry, £50; total, £271 2s. 8½d.; and bog, for £7 12s. 4d., making £278 14s. 9½d. That was his rental. I find afterwards that when the change was made, and he became the agent instead of the owner of the estate, that his receipts were £268 14s. 6d. It is perfectly clear that there has been a great falling off in the rent, and I maintain, moreover, that the present rents do not fully represent the value of the estate at all. Some years ago, when I was master of the school, I had some conversation with Bishop Huggins, Bishop of Meath; and afterwards a member of the Board of Education, and in consequence of that conversation he made some move about the rents. The Commissioners took some steps to raise the rents, but a petition was presented to Parliament by Sir Patrick O'Brien, member for the county. The result was that the Clarendon Commissioners, who were a very timid body, frightened by a letter in the newspapers, and startled out of their wits by a motion in Parliament, gave up their intention. Subsequently I myself made a move in the matter. I felt that the interests of the school were injured. I applied for information as to the rental, and the agent to whom my application was openly made, said he had received strict orders from the Commissioners not to give any information on the subject. When I applied to Mr. Kyle I said my object was a perfectly legitimate one. He replied "I perfectly understand your object, but we do not mean to help you in it." I would suggest that the valuation of the estate should be looked into, for unquestionably it is worth more, and consequently the people for whom benefit the school was established are losing that benefit for the advantage of the tenants. The sooner the estates are sold and the proceeds invested the better.

4288. Is there any feeling in the country, that the school estates should be dealt with more liberally than the estates of private individuals?—I think the feeling in Banagher is that the school estate has never been properly dealt with. I often heard the master spoken of by parties who seemed to be aware of it, and I do not see why the tenants, if they got a fair interest in their lands, should have them so much cheaper than your lordship's tenants. My opinion is that the rents were reduced in former years, and have never been raised since. But I may not be correct.

4289. Mr. O'SHEA.—Mr. Owen is the agent?—Yes.

4290. His evidence is that the valuation of the Banagher school property is £180 a year?—Yes.

4291. You remember the property for many years?—Yes; that is, I remember when it was in my father's hands. He died in 1829.

4292. Were there many tenants living on it then?—My recollection is that the number of tenants was considerably reduced, in his time, from what it had been previously.

4293. Has the number of tenants been reduced since 1839?—I do not know, but I think so, for I have seen a rental with only nine names on it.

4294. About how many were there in 1839?—I cannot say, I was only personally acquainted with four, but I think they were the representatives of a considerable number.

4295. Prior to 1839, the lands were let in small holdings?—Yes, that is quite clear.

4296. Small holdings, as a rule, pay higher rents than larger ones, therefore, it is very likely with a large number of small tenants the rental would be higher than with a small number of large tenants?—Yes.

4297. The list which you prepared shows that such persons, such as 'shopkeeper,' 'farmer,' 'builder,' 'lodger,' 'gardener,' 'pensioner,' 'conductor,' and 'plumber,' have sons; do these boys attend any school at all?—Yes, most of them go to my National school.

4298. Why do not they attend the Royal school?—Some of them are 'mice' sent to go to my National school.

4299. I understood you to say that a large number of boys of the shopkeeper and farmer class among the Roman Catholics of Banagher, have been in your school, why is it that the Protestant boys of the same plan do not go there?—Partly, I suppose, because they are satisfied with the education given in my school, but that bears upon a question which I could better answer if I gave you the reason why I did not send my own boy to the Royal school.

4300. Why did not you send him there?—It would be extremely convenient to me to do so, but on Mr. Joyce's appointment in 1874, this announcement appeared in the Freeman's Journal—

"Banagher Royal school, King's County. This school will be opened early in March, with a staff of eminent masters, and under Roman Catholic management. F. K. Joyce, B.A., Senior Scholar, Natural History. Head Master, late of St. Francis' Academy, Clonsilla."

4301. Did that advertisement prevent you from sending your son to the school?—It weighed with me, but my son was not old enough to be sent there at that time. That advertisement created great excitement, and a little irritation, amongst all the Protestants of Banagher.

4302. Why?—Because, for 250 years previously, there had never been a Roman Catholic master. The master had always been a Protestant, though the school was open to all classes; and we thought it a very remarkable thing that, without an Act of Parliament, the Lord Lieutenant should suddenly transfer the school from Protestant to Roman Catholic masters.

4303. Then, in point of fact, there was an objection on the part of Protestant parents in Banagher, to sending their sons to a school which had been placed, by the Lord Lieutenant, under a Roman Catholic master?—No. Neither I myself, nor any of the other Protestant parents, would have objected to place our children under a Roman Catholic master; but we did object, because we found that Mr. Joyce had placed this public school—endowed with a public grant—under the patronage of Bishop Conroy and the Roman Catholic clergy of the diocese; and thus turned what had been a public school, open to all classes, into a denominational Roman Catholic school.

4304. Were you ever in Armagh?—No, I have not been there.

4305. You are aware that there is a Royal school there, of the same origin and foundation as Banagher?—Precisely so.

4306. Are you aware that the master of that school was actually appointed by the Protestant Archbishop of Armagh?—I am perfectly aware of that, and so was the master of the Dungannon school, too; and I think it was a natural arrangement, when there was an Established Church, that the masters of these public schools should belong to the Established Church. But when, on the ground of religious equality, a Roman Catholic was appointed to a Royal school, we felt aggrieved that it should be converted into a denominational school; moreover, we thought that it was an illegal appointment.

4307. You are aware now that it was not an illegal appointment?—I am not; for this reason—the select vestry of the parish of Rynagh addressed a memorial to the Duke of Abercorn, when Lord Lieutenant, on the subject; and the answer was, that the Lord Lieutenant would not move in the matter, as the law officers were of opinion that it was of doubtful legality.

4308. You refer to this as a partly denominational school?—It is so now.

4309. But formerly was it undenominational?—Surely.

4310. Do you think it consistent with an undenominational school that there should be a strict rule that the master should be a Protestant?—I think that it was a very natural rule while there was a State Church.

4311. Are you aware that the Archbishop of Armagh still has and exercises the rights of a visitor over Armagh School?—Yes, and with perfect propriety, as he is a Commissioner of Education.

4312. Has not the Protestant Archbishop of Ar-magh, in his capacity as such, the rights of a visitor over Armagh school?—An Archbishop he had those rights, and they are preserved to him by Act of Parliament, but his successor will not have them.

4313. There is no rule by which the successor to Dr. Conroy will have the same rights at Banagher that Dr. Conroy had. Where is the difference between the two cases?—I have pointed out a very remarkable difference. The one was the archbishop of the Established Church, whereas the other was only a titular bishop.

4314. A distinction in which some people hardly see a difference?—I complain of the advertisement which Mr. Joyce published, and I say the Gloucester Commissioners ought to have interfered in such a matter.

4315. I promise there was no interference with the religion of the Roman Catholic pupils who used to attend your school?—None whatever; I was never without Roman Catholic pupils either boarders or day boys.

4316. You did not compel them to attend any part of the religious instruction?—Most certainly not; but I took care that they attended their own religious duties, and, therefore, I felt the more aggrieved that Mr. Joyce should consider that the presence of a Protestant in the house would spoil everything.

4317. The schools were intended for the benefit of both religions?—Of all classes, and I am here to day to claim for the Protestants a share in the benefit of that endowment, from which we are virtually excluded at present.

4318. Do you regard yourselves as excluded because Dr. Conroy was named in the advertisement as patron?—Yes, because I know, and it has appeared in evidence before this Commission, what that patronage means. It means that Dr. Conroy has interfered in the education given, and in the books permitted.

4319. Dr. Conroy, so far as any evidence before us goes, has not made any protest against the presence of Protestant boys in the school?—But his letter, which was produced [vide page 38], shows that what I anticipated was verified in fact—that, inasmuch as this school was placed under the patronage of Dr. Conroy, the Roman Catholic Bishop, and the Roman Catholic Priests, they would interfere in the education. I anticipated that, and my anticipations have been realized.

4320. Does it not appear from Dr. Conroy's letter that his patronage of the school was rather created by Mr. Joyce than sought for and accepted by him?—I think the bishop's letter entirely bears out the interpretation which I, from the beginning, put upon Mr. Joyce's advertisement—that there was an attempt made by him to impress a Roman Catholic character upon the school, whereas the attempt ought to have been the reverse, to make it undenominational. The bishop took the same view, precisely, as I did, and I read his letter for that reason with great satisfaction. I think Mr. Joyce made a mistake, and I submit that the Gloucester Board made a still greater mistake, when their attention was called to it, that they did not interfere. The Protestants of Banagher live on very friendly terms with their Roman Catholic neighbours, and I am sure we would not have hesitated to send our children to the school, if this attempt had not been made to give a Roman Catholic character to it.

4321. In point of fact, you have no more feeling than you think would be justifiable in a Roman Catholic parent under similar circumstances?—Precisely so; but we are placed at a greater disadvantage now than Roman Catholics were formerly.

4322. Why?—Because no Protestant bishop ever interfered with us. The Bishop of Meath was a member of the Board of Education, and therefore a visitor, but he never asked me what college I was training boys for, or what school books I used. Recently a priest, who had been a boarder of mine, called upon me, and expressed his pleasant recollections of the school; and I took the opportunity of saying—"I hope, when thinking over matters, you will say you were treated with fairness?" He replied, "With perfect fairness."

4323. From your experience, both as a schoolmaster and also as a clergyman, of the social wants of the former and shopkeeper classes, you do not think that more primary education is sufficient for them?—Certainly not; and both in my father's time and in my own, whenever a promising boy, no matter who he was, was found, a free education was open to him in the school; and as to those who can pay for a suitable intermediate education, I think it is very desirable they should have ample opportunities of obtaining it. There is another point which I should like to mention, I think this school, at present, is apparently confined to one class.

4324. To which class?—To an humbler class than that which formerly attended it. For instance, if I sent my son there, he would not have any boys of his own rank to associate with. I do not object to a mixed school; on the contrary, I would like to see all classes educated together.

4325. You say that it is confined to the lower middle class?—Yes. It was reduced to the level of, and competed with, the National school, from which it took away boys; and now the National school has taken away boys from it.

4326. As a matter of fact, the portion of the middle classes, for whom the school was intended, do not go there?—They do not.

4327. Do you think Banagher is a good place for the school at all?—I do, but that was not always my opinion. I think the master of the school will always be in favour of a move, for the simple reason that he will view it from a school point of view, I think that any large town, having a considerable population, can provide for its own educational wants, but a small place like Banagher requires an endowment. If the school were removed from Banagher many persons would be subject to great inconvenience.

4328. You think the school is wanted there?—We want it very badly.

4329. What do you think are the prospects of a school there now?—The school is interfered with in many ways. One of the first things that afforded it was the discontinuance of the passenger steamers on the Shannon. The school was formerly recruited with pupils from Clare and Limerick, and when Parliament allowed the two great railway companies to divert the passenger traffic on the Shannon it injured the school. In the second place, Emis and Tipperary schools took away a good many boys. Though there never could be a large day school at Banagher, there might be, as there was before, a large boarding school. That would, however, require an endowment such as other schools have, and exhibitions would be necessary to attract boys.

4330. CHAIRMAN.—On the assumption that the school was to be denominational, which do you consider it would be more likely to attract pupils, as a Protestant or a Roman Catholic school, having regard to the relative numbers of the two denominations in the neighbourhood?—There are far more Roman Catholics than Protestants.

4331. Of the class for whom the school was intended?—There is a question—first, what class was it intended for?

4332. Say the commercial class?—They are chiefly Roman Catholics in Banagher.

4333. You speak of having formerly had an opinion as to the desirability of removing the school. There appear to have been three attempts to move it. This is the minute of the Commissioners of Education, on the 3rd March, 1854:—

"Read letters from Mr. Bell, master, of Banagher Royal school, urging very strongly on the Board the advantages that would arise if, on the expiration of the present lease, the school should be removed to Parnassstown, where schools could be procured from Lord Rosse at a much more moderate rent than Cahn House, and pointing out the advantage that, in his opinion, would arise from the removal, and also a letter from the Lord Bishop of Meath, stating, in reply, that his lordship was not prepared to oppose the removal, but that he entertained serious doubts of the power of the Board to order such removal. The secretary stated that on a former occasion this subject of the removal having been under discussion, the Solicitors being present, stated that they also were doubtful of the authority of the Board to comply with Mr. Bell's application. The matter being each discussed, and reference being made to the words of the Charter, the Commissioners were of opinion that the school must be held at or near Banagher. Ordered.—That Mr. Bell be informed that the Commissioners do not feel themselves empowered to remove the school to Parnassstown, but that if Mr. Bell can bring forward any precedent or reasons to change that opinion, the Board will reconsider the matter."

At that time you thought the locality had something to do with the inefficient success of the school?—Yes, there were only two day pupils at the school then, and it is very difficult for a master, when there is only a small endowment—say £100 a year—to keep a school in an efficient condition, unless it is supported by a considerable number of day boys to supply the place of an endowment.

4334. The Commissioners seem to have been in favour of the change if they had the power to make it?—Yes; the town was in a great state of decay at that time.

4335. There is a further entry on the subject in the minutes of the Chartered Commissioners, dated July 5th, 1853:—

"Read letters from Rev. J. A. Bell, master of Banagher Royal school (and from the Lord Bishop of Meath recommending), forwarding a resolution of the governing body of the Irish Missionary College at Ballisodare, stating the terms on which they would hand over that establishment to the Commissioners as a school. Dr. Bell proposed that the Commissioners . . . should move the Royal school of Banagher, to Ballisodare, and endeavour to set the Cahn House. The Charter, and various reports and documents having been referred to: Resolved.—That the Commissioners cannot comply with the prayer of Mr. Bell's memorial and move the school to Ballisodare, the Charter, &c., fixing the locality for the Royal school of Banagher."

There seems to be no difference of opinion on that point?—At that time, the town was in a state of great decay. These letters from me were the result of a great deal of correspondence with the Bishop of Meath, and others. I cannot say that I was the prime mover in the matter; but the school was of very little use in Banagher then, and it would have been of much more good at Parnassstown, or Ballisodare.

4336. Has not a great change taken place?—Since that period, the town has altered in its circumstances, and is improving; and there is a considerable number of boys to receive education.

4337. There was also a memorial from the principal inhabitants of Parnassstown, praying that the Royal school of Banagher should be removed there, and the answer of the Commissioners was, that they had no power to remove the school from the locality fixed by the Charter?—Just so.

4338. You are aware that Mr. Stephens, in his separate report in 1848, recommended that the school should be removed, and the endowment applied elsewhere?—Yes. He recommended its removal to Limerick.

TWELFTH DAY—FRIDAY, APRIL 25, 1879; 11 o'CLOCK, A.M.

April 25, 1879.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—The EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; LORD JUSTICE FITZGERSON; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; and ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CARRI MURPHY, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. WILLIAM JOHN VALENTINE, M.A., examined.

Mr. William J. Valentine, M.A.

4338. CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the masters at Portora Royal school?—Yes.

4340. How long have you occupied that position?—Rather more than three years.

4341. Before that you were head master of the Diocesan school at Waterford?—Yes.

4342. When did you leave that?—In January, 1876.

4343. Was that school shut up after you left?—No; the school was continued, and is still in operation.

4344. What was the cause of your leaving?—I was unable to make a comfortable living out of it, and I considered my present appointments more secure and better in a pecuniary way.

4345. What was your income there?—£175 per annum.

4346. Have you that annuity at present?—No; I compounded, and the commutation money was divided. Two-thirds of it was given to me personally, and the other one-third to the Church Commissioners.

4347. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERSON.—You are a graduate of Trinity College?—I am. I took my degree in 1857.

4348. You graduated in honours?—I was first gold medalist in classics.

4349. Were you a scholar?—Yes.

4350. In what year did you get scholarship?—In my senior freshman year.

4351. Had you any experience in teaching before you got your degree?—I had been teaching since I was seventeen years of age. I began to teach in a private school established in Derry by the Rev. Dr. Stock, before he was appointed to the Raphoe Royal school. I was with him for two or three months at Raphoe. I was again with him in charge of the head class at Portora as locum tenens for twelve months, and after I took my degree I went down and taught at Portora for about two years.

4352. In what schools were you teaching before you was appointed to Waterford school?—I was with the Rev. Roger North, at Rathfriland, for some time.

4353. That was private school?—It was.

4354. What was the date of your appointment to Waterford?—I was appointed some time before 30th December, 1875; but that was the date at which I paid the stamp duty on my appointment.

4355. You were obliged to collect your income from the clergy?—I was.

4356. What means did you take to do that?—I found, by the Act of Parliament, that my income was to be assessed in certain proportions, and that I might appoint a collector; but I found no one willing to undertake the collection. The Registrar of the diocese declined, as the charge was very odious to the clergy, so I collected it myself. There had been no Diocesan schoolmaster at Waterford before my appointment. The district was a union of the Dioceses of Caskel, Enly, Waterford, and Lismore, where, practically, the tax had never been levied. The first thing to be done was to get the return of the incomes of the clergy. The return furnished by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners was objected to by the Bishop, and returned for correction. When at last the return of incomes was satisfactory, the assessment had to be made. The calculation of that was done by myself and an assistant master, and then it was necessary to obtain the sanction of the Bishop. It was only when that was done that I was able to begin sending out circulars asking for payment. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners were liable to pay £45 19s. 6d., and the Bishop £30 15s. 4d. The late Bishop Daly felt some difficulties, which I was unable to understand, and postponed for a long time completing his part of the work. I wrote frequently urging him to complete the business; but down to the month of May after my appointment, the matter was still unsettled. I received this letter from the Bishop, dated 22nd May, 1875:—

"Sir,—I have this morning received an answer from Dr. Gayer, in which he says that 'My W. J. Valentine is legally appointed to the Diocesan school in Waterford, and in my opinion entitled to whatever salaries the Diocesan schoolmasters of those several dioceses were previously entitled to, and so on, and so on, so do I see that you have anything to do in the matter but pay him the amount to which you are liable as Bishop of Caskel and Enly. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners, of course, pay for Waterford and Lismore.' This is all the information I have received and am able to give you."

"I remain, faithfully yours,

"ROBERT CARRI, &c.

"W. J. Valentine, Esq."

4357. By whom had you been appointed?—By the Lord Lieutenant, Lord Cardigan.

4358. Had there been no Diocesan school there?—There had been another school or school-house.

4359. Were you obliged to take a house yourself?—I was.

4360. How did it come about, that an appointment was made when no Diocesan school existed there before?—A public meeting of Protestants had been held in Waterford, in October, 1869, to supply a want left by the Rev. William Price, the master of the Endowed school, who had then recently died after a lingering illness.

4361. Was it at that meeting that the establishment of the Diocesan school was suggested?—It must have been considered before that, as the newspaper reports of that meeting show that reference was made to a correspondence which had taken place between the Solicitor-General of the day, Mr. Lawson, and his friends in Waterford about the matter.

4362. What became of the house in which Dr. Price had carried on his school?—The school premises were let to the Roman Catholic Bishop of Waterford, by the Corporation, and so they passed from the use of the Protestants.

4363. Had Dr. Price's school been a Protestant school?—It had been a mixed school. The title now is "The Catholic High School in connexion with the Catholic University."

4364. The Protestants at their meeting fell back on the Diocesan school, which had been in abeyance?—Exactly so. The meeting appointed a committee, to co-operate with the Commissioners of Education, for the purpose of establishing a Diocesan school, and securing a system of education suited to the wants of the Protestants of Waterford, and its neighbourhood.

4365. What arrangement was made for your school-house?—I was told by this committee of the best house available, and I took it. The lower part was occupied as a corn merchant's office, and the back as corn stores; but it was the only house available at the time. I received £15 as a donation in the course of that year from the Waterford gentlemen, towards the support of the school.

4366. Was that in addition to the £175?—Yes.

4367. When did you open the school?—On the 22nd January, 1875.

4368. How many boys did you start with?—About a dozen, but towards the close of the year I had twenty-five.

April 25, 1876.
Mr. W. P. Green
J. Valentine,
M.A.

4369. Were they all Protestants?—Yes; at first my pupils were all Protestants.

4370. Had the Catholic High school been opened at that time?—Yes, it was in operation; and there were other schools in Waterford also.

4371. What was the number of your pupils from time to time?—They rose in my first year to 25. In 1864 I had 41; in 1865, thirty; in 1866, thirty-one; in 1867, twenty-eight; in 1868, thirty-five; in 1869, thirty-three; in 1870, thirty-eight; in 1871, forty-nine; in 1872, forty-five; in 1873, forty-five; in 1874, forty-two; and in 1875 twenty-nine.

4372. What was the cause of the falling off after 1871, which was the year in which the Church Act came into operation?—I think it was due to commercial depression, and the removal of various families from Waterford.

4373. You think the cause of the decline was temporary?—Yes; that is my belief.

4374. What staff of masters had you?—I began with a French master and an English master, and the total amount of salaries I paid for the first year was £28 10s. 6d.; for the second year the amount was £105, as I had a second mathematical master. There were two more in the town, and I found it convenient to have them at different hours. In the third year, in consequence of an increase to one of those masters, I paid £115. In the next year I paid £190, owing to a payment to a drawing master and above the special fee, which were not sufficient to form his salary. In the next year I paid £185 to assistant masters, as I increased my staff by a new assistant. The sum of £185 per annum continued to be paid down to 1870, and in 1871 the amount was £190, owing to an increase of salary to the mathematical master, and then it reverted to £185, owing to some reduction, the particulars of which I do not remember. For the last three years I paid £140 a year.

4375. There was a large reduction in the expenditure for assistant masters in the last three years?—Yes; but that was partly owing to an arrangement, by which a number of my own family taught in the school.

4376. What other expenditure was there in connexion with the school?—The rent paid was, for 1864 and 1865, £50 a year with the usual taxes. For the following years it was £60 a year with the usual taxes.

4377. Had you removed from the premises where you originally started?—Yes, I occupied in succession three houses, first the house over the corn store office, then, for two years, a house on the Mall in Waterford, very suitable in some respects, but defective in others, and, for the remainder of the time, a house of which I had a lease, terminable on six months' notice, for which I paid £60 per annum.

4378. Was anything done by the Clare-street Commissioners to provide a schoolhouse for you?—I heard nothing of any application being made to provide a schoolhouse, although I went there believing that the Grand Jury would, according to the provisions of the Act, present for a house.

4379. Was any application made to them to do so?—My friends, who knew the feelings of the Grand Jury, considered it hopeless to attempt it.

4380. What was your expenditure for taxes and repairs?—In 1863 over £8; in 1864, £7 13s. 6d. I have no entry for 1865. In 1866, which was the year of my removal to 15, William-street, £38 17s. 6d. In 1867, £11 17s. 6d.; in 1868, £13 0s. 9d. In 1869, the road began to get rotten, and the landlord allowed me £30 out of my rent, and I spent in addition £18 13s. 6d. In 1870, £37 1s. 6d.; in 1871, £16 9s. 6d.; in 1872, £16 17s. 6d.; in 1873, £26 5s. 3d.; in 1874, £19 13s. 6d.; and in 1875, £18 1s. 6d.

4381. What other expenses were necessary for the establishment?—I was obliged to keep more servants than I would require for a house of the sort, and I had also to bear all the expenses for school premiums.

4382. Did you receive any assistance from local ment?—Not towards the prices until the present Bishop was appointed, when he gave a prize for Scriptural knowledge and good conduct.

4383. Either during the passing of the Church Act, or preliminary to the passing of the succeeding Act, was any action taken by the Diocesan school-masters as to their position?—None whatever; but when it became possible for us to compound, this circular was addressed to the various Diocesan school-masters by Mr. Robinson, of Londonberry:—

Ryle College, October 26th, 1872

*Mr. DEAR SIR,—You have, as doubtless, already received a communication from the Church Temporalities Commissioners relative to the commutation of your income as Diocesan schoolmaster. On receiving mine, I wrote to the Church Body to know what terms they offered, in the event of my wishing to commute and compound. I was amazed to find myself offered less than six years' purchase in ready money, with to obtain whatever on the commutation balance? I wrote at once to Mr. Greene, the Secretary of the Church Body, to say that I thought this a very absurd offer—injuries to the Church, since probably but few of us would consent to accept it, and so the Church would lose the reversion of the commutation balance—unfair to us, in accepting us to late at a large sum on ridiculously unjust terms. I further said that while conditions such as these might be fair enough for Parish Clerks and Rectors, who held themselves free from all further obligation to the Church on receiving their money, it was only just that we should be placed in the same category as incumbents, who, as long as they continue to do the same duties as heretofore, receive the interest of their commutation balance, the parishes not touching the money till their death or resignation. Accordingly, I said that I was ready to commute and compound on either of the following conditions:—

(1). That of receiving in money now about one-third of the entire commutation capital, and interest at 4 per cent. on the balance, so long as I do the same work (good the diocese, as firmly; reversion of this balance to be determined by the proper authorities. (2). That of receiving two-thirds of the capital now, the remaining money to be disposed of at once in the interest of the Church as in case 1; no further claim, of course, for interest. To this proposal I can have no reply till the Commissioners' Committee of the Church Body hold their next meeting. But in the meantime—and I think the meeting will take place on Wednesday next, 31st October—if similar proposals were made by all the Diocesan schoolmasters, it is highly probable that the Church Body would give as much better terms than they seem now disposed to offer. If we all wrote, declaring to commute on the reasonable terms now offered, no doubt they would feel it better to accede to our conditions rather than that the Church should gain nothing by us at all—a contingency very likely to occur, if the dioceses to treat us so hardly and so unjustly. May I suggest to you the propriety of communicating at once with Mr. Greene, if you have not done so already. You do not thereby bind yourself to commute, or commit yourself in any way whatever, but simply add to the list of your brethren who may desire to commute, in securing for themselves more favourable terms. If we only help each other in this matter, I can hardly think that the Church Body will hold out against us, and deprive the Church of what may prove a large sum of money if a considerable number of us decide upon commuting. Begging that you will—whatever your personal intentions may be—interest yourself actively in this matter, and that without delay, since the time may be short.

"I am, dear Sir, Faithfully yours,

W. PERCY ROBINSON, M.A.,

"Rural Master of the Derry Diocesan School."

4384. You were reluctantly offered the two-thirds?—Yes.

4385. I suppose similar terms were offered to others?—I believe so.

4386. Was any obligation whatever imposed upon you, in consideration of receiving two-thirds of the commutation money, to continue to do duty?—None whatever.

4387. Was any provision made either in the present of commutation, or of the commutation, with reference to the future of the school?—The Bishop and Diocesan Synod invested the remaining one-third of the commutation money for educational purposes.

4388. What were the respective amounts?—I received £1,985, and the Church body £993 10s., which was invested, together with some subscriptions.

4389. Under what arrangement did you continue to carry on the school?—I was given the interest on about £4,500.

4390. Then you found it was not worth your while to continue it?—The great expense of the house weighed on my mind. I had been maintaining the school, in great part out of my private funds, for three years, and I was sometimes five hours teaching after school hours.

4391. You endeavored to supplement your income by private teaching?—I did, and I was very glad to have an opportunity of escaping from the work, which was far too heavy for me.

4392. How soon did you leave?—I carried on the school till January, 1876.

4393. What became of the school on your leaving?—A master was appointed who took my house, and carried it on for a short time, but, finding himself unable to continue there, he removed to another school. When the new master was appointed, I was consulted as to the plan on which the school might best be carried on with its reduced income. There were two possible plans—one, to get a master who would push it as a boarding school, and the other to let it begin afresh in a very small way and on a reduced scale. The former plan was adopted, and I do not think I can say it succeeded. The second plan has been tried now, and a very competent man, I believe, is carrying on the school in the most promising way.

4394. What provision exists now in Waterford for supplying the class of education you were giving?—For Protestants only the school I have just mentioned—and for Catholics, the Catholic High school, of which I do not know anything.

4395. Under what circumstances was the Waterford Endowed school-house handed over to an endowed school in connexion with the Catholic University?—It must have been because the majority of the Corporation were Catholics, and they naturally applied the Corporate property for the use of the majority of the population.

4396. What is the population of the city of Waterford?—In the Census Report of 1871 the total population is stated to be 23,349—Roman Catholics, 20,604; Protestants, 2,745; thus showing that the Roman Catholics are 86 per cent. of the total.

4397. Of the upper classes, who would require a classical education, about what proportion, approximately, are Protestants?—About 30 per cent.

4398. Is there any provision whatever, after the termination of the endowment of the Diocesan school, for the education of that class?—No, but that endowment cannot determine it, it continues.

4399. It has determined to the extent of two-thirds of its capital value?—That is so.

4400. Did your school supply a want that previously existed in Waterford?—It did.

4401. And it was called for by the public?—Yes.

4402. Did you, as a Diocesan schoolmaster, receive any remuneration before the Church Act passed from the Church-street Commissioners?—None.

4403. Did they ever visit you?—No.

4404. Did they send you any returns?—They sent me blank forms to be filled up, which I always did, and returned them.

4405. Did you ever receive any communication with reference to them afterwards?—Never.

4406. What was the nearest school to Waterford, either Protestant or mixed, which supplied a classical education?—Tipperary, I think, and now Clonmel.

4407. What position do you hold now at Portora?—First Classical Assistant.

4408. At what salary?—£350 a year.

4409. When you have, in fact, a salary of £200, and the enjoyment of £1,000?—Yes.

4410. What would have been the effect of your refusing to continue?—I believe I would have been a nonentity, and if I changed my duties the annuity would have dropped.

4411. CHAIRMAN.—Then if you had not continued and compounded, you would have been in the same position as if the Church Act had not passed?—Yes.

4412. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUESON.—What endowment would have adequately kept such a school in Waterford, as to have supplied the want of classical education to Protestants?—I would have been most happy to carry on the school for £200 a year and to find my own house.

4413. What fees did you charge your day scholars?—£10 10s. per annum for the general course, and £3 8s. 6d. for English only.

4414. Did many of your pupils enter college?—The total number of pupils I had on my list was 170, of whom 33 went to Trinity or the Queen's College. Of these 26 entered direct from the school, or, at any rate, without going to any other school; 21 entered Trinity College, and 5 the Queen's College, Cork, Galway, and Belfast. Eight of the 26 were Honor men. In 1869 South Classical Scholarship was obtained on first trial by a boy prepared exclusively at my school. In the same year a former pupil obtained First Honors in Logic in Trinity College, and a Literary Scholarship in Cork College was obtained by a boy educated exclusively at my school. In 1870 a First Science Scholarship in Trinity College was obtained at first trial, and from 13 competitors, by a boy solely prepared at the school; and he also, in the same year, obtained First Junior Exhibition, and in the following year took Science Honors. In 1871 the First Junior Exhibition was gained by a boy who had commenced his education under me, removed to one of the Royal schools, from which he entered, and then came back and read with me for the exhibition.

4415. DR. HARRIS.—How long had he been absent from your school?—Three years. In 1873 a former pupil obtained First Science Scholarship, and First Honors in Experimental Physics, and several First Honors in subsequent years. Another former pupil obtained, in 1873, First Honors in English Literature. In 1873, at the Solicitors' Apprenticeship examination, one of my pupils obtained third place. A former pupil in the same year obtained the First Composition Prize in the Divinity School in Trinity College, and first and third places at the Liturgy Examination were also obtained by boys who had been at my school, as well as First Prize in German and Third Prize in French at entrance.

4416. MR. O'SHAUNESSY.—Had they learned these subjects at your school?—They had; and it was after a member of my own family undertook the teaching of French that they began to get these distinctions. In 1874 the Mathematical Scholarship was gained by one of the gentlemen I have just mentioned.

4417. LORD JUSTICE FRYGUESON.—That is one of the highest distinctions in Trinity College?—It ranks next to a Fellowship. In 1875, another pupil obtained third Science Scholarship, and a Junior Exhibition. Moreover, in January, 1875, the gentleman whom I mentioned as having obtained a Literary Scholarship in Cork College, took fourth place at the Army examination at first trial without any grinding.

4418. CHAIRMAN.—In general, what did those who did not enter College go to?—They went into banks, the Apothecaries' Hall, the College of Surgeons, solicitors' offices, and various pieces of business, and two became Constabulary cadets.

4419. Positions for which they had to pass competitive examinations?—Yes, but the Cadetships were too much specialized for the school work. One of my pupils entered the War Office, and some went into other branches of the Civil Service; two one clergyman in the Irish Church, and two are studying for the Bar.

4420. You had a general school course, and two English courses?—Yes; and I had to keep the classes for the general school very large, but when any boy showed capacity I pushed him on at considerable trouble to myself.

4421. Did you find a large proportion anxious to learn English only?—No.

4422. Did they all learn Greek?—No; very few.

4423. Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—Did all learn French?—Nearly every boy.

4424. Did many learn German?—Very few.

4425. LEON JUVENICE FERGUSON.—Are there a considerable number of resident gentry in the immediate neighbourhood of Waterford?—I think not. The resident gentry are scarce, and widely scattered.

4426. What provision is made for the education of their sons?—They send their sons to Feters and other schools, and many send them to England.

4427. Is there any school in the neighbourhood to which they could send their sons?—There is a school in Clonsilla now.

4428. Is that also an endowed school?—Yes.

4429. CHATELAIN.—Was your school a day school or a boarding school?—It was essentially a day school, but I had a few boarders under special circumstances.

4430. They did not come from other parts of Ireland?—No; they were generally the sons of gentlemen living in the neighbourhood.

4431. LEON JUVENICE FERGUSON.—What was the expense of their education?—Fifty guineas.

4432. CHATELAIN.—Was yours entirely a Protestant school?—I had a few Catholic pupils. I once had as many as six, and for the last two or three years generally two or three at a time. There was nothing in the school tending to which they could object.

4433. There was no religious instruction given during school hours?—Nothing denominational.

4434. Your pupils obtained distinctions in Natural Science. How was it taught?—That was chiefly learnt after the boys left school. For a short time we had provision for teaching it, but it was of an unsatisfactory sort, as there was no apparatus. An assistant master who was enthusiastic on that subject got up a good deal of interest in it, and I was glad to have it carried on, but when he left I was obliged to discontinue it.

4435. How was German taught?—By a governess who taught in a neighbouring school.

4436. What were the ages of your pupils?—From ten to eighteen years. I had one as young as eight years, a very clever little boy.

4437. LEON JUVENICE FERGUSON.—I believe there is in Waterford a school called Bishop Foy's school?—Yes; it is an English school, and at present a parish school, very efficiently carried on.

4438. So that in fact the want that was supplied—as I understand—by you in Waterford, and which has not been filled since, except by the foundation of the school with a reduced endowment, was that of classical education for Protestants?—Yes.

4439. And it was a mixed school in your hands?—Yes; but as to my Catholic pupils, there was something special in their circumstances, for instance, one lived next door to me, and it was very convenient to him. The others were children of mixed marriages, so that it is rather an exception that proves the rule, that the Catholics do not wish to send their sons to a Protestant school.

4440. Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—Do you not think that an endowment of £200 a year is rather a Utopian suggestion for the intermediate education of the thirty per cent. of Protestants of the middle and higher classes in Waterford?—The income from the school was about £200 at the low rate it fell to latterly, and I was not at all satisfied with the scanty staff of masters. The difficulty of carrying on a school in the sub-division into classes.

4441. Suppose that £200 were turned into the form of payment by results and prizes for boys, don't you think that would stimulate people to send their sons to a good school?—I do not like payment by results, because masters are already beginning to feed a disposition on the part of some boys to look on it as a compliment to the master to work, which we think disagreeable.

Nevertheless, we are delighted with the present act, because of the stimulus it has given to work.

4442. You say that thirty per cent. of the upper and middle class in Waterford are Protestant, therefore seventy per cent. are Catholics?—I think so.

4443. If £200 a year would be an adequate endowment for Protestant intermediate education, it would require about £1,100 or £1,500 a year, according to that calculation, as an adequate endowment for Catholic intermediate education in Waterford?—Yes; except that in proportion as the numbers increase the school fees should increase also, and that would make a great difference.

4444. Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—Are you aware that in Cork and other places there used to be large, prosperous, successful schools utterly unendowed?—I am.

4445. To what do you attribute the necessity you speak of at the present day for endowments, bearing in mind the success of those unendowed schools?—I think it is largely owing to the habit of sending boys to England.

4446. Then many boys that would require a high class education go to England at great expense?—Yes; and not merely those who seek classical education, but I have known boys to go there for an ordinary English education who had no intention of going to College.

4447. It is more from the higher class, than from the shop-keeping and commercial classes, that boys go to the English schools?—It is.

4448. Therefore the Irish Protestant master of the present day must fall back very much on the commercial class?—Yes.

4449. Do you not think, then, that it would be desirable in Protestant schools to make, for the present at least, as full provision for a good English education as possible?—I think it would be a pity to make no provision for classical education.

4450. Certainly; but don't you think such a course as you adopted, teaching them Latin, encouraging Greek where useful, and giving them at the same time a good English education, and instruction in foreign languages, would be a most useful course to pursue?—I certainly do.

4451. Do you know anything of Bishop Foy's school?—Only in a general way. I never inspected it.

4452. Is it a primary school?—Yes; and it is under excellent management since the appointment of the present Bishop.

4453. Is it denominational?—I think it is.

4454. Was the Stephen-street Corporation Free grammar school, a separate school from the Diocesan school?—Quite separate, the name Diocesan began with my school.

4455. LEON JUVENICE FERGUSON.—The Protestants in Waterford appear to have practically objected, quite as much to send their children to the Catholic school, as the Catholics usually do to send theirs to a Protestant one?—Yes.

4456. What is your experience of the possibility of inducing the inhabitants of Waterford to accept, what is called, mixed education?—A few of them would have no objection if they were sure there would be no interference with the religious belief of the children, but the majority of them would have very great objection.

4457. Do you apply that evidence to both denominations?—Yes.

4458. Mr. O'BRAUGHEN.—There was your Diocesan school in Waterford, which was virtually Protestant in its attendance, and completely so in its master, and the Protestants had also the Stephen-street Corporation Free grammar school?—Yes; but not at the same time.

4459. Was it before or after the disestablishment of the Irish Church that the Corporation appointed a Catholic master to that school?—Shortly before the date of my appointment.

4460. Who enjoys the endowment of the Stephen-street Corporation Free grammar school at present?—I do not know. I suppose it goes to the master.

4451. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—But it is advertised as "The Catholic High School of Waterford, in connection with the Catholic University?"—It was so advertised.

4452. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you know whether there was anything in that advertisement making it disavowed?—I do not know; but it was a noted school in Dr. Price's time.

4453. Dr. Price was a Protestant?—Yes.

4454. Had he any Catholic under masters?—I think not.

4455. Had he any Catholic boys attending the school?—I think he had.

4456. Do you know what percentage they were?—I do not.

REV. THOMAS MACNALLY, M.A., examined.

4474. CHAIRMAN.—You were formerly the head master of Banagher Royal school?—Yes, from 1838 to 1872. I now produce a letter I received from the Castle, acknowledging my appointment, and also one acknowledging the receipt of my resignation.

4475. We understand that you wish to say something in reference to the evidence given by Mr. Owen?—Yes. He said I was there for two years, whereas I was there for four years, as the letters which I have produced show. He also said he had the unpleasant duty of putting me out, whereas I resigned to the Government, i.e., the Lord Lieutenant, and consequently he could not dismiss me.

4476. Did not you get notice to leave, sometime before you actually left?—No. The authorities did not answer my letter of resignation for some days, and then some time elapsed before I left.

4477. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Is there anything else you desire to state?—I desire to say, that taking the school was a serious loss to me, because I was master of St. Luke's and St. Nicholas' Without, and on the discontinuance of the Church, I would have got £100 a year for my life, which, alas, I did not.

4478. CHAIRMAN.—What number of pupils had you at Banagher?—Forty-eight was my largest number. There were none there when I was appointed, as the school had been resigned by the Rev. Mr. Bell some time before.

4479. Shortly before your resignation, what number of pupils had you?—Seventeen was the smallest number I had up to the Christmas vacation preceding my resignation.

4480. That included both day boys and boarders?—Yes.

4481. You received £160 a year and a free house during the whole time you were there?—I got the salary until I resigned the appointment, but not afterwards.

4482. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You were aware, before you resigned, that the Commissioners of Education had made an order, for a deputation, to hold a visitation at Banagher school?—I heard the Bishop of Meath was to come.

4483. How soon after you heard that, did you resign?—I would not be positive, probably it was before that I resigned. I cannot name the day I heard it.

4484. What was the date of your resignation?—The letter from Dublin Castle, acknowledging the receipt of my resignation, is dated 5th December, 1872, but the resignation itself had been sent in on 25th November, 1872.

4485. The minute respecting the deputation is dated the 9th October, 1872?—I did not hear anything of 4487. There is another Catholic College in Waterford?—Yes, St. John's College.

4488. That lies a little out of the town?—Yes.

4489. Is it endowed?—I don't know. There was a private Protestant school in Tramore, kept by Mr. Jones, that flourished at one time.

4490. Had it anything like £500 a year?—It had no endowment whatever, but it declined, and Mr. Jones offered it to me.

4491. Was that after Mr. Jones had become old?—Yes.

4492. As long as he was young and active the school flourished?—So it was supposed.

4493. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—How many years, altogether, were you in Waterford?—Thirteen.

4494. 20, 1872.

Mr. William J. Vallance, M.A.

Rev. Thomas MacNally, M.A.

it on the 9th October, but I was told of it afterwards. The then Bishop of Meath (Dr. Bechoy) called—that visitation had nothing at all to do with my resigning the school.

4486. I will read the minute of the Commissioners' meeting of 29th November, 1872, on the subject:—

"The secretary stated that he had had several interviews with the bishop of Meath as to pressure from Mr. MacNally to resign if the proceedings were at once withdrawn. The secretary had also several meetings with the auditor as to evidence, &c. That on matters stood at present, the visitation must go on according to the public formal notice publicly posted in Banagher—but secretary stated that in his opinion, a bona fide resignation would be sent to Government (the patron) before the day on which the visitation was to take place."

The next minute, which is dated 13th December, 1872, is:—

"Secretary submitted an official letter from Mr. Bucke, Under Secretary, stating that Mr. MacNally, master of Banagher Royal school, had forwarded to His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant his resignation of the office of master of that school."

And on the same day this further minute was made:—

"Read letters from the agent (Mr. Owen) as to his getting possession of the school-house, &c., from Mr. MacNally."

And on the 17th January, 1873, at a special meeting this minute appears:—

"Secretary stated that after much negotiation, Mr. Owen had got from Mr. MacNally, possession of the school premises, and had put Mr. MacNally in charge as caretaker, at a nominal salary of 1s. per week?—

There was no negotiation with me as mentioned in that minute, and further, Mr. Owen's evidence here, was that he put my wife in, which is untrue. I was myself appointed as caretaker.

4487. How long did you remain yourself?—I remained till the motion, which may have been a month afterwards, but I cannot say exactly, as I did not write it down.

4488. The greatest number of pupils you had at Banagher school, at any one time, was forty-eight, how many of those were free?—Three.

4489. Of the forty-five, how many were boarders?—The greatest number of boarders was sixteen, the rest were boys from the neighbourhood.

4490. Were they all Protestants?—About one-fourth were Roman Catholics.

4491. Supposing everything to go on pleasantly, and the matter to be on good terms with the people in the neighbourhood, and with the Commissioners, was there a demand at Banagher for such a school?—I think there was.

REV. JOHN WINTHROP HAMMETT, M.A., recalled.

4492. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—The charter of your society granted by George II., contains this recital:—

"That in many parts of our said kingdom, there are great tracts of soulless and carnal almost entirely inhabited by Papists."

And then it speaks of their religious state and knowledge, in a very uncomplimentary manner!—According to the custom of the times.

4493. It complains of the state of their religion, and their ignorance, and continues:—

Rev. J. W. Hammett, M.A.

4491. "That amongst the ways proper to be taken for converting and civilizing the most debased persons . . . has been always one of the most necessary . . . has been always thought to be the erecting and establishing a sufficient number of English Protestant schools wherein the children of the Irish natives may be instructed in the English tongue, and in the fundamental principles of the true religion?"

Yes; but, in a subsequent part, the charter says that the schools are for other poor natives as well.

4494. We are not approaching this in a sectarian way; I am only tracing the history of the society—I fully understand.

4495. The way in which they proposed that the Roman Catholics should be benefited was to instruct them "In the English tongue, and in the principles of true religion and loyalty to all succeeding governments." The King then appointed the Lord Lieutenant, and some of the nobility and gentry of the kingdom as Commissioners for the purpose of executing the charter, so that there were the two objects—first, the object so largely dwelt upon in the recital, namely, the improvement by teaching English and the Protestant religion to Roman Catholics; and, secondly, the teaching of other poor children?—Yes; quite so.

4496. At that time the enormous majority of the poor children were, as they still are, Roman Catholics?—Yes.

4497. The Commissioners obtained power to hold lands, and were granted other advantages by their charter?—Yes.

4498. And they were ordered—

"To teach the children of the Poorish and other poor natives of our said kingdom the English tongue, and to teach them to read, especially the Holy Scriptures, and other good and pious books, and to instruct them in the principles of the Protestant religion."

That charter was granted upon a petition from the Primate, the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishops, and others?—Yes.

4499. That petition begins by saying that a great part of the kingdom was universally inhabited by Papists, and then it speaks, in very uncomplimentary language, of the intellectual and spiritual condition of the Papists, as they are called?—I do not know that the term is used as one of reproach, but merely as derived from Pope.

4500. The petitioners then say, that one of the ways proper for converting and civilizing the people is the establishment of English Protestant schools, where the Irish natives may be instructed in the English tongue, and the fundamental principles of the true religion, and they pray for the establishment of such schools. There is no specific reference in their prayer to Protestant children in those schools?—The charter, of course, is our guide.

4501. You obtained a subsequent Act of Parliament in the reign of George III.?—Yes, it was passed in order to give us the power of holding property of greater annual value than we were permitted to hold under the original charter. It was felt that a larger income was required, and the Act was passed to supply that want.

4502. I understood you to say on the last day you were examined, that those schools are not used at present, so far as you know, for the purpose of hanging over Catholics to the Protestant religion?—There is no such thing as these charter schools in existence at present. The society now works in a perfectly different system; but still in accordance with the principles of the charter.

4503. That is to say that they are denominational Protestant schools?—Precisely.

4504. How long have you been connected with the society?—Twenty-one years.

4505. What was the circumstance, so far as you know, of the change in the system of the Society?—When our Parliamentary grant was entirely taken from us, we were thrown back on our private endowments, and those grants of a few acres of land where the charter schools stood. We were unable to keep up the charter schools from want of funds, and many of them were abandoned altogether, but where there was a small endowment we were able to maintain the schools in the same place.

4506. The endowments which you at present enjoy, are endowments which do not come from the State?—Just so; but we hold them under our charter.

4507. Are you familiar with the list, and the nature of your present endowments?—Yes, from our books we can give you the full account of each.

4508. Do the terms of the trusts, on which those various endowments were given, appear in your books?—Yes; and the sources from which they come.

4509. Do you at present educate many Roman Catholics in your schools?—I ought, perhaps, technically, to answer that by saying that we do not know them as Roman Catholics entering the institutions, for they cannot come into them except as Protestants. We do not take them in as Roman Catholics and then make them Protestants. For admission to our boarding institutions they must pass through an examination, which implies a certain knowledge of the Scriptures.

4510. Then, as I understand, you have no Roman Catholics as boarders?—Not as boarders.

4511. Are you at present educating any Roman Catholics in your day schools?—Some have come into them, but our day schools are really more like parochial schools.

4512. Do you insist on Roman Catholics, who attend your day schools, undergoing any examination in religious subjects, or taking part in religious observances?—We leave the devotional exercises very much in the hands of our masters, but according to the charter there is required the reading of the Holy Scriptures and other good and pious books. If the boys refuse to go to prayers, the masters are quite free to receive such an objection, and to act upon it; but all must be instructed in the Holy Scriptures.

4513. Is it part of the routine that the Catholic boys who do attend your day schools should be educated in the Holy Scriptures?—Certainly.

4514. How many Catholic boys have you attending your day schools?—Not very many; but I do not remember the exact number.

4515. Do you or the managers of your schools try to get Roman Catholic children to attend your day schools?—No; I do not think there is any undue effort made.

4516. Are those who do attend your schools made aware beforehand that a Scriptural education, according to the Protestant creed, is part of the system?—It must be notorious, the whole thing is known.

4517. CHAIRMAN.—There is no allusion at a conference class?—No; they are purely deaconized schools.

4518. Mr. O'SHEA.—Formerly poverty was, more or less, a condition for entrance into your schools?—Yes.

4519. CHAIRMAN.—Does not your mode of operation differ to this extent from that of the Erasmus Smith's Board, that in your grammar schools there is practically a conference class, whereas in your schools religious instruction is imparted to all the pupils?—That is so.

4520. Mr. O'SHEA.—Have you read the charter of the Erasmus Smith's schools?—No, but I have the questions put to the Vice-Chancellor, by members of the Commission, the other day.

4521. Then you are aware that, notwithstanding the condition that Scripture shall be taught in the Erasmus Smith's schools, it is not insisted on in the case of Roman Catholic children in the grammar school?—So I heard.

4522. The Rev. Richard Ardill stated before the Royal Commission, in 1867, that since the competitive system was in operation, poverty was not looked into. Does that still continue to be the case?—Certainly not. In the certificate, which we require to be filed up, there is distinct reference to the pecuniary circumstances of the child's parents, which we think very essential.

4523. CHAIRMAN.—The children are admitted partly on the ground of poverty, and partly by competition?—Yes. When Mr. Ardill was examined, the sons from whereas the candidates came was a very limited one; but, on the suggestion of the Commission of 1837, we enlarged it to the whole of Ireland, and every single boy, whether Roman Catholic or Protestant, may come, if he gets a certificate, and be examined, and win a free place; but the moment he enters our school he is put under the discipline of the school.

4524. Mr. O'SHEA.—In the same certificate necessary for your school in Angler-street, Dublin?—That was entirely a day school, and has been suppressed; and the premises have been disposed of to the Querschool School of Medicine. The school was failures. The opening of the Harcourt-street school effected it very much. We only charged £4 a year; but the parents of many of the children felt themselves unable to pay that sum, being in impoverished circumstances.

4525. You gave an excellent English education for £4 a year?—Yes.

4526. And yet you found that sum too large for the class of persons who sent their children there?—We supposed so from the diminution of numbers. The poor people of Dublin were not able, though well and honestly disposed, to pay it, and we were obliged to accept a good deal of the charges.

4527. What portion of your endowments did you set apart for the Angler-street school?—We paid £100 a year to the master, and £50 to the second master. The school was very flourishing when first it was opened, about twenty-three years ago.

4528. When did the attendance at it commence to fall away?—We perceived a gradual diminution within the last six or seven years.

4529. The school was successful under Mr. John Holmes?—Yes, under Mr. John Holmes, and especially so under Mr. Houston.

4530. You gave £100 a year to the master?—Yes; and stipulation for also, when the number was sufficient.

4531. The stipulation came out of the boys' fees?—Yes, it was an allowance to the master.

4532. I find that, in 1820, the society took the opinion of the Attorney-General as to whether they were at liberty to receive Roman Catholics in their day schools, without instructing them in the Protestant religion?—Yes; and he was of opinion that they could not do so.

4533. It is only an English education which is given in your Santry school?—That we can alone give; but the master may teach classics as a private speculation.

4534. Is that after-school hours?—Not necessarily; the whole matter is left in his own hands. He may have Latin, Greek, and French classes.

4535. CHAIRMAN.—Does that apply to all your schools?—Yes; we do not employ any master to teach classics, still we are glad if a master introduces them. It has been attended with very good results.

4536. The College Institution was endowed by the Right Hon. William Connelley, in the reign of George I., and was at first intended exclusively for the benefit of the children on his estate?—Yes; thirty of the children there are nominated by the Connelley family, and we elect thirty-two. It was placed entirely in our hands, and under our rules and regulations.

4537. The report of the Commissioners of 1837 was—"The standard of instruction in this school ought to be raised." I suppose that has been done?—Yes; it has supplied some valuable schoolmasters, who are highly prized in the country, and who have gained great success indeed. They were known as some of the cleverest and best taught children in the Kildare-street Training school. The Roscommon school, also, is a similar foundation for girls, and has been equally successful.

4538. As to the Roscommon school, the Commissioners, in 1837, reported—"The sanitary arrangements of the school are defective as regards the want of an infirmary." Has that been remedied?—I do not think that there is a separate infirmary. The children, however, are extremely healthy. We should be glad if the funds allowed to erect an additional building. The mistress manages to make arrangements when a case of illness occurs.

4539. As to the Poochle Institution, the report of 1837 states—"That the founder's directions as to industrial training are not carried into effect." Has that remark been attended to?—There is no industrial training there now.

4540. How are the charges for paying boarders, at Santry, regulated?—We assign a maximum to the charges. We wish to extend the benefits of the education as far as we can. The charges are now from £26 to £30 a year.

4541. Mr. O'SHEA.—I suppose you examine at the schools yourself?—Yes, I not rarely accompany the deputation, but make a separate visit.

4542. Do you think that there is more attention paid to the larger, than to the smaller, schools?—Our day schools are quite on a separate footing from our boarding schools. They are merely parochial schools, and boys leave them at a very early age, going to business or to help their parents.

4543. The condition of some of your schools was represented, in 1837, as unsatisfactory. Have those been improved?—They are all under excellent masters at the present moment.

Mr. SIMON ADAM, M.A., examined.

Mr. SIMON ADAM, M.A.

4544. Mr. O'SHEA.—You are master of Santry school?—Yes, I have held that appointment about eighteen months.

4545. Are you a graduate of a university?—Yes; of Trinity College, Dublin.

4546. What distinctions did you obtain?—I took a junior readership in mathematics, and while teaching felt that I was an assistant master at the Liverpool Institute, so that I had not the advantage of attending lectures in college.

4547. What assistants have you got at Santry school?—Two.

4548. Is one of those a classical master?—Yes; one is a classical master. He is at present an under graduate in Trinity College; where, although he is a classical master, he took a science bursarship at the recent examination.

4549. Is yours one of the schools to which Latin and Greek are taught, outside the curriculum?—Yes; we teach Latin and Greek to the pay-boarders.

4550. Do you teach classics yourself?—No, I teach science.

4551. There was evidence given here that some pupils from Santry school have obtained very high distinctions in Trinity College?—Yes, two boys got distinctions, one in science and the other in classics.

4552. I believe very fair classical scholars are educated at the school, each week being undertaken outside the school course?—Yes, classical works are undertaken outside the school course for the foundation boys.

4553. What is the length of your school course?—The foundation boys at present get only two years at Santry. Their whole course is five years, as they are three years at one of the other schools, and then two years in Santry.

4554. What is your total number of pupils?—There are fifty-three at present.

4555. Are many learning classics?—Fifteen or sixteen.

4556. Had those boys begun to learn classics, before they came to Santry?—Some of them had. The school is composed of two classes. First the foundation boys, of whom very few have learned classics in the other schools. Then the pay boarders, and they nearly all learn classics.

4557. What English Grammar do you teach in the school?—Murray's English Grammar. The large edition for the seniors, and the smaller one for the juniors.

4558. Is there much attention paid to English Grammar in the school?—Yes; it is one of the subjects in which the boys are examined, at the competitive examinations for Santry. They are subjected to a minute examination in it.

4559. Is it not your hope, that the English

Adair, &c. &c.

Grammar, if carefully and scientifically taught, and with adequate attention paid to it, is a good preparation for learning the classical languages?—To a certain extent it is; but I do not think that it would be wise to allow a boy to abstain from beginning classical until you give him a sufficient knowledge of English.

4560. If a boy is taught the Syntax and construction of the English language carefully, in his childhood, could there be a better preparation for learning another language?—Certainly not; I think you could not do anything better.

4561. Do you find that the majority of the boys educated in the Incorporated Society's schools learn the Syntax and construction of English Grammar efficiently?—Certainly I do.

4562. Can ninety per cent. of the boys that are taught in your schools, pass an ordinary English sentence accurately?—Yes, I should say all. Certainly those who come to Sionry on the foundation can, because they are severely tested at the competitive examination.

4563. CHAIRMAN.—Do you teach experimental physics?—There has been no course of experimental physics taught in Sionry school.

4564. The South Kensington course includes physical sciences?—We take the mathematical course —mathematics, navigation, and two or three other subjects.

4565. Some of your pupils have gone to the University; do any become teachers?—Yes.

4566. Do any go from your school to qualify as teachers under the National Board in Marlborough-street?—No; but I know of two instances in which boys went into the Church Education Society's schools. I have made an analysis of the successes of Sionry boys since 1879—seventy-eight pupils in all. Twelve have distinguished themselves in Trinity College, thirty-five have entered the Civil Service and Exeter, and the remaining thirty-three have become assistant masters in schools. I should like to say one word about the Intermediate Education Act. Mr. Rice, appeared to say that the programme was not difficult enough, and I quite agree with him; because I think the schools that pay particular attention to some branches, do not get an opportunity of distinguishing themselves; for instance, the mathematical course at present, for boys of eighteen, is less than my boys have to know when they come up to Sionry. I think that the Commissioners should arrange their programme in such a form, that there should be a certain limited course to pass in, and that we should have advanced work to show proficiency.

THIRTEENTH DAY—SATURDAY, APRIL 26, 1879; 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—The EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; LORD JUSTICE FRYGHERON; RICHARD O'SHEA, ESQ., ESQ., M.P.; and ANDREW SEARLE HART, ESQ., LL.D.; with JAMES CREED MERRITT, ESQ., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. William
Pemberton, &c.

Mr. WILLIAM PEMBERTON, J.P., Examined.

4567. LORD JUSTICE FRYGHERON.—You are the agent over all the estates of the Incorporated Society?—I am.

4568. I believe they are a good deal scattered?—Yes. They are situated in sixteen different counties. Many of them are very small, and do not involve the necessity of my visiting them, as the Society only receives head rents out of them. The greater number of them are let on leases, for instance over the greater part of the Cork estate there are leases for 990 years, which had been made before the property came into the possession of the Society.

4569. What leasing powers do the Society possess?—They can only give, for agricultural leases, thirty-one years and three lives; but in corporate towns they can give a ninety-nine years' lease.

4570. That would be for building purposes?—Yes.

4571. Taking first the agricultural leases—what proportion of the whole estate is let on lease?—By far the greater portion, but those tenants who have only small holdings do not desire leases.

4572. What was the total rental of the Society, in 1875?—The gross rental was £9,045 6s. 10d.

4573. In 1877 the rental of the estates amounted altogether to £7,374 10s. 5d. To what is the increase attributable?—To several causes—to the falling in of leases and the granting of new ones at increased rents, and to the purchase of head rents by the Society, out of their funded capital.

4574. How much capital has been invested, within the last twenty years, in the purchase of head rents?—The increased rental from purchases within that period amounted to £342 3s. 8d., but the purchase money did not pass through my hands. That was done by the Board.

4575. The Society purchased a portion of the lands of Clonsilla?—Yes.

4576. Explain your system with reference to letting those lands?—The gentlemen we purchased from had let them at their full value. We made no alteration whatever in the rents, but we gave to the tenants, as we do to all our tenants, encouragement for drainage and improvements. In some instances, however, where we laid out money on improvements ourselves, we added five per cent. on the outlay, to the rents.

4577. What is your general system of valuing, when leases fall in?—In the case of a very small farm I bring the matter before the Board, and we generally arrange with the sole tenant; but if it is a farm of value, I ask the Board to decide the future rental, not by my opinion, but by getting an independent valuation. Bransington and Gale have acted since I was appointed agent. I make a full report to the Board of the state of the farm, lay before them the possible valuation, with my own valuation, and also that of Messrs. Bransington and Gale, and with all these materials before them the Board decide the future rent.

4578. Are the estates fairly let, in your estimation?—They are. The Killinelly estate, the Peacock estate, and the Farra estate are all very fairly let. They were let at Bransington and Gale's valuation, altered according to circumstances; that is, if the value of a farm had been increased by the tenant's improvements, or if there had been any building erected by him, we charged him nothing for that. That is the principle I have acted upon, not merely since the passing of the Land Act, but for very many years before it.

4579. Has there been much improvement on the estates?—On some estates a very great improvement. Some of our tenantry could well compare with the tenantry in any part of Ireland, for industry and good farming.

4580. Do your leases contain clauses against subletting and alienation?—They do.

4581. Do you make any provision against alienation in the case of tenancies from year to year?—I have prevented it. Before I was appointed agent it was not prevented, and that increased the wretchedly poor tenantry on many of the estates of the Society.

4582. Do you think that interference with subdivision has been beneficial to the tenants that remained?—I do, decidedly; it has been for their own benefit.

4583. In the Report of 1857, this passage occurs?—

"The Society should procure good maps of all its property, as it is impossible, without them, to guard against loss or to manage it satisfactorily."

Have you had surveys made since 1857?—Yes, but not on all the estates, as in the case of property let on long leases, out of which we only receive chief rents, there is no necessity for going to the expense of a special survey. In those cases the Ordinance sheets supply all the information we require.

4584. How often do you account to the Society?—Once a year.

4585. What is the system of auditing your accounts?—A very strict one, I am happy to say. Since 1857 I have kept the accounts by double entry.

4586. Your rental contains first, the Raneleigh estate account. What was the amount of arrears due to 1st November, 1875, on that estate, when you furnished your account for that year?—£184 14s. 4d. There was very little arrears ever due on that estate, except what is called the hanging half-year. The Raneleigh estate, which is the largest portion of it, is let to a number of small tenants. It was formerly in the hands of a middleman, but we got it up from him about 1849. It was then in a wretched state, in consequence of the burning of the land, and of the subdivision which had taken place.

4587. The Royal Commission reported in 1857, in reference to this property as follows?—

"The lands have required, and appear to have received, a good deal of attention from the agents during the last few years. Raneleigh until the year 1869, was let to a middleman for £1200, and, when the society got it into its possession, it found it occupied by fifty-seven tenants, living for the most part in wretched cabins, and very poor. The number of tenants has since been reduced, though it is still larger than the land can properly support; more than the half of the unsown land is bog, the remainder is very light land. The houses of the tenants are poor, and most of them in bad order, and built in a sort of village away from the farms to which they belong; this, of course, is very inconvenient and unprofitable for their owners. It will be desirable to take some steps to have suitable houses erected on the farms as soon as they are adjusted and made of a reasonable size. The rent of Raneleigh is now £229 4s. 4d. a year."

What improvements have been effected since that report was written?—A good deal of drainage work has been done, both to reclaim some of the bog land and to benefit the holdings of the tenants. The plan I adopted in Raneleigh is artificial drainage, which is done at the expense of the Society. If any tenant wishes to drain his farm, the Board will either allow him half the cost, or will do the entire at its own cost, and charge him five per cent. on the outlay.

4588. The recommendation attached to your last rental, notices seven holdings on which there have been increases of rent, during the year, amounting to £11 9s. 6d., and two with decreases amounting to 4s. 7d., showing a net increase of £11 4s. 10d. Were these lettings made on your valuations, or were they considered large enough to have a separate valuation?—They were small yearly tenancies, and the lettings were made on my valuation.

4589. Has anything been done about buildings on the estates?—We have given assistance occasionally, but the plan of building houses on the farms, for the tenants, would have been attended with great expense, and I do not think the return would have been adequate, as the farms are not large enough. It was better to allow the tenants to remain as they were, and improve their farms by drainage, so that they could get better crops out of the ground.

4590. Has there been any further reduction since 1857, in the number of tenants?—There was one within the last few months.

4591. Has any step been taken with reference to this paragraph in the report of 1857?—

"There is a school kept by a poor man, in a half ruined house at Raneleigh, which is largely attended. This school is entirely supported by the poor people themselves. As there is no other school within reach of their children, it would be a great advantage to them to have a better one established."

At that period I was very anxious to have a National school established at Raneleigh, as our Society promoted only Protestant schools. All the tenants in Raneleigh, at that time, were Roman Catholics, and to put any other than a Roman Catholic school there, would have been folly. A good school however was started, about that time, in the vicinity, which affords instruction to the children of the tenantry.

4592. Is that a National school?—Yes.

4593. You receive a considerable sum for turf banks on the Raneleigh property. What arrangements do you make as to letting them?—That has been altogether of my own creation. I let the banks every year to the best advantage, and I am happy to say, our receipts are increasing. That is one result of the drainage that has been going on. We have also made a new road, which has very much opened up the bog.

4594. I observe there is a considerable expenditure for a nursery?—Yes. That nursery has been of great advantage to the property. There was formerly a tree on it at one time, and since the plantation has been made, the face of the country is very much improved for affording shelter. The tenants were first supplied, and then we sold as well as we could.

4595. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Have you sold any of the trees to persons who were not tenants?—We have.

4596. Have you found that profitable?—It was not profitable, as a mere matter of money, but the amount received helped to defray the expenses, and it has given a taste for planting in the neighbourhood.

4597. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Taking into account, both the indirect advantage, and the advantage to the tenants, you find it not an imprudent expenditure?—I do, and I only regret that I did not commence it years before.

4598. The rental of the lands comprised in the Raneleigh estate, for the year ending 1st November, 1875, was £1,434 12s. 9d. How much of that was actually received?—£1,419 14s. 10d.

4599. Another portion of the Raneleigh estate consists of ranches?—Yes, and some of those are so small that it is the practice to allow five or six years to accumulate. If we received them annually we would be out of pocket. The total annual amount of the ranches is £561 13s. 7d., and the amount of arrears to 1st November, 1875, was at the date of furnishing the account for that year £36 13s. 5d.

4600. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—How does your endowment come to consist of ranches?—They were inappropriate lands held by the then Lord Raneleigh.

4601. CHAIRMAN.—Have any of these been sold at capital value?—No. The Society have no power to sell them.

4602. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Where do you reside yourself?—In Athlone.

4603. The Boscummon estate is in your neighbourhood?—Yes. It was on that account that I went to reside there.

4604. How often do you collect the rents on the Raneleigh property?—When I took it up, about 1849, the tenants were miserably poor. They came to me in a body and said—"We have no money to pay the May rent. Give us till November, and we will pay you in full." I told them, and they did so. I then made a kind of bargain with them, saying—"I will now ask you for the rent only once a year, but if you do not pay, you must give up the land." They all promised me that, and from that time to the present they have acted upon it, and they kept very fairly—indulging them in that way, gives them a little capital to work upon, and my opinion is, that there would not be one-half, or one-third of the original tenants now upon the land, if I had not adopted that plan. It also created a certain feeling of gratitude for the way they were treated. There was a great contrast between the way we have treated them, and the way they were treated before.

4605. When did you furnish, to the Society, the rental and account which is now before us?—It is closed on 31st March, 1878, and accounts for the rents due last November, 1877. The account for the following year is now being made out.

4606. CHAIRMAN.—Is the money you collect paid to the Society in instalments, or only when you furnish the accounts?—I lodge money in the bank, from time to time, according as I receive it.

4607. Do you send up monthly accounts?—No; I furnish my accounts only at the end of the year.

4608. LOUIS JEROME FRÉCHON.—We now come to the Poodick estate. Where is that situated?—In the county of Waterford. The history of that estate is, in some respects, like the Rathleigh. It was at one time in the hands of a middleman.

4609. You have only fifteen tenants there now?—Yes; and they all have leases.

4610. This description appears on your rental as to holding No. 6:—"Rent raised 15s. per annum, from 25th March 1877, for an advance of £15."—Yes; I wish the system of advancing money for improvements, and charging 5 per cent. for it, was more common in Ireland. It is the best investment a landlord can make, and is greatly for the advantage of the country.

4611. The arrears retained on your last rental as due on that estate, amounted to £367 7s. 2d. Have those arrears since been paid?—Yes, they have all been paid.

4612. You charge upon this estate for planting 1,050 forest trees. What arrangements did you make with regard to these?—This estate was too small to establish a nursery upon it, so I bought trees, and planted them here and there, at the expense of the estate, so as to afford shelter, and to encourage the tenants to plant. The appearance of that estate is now very creditable. The tenants are very quiet and amiable, and until the last year or two, when bad seasons occurred, they were very thriving.

4613. On the Dandalk estate you have twenty-eight tenants paying £603 17s. per annum?—Yes, and there are no arrears on that property.

4614. Are the tenants all householders?—They are, and are very comfortable.

4615. There is an increase of £5 5s. on the holding of Thomas Stewart, noted. What was that?—That was for interest on outlay. I am very proud of the Killybeg property, which forms part of the Dandalk estate. I do not think that in any part of England or Scotland you would find a more industrious set of tenants, or better farms.

4616. On Primrose George there are nine tenants. An arrear of £3 1s. 11d. was due in the beginning of the year, but it was paid off. Is there any arrear due now?—No; the rents have been all very well paid.

4617. On the Furens rental you have written off as irrecoverable an arrear of £107 7s. 2d. 1/2—Yes. The tenant who owed that was not selected by me. He was the master of the school, and held a good part of the land there. He had to be dismissed by the Society, and owed that arrear, which was consequently lost.

4618. What have you done with the land street?—I am letting the grating of it every year. It produced £100 10s. from April to November, 1877.

4619. It has not been permanently let?—No. The Board did not wish to make a permanent letting of it, but directed me to let it for grating from year to year, which I have done; and it has realised more than the former rent.

4620. On the Rogerson's Cork estate you have fifty-three tenants?—Yes; it is all house property, situate in the Liberties of the city of Cork.

4621. Are there any arrears due on that estate?—None.

4622. Have you to make any expenditure upon it?—The greater part of that property is held by tenants who have long leases, and I have only to resolve the rents, but we are obliged sometimes to give assistance for roofing and repairs of the houses.

4623. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Is the Cork estate in a good part of the suburbs?—No; it is in the very worst part—the Liberties. It was in a very low state, but it is improving.

4624. What part of the city is it in?—Bishop's Lane and Fair Lane.

4625. I suppose the tenants are not of a class that you could ask to make the repairs themselves?—No; but the improvements to which I allude were the opening of new streets.

4626. LOUIS JEROME FRÉCHON.—You return the Arklow estate as producing £35 2s. a year. Is that town property?—Yes; in the town of Arklow.

4627. Is it a good property?—It is.

4628. Have the rents increased since 1857?—They have. An old lease on it fell in. The tenant, a shopkeeper, had enlarged his premises, of which I obtained an independent valuation from Bransington and Gale; and the Board, taking into consideration the large amount of expenditure the tenant had made, offered him a new lease at a very fair rent. He accepted it, and was quite satisfied.

4629. On the Cahill estate the rental is £27 12s. 10d. a year?—Yes.

4631. Were you in receipt of the rent?—I received it for a great many years, but there was always a delay in the payment. The property on which it is charged was very much involved.

4632. On the Glomast estate there is only one tenant?—Is that a town holding?—No; it is a farm outside the town, let to the late Mr. Bannock at £128 12s. 6d. per annum.

4633. Is it now in the hands of his representatives?—Yes; and their rent is very secure. They have a lease for thirty-one years and three lives, which was given because Mr. Bannock was about to lay out a large sum of money, which he would not do on a short lease.

4634. Did he build a residence on the land?—The old Charter Schoolhouse was upon the land, and he modelled it into a very comfortable country house, and lived there for many years.

4635. Where is the Newport estate?—In Tipperary. There is only one tenant there. His rent is £65 per annum, and the arrear, £12 11s. 3d., which is returned upon the last rental, was due by a former tenant, and must be written off.

4636. CHAIRMAN.—Is there a school situate on that property?—There is a day school situate in one corner of it.

4637. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Did you on that property adopt the same plan of making advances for improvements, and charging five per cent. on the amount?—I am at liberty to do that on all the properties, whenever I think it judicious to do so.

4638. Do you take care to see that the money is applied?—I never pay it all until I see that the work has been done according to the agreement; but in many cases, where I have confidence in the tenants, I advance part.

4639. You do not find your confidence abused?—No, I do not.

4640. LOUIS JEROME FRÉCHON.—Where is the Ray estate?—It is in the county of Donegal.

4641. Is it in a remote part of that county?—It is.

4642. What is the extent of it?—Only twenty acres.

4643. Is it let in small holdings?—No, it is let to a single tenant at £35 a year.

4644. The Strathgilly estate is in the Queen's county?—It is. The rental is £78 6s. 4d. per annum, and there are no arrears.

4645. Is that let in one holding or in several?—In several holdings. It is near the town, and I have converted it into town parks. It is let, for the most part, to people in the town, who give a very high rent for it. It was, many years ago, in the hands of one tenant, and when he gave it up I let it to five or six persons as an accommodation.

4646. Have you increased the rental by that means?—I have nearly doubled it.

4647. There is the Trim estate, of which the rent is £32 15s.—That is quite close to the town of Trim, and is let to one tenant under a lease, or agreement for a lease.

4648. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you apply the principle of making advances for improvements, and charging interest, to the case of leases as well as of yearly tenancies?—Yes.

4649. And, both in cases of leases and yearly tenancies, you find it of advantage?—I find it works very well in every instance, and I have done it in many cases on the estates of private gentlemen.

4650. LOUIS JEWELL FLEMING.—What was given for the Clonack estate?—£5,200, and there was sold out to pay that, from Three per Cent. Consols, £5,638.

4651. In your account you charge yourself with the whole amount received during the year?—Yes.

4652. You return the balance due, on account of cash estate, as if you had made no lodgments to the credit of the Society?—That was in conformity with the directions I got in 1857.

4653. In your account to 31st March, 1878, your largest lodgments were in March, during which month they amounted to £2,190. When do you collect the money then lodged?—Generally about Christmas, and afterwards three or four times. I use all possible exertions to obtain payment before 31st March, so as to enable me to lodge the money within the Society's financial year.

4654. On your original appointment did you give any security?—I did.

4655. Was that by recognisance?—Yes.

4656. To what amount?—£1,000.

4657. Your account, furnished to 31st March, 1878, appears to have been passed and audited on the 23rd August by the Committee of Accounts, and is signed by Sir George Longfield, Rev. A. J. Macdonagh, and Rev. J. W. Shille. Do you attend at the audit yourself?—Always, and I produce the voucher for each payment.

4658. Your accounts contain a reconciliation on the face of them?—They do. I think I am bound to account for the rise and fall on each estate.

4659. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You are aware that the last year has been a rather bad year on tenants?—I am.

4660. Have you formed any disposition to ask for discounts?—Yes.

4661. I understand you have increased your rental by something about £2,000 a year?—Not so much. There is a considerable increase, but it is not all due to an increase of rents, as there have been some purchases.

4663. There must be many places on your division where sites have been sought for National schools?—Roeleigh is the only one I recollect at present.

4664. In that instance you found no unwillingness on the part of your Board to give facilities?—No, so far from that they were considering how much could be done. I think it very likely if the school had not been built outside their estate they would have done something to aid it.

4665. Do your leases and agreements contain provisions against alienation and sub-letting?—Yes.

4666. Is it your habit to object to an assignment of a tenant's interest, when made to a solvent, useful, and well-conditioned tenant?—Certainly not. I only require the assignment to be made with my knowledge, and never object without good cause.

4667. That enables you to get rid of tenants who find they cannot improve?—I would not recommend any landlord to snore that right, but certainly one should not exercise it in a capricious or objectionable way. If a tenant has improved his farm, I think, as a matter of justice, he ought to get the benefit of his improvements.

4668. CHAIRMAN.—What do you generally consider a fair rental, as compared with Griffith's valuation?—It differs in every county in Ireland. In some places the fair letting value of the land would be 75 per cent. over Griffith's valuation, and I know others where it is very nearly as fair a letting value as a tenant could give.

4669. Do you know of any part of the country where Griffith's valuation is to any extent too high?—I would not say too high. If you take the north of Ireland and the rich lands of Monagh and Westmeath, you will find that, until the introduction of American beef, Griffith's valuation was, as compared with the letting value, greatly below what could be realized. But in some parts of the north and west, and in poor lands, you will find Griffith's valuation very nearly what the small farmer could pay, and live comfortably by the land. I would not settle rent in any part of Ireland by merely having Griffith's valuation before me. I would only do it after making a personal inspection.

4670. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Does Under-tenant-right exist on the estate in the county Down?—I do not acknowledge it, but it is a dangerous subject to touch on. On the Killybegs estate we allow the tenants to sell their interests in the farms, and if the person they sell too is unobjectionable, we do not interfere with them.

4671. In the South and West there is no tenant-right?—I do not like to recognize it; but at the same time I never interfere with their selling.

4672. LOUIS JEWELL FLEMING.—You fix a fair rent, allow no arrears, and accept a tenant who is recommended, provided there is no objection?—Just so.

4673. CHAIRMAN.—Is not the income derived from the Clonack estate more than the interest upon the stock sold out to pay for the purchase?—Yes. The Society were only receiving three per cent., and I think they will now receive on an average nearly five per cent.

4674. The Royal Commission, in 1857, made this suggestion—

"The Society should also be enabled to sell, with an inalienable title, the small estates that they hold in different parts of the country. The adjoining proprietors, however, should be first offered the option of purchasing, and the money arising from such sale should be held in trust, to be re-invested in the purchase of other land."

Do you agree in that?—That is a very proper recommendation. Some of the property is greatly encumbered, and power to consolidate it would be a great advantage.

4675. Does any power exist at present either to sell or exchange?—The Society have no such power.

4676. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Does the Society pay rent for any of its property?—A great deal. But in late years we have purchased up some of the head rents. We have purchased all those which were payable to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

4677. Is the Roeleigh property subject to any head rent?—Not now. It was subject to a quit rent of £100 a year; but that was purchased up some years ago.

4678. When a farm becomes vacant, do you find great competition for it?—In some cases very great.

4643-4678. Mr. William Palmer, J.P.

April 26, 1875.
Mr. Wilson,
Edgmont, &c.

4679. In dealing with the competitors for these farms, do you always let to the highest bidder, or do you sometimes accept a tenant who makes a more reasonable offer, and appears a more prudent and solvent man?—The practice is, when a farm is advertised, I receive proposals, and having considered into them I lay them before the Board, and of course there may be some that I would not recommend. The Board have before them my own valuation and report, and Messrs. Broadbent and Gale's valuation, and the Ordnance valuation. Sometimes they refer the entire matter to me to make further inquiry, and to treat with the applicants, and then they make the best selection they can, but they take the highest rent offered if the man is considered fairly solvent.

4680. Did you ever consider whether any offer made was too high to be a prudent one?—I have sometimes told the Board that some offers were almost too high. They do not wish to get their lands at extreme rates. Their object is to do what is fair, but, of course, to get the full value of the land.

4681. Then you have some across instances where the competition was carried beyond the real value?—I have. Such cases have occurred.

4682. Were these in the case of small farms, or of large ones?—Mostly in small ones.

Mr. FRANCIS DE LAURE, continued.

Mr. Francis
De Laure.

4683. CHAIRMAN.—You are an officer of the Hibernian Marine school?—I am the Registrar.

4684. How is the charity managed?—There is a Board formed of the members generally, and there are officers and committees elected annually out of the Board.

4685. How long have you held your appointment?—Only for the last three years.

4686. The charity was intended for the maintenance, education, and apprenticing of children of despoiled seamen of the Royal Marine service?—Yes.

4687. And for their instruction in Scripture and in the Protestant established religion?—Yes; it is an exclusively Protestant endowment.

4688. Do your funds come entirely from private individuals?—Entirely. We enjoy no public grant now.

4689. Had you ever any public grant?—Yes, in the early history of the school there was a grant made by the Irish Parliament, which ceased in 1830. Since then it has been altogether a private endowment.

4690. In the report of 1857 the charity was stated to have a net annual income of £135 15s. from land. What is its present endowment?—We have premises on Sir John Rogerson's quay, let to two tenants,—one the Messrs. Martin, who pay £300 a year, the other the representatives of Mr. Penketh, who pay £135 15s. 4d. a year; we have also a small income, about £23 a year, under the Will of Mr. Joseph Wright, which is paid through the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests; and there are also the rents of some Carlow property, our mastery of which amounts to about £11 10s. per annum, the other society being enjoyed by the Hibernian Military School.

4691. Have you any other property?—We have money given to the Society from time to time in gifts and donations, and accumulations which have been invested. We have £6,000 in Bank Stock, the dividend on which for the year 1875 was £750. We have also £7,000 of Great Southern and Western Railway Stock, which produced in 1875 £350 12s. 11d. Our total income for the year was £1,545 9s. 6d., including Wright's charity, Carlow rents, Dublin rents, dividends, and the subscriptions of annual members.

4692. The income has largely increased in the last twenty years?—It has.

4693. According to the report of 1857, it was then £941, and now it is £1,548?—Yes.

4694. Do you take both boarders and day scholars?—All the boys are boarders. They are taken in as free pupils, maintained and educated, and finally apprenticed, or entered in the Royal Navy.

4695. How many are there?—Forty-four has been the average for the last couple of years, and that is as many as our present house will accommodate.

4696. Have there been any additions made to your building, since 1857?—We are not in the same building that we were in then. A fire took place in the school-house on Sir John Rogerson's quay, in the year 1875, and the boys had to be removed.

4697. Where is the school now situated?—After the fire, the Governors having regard to the unhealthiness of their then locality,—inasmuch as the tidal water was in the habit of getting into the basement, and noxious and vitiated waters were springing up around,—purchased the interest in the lease of No. 1,

Upper Marston-street. Another inducement to them to do so was that they got £300 a year from the Messrs. Martin, for their old premises, so that instead of sustaining a loss by the change there was a gain. The rent of our present house is £80 a year, and adding to that the interest on the purchase money which was paid, we have rather more than £100 a year (out of the £300 for which the premises on the quay were let) in favour of the Society consequent on the change.

4698. You gained in every way by the change?—Yes; our present situation is considered most healthy, and we have had no sickness all through the recent epidemic. The house adjoins Leinster Lawn, and was originally the residence of Judge Champerlain. It contains twenty apartments, stove rooms, &c., a bath room and lavatory, put up by the Society for the use of the boys, and has an extensive area—measuring 254 feet from the back of the house to the rear wall of the premises; it is 40 feet wide, 150 feet of the garden is laid down in grass; the rest is walled off as a playground, so that the boys are quite out of hearing, and of the possibility of giving annoyance to the people of the neighbourhood.

4699. What are the outgoings?—Since the move they have been heavier than usual. We have built a large gymnasium, in which all kinds of appliances suitable for the boys are provided—climbing ropes and climbing ladders, and other things have been got up at an expenditure of over £300.

4700. What are the current expenses?—The accounts are kept under headings in a form which existed at the time I became Registrar, and which appears to me to be simple and easily understood. The settled account for 1877 shows coal, candles, and gas cost £27 11s.; diet, £635 12s. 5½d.; clothing and articles of house linen, &c., £296 11s. 2d.; rent and insurance, £295 3s. 2d. (including £90 Irish land rent payable out of the premises on Sir John Rogerson's quay); furniture and repairs £65 6s. 8d. The expenditure under this head was heavy that year, as a good deal of furniture had to be got. There was board-room furniture, for instance, a quantity of additional beds and bedding for the boys, new forms, and various things of that sort; books and stationery, £14 16s.; building repairs, and sundries, £240 15s. 7½d. (this included £304 laid out on a gymnasium and appliances, which were found of very great advantage to the boys, to train them to habits suitable to being on board ship).

4701. Even making that extra expenditure you had exceeded your income by about £20?—We exceeded our income that year, but we had begun the year with a balance to our credit.

4702. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Was that money saved in former years?—I cannot say whether it was saved out of ordinary income, or consisted of donations or bequests.

4703. CHAIRMAN.—In addition to the income from property, which you have mentioned, several gentlemen give a guinea a year each?—There are the annual members. Some of our governors are life members, who have given donations of twenty guineas.

4704. How is the expenditure managed?—We pay all our accounts quarterly. It is the schoolmaster's duty to keep a want book, in which, previous to each quarterly meeting, he enters everything that is required for the coming three months. This is sent to me, and it is my business to look into it and compare it with former periods, and to see that nothing extraordinary is entered. Then it is submitted to the Committee, and, if they sanction the various orders, they are initiated by the Chairman. These orders are afterwards compared and examined by the Committee of Finance, who certify the items for payment. We pay nothing except by cheque.

4703. Do you order all the small things required, provided they are not above the average amount?—No. There are printed order books, and, when the Committee approve of the items asked for, it is my duty to write them out, sign the order, and have it signed by the Chairman; and without that order nothing is allowed to be brought into the house, so that nobody has an opportunity of ordering anything.

4706. How often does the Board meet?—There are ordinary meetings on the first Monday of every month, and then there are extraordinary general quarterly meetings in the year. There is also a general meeting, and as many others as the business of the Society requires, specially summoned.

4707. What is the quorum?—For the general committee the quorum is five, and for committee meetings three, but our attendances are usually larger. The average attendance during the year 1877 at the Committee of Finance was four; at the General Committee, six, and at the quarterly meetings, eight. Since I have been connected with the Society I only know of one occasion on which there was not a sufficient attendance to form a quorum.

4708. Your duty is to keep the accounts, and, in fact, to act as Secretary?—Yes. There was a resolution passed soon after I was appointed Registrar, that my office should be in the house, in order that I might exercise a daily surveillance.

4709. The schoolmaster has charge of the house?—He is responsible for the domestic affairs of the house, the boys, and the servants.

4710. How is the education of the boys conducted?—They are admitted by the Board. A form of application for admission must be filled up and sent in, accompanied by certificates.

4711. Is there any distinction made between the orphans of sailors of the Royal Navy and of the Marine service?—There is no such distinction made. The school is open to the children of all sailors, but a preference is usually given where the merits of the case seem to demand consideration.

4712. Is any preference given to orphans of sailors belonging to the port or neighbourhood?—I am not aware that such is the case. The mode of election is this: A printed list of the applicants is made out and circulated amongst all the members of the Society, that they may consider the merits of each applicant; a ballot is then summoned, and they elect those they think most meritorious.

4713. Your application form refers to sureties?—We require two persons to become security for the good conduct and obedience of each boy, and in addition to that the sureties have to execute a bond.

4714. Have life subscribers and yearly subscribers a right to vote?—All the members have a right to vote at the election of pupils.

4715. What is the course of education?—They get an English education.

4716. Are there any sons of men of a higher class than actual seamen, such as captains of merchant vessels?—Not that I am aware of. There may be an odd one from that rank, but not very frequently. The instruction given is in reading, writing, writing from dictation, grammar, geography, the use of the globe, map-drawing, arithmetic, Euclid, trigonometry, English history, navigation, Sailing and French Cookery, and vocal music. A small annual salary is paid to an organist, who teaches the boys to sing, and they enjoy a couple of evenings in the week in that way—one being devoted to sacred music, and the other, generally, to secular. The Society also keeps two large sea-baths, in which the boys take exercise.

4717. At what age are boys admitted?—From nine to eleven or twelve, and they are retained up to the age of fifteen. Perhaps in the case of a boy coming in advanced in years, he would be permitted to remain till sixteen, but most frequently they leave about fifteen.

4718. Are they all apprenticed?—Yes; to the sea exclusively, or sent to the Royal Navy.

4719. What steps do you take to apprentice them?—The boys are allowed a choice. If they prefer going into the Navy, as many have done, arrangements are made for them to do so. The others are apprenticed; and when leaving the school the Society gives each boy a good outfit, at an expense of about £8.

4720. Do the boys, generally, turn out well?—Many of them have been very successful. I am not aware that the Society has heard anything to the disadvantage of any of the boys that have gone out from it.

4721. Do the Governors exercise any discretion as to whether a boy would be fit for a seafaring job?—Allowing them to go to anything but the sea is only done in case of necessity. Of late we have sent some very fine boys to the Royal Navy.

4722. Do any of them go in to qualify under the Board of Trade?—We have heard of the progress of several of the boys, and some of them are now masters of vessels.

4723. You have nothing to do with the Carlow property you mentioned, beyond getting the moiety of the rents?—We have no interference with the tenants at all, but get our moiety, once a year, through the Royal Hibernian Military School. The agent transmits the whole net balance to Colonel Speedy, and he sends us one-half. The agent always sends us a copy of the accounts, so that we see we are getting our share.

4724. By whom is that property managed?—It is left to the management of the agent, who is a gentleman of position in Carlow.

4725. The Inspector for the Royal Commission in 1857 said of this school:—

"The state of instruction was tolerably good. I examined in grammar, geography, English history, mental arithmetic, and reading. They read badly, but in the other subjects of examination answered fully. The defects of the instruction are numerous."—

I think we present a better front now than we did then.

4726. The report continues:—"Some industrial instruction ought to be given in the school."—We instruct them in navigation and teach them to row.

4727. Is there any instruction given in managing a sailing boat?—No, that is considered dangerous and imprudent.

4728. Is there any provision for teaching the boys to swim?—They all swim. In fine weather, when they go out in their boat, they go to a convenient place and bathe.

4729. The report, to which I have referred, proceeds:—

"Having regard to the many accidents which sailors are liable to meet with, it would be desirable that some useful trades should be taught to the boys, such as sailmaking, shoemaking, &c. Formerly such was the case, but these branches of instruction have long been discontinued."

Has anything been done in reference to that suggestion?—Nothing in the way of tailoring or shoemaking, except to mend their own clothes and to put on their own buttons. Some have a genius for carpenter's work, and tools have been purchased for them, and a work shop erected at the back of the house.

4730. Are they taught to splice ropes?—The schoolmaster, who was at sea on board a man-of-war, teaches them to splice and knot ropes, and in the gymnasium there is a set of ropes up with attachments for that purpose.

April 26, 1875.
Mr. Francis
De Bido.

4731. Do they receive any instruction in the use of mechanical appliances, and so on?—Not that I am aware of.

4732. The same report further says:—

"To improve this institution, to enlarge and extend its objects and operations—in fact, to make it what it was intended to be, an efficient nursery for the supply to Her Majesty's navy and the mercantile service, in, in my judgment, a matter of National importance. The metropolis of Ireland is a fitting locality for a first class marine school, and to such an establishment the assistance of Parliament might with propriety be extended. Having some time ago visited the Hibernal Military School, in the Phoenix Park, I was forcibly struck with the contrast presented by that noble and flourishing institution to the decayed and melancholy aspect of the marine school."—

At that time the Hibernal Military School was enjoying a very large endowment from the Government, the Hibernal Marine School none; that makes a great difference.

4733. Mr. O'BRIEN.—I believe the Hibernal Military School still enjoys a Government grant?—It does, a very large one.

4734. CHAIRMAN.—Do you find there is any difficulty in getting suitable applicants for all the vacant places you have?—None; we generally have a list overflowing.

4735. Where do the pupils generally come from?—All parts of the country. We have had several from Cork and different other spots.

4736. Do they come principally from Ireland?—Nearly altogether; some, however, are the children of Englishmen now employed in Ireland, or that have left their children here; and some are the children of coast-guarda. They are a very nice class of boys.

4737. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Do you obtain tenders for your supplies from grocers and butchers, and all other tradesmen?—It has been the habit to advertise for tenders, more especially for meat and other things of which a large supply is required. On grocery account is but a small one, as the boys are fed principally upon bread and milk, and meat; they get, however, coals occasionally.

4738. Have any tenders been sought, since you became Secretary?—Yes. About a year and a half ago the last tenders were accepted.

4739. It is not done every year?—It ought to have been done, and I think the omission was accidental.

4740. Who audits your accounts?—Members of the Society.

4741. Is there any audit by an official Auditor from outside?—None.

4742. Do you print your accounts, and circulate them, amongst the various Governors of the Society?—That has not been done heretofore, but it is the intention to do it in future.

4743. Had you accommodations, in the former premises, for a larger number of pupils than you have in your present establishment?—Yes; but that was before I was an officer of the institution.

4744. Do you take in any boys whose parents are alive?—They are taken in, during the life of the parents, in cases where there are very large families; but orphans always get a preference.

4745. Have you ever read the charter of the charity?—I have.

4746. It appears, from the charter, that the charity was intended for the purpose of establishing a nursery and school, for the maintenance and instruction of the orphan children of those seamen who had perished, or become disabled, by age and infirmity, from being of further use in His Majesty's or in the Marine service?—Yes, it was originally the undertaking of a comparatively small number of persons in Dublin.

4747. How many of your present boys are the sons of coast-guard men in actual service?—About one-third.

4748. Can you regard coast-guardmen under pay, and in active service, as being persons disabled by age or infirmity from being of further use?—They are not; but regard has always been had, in those cases, to the largeness of the family, and the smallness of the means.

4749. Have any children of disabled seamen been rejected, in order to admit the sons of coast-guardmen?—Never to my knowledge. There is great anxiety to apply the charity, so much as possible, to the original intention.

4750. How many teachers have you in the school?—Only one, and he has an assistant selected from amongst the boys. The best and most efficient boy is appointed monitor, and assists the master generally.

4751. Is that boy paid?—We give him a small quarterly payment of £1, for his good conduct and progress in education, and as an encouragement to the discharge of his duties.

4752. Is there an examination held to test the proficiency of the pupils?—Yes; by Mr. Wilkinson as regards general education, and in matters of navigation by Captain McCallum.

4753. I believe Mr. Wilkinson is the inspector of the Church Education Society's schools?—I believe he is.

4754. Does he make a report to the Committee?—He does.

4755. Have those reports been favourable?—Generally very favourable.

4756. Do the members of the Board themselves occasionally examine the boys?—Yes; and they also inspect the house.

4757. What do you pay the matron?—£30 a year. She is not exactly in the position of matron. It was found, some years ago, more desirable to appoint a cook and housekeeper. She is very efficient as regards the caring and provisioning of the boys.

4758. Does she discharge the duties of cook and housekeeper, without devoting any attention to the personal cleanliness, comfort, and so on, of the boys?—She sees the meals brought up, and distributes them in a proper manner to the boys in their dining hall.

4759. What are the salaries of your official staff?—Sergeant Bayly gets £10 a year; the Registrar fifty guineas; the schoolmaster £100 a year, with coal and candles, but he has to find his own diet, and Mrs. Beatty, the housekeeper, £30 a year.

4760. CHAIRMAN.—Does she find her own diet?—No; she is boarded.

4761. Mr. O'BRIEN.—Who has the supervision of the house, and the mode in which the matron discharges her duties?—In the first instance the schoolmaster is expected to see that all things are right and proper in the house; and, in the next place, the whole is under the direct control and inspection of a committee of fifteen.

4762. How often do the committee of fifteen meet?—On the first Monday in every month.

4763. If the schoolmaster has any complaint to make of the officers subordinate to him, it is his duty to bring it before the committee?—Yes; or, if I see anything going wrong it is my duty to bring it under the notice of the committee, and in case of urgency to summon them specially.

4764. Do the committee exercise their own personal vigilance in such matters?—They do occasionally. Some of them are in the habit of coming in frequently and going through the house to see how matters are.

4765. Does the society generally select for admission the children of Protestant parents, or have you also the children of mixed marriages?—I believe some have been admitted who were children of mixed marriages, but were themselves Protestants at the time of their admission, in accordance with the charter, which was for the maintenance and education of children in the Protestant religion.

4766. We had evidence as to a Protestant institution where it was a practice, if not a rule, to take no children of mixed marriages that were not born free Protestants at the time of their admission. Is that the principle on which your institution is conducted?—They certainly come in only as Protestants, and are understood distinctly to be such. Some others would be considered entitled to the benefits of the charity.

4767. Has there been any attempt to interfere with religion—in fact, to make Catholic children Protestant, in order to get them into the place?—Not that I am aware of.

4768. Your accounts show that you were allowed interest on your current account by the bank?—The Bank of Ireland allows it, whenever the balance between quarter and quarter is of a certain amount, but it comes to a very trifling sum.

4769. CHAIRMAN.—How are the governors elected?—By ballot; nominations are proposed at a meeting of the governors, and, after a certain interval, the ballot taken place at another meeting.

4770. Are there any who have a special knowledge of the affairs of commerce?—The last member admitted to the society was Mr. Pepper, who is a great yachtsman. He is the only member who has been elected in my time.

4771. Has there been any increase in the number of governors, or is it understood that it should be fixed?—There is no limit, the society is only too glad to get the aid of gentlemen. There are a great many intelligent influential persons on the list.

4772. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you know of any applications lately made by gentlemen to become governors, being rejected?—I don't know of any.

4773. CHAIRMAN.—There is no special instruction given in steam, and such departments?—No.

4774. Is there any instruction as regards naval gunnery?—No; they learn that on board the training ships for the Royal Navy. We have satisfactory accounts from some boys that have got into good positions. The result of their education and good conduct is that they have got charge of numbers of other boys.

4775. The minutes of your committee for 5th January, 1877, state that a vacancy having occurred since last meeting for one boy, a selection was made from the reserve list, and James McIntyre was admitted. What is the meaning of the reserve list?—When the regular election took place, there were not vacancies for all those who appeared to be worthy applicants, and certain of them were placed on a special list, to be admitted as soon as vacancies occurred.

4776. What is the average cost of feeding each boy?—About 6s. per day. They are as fine, stout, healthy boys as you would see anywhere.

4777. How is religious instruction conducted?—The Rev. Dr. Campbell, who is the secretary, and a member of the committee, examines the boys occasionally, and the giving of religious instruction also forms a part of the master's duty.

4778. Is there any chapel connected with the institution?—Not now; the boys attend the Marine Church at Foreshore twice each Sunday.

Mr. CHARLES BUTLER examined.

Mr. Charles Butler.

4779. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Master of the Hibernian Marine School?—I am.

4780. How long have you occupied that position?—For six years.

4781. What other teachers are there?—I am the only master, but Richard Joyce, who is my assistant, is a pupil teacher, or monitor.

4782. You have 2100 a year. What does the assistant get?—£1 a quarter. He is the best boy in the school, both as regards education and good conduct, and was selected for the post by the Board. Then I have petty officers—viz.—boys who have certain other boys placed under them, and they are 'stripped' for that.

4783. What is the age of the assistant?—Sixteen. He is about to leave.

4784. The best boy in the school is to be your assistant?—Yes.

4785. You do not keep him more than a year beyond the usual time?—This boy has been of age to leave, since January, but we have not got a place for him yet.

4786. What position did you hold before you were appointed to this school?—I was a schoolmaster in the Royal Navy for three years and a half. At present I am a Candidate Bachelor in the University of Dublin.

4787. As schoolmaster you had no special knowledge of the working of a vessel, beyond what you got from observation. Your usual duties were to attend to the school?—Yes, I attended at the school to educate the boys, but I had practical observation of the working of the vessel, and sometimes I used to go in the boats.

4788. From what you saw, when you were at sea, do you think the course of instruction, given in this institution, is suitable for the advancement of the boys you send out?—The present course is most suitable, especially for the Merchant Service.

4789. Navigation is of no use in the Navy?—But it is very much required in the Merchant Service.

4790. Where did you learn navigation?—On board ship I was under the instruction of the Naval Instructor.

4791. You had no special instruction before that?—None.

4792. The school, at which you were educated, was not intended for a marine school?—It was not.

4793. Do you accompany the boys who are leaving to sea?—Yes.

4794. Do you go with them in the boats?—Yes.

4795. They do not receive any special instruction as to the working of steamers?—Sailors are not required to know any thing about steam vessels. There are special men for that.

4796. Are the boys at your school taught to do ordinary repairs?—Yes, such as knotting and splicing.

4797. How do they learn that?—I have books from which I show them how such things are done.

4798. There is no skilled sailor to instruct them in that department?—No.

4799. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—In addition to the teaching, you have charge of the discipline of the house?—I have.

4800. The monitor is subordinate to you?—Yes. It is her duty to see that the servants get the meals ready for the boys, and, in the morning, she inspects the dormitories and reports to me, and I inspect them afterwards.

4801. Is it her duty to see that the boys generally are of cleanly appearance?—The boys every morning fall in for inspection, and I inspect them before they commence school, and if any boy is not clean I send him to wash, in charge of one of the petty officers.

4802. The boys in the school are all Protestants?—They are.

4803. There have been some few children of mixed marriages?—Very few, two or three in my experience.

4804. Did they appear to be boys that had professed Catholics before coming in?—They were Protestant boys.

4805. What we call decoy Protestant boys?—Yes.

4806. Have you any means of isolation, in case of illness?—We have a small dormitory containing four beds, and any sick boy would be put in there; but we had no infectious case since I have been connected with the institution.

4807. If a boy took any infectious disease would he be at once removed to hospital?—I would at once apply to Surgeon Stoyly. Some time ago we thought a boy had taken scurvy, and he was removed to hospital the same day.

4808. The boys have all been vaccinated?—Yes, before any boy is admitted we require a certificate from Surgeon Stoyly that he had been successfully vaccinated.

4809. Do any of the governors look after the school from time to time?—Constantly, sometimes four or five in the week, and they frequently also bring visitors to see the school.

4810. As a rule, have you one or two every week?—The Registrar is there every day. The Reverend Dr. Campbell comes once a week, and sometimes other governors.

4811. Who keeps the minutes?—The Registrar.

[Adjourned.]

May 26, 1879.

FOURTEENTH DAY—TUESDAY, MAY 20, 1879, 11 O'CLOCK A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD; and ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., M.D.; with JAMES CREED MERRIDITH, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. Robert W.
 Griffin, M.D.

Mr. ROBERT W. GRIFFIN, M.D., examined.

4811. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You have inspected the schools of the Incorporated Society for some time past?—I have; for about eight or nine years. I have been a Governor for, I think, the last five years.

4812. You commenced inspecting the schools before you became one of the Governors?—I did.

4813. What schools did you inspect?—The Athlone and Pooles institutions, the Santry school, the Aughrim-street school, and finally I examined the selected candidates from all the schools.

4814. Do you hold these inspections regularly?—Yes. I attend at a certain period of the year, and examine the schools, the state of the buildings, and the pupils.

4815. Dr. HART.—Once a year?—Yes.

4816. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you attend upon notice given before-hand, or at an unexpected hour?—Always in pursuance of notice.

4817. Is there any other inspection of the schools during the year?—There is, by the Secretary, but not at stated times. He usually goes without notice.

4818. You do not take part in that inspection?—I do not.

4819. How is the time of the year for your inspection fixed?—It is held previous to the midsummer holidays.

4820. When did you last inspect the Athlone school?—In the summer of 1878.

4821. State the result of your inspection at that time, the number of the pupils, and the answering?—I cannot state the exact number of pupils, but the answering was of a very high class both in English and pure mathematics, and in Scriptural education the answering was also very creditable.

4822. About how many pupils did you find in attendance there?—I think over eighty, but I cannot say exactly, because I seldom take down the numbers.

4823. Do you make a report of each inspection to the Society?—I generally make a return of the answering to the Secretary.

4824. You also make an examination as to the condition of the school buildings?—Yes.

4825. In what condition are the school buildings and premises at Athlone?—They are in a thoroughly good state of repair. Whenever a complaint is made by the master as to any defect, the Governors are always prepared to execute any necessary repairs.

4826. Are the buildings sufficient for a school of the size conducted there?—Certainly.

4827. Are there any wants that you noticed, or are aware of, in the buildings?—No, I think not. The dormitories were very clean, and the boys seemed very healthy.

4828. Classics are returned by the master, as amongst the subject taught in that school. Did you examine in them?—No, I did not.

4829. That is not part of your regular course?—The masters of the Incorporated Society's schools are not obliged to give a classical education. They are chiefly English and mathematical schools.

4830. To what extent is the mathematical education carried?—The boys are able to answer thoroughly all the questions in "Tollmather's Trigonometry." They have also, for their age, a fair limited knowledge of the theory of optics. They know algebra up to the end of quadratic equations, and the senior class answer remarkably well up to the sixth book of Euclid.

4831. They have the full amount of mathematical knowledge required for entrance into Trinity College?—Far more than is necessary for entrance.

4832. What proportion of the boys attending the school have reached that amount of proficiency?—I think there were twenty-three in that class.

4833. How are the lower classes taught?—Very fairly taught. The boys in them answered very well in arithmetic, the ordinary rules of fractions and practice. They were able to perform the ordinary calculations very well indeed.

4834. Is there any instruction given in book-keeping?—Not that I am aware of.

4835. In the report of the Royal Commission of 1857, it is stated that the pupils answered unsatisfactorily in science, and that the classical instruction was also backward?—I did not examine in classics, but the answering in sciences was very satisfactory indeed.

4836. Do you examine in the ordinary branches of an English education?—I do. In geography I give them a general examination. In physical geography the answering was very satisfactory indeed. No boy in the school betrayed total ignorance of it, and some of the boys answered almost every question.

4837. Did you examine in history?—I did.

4838. What history is used?—I cannot say, because in examining a school I never limit myself to any particular text-book, and never take a book with me.

4839. What branches of history did you examine in?—Exclusively in English history.

4840. What was their answering in that?—I should say, considering the very general questions I gave, about forty per cent.

4841. Did they appear to be well instructed in that subject?—Fairly, but not so creditably as in mathematics.

4842. Did you see what their efficiency was in reading and writing?—I did, but I lay very little stress on that, because all the boys write fairly. The Secretary tests them in writing from dictation, while I am conversing to the higher branches. I cannot speak as to the results produced to him.

4843. Did you mention what proportion of their time was employed in classical studies?—I did not.

4844. Of what number were studying classics?—No; but as one of the Governors I confined myself simply within the duties of a Governor. We have, in a certain sense, nothing to do with classical education.

4845. Dr. HART.—Instruction in classics is nearly voluntary?—It is looked upon as a voluntary branch.

4846. It is left entirely to the free will of the master?—Yes, certainly.

4847. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you know, as a Governor, what the course of the after-life of the boys of the school is?—A number of them have entered college, and distinguished themselves very highly.

4848. In mathematics, or classics, or both?—Almost exclusively in mathematics. The system is this:—A number of boys are selected from each school. They were brought in former times to Aughrim-street, where I re-examined them. The best answers from amongst those selected candidates were then sent to Santry school, where they received a higher mathematical education, and then many entered college, and endeavored to obtain a science scholarship or scholarship, and they have been very successful.

4849. What number were usually brought up to Aughrim-street for that re-examination?—From seven teen to nineteen, and on our session there were as many as twenty-three examined for the places in Seaford.

4860. Do the boys who are selected for that examination come up to Dublin at their own expense, or at that of the Society?—I cannot say.

4861. What becomes of the remainder of the boys in the Athlone school?—They are, as a general rule, of the middle class, and many of them go to business.

4862. Did you examine at the Dundalk school?—I did.

4863. When did you visit it last?—I visit it regularly every year.

4864. The average number of pupils there is stated to be about sixty-eight. Was your examination in the same subjects as at Athlone?—Exactly the same.

4865. Mr. Turner is the master?—Yes.

4866. He returns the course of education in that school, as including classics, as well as all the branches of an English education?—Dr. McDonagh, who visits the schools along with me, examines in classics and Scripture.

4867. What was the result of your examination at Dundalk, as compared with Athlone?—The boys appeared to be very carefully taught in the Dundalk school. The answering in mathematics, too, was satisfactory; but, so far as I can recollect, the answering in algebra was not up to the mark last year. The answering in arithmetic was very good, and the boys appeared to have acquired considerable facility in mental arithmetic, which seemed to be carefully attended to.

4868. In the report of the Commission of 1857, with reference to the Dundalk school, this passage occurs:—

"Our Assistant Commissioner also reports that the pupils are well acquainted with the ordinary departments of English education, but that it is not satisfactory to find only two pupils learning book-keeping in an establishment so extensively attended by the inhabitants of a commercial town like Dundalk."

Is book-keeping now taught in that school?—I think not. If it were I should have been asked to examine into it. I do not think that in any of these schools they attend to book-keeping as they ought.

4869. Have any large proportion of pupils from the Dundalk school come up to college?—Only a small proportion, I should say.

4870. They are rather more of a commercial class than the Athlone boys?—Certainly.

4871. The master's return shows that the admission of free pupils is decided by the results of competitive examination?—Yes.

4872. Who conducts the competitive examination?—I do.

4873. On the same occasion as the general examination?—Yes.

4874. What amount of competition have you for the free places?—Candidates are allowed to come in from other schools in the district to compete for these places, and very often the outside boys prove successful.

4875. Is the competition vigorous?—Very vigorous. At the last examination, at Athlone, the outside boys got by far the greater number of the vacancies.

4876. What proportion of candidates was unsuccessful?—I should say fully 75 per cent.

4877. What class of boys get those vacancies?—Farmers' sons chiefly, and sometimes of a very rough class, too.

4878. When elected, do they get both board and education?—They do.

4879. Have you observed whether they profit by the education?—Certainly. I watch the progress of the boys year after year. They appear to improve vastly, not merely intellectually, but also in their moral tone and physical appearance.

4880. What has become of the boys elected in that way?—Several have become farmers and bookkeepers, and some have gone to England as such.

4871. Have any of the boys become sailors in college?—Yes, they have.

4872. Dr. HART.—Are the free boys generally amongst the most successful?—Yes, certainly.

4873. LEON JOURNÉ FERGUSON.—The master's return shows that in Dundalk school ten free boarders are admitted every year, and that they remain for three years, making thirty free boys in the house at a time, except any leave before their time expires. The master is paid 10s. per diem for the dietary, and £5 per annum for the clothing of each of the free boarders. Have you observed whether the free boarders get on well with the other boys in the school?—There is not the slightest distinction. The boys do not think of the difference.

4874. Have you found any unpleasantness in the schools where there are foundation boys?—Not the slightest.

4875. Have the boys who have got in by competition been treated as on an equality with the other boys?—Certainly they have. There is not the slightest difference made, in any of the schools I have examined.

4876. In what state are the school buildings at Dundalk?—They are in a good state of repair.

4877. Are they sufficient for their purpose?—They are; there are three large schoolrooms.

4878. The master states that the Institution is situated in a most central locality, and that the dormitories are well ventilated?—Yes; there are also extensive playgrounds.

4879. Did you examine at the Pooock Institution, in Kilkenny, last year also?—Yes.

4880. I believe it is expressly by its foundation a Protestant school?—Yes.

4881. Is there any industrial training given there?—I think not.

4882. What did you find to be the state of instruction in the Pooock institution?—Almost the same as at the Athlone school. The boys answered better in mathematics than those at Dundalk school.

4883. The master's return states that there are twenty-six boarders on the foundation, and thirty-nine paying boarders, making sixty-five altogether. In 1857, the entire number was only twenty-six. What has been the cause of this very large increase?—The present master, Mr. Brown, is a very energetic man, and has worked up the school wonderfully. He has shown much taste in keeping the buildings in repair, even on his own account.

4884. In what state did you find the English education there?—It was very good in all its branches, history, geography, and writing from dictation.

4885. Is the allowance to the master for the free boys, the same there as at Dundalk school, £5 a year for clothes, and 10s. a day for dietary?—Yes.

4886. Are the school buildings sufficient?—They are amply sufficient, and are in a thorough state of repair. The master pointed out one or two little things as necessary, when the Governors last visited the Institution, and they endeavored to have them set to rights immediately.

4887. The master states that the free boys are elected by competitive examination, to which boys of all religious denominations are eligible. That appears to be in accordance with the directions of the gentlemen who originally founded the school, especially as a proselyting institution. Did you conduct the competitive examination for the free places there?—Yes.

4888. Was there as much competition there as at Dundalk?—I think there was great competition in Kilkenny than in any other school.

4889. Did the boys who were paying pupils in the school compete?—No.

4890. When admitting boys to competition, did you take their means into account at all?—No.

4891. Did you examine at the Banagh Institution for girls?—I have not visited that lately.

4892. You have examined at the Seaford school?—Yes.

May 20, 1879.
Mr. EDWARD W.
GILLES, C.B.

May 20, 1878.

Mr. Robert W.
Cotton, Esq.

4893. The report upon that institution by the Commissioners in 1857, was as follows:—

"This is the most important of the schools under the management of the Incorporated Society, being that to which they transfer pupils selected by competition from their other schools, and in which places are obtained as a species of exhibition. It also serves as a school for training masters. We made a special visit to this school, and examined very carefully into its nature and constitution. Our Assistant Commissioner who inspected the school, reports favourably as to the state of instruction, except as regards punctuation and orthography. The internal accommodation of the building is defective, and, altogether, the domestic arrangements of the institution not in that superior condition which, considering its reputation, and the large amount of the funds at the disposal of the society, might justly be expected."

In that description applicable now?—It may have been true at that time, but lately the entire place has been put into a thorough state of repair by the Governors. We have an excellent master there, who teaches classics in addition to the subjects usually taught in the Society's schools.

4894. The master's return states that there are twenty-three free pupils at Santry, selected from the provincial institutions of the Incorporated Society. The allowance to the master for each of these boys is 11s. a day for diet, and six guineas a year for clothing. The total number of pupils in the school is fifty-five, of whom forty-seven are boarders, and eight day pupils. Do you visit Santry also, once a year?—No, I visit Santry very seldom, because the boys are sent up to Dublin for examination.

4895. Do you take any part in the examination of the boys prepared for the science and art department?—I do not.

4896. What is the result of your inspection of Santry, as to the present state of the school?—Within the last three years it has undergone a thorough change, and is only recovering, as it were, from the state of dilapidation into which it had fallen.

4897. How did it get into that state?—The late head master was, when first appointed, a thoroughly efficient man. He was a good scholar, however, he fell into a bad state of health.

4898. Are the head masters removable by the Board?—I do not think the question was ever raised, but I am almost certain they are.

4899. Is there any system of giving pensions to masters?—There is no one in which that was ever done, to my knowledge.

4900. Why was the school allowed to go so far to decay?—The Governors hoped that Mr. Allen would recover, and so they allowed him to remain on, which he did until his death, and then the Board appointed a new head master, who has revived the school very much.

4901. Did you examine at the Society's day schools at all?—Only at the one which was formerly in Augercrook.

4902. The report of the Commissioners of 1857 contains this statement in reference to that school:—

"As a late period of our inquiries we received a communication from the Incorporated Society, regarding their intention to found a large day school in Dublin, under their control and management, as a principle entirely new, in the management of their affairs, that of giving an English and Commercial Education. This school has been lately established, the course of instruction in it being English and the sciences, at a charge of 6s. combined with French and German, at a charge of 4s."

That school has been discontinued?—It was closed last year as it was found to be a failure.

4903. To what cause do you attribute its failure?—I think day schools have been more or less failures in Dublin, in all cases.

4904. This was not intended to be a high class school?—It was an English school. Those who generally attended it were the sons of artisans, but the people of a better class would not send their sons there, as they wanted them to receive a classical, as well as an English, education.

4905. Did you not find there was a demand for an English, without a classical, education?—I never found that in Dublin.

4906. What is the course taken to ascertain the qualifications of a person about to be appointed master of one of your schools?—Testimonials are sent in by the candidate, and the committee of fifteen read and consider them.

4907. The report of the Commission of 1857 stated that there was no case in which the Society had ascertained, by any special examination, the qualifications of the master, or had required any course of training. Is that so still?—Certainly. The Committee merely act on the candidate's testimonials.

4908. Were the present masters of any of your schools trained at Santry?—Yes.

4909. A very long list of successes of the pupils from Santry School has been sent in by Mr. Allen. The diamond studentship in Trinity College was gained by one of the boys?—Yes.

4910. How long had he been trained in the school?—I am not certain, but I do not think he had been at any other institution except the Society's schools.

4911. Then from the education given in your schools he was able to carry off the highest collegiate distinction?—He certainly owes much to his other training in the University.

4912. In 1875, a First Shameship was obtained by a boy from Santry?—Yes, and previously a lad from Athlone School obtained a scholarship in Trinity College, of which little notice was taken.

4913. Dr. Haughey—Santry school was tolerably successful, even during the time of Mr. Allen?—Yes. He was an excellent teacher of mathematics, and his pupils, notwithstanding the decay and dilapidation of the premises, were successful, and obtained first honours in mathematics.

4914. LORD JEWELL FRYGEMAN.—Is there any other matter to which you wish to call attention?—I wish to refer to the full liberty the boys have in these schools. There is hardly any restriction placed upon them. A statement has been made here as to the want of truthfulness of Irish boys, which I wish completely to contradict, as to the Society's schools. I found the boys, as a rule, truthful and honest, nor are there such things in these schools as drill sergeants. I have had large experience of examining at, and have been amongst the head masters and superintendents of English schools, many of the masters and superintendents of which have been pupils of my own. Within the last twelve months, three of the masters of schools, which are counted to be first class English schools, have been pupils of mine, and I have had opportunities of knowing of the qualifications, not merely of the pupils, a large number of whom came from England to read with me, but also of the teachers.

4915. You have been, for a great number of years, teaching in Trinity College?—Yes, for twenty years, and I have had experience of most of the schools in Ireland. I know all the schools in Portlinton, where the boys too had full liberty during their play-hours, and were even allowed to go into the town on their word of honour they would not purchase any thing beyond cakes, &c. I never found a case where the boys transgressed. There certainly was a drill sergeant at Portlinton, but in English schools, the moral or perfect system is carried out far more strictly than in Ireland. The word of honour of the boys are much more trusted in Irish than in English schools, where by the perfect system the boys are made detectives on one another.

4916. Do you consider that a good plan?—Most certainly not. I know schools in Ireland where the cane is never used, but the head masters are able to enforce authority, simply by their own force of character.

4917. Can you give any evidence as to the supposed preference for English over Irish schools?—I may mention as a fact that at the time the head master of a certain large college in England was reading with me, gentlemen from Ireland were accustomed to send their sons to his school. I desire emphatically to make this observation; that intellectually, morally, and socially, all the English masters that have come within my experience are in no way superior to Irish teachers.

4918. Your experience will enable you to judge of the comparative results of teaching in the English and Irish schools?—Boys who have been educated in English schools are very defective in mathematics, as a general rule. The only school I have found good mathematical men come from, was Cheltenham College.

4919. What do you say as to Irish schools?—I never met a boy from St. Columba's that knew anything about mathematics, but they appear to be fairly taught on all occasions in classics.

4920. As a general rule, where did the great proportion of the mathematical men in Trinity College receive the rudiments of their education?—I have had very good men from Exeter College and Armagh.

4921. What proportion of the students, who come to Trinity College well educated, have received their education in the endowed schools?—I should say not more than 10 per cent.

Rev. ANTHONY W. LEOP, q.m., examined.

4922. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are the chaplain of the Bethesda Orphanage?—Yes.

4923. How long have you been connected with the institution?—Eighteen months.

4924. Who was your predecessor?—The Rev. John Woodroffe.

4925. There is a school connected with the institution?—Yes; a boarding school.

4926. What is the present condition of the school?—We have, at present, twenty-nine orphans in the school; it is in a very flourishing condition.

4927. What education do they receive?—We prepare some of them as governesses. They go into the Lincoln training colleges in England. Several of our former pupils have got good situations as governesses or heads of schools.

4928. How are the candidates, who are to go up for the competition at Lincoln college, selected?—We send as many as we think likely to pass.

4929. How is the original admission of girls to the Bethesda orphanage arranged?—The most desirable ones are admitted first, as the charity was founded originally for destitute orphan girls.

4930. Is there any limit to the class from whom they are taken?—No; we take them from all classes.

4931. Is the orphanage an exclusively Protestant institution?—It is.

4932. How are the school premises held?—The school-house itself, which is close to the church, is not subject to any rent; but we rent a few rooms as dormitories, in an adjacent house, connected internally with the orphanage.

4933. What income is there for the support of the institution?—We have a charity sermon once a year, and private contributions; and we have the interest on £1,415 in the Government 3 per cents, and on £288 12s. 5d., Bank of Ireland stock.

4934. At the time of the Royal Commission in 1867, the property of the institution was then—

“Wm Smith, grant, 10th March, 1794, part of site; Lord Clifton, reversible lease, part of site; Richard Cave, will, 1803, 1830, 4,000; Lady Redcross, will, 1803, 1830, 4,000; executors of Wm. Smith, £276 12s. 5d.; Anne Deirdre, will, 1803, 27th August, 1837, 4,000; fore-going bequests included in a sum of £1,743 10s. 4d., invested in Government stock; Miss Hickey, will, 1839 10s. 3d., bank stock, producing £81 5s. annually; James Deirdre, will, house in Clifton street, subject to £3 18s. annual rent.”

Have you still got all those various endowments?—I think so.

4935. How there been any expenditure out of the 4935. Where do the other 90 per cent come from? I should say 15 or 20 per cent. come from England, and of the remainder many are from private schools; a great number have been very successful from the Wesleyan Connexion College.

4936. Dr. Haug.—To what do you attribute the large number of Irish boys going to England in preference to Irish schools?—To a preference in favour of everything English, and because the English schools are larger, and system is carried to a greater extent there, and business men in Ireland like to send their sons where they will get thoroughly business systematic habits. The larger the number of boys, the greater the esprit de corps in a school.

4937. You have prepared a great number of pupils for scholarships, bursaries, and exhibitions?—Yes.

4938. Of the class that go in for those prizes what proportion are educated in Irish schools?—Of those who obtain those distinctions more than 80 per cent. are educated in Irish schools. English teachers, who come over here to take their degrees, seldom go in for any of those prizes. They are teaching in England at the same time that they are endeavouring to prepare for their own examinations in Trinity College.

4939. Not since I became connected with the institution.

4940. Who keeps the accounts?—They are kept by a Comptroller who exercises very strict surveillance over them.

4941. What is the system by which candidates are admitted?—The Comptroller sits every month, and the applications are laid before them. Each case is thoroughly investigated, and the most desirable are selected for admission.

4942. Who appoint the members of the Committee?—The vacancies are filled from amongst the subscribers; as a member drops off the Committee appoints another. The members of it are called governors.

4943. Is it composed entirely of ladies?—Yes; but under the chairmanship of the chaplain of the institution.

4944. Are there any conditions imposed upon the admission of the orphans?—Some of them are admitted entirely free, some at reduced rates, and some, whose relatives can afford it, pay £12 a year.

4945. How many of the twenty-nine at present in the institution are free?—Six; and four others pay very reduced rates, only from £3 to £4 a year; the rest pay £12 a year.

4946. Formerly £12 each was paid for some girls, out of the Patriotic Fund. Have you any assistance from such funds now?—No.

4947. How are the payments contributed for those who do pay?—By their relatives and friends.

4948. What are the limits of age?—We admit them from seven to thirteen years of age.

4949. What teachers have you?—We have a first rate teacher—a mistress, and under her a resident governess. The children are inspected twice a year by the Diocesan Inspector of Education, the Rev. Hugh Hamilton.

4950. Religious as well as secular instruction is imparted to all the children?—Yes.

4951. What standard of instruction do your pupils attain to?—The head class must receive a very good education to pass for Lincoln training college.

4952. At what ages are they admissible there?—Seventeen to nineteen.

4953. To what age do you keep the girls?—Those who are fit for the position of governesses are kept till they pass for Lincoln College, or till they reach nineteen years of age; others not fit for such a prominent situation are sent out as servants, or caretakers to the sick, and other businesses in life.

4954. Do you find that the girls, as a general rule, get on well after they leave the institution?—Yes, very well indeed. We have had the most gratifying accounts of them; not a case has occurred, within the memory of the present committee, that would cause us to feel grieved or annoyed about one of them.

4935. Dr. HARRIS.—The funds are vested in trustees!—Yes; Sir Arthur Guinness and Mr. Stewart are the trustees.

4936. Under whose directions do they expend the money?—Mr. William Digges Latouche receives the dividends for us, and the Committee of Governors regulate the expenditures.

4937. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Does Mr. Hamilton report the result of his inspection?—Yes. He appended, to his last report, these observations:—

"For fifteen years I have inspected Bethesda, generally twice in each year, I have usually placed the school first in point of answering of all the schools under the Church Education Society, along with or above the model schools. As the girls are boarders and remain till seventeen or eighteen, the teacher has a great advantage. The answering this time was as good or better than ever, though on this is only the second inspection for Miss Coulter. I expected some falling off. I need scarce of the exercises as a specimen of what the school can do, and as a proof of what is now overlooked, that the Bible is the best planned book in the world for the cultivation of the mind. The three first girls seem afraid to try for places at Lincoln, they need not fear competition unless the examiners take looks they have not read. The older girls seem nearly perfect in their text books."

4938. Who appoints the trustees?—The trustees were elected a short time ago. Formerly the chaplain managed all money matters with the assistance of the Committee, but a few years ago it was thought desirable to have trustees, and the Committee applied to Sir Arthur Guinness and James Robert Stewart, Esqs. to accept the office, and I find in the minutes of the Committee Meeting, held on the 5th January, 1874, this resolution:—

"That the thanks of the Committee be given to Sir Arthur Guinness and James R. Stewart, Jan., Esq., for allowing their names to be placed as trustees to the funds of Bethesda Orphan School in the Bank of Ireland; and that they be entered in the books accordingly; also to William Digges Latouche, Esq., for his kindness in continuing to receive the dividends."

4939. That is the evidence upon the Government and Bank Stocks?—Yes.

4940. Have you an account of what these dividends are?—I took them from the bank book:—Yearly interest on £238 13s. 5d., Bank Stock, £28 13s. 8d., and on sums in the New Three per cents. as follows:—On £276 18s., £8 ds. 2d.; on £400, £12; on £766 5s., £22 13s. 8d., Lady Belvidere's bequest, £9 0s. 3d. Then the house in Orford-street produces £20, from which the head-rent of £7 16s. 11d. is to be deducted, leaving £12 5s. 1d. profit.

4941. How is the house in Cuff's street let?—To an annual tenant.

4942. Have you any arrangement for keeping it in repair?—We always keep it in whatever repair we are responsible for as landlords. Lastly we repaired the roof. We would be very glad to get rid of it.

4943. Your matron receives £35 a year, and 10s. a week for diet; and the governess £30, and 10s. a week. Have they a residence besides?—Yes, they reside in the house.

4944. What is the connexion of the school with the church?—Only that the usual collections made in the church are handed over, after paying the chaplain and the other church officers, and defraying the incidental expenses of the church, to the orphanage.

4945. Is there any charge upon the orphanage funds for the expenses of the Church?—None. The orphanage is not liable for any expense connected with the church.

4946. The report made on the state of this Institution, by the Commission in 1837, was:—

"The principal defects of this institution are, the want of examinations at stated periods, at which rewards should be given for proficiency, and the want of a suitable school library."

What examinations are now held?—The diocesan Inspector inspects twice a year, and I hold a weekly repetition examination myself. We give premiums for proficiency, good conduct, and general tidiness, according to the Inspector's report.

4947. The next matter mentioned on was the want of a suitable school library?—There is a library in the Mountjoy-street school-house, of which the children of Bethesda Orphanage have a right to avail themselves.

4948. The report continues:—"A larger schoolroom also is required, the present one being quite too small."—We have now got the two drawing-rooms, turned the old drawing-room into a dining room and built a matron's room.

4949. Is the house large enough?—Quite large enough.

4950. The report further states:—

"I examined the girls in reading, geography, grammar, mental arithmetic, and English history. Their answering was not what might have been expected from a school in other respects so well conducted. I will feel surprised if a different result be not attained in due time, under the present management."

Our Inspector's last report is the best answer to that.

4951. The report from which I have read adds:—

"I should observe that (so far as I was capable of judging) the needlework of the girls appeared particularly good." Are the girls still instructed in needlework?—They are. We give a prize for that every year.

4952. Who conducts that examination?—The matron and some of the visiting Governors. The needlework is really beautiful. The girls have a book of specimens—miniature articles which they manufactured themselves.

4953. In another portion of their report the Commissioners of 1837 say:—

The schoolroom, though healthily situated, and in excellent condition, is not altogether suited for its intended objects. The drawing, which is also used as a kitchen in winter, is badly lighted and small. The proportion of the dormitories, also, seem not to be sufficiently large for the number of boarders received."

The dormitories now are quite large enough and very well ventilated.

4954. The same report states:—

The school is exclusively confined to boarders belonging to the Church of England, who, at a suitable age, are either apprenticed or sent out to service and whose subsequent career and conduct are looked after by the ladies who are Governors of the institution."

Is that still the practice?—It is.

4955. To what class of life did their parents generally belong?—We have the orphans of elegance, and the orphans of a physician; in fact, they are almost all the children of respectable persons.

4956. Is there any rule requiring that both parents should be dead?—If either parent is dead we take them in. I should add that we keep a house in the country all the year round, to which we send the children for four months every summer with the governess and matron, and that conducts greatly to their health. A healthier set of girls could not be seen anywhere.

4957. That must entail considerable expense?—We have the house, which is a fine large one, at a very low rent, £12 a year, but we must keep it in repair.

4958. What do you do with it during the remaining eight months?—The owners live in and take care of it.

4959. Is the institution in debt?—No; we do not owe anything.

4960. How much is your annual income, endowment included?—It takes between £600 and £700 a year to carry on the institution, including governesses and everything.

4961. Do you include in that both food and clothing?—Everything.

4962. What rent is paid for the dormitories in the adjoining house?—£18 a year.

4983. I am surprised that the amount on which you are able to support them is so small!—They are very well fed, and as well clothed, robust children as you could meet anywhere. The dietary is very liberal.

4984. Do you give them two suits of clothes in the year!—Yes; winter and summer.

4985. The management of the details of the expenditure is in the hands of the ladies!—Yes; our honorary secretary is Miss E. Aylmer, of Rutland-square.

4986. Do you publish a report every year!—We do. [Adjourned to next day at 11 o'clock.]

FIFTEENTH DAY.—WEDNESDAY, MAY 21, 1879, 11 O'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present:—LORD JUSTICE FITZGERBON, and ANDREW SEARLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CREED MEREDITH, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Rev. ROBERT VANCE, M.A., examined.

Rev. Robert
Vance, M.A.

4987. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERBON.—You are the incumbent of St. Catherine's Parish, Dublin?—Yes.

4988. How long have you been so!—Twenty-nine years.

4989. The schools connected with that parish have some endowment?—Yes.

4990. Have you been managing those schools?—I am ex-officio Chairman of the Board of Governors which is constituted by Act of Parliament, 17 & 18 Vic. cap. XXXII.

4991. By that Act the property is vested in a board of trustees?—It is, but the 19th section enacts as follows:—

"That should Corporation shall not assume any control over ecclesiastical or educational matters connected with said parish or its schools, . . . and that the parochial schools shall, both as to the expenditure of the funds thereof and the system of education therein, be managed as heretofore under the direction of the Vicar, curate, and churchwardens for the time being of the said parish, and Benjamin Lee Guinness, esq., and . . . being the present Board of Governors, and their Successors, duly appointed Governors of the said Parochial Schools by the surviving members of the said board as vacancies by death or resignation may occur."

4992. What is your system for the management of the schools?—We have an order book, which is sent as to the Board by the master, showing what is required for the next month; if the items are approved, they are transferred to another book, the salaries &c., are added and we draw a cheque for the amount on the Secretary of the Board of Trustees who pays it.

4993. Your last return states that you have 37 pupils in the boys' school; 36 in the girls', and in the infants' an average of 40. Are the three schools in the same building?—Yes.

4994. Where is it situated?—At the corner of Thomas-court and Hensbury-lane, in the parish of St. Catherine.

4995. What school buildings are there?—The house was formerly part of a brewery, and never intended for a school; the best arrangements have been made that were possible under the circumstances.

4996. How long has it been used as a school?—For many years before my time.

4997. You have some boarders?—Yes eleven girls.

4998. Are they free pupils?—They are.

4999. Where do they reside?—In the house, the upper part of which is devoted to the girls' school.

5000. Where is the infant school?—In one of the upper rooms, beside the girls' school-room.

5001. Is the accommodation sufficient for those schools?—It is.

5002. What does your expenditure on the school come to?—The rent is £30 a year. The average cost of each of the boarders is little more than £10 a year.

5003. How are they chosen?—By the Board of Governors.

5004. To what class do they belong?—To the lower middle class.

5005. Are they exclusively belonging to the parish?—I know of none other.

5006. Are they all members of the Church of Ireland?—They are.

5007. What is the practice in filling up vacancies?—When a vacancy occurs we post notice on the church door, for a month, that a vacancy is to be filled up. Memoranda are then sent in, which are brought before the Board at its meeting on the first Thursday in the following month, when the selection is made by the majority of the Governors present.

5008. Do you keep minutes of the meetings of your Board?—We do.

5009. How many members are there on the Board?—Twelve constituting the vicar and churchwardens.

5010. How many curates have you in the parish at present?—There is not a curate at all. There were formerly two, and it is remarkable that now for the first time there is none. The reason is that the curate's salary was stopped for some cause, and until that is settled I will not appoint one.

5011. How long has there been no curate?—Only since April last.

5012. You were incumbent at the time of the passing of the Church Act?—Yes.

5013. What provision has been made with regard to your successor?—Under the doocann scheme £200 a year has been provided for the vicar, and £100 for a curate. The chaplaincy to the South Dublin Bridewell, which is in the parish, will also go to the curate. Hitherto a sum of £80 a year was paid to the curate out of the parish estate.

5014. Is that out of the estate which includes the school endowment?—Yes.

5015. To whom has that been paid?—It was paid to a curate, but it was stopped, and now there is no curate.

5016. Do the churchwardens, elected by the vestry, take their place on the Board of Governors of the school, practically under the special Act of Parliament?—They do.

5017. You have acted on the construction that the churchwardens, for the time being, mentioned in that Act are represented by those elected now?—Yes.

5018. How are vacancies on the Board of Governors filled up?—By the Board itself after notice is entered in the minute book, that we will elect to the vacancy at the next Board meeting.

5019. Are notices of the vacancies sent to all the soliciting Governors?—Yes.

5020. Who are the present Governors?—The two clergymen, the two churchwardens, Mr. Sumner, Mr. Boyd, Mr. Harford, the two Mr. Badger, and Mr. Whitist; Mr. Dixon has been proposed as a new member but is not yet elected.

5021. Has the number been made up to what it was when the Parish Act was passed?—If a sufficient number did not attend we would at once elect a new member.

5022. Is there any quorum fixed by the Act?—Not for the Board of Governors, but there is for the Board of Trustees, of whom five form a quorum.

5023. What number usually attend the meetings of the Governors?—Generally seven.

May 21, 1875.
 Rev. Robert
 Webb, Esq.

5024. The meetings are held monthly?—Yes, on the first Thursday in each month.

5025. Are summonses for the meetings sent to the Governors?—Always.

5026. Has the Board of Governors of the school a representative on the Board of Trustees of the parish estate?—No. Several of the Trustees happen to be Governors, but they are not necessarily so.

5027. Does the Board of Governors take any part in the management of the property?—No.

5028. The parish estate consists of some property given exclusively in trust for the schools, and of other property given exclusively in trust for certain purposes?—Yes.

5029. Does the Board of Governors in any way check the Trustees with regard to the property?—We do not; because we know we are receiving more than our own property produces. That property mentioned in the schedule to the special Act is producing £300 a year, and we get more than that, as our expenditure is about £350, of which sum about £50 is derived from the proceeds of a charity sermon, and the remainder, which always far exceeds the produce of the school estates, is drawn from the funds in the hands of the trustees.

5030. Are you yourself a member of the Board of Trustees?—I am.

5031. What staff of teachers is employed in the schools?—One male teacher, and one female, besides the mistress of the boarding school.

5032. Are there any monitors employed?—There are, on an average, about three to each school.

5033. Are the children who attend as day pupils all members of the Church of Ireland?—They are.

5034. Are there Roman Catholic and other schools in the parish?—There are.

5035. What is the course of instruction in the boys' school?—Reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, history, composition, writing from dictation, and Scripture.

5036. Is it entirely a primary school?—Yes.

5037. Is the course in the girls' school the same?—Yes.

5038. I suppose the infant school is preparatory for the others?—Exactly.

5039. What inspection have you got?—The Rev. Hugh Hamilton inspects the schools. He did so twice last year.

5040. He is now the diocesan inspector of the Board of Education?—He is.

5041. Are his inspections at stated periods, or does he attend without notice?—He gives notice about ten days previous, that the children may be in attendance, and the mistress and master ready to meet him.

5042. Have the clergy any stated time for visiting the school?—No, they visit at any time they please, but it is understood that once a week the curate will lecture in the school on religious matters.

5043. There is no curate at present. Is there any such instruction given now?—I have an occasional assistant, who acts as curate in that way.

5044. Is there a fixed hour for these lectures?—About one o'clock. The lectures are upon the children, or on a portion of the Bible, at the request of the lecturers.

5045. Is there a daily visit made by any of the clergy or of the Board of Governors?—There is scarcely a day that I am not in some part of the school myself, and as there was some objection made to the management of the Boarding school I generally take care to see the children at their meals.

5046. Do you exercise special supervision over the schools?—I do. My special attention has been directed to the food.

5047. What arrangement do you make as to providing the food?—The mistress is answerable for that, but we know who supplies the things, and I myself take care that they are of the best quality.

5048. By whom are the things actually ordered?—Sometimes through the mistress, and sometimes through the churchwardens, according to the different things required.

5049. Your account is made out under these headings—Food, clothing, coals and fuel, school and wages, repairs, miscellaneous?—Yes; that form was suggested that we might know the particulars of each class of expenditure.

5050. What was the expenditure for each month in 1875?—January, £28 17s.; February, £21 0s. 6d.; March, £20 10s. 3d.; April, £23 3s. 1d.; May, £20 1s. 11d.; June, £20 4s.; July, £26 8s. 4d.; August, £24 13s. 8d.; September, £19 5s. 10d.; October, £28 10s.; November, £18 12s. 5d.; December, £21 6s. 3d.; making a total expenditure of £231 16s. 3d.

5051. Do you give the boarders one suit of clothing in the year?—I think there are two suits given—one for the summer and one for the winter.

5052. How was the payment you mentioned, of £500 a curate, made?—The School Board had nothing to do with that.

5053. But it came out of the parish estate?—It did.

5054. Is there any other Church school, for primary education, in the parish?—The only other school is a National Model school, which is within three minutes' walk of our own school.

5055. Is there any difference in the class of children attending your school and those attending the Model school?—Perhaps a very slight shade of difference; the higher, if there is any difference, would be at the Model school.

5056. I presume the teaching there is somewhat higher, too?—I think so; but I have examined a class in which there were children from both schools, and I could perceive no difference in their answering; I think they are equally well instructed.

5057. Do you examine the children in the parish schools yourself?—I have sometimes done so, but I prefer that it should be done by a stranger, as either the parents or the children might object to my doing it.

5058. The report on the school in 1857 contained this statement—"There is no playground, and no in grounds are allowed for recreation." I suppose the buildings are in the same condition still?—They are, but there is an interval allowed for recreation. The playground is only a yard, and the children in consequence often go into the graveyard, to which objection is made.

5059. Has the old graveyard been laid out so as to be fit for a recreation ground?—They could have recreation enough if they would abstain from injuring anything, but children of their age cannot be kept from running over the tombstones and graves.

5060. Is there any arrangement made to send them out for exercise?—No; the children of the male and female schools have each half an hour in afternoon, and between the yard and the graveyard they spend their time. The boarders, however, are taken out to walk when the weather permits, under the supervision of the mistress, Miss Mills.

5061. Have you a ladies' committee to help in the management of the schools?—We have no such committee at present.

5062. The report of 1857 also states: "It is also to be observed that no proceeds are given to the children for proficiency in learning"—£15 a year is now given for that purpose.

5063. In the same report I find—"The kitchen is out of order, and requires a thorough repair, and the washing accommodation ought to be improved"—That has been remedied.

5064. What state of repair is the house in now?—It is in a dangerous position. Some persons wanted to build a new house, as the present one can never be made a proper school, partly because there is no recreation ground; but I intend to make the most of it in the way of repairs, but not to rebuild.

5065. Do you propose to look for another site, when the present house cannot be repaired any longer?—Certainly, I had it in contemplation, when I first went to the parish, to erect an entirely new school, extending along the whole length of Thomas-court from the Church to Hanbury-lane, but that plan was interfered with.

5046. When you advertise vacancies as existing in the boarding school, have you much competition for them?—We have had three or four applicants for one place, but as a general rule we have no great competition.

5047. Are all the children at present in the school orphans?—All but one are orphans.

5048. You give a preference to orphans?—Certainly.

5049. You stated that the children are of the lower middle class?—Yes.

5050. Were their parents connected with the parish?—Yes.

5051. Do your rules require that the parents must have been resident in the parish for any length of time?—No, we do not require any particular length of residence, but we look to the circumstances of the family. If the breadwinner has been taken away, and the mother is not able to support her family, we have great consideration for her.

5052. At what age do you admit the children?—It is only in exceptional cases that we admit them after nine.

5053. Up to what age do you retain them in the school?—Fourteen.

5054. That would practically give you only two vacancies each year?—That is something about what we have.

MR. HENRY C. ALLEN EXAMINED.

5061. LORD JUSTICE FRYER.—You are the Secretary of the Board of Trustees of St. Catherine's Parish?—Yes.

5062. Do you keep the account of the portion of the property that belongs to the school, distinct from that of the other portions of the parish estate?—Yes. I have the rental here which shows on the ancient parish estate twenty-one lots. On the Widows' Almshouse estate (Bignold's charity) seven lots, and on the schools estate seven lots, and then there are thirteen items under the heading of "Dividends and Legacies of School's Estate."

5063. In the schedule to your private Act of Parliament, 17 & 18 Vic., cap. xliii., No. 114, Thomas-street is returned as in the occupation of representatives of F. Egan, under a lease dated 25th October, 1867, for a term of forty-one years, at the yearly rent of £45. That lease would have expired on the 25th October last?—Yes. It is now out of lease, and unoccupied.

5064. At the date of the Act of Parliament, No. 114, Thomas-street was held by the same tenants under a lease dated 29th March, 1834, for 41 years, at a yearly rent of £55 7s 6d. That lease expired in 1875. The house was burned down, and No. 114 was in such a state of dilapidation that it had to be taken down. We have no tenant for those premises at present.

5065. Was there any insurance on the premises?—Yes; we received close on £1,000 from the Insurance company.

5066. What was done with that money?—It is invested in Government Stock.

5067. Does that appear in your accounts?—No; because no dividend has accrued upon it yet.

5068. When did the fire take place?—In June, 1877.

5069. When was the money received?—Only a few months since. The policy had been handed over to the National Bank by the tenants, Mercer, Kerr, & Co., as a security; and we found great difficulty in recovering the money. The insurance company was prepared to pay; the bank, however, claimed a lien upon the money, but ultimately they waived their claim, and we were paid.

5070. Have you taken any steps towards rebuilding those premises?—Not yet. We have advertised

5071. What arrangements do you make for the provision, in default, of the children educated in your schools?—We used to bind them as apprentices, but we have changed our system. They preferred being sent out without being apprenticed, as they were generally anxious to get some little wages, and we thought, as a general rule, it would have a better effect upon them. When apprenticed they did not seem to care whether they gave satisfaction to their masters, but when receiving wages they studied more what would appear to please. Before sending them out we make every possible inquiry as to the duplicity of the masters.

5072. How are they employed?—At drapery or as servants. Lately we sent some of them, whose families were there already, to Australia, and they are getting on very well.

5073. Last year you sent one out. Your accounts show an expenditure for her outfit?—Yes.

5074. You do not send them to Australia unless they have relations there?—No. The girl who was sent out last year had two sisters there already.

5075. Do you continue to watch over the conduct of the children that remain in Dublin, either at business, or as servants?—Certainly; and sometimes we receive very gratifying intelligence of them.

5076. Is there anything else about the state of the schools you would like to mention?—I do not think there is. We are striving to make the best of what is an unenviable building, and also to make the most of our means.

them, and we hope to obtain a tenant who will either rebuild the premises himself, or enter into such an agreement as will induce us to devote the insurance money, and some other funds we have on hand, to the purpose.

5091. I observe that your leasing power is limited under your Act of Parliament. What steps have you taken in reference to letting your property?—We have announced that we are prepared to give a building lease, but we will be obliged to apply for power to do so, and show that it would be an advantage to the property.

5092. The next item in the Schedule to the Act is Nos. 106 and 107, Thomas-street, held by the representatives of Robert Powell, under a lease of 31st Oct., 1791, for 150 years, at a rent of £34 3s. Is that rent at all in arrears?—There is only a half-year's rent due.

5093. The Schedule to the Act states that Nos. 54 and 54A, Thomas-street were held for forty-one years from 1631, at £92 6s 3d. That lease expired in 1872. What rent do you now receive?—We let No. 54 at £80 a year to Michael Egan, and No. 54A to Michael Mintoagh at £30 a year, and the rent has been let for £50 more. Egan and Mintoagh were the tenants in actual occupation at the fall of the old house, and we made lettings direct to them; Mintoagh's rent being the same he was paying to our former tenant.

5094. Then in place of £92 6s 3d. you get £110?—That £92 6s 3d. had been reduced to £82 6s 3d., so that the increase has been very considerable.

5095. How were these lettings made—from year to year or on lease?—A forty-one years' lease was given in each case.

5096. Those leases were under your own leasing power?—Yes.

5097. What steps did you take to value the property?—We did not procure any valuation; but Mr. Egan's offer of £80 a year was very fully considered by the members of our Board, and deemed to be the full value of the premises.

5098. To whom was the rent let?—To the Rev. Mr. McManus, who took a plot of ground that had been covered with ruins, and converted it into a playground for the children of the school. The only building upon it is a shed, which answers as a shelter to play under in wet weather. He has also laid out money in building a boundary wall along the Holywell road.

5009. Has he a lease for forty-one years?—Yes.

5105. The Schedule states that No. 116, James's-street had been set by lease, dated 6th February, 1846, for forty-one years, at £73 15s. 11d. That lease has still two years to run?—It is very difficult exactly to determine the number of those premises. The rent is paid by Messrs. Maunders. The premises were formerly portion of an old barrack, but now form part of the brewery premises, and are chiefly used as stables.

5101. There was also a lease of No. 117, James's-street for ninety-nine years, dated 4th June, 1788, at £6 6s. 2d., which is still unexpired. What premises are comprised in that lease?—A house and house which will be valuable when the lease expires, in eight years' time.

5102. No. 118, James's-street was let from year to year, to the representatives of Byrne, at £81?—Yes. Byrne was a hardware, and took Nos. 118 and 119 at £8 each.

5103. That seems a very small rent?—Those houses have got no rice whatever, and are very small.

5104. Rose Meehan, tenant from year to year for No. 120, James's-street at £9 4s. 8d., appears to have been there in 1854, and she now owes £11 11s. 10d.?—There was an outstanding arrear due by her before I became the receiver, and she was promised a reduction. She died a short time since, and her daughter now holds the house, which is a very shaky concern.

5105. Is there any business carried on in it?—She has a small mill-shop, and lets lodgings.

5106. That does not appear to be a very well-served street?—No. She finds it hard to pay more than from £1 to £1 5s. each quarter.

5107. No. 121, James's-street, which is now let to John Miller, at £10, was formerly let at £8?—The present tenant is a working shoemaker, a very poor man.

5108. No. 122, James's-street is now let at £10?—Yes; but that is in reality two houses. There is a half-year's rent due on that holding.

5109. No. 123, James's-street appears to be let to two tenants, H. Field and M. McEvoy, at £11 a year, and there is an arrear of £6 12s. 1s.?—Field does not owe any portion of that. It is all due by McEvoy.

5110. No. 124, James's-street appears to be now let at £12 a year?—Yes, these small houses all of the same class?—Yes, little shops with one room over.

5111. They are in the hands of yearly tenants?—What do you do about the repairs?—We have to keep them in repair, which costs a good deal.

5112. Have you tried to make more permanent lettings?—No. There have been frequent negotiations on the part of the churchwardens, and parishes generally, of St. James's to purchase our interest in these houses for the purpose of knocking them down to display the site of the church.

5113. I presume you could hardly do that?—I believe legally we could not sell them, unless they gave a sufficient sum to make good the loss of the houses.

5114. Your rental shows a holding described as "Church extension," let at 2s. 6d. a year, and states that there is 17s. 4d. of that rent due?—That has been since paid.

5115. What is that for?—It is a nominal rent for a very narrow strip of ground which was at one time an adobe, and which the Rev. Thomas Kingston, asked for, when making the new entrance to the church.

5116. Is this the piece of ground mentioned in the Schedule to the Act as "Waste ground, formerly parish engine-house of St. James's"?—Yes.

5117. It appeared on the Schedule to the Act of Parliament, in 1854, that No. 5, Lower Bridge-street was let for 51 years from 7th November, 1845, to Richard Coffey, at a rent of £45; that No. 6, Lower Bridge-street was let for 31 years from 22nd October, 1847, to Hugh Huston, at £40, and that No. 7, Lower Bridge-street was let for 41 years, from 19th September, 1848, to Michael O'Donnell, at £45. The lease of No.

6 ought to have expired on the 22nd October last?—Coffey now holds the three houses, and, I think, under one lease.

5118. At £130 a year?—It is not entered as £130, but as three sums, viz., £45, £40, and £45, making the total of his rent £130 a year.

5119. The Schedule to the Act of Parliament shows that premises in Francis-street were let on lease for ninety-nine years from 1788, at £42 18s. 6d.?—The circumstance of that holding are at present under consideration. Mr. Wardell bought the premises from the former tenant, and has sent in an offer, accompanied by a specification of a new building, which he desires to erect. He is willing to pay £65 a year for a new lease instead of £42 18s. 6d., and, I believe, would pay even a larger rent if he could get a longer lease, which, I believe, Mr. O'Brien is trying to arrange with the Charitable Commissioners.

5120. The Schedule also shows that premises in Bridgefoot-street were formerly held by John Darcy, at £95 a year, for forty-one years from 19th March, 1834, which lease expired on the 29th March, 1875, and that premises called Mullinshack were held at £49 a year, for forty-one years from 27th April, 1840, the lease of which will not expire till 1881. In your present rental these are entered in one lot, as held by John Darcy and Son, at £240 a year. How was that income obtained?—A proposal was made by Mr. Darcy for a new lease at, I think, £130 a year, and subsequently he obtained the valuation of Mr. Thomas Fitzgibbon, who valued the premises at £250, but as the lease of the Mullinshack holding had some years to run the trustees thought it was due to Mr. Darcy to accept an amended offer made by him, of £240 a year.

5121. Was the lease given to him a forty-one years' lease?—It was.

5122. No. 70, Patrick-street was formerly let on a lease that expired on the 24th June, 1872, at £24 a year. That house is returned in your rental as now let at £250?—That is so.

5123. The former rent was reducible to £50 in case of general payment. Has a new lease been made?—Yes, to John Collins.

5124. How did you fix the rent in that case?—£30 a year was the rent we were in the habit of receiving for that house.

5125. The rent payable out of Nos. 71 and 72, Patrick-street has been reduced in the same way?—Exactly.

5126. Nos. 18 and 19, Hanbury-lane, now held at £15, by Mrs. West and James Pennefather, were formerly let at £13 to tenants at will. Are the present occupants tenants from year to year?—Yes.

5127. No. 37, Thomas-court was returned in the Schedule to the Act as let to the trustees of the Month Loan Fund Board, as tenants at will, at £15 a year?—The Month Loan Fund Board only occupy one room in the house; Mr. Hamilton, who is the sexton of the church, occupies the remainder.

5128. What rent do you receive for that house?—The Month Loan Fund Board pay £15 a year.

5129. Is that a charitable institution?—It was originally, but it is not so now.

5130. The list of the investments, mentioned in the Schedule to your Act of Parliament, is £1,890 Grand Canal stock. Have you got that still?—Yes; that was a legacy under the will of Thomas Pennant?—£38 7s. was the last half-yearly dividend declared on it by the Grand Canal Company.

5131. Is that the same stock which was returning only £18 18s. a year in 1854?—Yes; but it is subject to fluctuations, according to the success of the company.

5132. The next item in the Schedule is a Belfast Office debenture, valued at £93 6s. 2d. 1s.?—We have that still, and it produced £3 11s. 4d. last year.

5133. You also had in 1854, £369 4s. 7d. and £335 2s. 4d. Government stock?—We have those investments still.

5134. The next item in the Schedule is an annuity, under the will of Matthew Neary Mahon, of £20 a year?—That is regularly paid.

5135. The Schedule stated that you also derive an annuity of £41 2s. 4d. under the will of Henry Metcalf?—Mr Metcalf left some house property amongst a great number of charities. That property has been managed for some time past by Mr. Hayes, of College Green, who, whenever he has any sum in his hands worth dividing, allocation it amongst them in their proper proportions.

5136. Have you received any money from him recently?—Yes; not very long since.

5137. Does it come to £4 12s. 4d. a year?—No; I do not think it comes to so much as that.

5138. Then there is Miss Carey's annuity of £10, five shares in the Mount Jerome Cemetery, and £44 8s. 2d. Government stock, under the will of Allen Tudall?—We have all those still.

5139. You have got some additional property since 1856?—Yes. Deane Bryan, by will, dated 29th August, 1857, gave to the minister and churchwardens of the Established Church, for the time being in care of certain parishes, of which St. Catherine's is one, £250 to such for a Sunday and daily school of the Protestant Church of England in each of the said named parishes. That sum of £250 was paid to the trustees and invested in £25 4s. 2d. Government stock. It has been transferred to the corporate names. Samuel Warren, by his will, dated 27th September, 1871, gave £106 7s. 5d. Government stock, which has also been transferred, and John Abbott, by his will, dated 19th December, 1869, left £167 14s. 5d. Government stock.

5140. Your parish school is also entitled to a share of the Southwell annuity?—Yes, that is £1 2s. 2d. a year, and arises out of property divisible amongst fourteen parishes, of which St. Catherine's is one.

5141. Your last rental shows an arrear on foot of that annuity of £3 17s. 4d. meaning, does, how does that happen?—That has been since paid.

5142. There is £10 returned as due in respect of the legacy under the will of Thomas Plummer?—There is always an arrear of £10 due on that account.

5143. By whose is that money paid?—By Mr. Charles Unwin Townsend.

5144. Your account shows that you received during the last half-year 2005 17s. 5d., which was lodged in bank after deducting poor rate allowed tenants, £38 7s. 2d.; income tax, £6 3s.; receipt books, 4s. 6d.; and commutation at 5 per cent, £28 4s. 5d.; making a total deduction of £63 2s. 8d. You act as agent and receiver for the trustees of the parish estate?—Yes.

5145. The arrangement is that you get 5 per cent.?—Yes.

5146. Do you collect the rents yourself?—I do.

5147. Do you account half-yearly?—Yes; and taking my two accounts for the year 1878 together, they show that the gross amount received from the ancient parish estate during the year was £748 4s. 8d.; from the Widows' Almshouse estate, £150 12s.; and from the schools' estate £219 9s. 6d. The deductions for poor rate, income tax, collector's postage, &c., were from ancient parish estate, £86 12s. 11d.; from Widows' Almshouse estate, £23 3s. 1d.; and from the schools' estate, £117 18s. 3d.; making a total deduction of £213 14s. 5d.; and leaving a net balance of £535 12s.; to which was added the proceeds of charity sermons for the schools, £39 14s., making an income of £1,015 8s. The expenditure during the year on the ancient parish estate was, £269 4s. 7d.; on the Widows' Almshouse, £189 11s. 5d.; on the parochial schools, £378 12s.; and for church and church officers, £141 11s. 1d.; and £18 5s. was paid as subscriptions to certain religious societies, leaving a balance to credit on the year's account of £216 3s. 7d.

5148. Of what did the expenditure for the ancient parish estate consist?—£30 was my salary as Secretary, and the remainder was chiefly for repairs on the house property.

5149. Mr. Vance stated the expenditure on the parish schools was £331 14s. 3d.?—That was the amount actually paid by the trustees on the quarterly orders, but the account I have given, £378 12s., includes £30, the rent paid for the school house, and for the two houses at Haulbury Lane, which are part of the school estate, as well as small sums for repairs, &c.

5150. Church and church officers are put down at £141 11s. 1d.—what is that?—That would include the sum paid to the second estate.

5151. In what right was that payment made?—In consideration of visiting and superintending the parochial schools, in accordance with the provisions of the 15th sec. of the Act of Parliament.

5152. When was that payment discontinued?—The trustees declined to pay the quarter's salary up to the end of March. Mr. Vance paid that quarter himself, but there has been no sum since.

5155. The duty of the trustees is to pay, in consideration of visiting and superintending a sum not exceeding £100 a year, provided they are satisfied of the discharge of the duties. That manifestly was not intended to set down the curate to £100 a year. He was to have his salary besides?—A special arrangement was made when Mr. Bradshaw came to the parish a few years ago, that, provided a curate was appointed who was approved of by the trustees, they would pay £87 10s. of his salary in consideration of his visiting and superintending the schools, and that Mr. Vance should pay him £25 10s. That was carried out while Mr. Bradshaw continued to be curate. After he left the Rev. Mr. Radcliffe came, and he received at the rate of £75 a year from the trustees. And the Rev. Mr. McNeill, who also visited the schools, got £13 10s. as an augmentation allowance. There were then two curates, but after a time Mr. Vance, I believe, dismissed Mr. McNeill. At any rate Mr. McNeill left. Since then Mr. Radcliffe has also left; and now there is no curate in the parish.

5156. What is the mode by which the accounts of the trustees are paid?—I say before the Board, at each quarterly meeting, an estimate prepared from a comparison with the estimate of the previous year, and the addition of any other sums which I know are to be paid, and that is subject to correction and revision by the trustees. Then I get a cheque payable immediately for whatever sum may be estimated as necessary for general disbursements during the ensuing quarter, and I also get three cheques for the schools, one dated for each ensuing month, and a separate cheque is drawn for the Widows' Almshouse, which I always indorse at once, and hand over to Mr. Whitall, who is one of the Board of Trustees.

5157. Those cheques are not drawn in blank?—No; the sums are filled in from the estimates, submitted from the School Board, of what amounts will be required. The cheques are drawn for those sums, but they may vary when I come to pay them.

5158. Is that balanced with the next payment?—Yes; I am charged with the amount of the cheques I get, and I take credit for the payments I make.

5159. Under the Act of Parliament the expenditure of the trust funds can only take place at quarterly meetings of the Board, at which five members are present, and must be made by cheques signed by the Chairman and two other members. Have you a good attendance at your Board?—We can have no Board unless we have five members present, and we have scarcely ever had to adjourn for want of a quorum (sometimes we have more than the necessary five present).

5160. Do the trustees furnish to the Ordinary of the Diocese, or his Vicar-General, such accounts as are required by the Act?—Not now. We do not now account to any person outside our own trustees. The visitation returns, which have ceased to be made, formerly afforded a kind of audit.

5161. What is included under the item in your parish estate accounts for church and church officers?—The account for 1877 gives fuller particulars than I can give, of the expenditure under that head. It is, Rev J. B. Radcliffe, £75; Rev J. G. B. McNeill, £9 7s. 6d.; assistant curate, £6; organist, £31 5s.; H. Ridgway, Bible-reader and parochial visitor, £12; bell-ringer, £3; sweeping round the church, £4; organ-lower, £4; allowance for winding and keeping the steeple clock in repair, £5.

5162. There occurs in the parish estate account this item: "Subscriptions to societies, £18 5s." Are these subscriptions authorized by the trustees?—Certainly.

5164. There was, besides, the payment to the curate?—The figures I have given are only those charged to "The schools." The other payment was entered under the heading of "Church and Church officers."

Mr. George
O'Brien.

Mr. GEORGE O'BRIEN, examined.

5165. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are the solicitor to the Trustees of St. Catharine's Parish?—I am.

5166. You have prepared a draft report on the property of the Board?—Yes. It has been partly written. I was asked by some of the trustees to prepare a statement of the history of all the property which they administered, and in that the objects of the different charities are fully set forth.

5167. What means had you of ascertaining the particulars mentioned in your report?—I went to the different wills and charities, and copied the exact words of each donation.

5168. What means have the trustees of preserving their title deeds and books?—They are deposited in an iron safe, and have been lately examined by Mr. Henry Roe, by whom the key of the safe is kept. A schedule of them has been prepared, and they are now in most perfect order. They contain some very ancient documents, including charters of the reigns of Edward II. and Henry VIII.

5169. Have you been able to ascertain whether the parish property has been preserved in its entirety? Unfortunately, my introduction to the Board was in consequence of an offer made by Rev Mr. Vance to sell to the Board the 500-weights of the house No. 77, Thomas-street. At that time the leading trustees did not attend very constantly, but since then another turned up, they have attended very punctually, and Mr. Cecil Guinness, Mr. Roe, and Lord Mount have devoted much time and attention to the affairs of the Board. The Board came to the conclusion that the house was the property of the trustees, and refused, therefore, to purchase it from Mr. Vance, the vendor, who then actually sold it to Mr. Wardell, and under the advice of counsel the Board have brought an action in Chancery against Mr. Vance, Mr. Wardell, and the Commissioners of Church Temporalities, for the recovery of both Nos. 65 and 77, Thomas-street.

5170. Is that action pending?—Yes. The statement of claim has been served, the Commissioners of Irish Church Temporalities have filed their reply, and Mr. Vance has got the time for filing his reply extended for a month.

5171. The claim is, in fact, by the Board against a clerical representative of the Dissentist Church?—Yes.

5172. If the Trustees fail in showing that the houses they claim formed part of the parish estate they will belong either to Mr. Vance or to the Church Commissioners?—Just so.

5173. If the trustees succeed the effect will be to increase the parish estate by the rental of those two houses. Has the rest of the property, so far as you have been able to trace it, been preserved?—I think so.

5174. You are not a member of the Board yourself?—I am not.

5175. The almshouse was, I believe, founded by private charity?—It was.

5176. Your report states:—

"The school must have been supported by subscriptions, or from other sources outside the income of the parish, as administered by the vestry, and that the school must then have had means, as it appears from a resolution in the Vestry Books, under date of 6th September, 1777, that a sum of £400 was advanced on loan by the subscribers, to the curate, churchwardens, and vestry, to aid them in the expense of re-building the Church, and the interest upon this loan appears for several years in the churchwardens accounts as being paid by them to the schools."

Was that loan repaid?—I could not follow it further than to find in the Vestry Books that they repaid the money to the schools, but I could not find out what was done with it afterwards. I know nothing of the management of the schools. The trustees said that they have nothing to do with the schools except to pay the money as it is required.

5177. Your report also mentions the omission of the payment, out of the funds of the trustees, to the curate?—Yes. The trustees were under the impression that the duties were not discharged.

5178. Have they, on that account, suspended the payment?—Yes. In point of fact, they discovered that they exclusively were paying the salary of Mr. Radcliffe, and that Mr. Vance was paying him nothing. They felt that their duty was only to make an addition to the salary of a curate, for acting as inspector and visitor of the schools, and not to pay the whole of the salary of the curate for the parish.

5179. Have you been concerned in the making of any leases for the trustees since you became their solicitor?—Yes. Wardell's lease of premises in Francis-street is now pending. The circumstances are these: the premises run back into a large establishment that Wardell has in Thomas-street, and are therefore very valuable to him. He was assignee of a house for 99 years, having eight years to run, and he proposed to surrender that lease and take a new one at an increased rent. The trustees were advised by Mr. Barnes what the increased rent ought to be, having regard to the fact that the existing lease had still eight years to run. Mr. Wardell obtained the advice of Mr. M'Condy, and the result was that it was arranged that Mr. Wardell was to get a lease for 41 years, at a rent of £45 a year, and to undertake to expend £1,000 upon the premises, which was a substantial advance. The trustees then discovered that they had the power, through the Commissioners of Charitable Dues and Escheats, to make a lease for a longer term, and Mr. Wardell is now getting a valuation and report as to what increased rent he should, under the circumstances, give for a lease for 200 years.

5180. Such a lease cannot be executed without the concurrence of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—The whole matter must be fully brought before them, and the trustees propose for the future trying to administer their trust in that way.

5181. It is very wise in the case of house property to give long leases?—Yes, especially in the districts in which the property in question is situated.

5182. The report is addressed to Lord Mount, Mr. Edward Cecil Guinness, Mr. Henry Roe, Mr. John Bailey, Mr. James Henderson, and Mr. John Bennett, a Committee appointed by resolution of 17th October, 1878. Are these all active members of the Board?—They are.

5183. Are they all connected with the parish?—Yes. They all have the qualifications required by the Act of Parliament, namely—to hold premises of the value of £30 in the parish, and to be Protestants.

5184. It is a Protestant charity?—Exclusively.

5185. We heard from Mr. Allen that one of the houses belonging to the trustees was burned down. Are you aware of the facts connected with that house?

—Yes. Messrs. Mercer, Kerr, and Co. held that house and the adjoining one under lease which had some years to run. There had been a proposal before the trustees for the surrender of those leases and the grant of new ones, upon the terms of the tenants making certain expenditure upon the premises, but they became bankrupt. One of the houses was burned down, and the other was in a state of dilapidation. An insurance for £1,000 had been effected by the tenants upon the house that was burned, and the National Bank claimed a lien upon the policy, but the Judge of the Bankruptcy Court decided against them, and the £1,000, less by the costs of the Assurances, was paid over to the trustees.

5186. What has been done with that money?—It has been invested together with about £2,000 of other moneys which belonged to the Board, in the Government funds, in the corporate name; and £360 surplus of the rents in hand is lodged on deposit receipt.

5187. The £3,000 is in addition to the sums set out in the schedule to the Act?—Certainly.

5188. Are the funds all now invested in the corporate name?—They are, and to see the usual shares and debentures.

REV. JOHN JAMES MACGOWAN, M.A., examined.

5189. LEAD JUSTICE FRINGHAM.—You have been for a long time the senior curate of St. Peter's parish, Dublin?—Yes.

5190. How long have you been connected with that parish?—About thirty-five years.

5191. You are the senior Governor of Finsbury's Hospital?—Yes.

5192. That institution is situated at No. 75, Lower Castle-street, Dublin?—Yes.

5193. Its endowment appears to consist of £30,535 6s. 3d. three per cent. Stock?—Yes.

5194. In whose name is the money invested?—It is lodged in the Court of Chancery.

5195. Of what buildings does the institution consist?—Of the old dwelling house of Mr. Finsbury.

5196. Is it subject to any rent?—Yes, £39 10s. 6d. per annum.

5197. What extent of land have you about the house?—Only a garden.

5198. How is the governing body constituted?—It is composed of three Governors, who, under the will of Mr. Finsbury, must be curates in the city.

5199. Who are the present members of it?—I am the senior, Dr. MacMahon, who was formerly curate of St. Werburgh's, and Mr. Flannery, who was formerly curate of St. Michael's and is now chaplain of the prison, are my colleagues.

5200. The position of Mr. Finsbury's will relating to this institution is as follows:—

"And the £15,000 that I purposed to give to . . . I leave and bequeath to a use that my ever beloved Willy frequently spoke of and wished to set on foot, an institution for the maintenance, clothing, and appropriate education of poor orphan Protestant girls (nursing but Protestants) in some house of industry that would be likely to qualify them to earn a livelihood after their stated time to remain in the school had expired, such as knitting, sewing, but making, or whatever could be thought upon to be the best, and I would have imagined hope of its success after the planning and superintendence of Rev. John Woods (wonderful man) of Belfrage, and aided in the execution by my executor, Mr. Joshua Puley, and Mr. Samuel Cooper, who I rely on it would give all the assistance that their knowledge would enable them and their time permit them to do. The income of the £15,000 is £900 a year, besides what (if the institution succeeds) may arise from the profits of what they may manufacture."

Then the duty of the Governors is prescribed, and the will continues—

"And for the use of said school and for no other use or purpose whatsoever, I bequeath my house in Castle-street, No. 65 (subject to the rent, taxes, and repairs, which I beg may be all regularly attended to), with the stable, other offices, and garden, most devoutly desiring that there may not be any alteration made in the house, but what will be indispensably necessary for the adapting it for a school; an apartment above for the mistress to sleep in, and one below to eat in, and occasionally sit in, to be lived upon by the Governors, and such furniture for each as may be suitable and efficient. And I strictly desire that the house be no altered in any instance whatever, that no stable, cow, or other beast of anybody be ever situated into it, and that it be constantly continued to be used, so it has been by me, to put my furniture, lumber, or other matter belonging to the house into, that the dwelling-house could not successfully hold; it may serve them for washing in, and the beds for drying their cloths in wet weather. In fine weather the garden is to be in their place, and not only for drying and bleaching their cloths in, but for walking in for the benefit of their health. As for the having any vegetables in it for the use of the house, everything can be had at market much cheaper. I therefore desire that the water may be constantly kept in order, and that the pear and apple trees, and those against the wall, and the pear-trees be let to remain while time permits. . . . that the borders and all the rest that is not already so, be dug and laid under grass, the custom not to have any exchairs right in it, nor is the use anyone else to put down to some in it a flower or vegetable of any kind whatsoever, or any sort of fruit trees, but it is to be kept up under the false assumption of my intention. The age for admitting the girls I shall leave to the discretion of the Governors. They are to be of sound Protestant stock by father and mother-side, and the wholesome character of their constitutions and their dispositions and conduct should be strictly inspected into."

Bride's parish to have the preference, Peter's the next, and afterwards from any other, on the producing an authentic certificate (subject to the approval of the Governors) from the mistress, master, and church warden of St. Peter's parish to be always proportioned to the fund. The first for continuance I also leave to the Governors. I wish it to be well properly maintained, and then to be watched by a real Protestant, some other, and if any of them should be in any tolerable degree appearing fit to make a husband's wife, I would prefer a female; the portion to be according to his and her merit, not to exceed £200, said portions to be paid out of the interest of the richness of my fortune, whatever it may amount to after discharging my debts of all sorts."

Then, after provisions as to excluding persons guilty of immorality, the will continues—

"This is the best way that occurs to me of disposing of said endowment. I have no question of those whom I have appointed my executors during the date of this will, and most sincerely hope that all who succeed them may follow their example and not be led away to support foolish and extravagant by expending funds, on a narrow cause, and yet call themselves Christians, and go to church."

Then the testator enumerates a large number of articles of furniture which he directs should be returned for the use of the school?—All of which we have still.

5201. The will also provides—

"That the £15,000 which I have left to it may be deemed at the rate of six per cent. to produce £900 a year, and to be always forthcoming out of the most immediately answering part of my property at the time of its being wanted, and as that sum may not be enough to meet the different demands, I hereby give in addition to it £200 a year, to be always also given out of the most responsible and best paying security, the two sums making £1,100 per annum, £100 a month, which I hope will be sufficient for everything—for rent, taxes, repairs, incidental matters, salaries, servants' wages, remunerations to the visitors, and for the clothing, maintenance, and education, in as respectable a manner and condition, as many as the house can conveniently and healthily hold; and I particularly request the attending to the most valuable part of education—that of the heart."

Then, after making an alteration as to one of his trustees, and providing £100 a year each for them, the will continues—

"I say that it is to be no precedent, that of their successors being to be but £50, and a pious thing too, as I shall explain Now their successors are always to be persons of approved conduct, and willing to undertake the office, and who have little or no means but their curacy, too often the case. £20 a year for 52 weekly attendances, for a few hours each visit, will be an easily earning, no contemptible addition to the Church income. And I would have from the commencement or opening of the school two female visitors also, widows as little incumbered with family as possible, and pre-eminently sought for amongst the widows by the Royal Canal or any other bad luck, and who have not in any shape been instrumental to their misfortunes by feebly living beyond their sphere, extravagance, idleness, &c. When two of proper character are left on, they are to have a month's trial, and if found not qualified as to capacity, they are to be paid at each, a pound a week, their occupations being to be the same as those of the curate, and others are to be looked for. No remuneration in their favour to be heard or have any effect. The interest of the establishment I entrust any over be looking object, and when a choice is made, whether of two or one, it must always be by the unanimous voice of the three trustees, and they are to visit regularly, not work about—no excuse except allowed by the trustees; it is not allowed to get that week's pound. One month's illness absences to disqualify any visitor, male or female, more further attendance, and no pay for that month. A new election if such an event should be, but I shall enjoy the thought that they will not. Unlike schools with people inclined to shew, and I will not suppose any of them, at either sex, to undertake the trust but in the true spirit of it."

The property turned out better than was expected, and you get over £30,000 instead of £15,000.—You 5202. How are the trustees appointed?—When a vacancy occurs the two remaining trustees appoint another.

5203. The will provided that the trustees should be curates. Your two colleagues are not at present acting as curates?—They are not so now; but they were curates at the times of their appointments.

5204. You are to attend weekly. Is that direction carried out?—Yes, our Board meets every Thursday, and, besides that, some of us are frequently there during the week.

5205. What number of boarders is there in the school?—We have at present fourteen.

5206. What staff of teachers is there?—We have a first class resident teacher, a visiting French master, a visiting music master, and a visiting drawing master; one of the trustees teaches the Scripture and catechism.

5207. It is not now an industrial school?—No.

5208. The will appears to contemplate that the girls should earn their own livelihood?—I am aware of that; but, from the beginning, the trustees that Mr. Monahan appointed elected exactly the class of children that we are desiring, and sent them out as governesses. We still educate the girls as governesses, giving them the very best education we can. One of our pupils a few days ago obtained a first class certificate at the Trinity College examinations.

5209. In the report of the Royal Commission of 1867 there occurs this reference to the Institution:—

"The education given in this establishment is quite of a superior character, and such as will well qualify the pupils to become teachers themselves. They read remarkably well, (scarcely better than in any school which I have yet visited), and their knowledge of geography and history was most satisfactory. The only defect to which I would allude, has reference to the training devoted to the school, and which (being somewhat old-fashioned) does not afford that amount of accommodation and convenience which could be desired. This has in a manner arisen from the provisions of the testator's will, which directed the school to be held in the dwelling-house occupied by himself, and that same should not be altered further than was indispensably necessary to adapt it for a school. For some years after the testator's death the institution was conducted in conformity with the directions of his will, and the inmates received an education of the industrial character specially designated by the terms of that document. Upwards of twenty years ago, however, the system was entirely changed, and since then the girls admitted into the asylum have been educated in a superior manner, so as to fit them to discharge the duties of literary governesses, their domestic future occupation. Since that change took place, the rule has been that the girls are permitted to remain in the Institution until they are provided by the governors with situations as governesses in respectable families, with salaries of not less than thirty guineas a-year each. On leaving the asylum, each girl gets £20 for an outfit, and an additional sum of £10 is put in bank for her use, to be handed over to her when the governors consider it for her benefit to do so. Thus, an institution founded for the purpose of teaching girls some branch of industry, which would enable them to earn their livelihood in after life, such as knitting, straw hat making, &c., and fit them particularly to become farmers' wives, has been by the acts of the trustees converted into a training school for governesses, and no longer retains a vestige of that industrial character, so solidly and positively indicated by the instrument of endowment. It was explained to me by the governors (at whose weekly Board meeting I was present), that the system originally adopted and pursued in conformity with the Testator's will, was found in practice not to work well, and that in particular, the prevalence in the will, entitling the girls to receive a fortune not exceeding £300 on their becoming farmers' wives, and giving the agricultural class a preferential right to their hands, was most objectionable, and exposed these young women to the suspicion of the community, and especially of the hostile parties thereof; nay, further, it was stated to me that as one occasion a rough peasant (curious enough) had actually invaded the asylum as a Coffee-street, and ordered the travelling ladies to be passed before him in order that he might from the array appropriate a fitting spouse for his rural home. However this may be, and although the governors were (I have no doubt), actuated by the best motives in altering the character of the establishment as they have done, it is yet quite evident that the Institution, in its present condition, presents an aspect not only different from, but completely opposed to the objects and expressed intention of the founder."

What is the present mode of selecting candidates?—Applications, which are generally very numerous, are sent in, and we select the candidate we consider the best suited for the education we afford.

5210. What are the limits of age for admission?—Between eight and twelve.

5211. How long do you keep the girls in the Institution?—We have no limited time; but send them out as soon as they are fit to act as governesses, and that we can get reliable places for them. The eldest of those we have in the house at present is about 18, and she has been seven years in the Institution.

5212. Your average number of vacancies would be something less than two in the year?—Yes.

5213. Do you give public notice of the existence of vacancies?—No; we have always plenty of applications.

5214. What steps do you take to let it be known that an election is coming on?—We do not take any.

5215. What class of persons usually send in applications?—Respectable widows, sometimes the widows of professional men and civil servants.

5216. You do not require that candidates should have lost both father and mother?—No.

5217. Have ever you admitted any girl whose father was living?—Never.

5212. How is it, that with an income of £214 a year, and a house subject to less than £40 a year, you are only able to maintain fourteen orphans?—We have out of that income to pay three governors, and two matrons, in addition to the other expenses of the Institution.

5213. You still appoint two matrons?—Yes, we are obliged to do so, under the will of the founder.

5214. Are they also teachers?—No. They visit the house, look after the children, and superintend all domestic affairs, and we find them very useful.

5215. What do they receive?—The two matrons and the three trustees or governors get, in accordance with the provisions in the will, £48 per annum each, provided they attend regularly.

5216. Your accounts for 1878 show that your total receipts for the year, including a balance of £112 7s 9d from the previous account, £300 on a deposit receipt, and a legacy of £17 2s 9d from Miss La Touche amounted to £1,235 12s 2d, out of which your payments were—governors, £144; visiting matrons £98; resident matron £35; resident teacher, £52; music master, £40; drawing master, £45; French master, £25; physician, £10 10s; dentist, £5 5s; milk and vegetables, £56 2s 9d; meat, £247 11s 8d; groceries, £53 7s 4d; bread, £19 18s 2d; coals and candles, £22 11s 7d; washing, £31 0s 6d; rent and insurance, £40 4s 6d; house repairs, cleaning, &c., £31 2s 2d; clothing, £40 1s 4d; furniture and repairs, £4 19s 4d; servants' wages, £31 11s 1d; medicine, £5 8s 1d; Chancery stamps, &c.; school requisites, £3 13s; stationery, postage, &c., £5 0s 2d; library, £16 7s 2d; and choice books, £1 5s; leaving a balance for the next account of £146 14s 2d, and £300 on deposit receipts. Do not the girls do any of the business of the house, as the will appears to contemplate?—No. They practise housewarming and needlework, to fit them for the position they are to occupy in life.

5217. How are the visiting matrons selected?—By the governors. They must be widows. The present ones, who have been acting for a long time, are the widows of clergymen, which, however, is not necessary.

5218. How often do they attend?—Weekly.

5219. I observe, from the minutes, that, on some occasions, disputes were drawn paying those ladies in advance. How has that system arisen?—It is not our usual system to do so. I do not think it occurred more than once. We have a special rule against it, and when it was asked for of late we absolutely refused it.

5220. There was some illness amongst the girls last year?—Yes.

5221. It appears that, as soon as the girls could be removed, after that illness the house was painted and cleaned internally, but the minute does not state any authority for doing that necessary work. What steps do you take to check the expenditure on repairs?—Everything is done under the immediate direction and supervision of the governors themselves. The house, being a very old one, requires more repairs than most houses.

5222. What duties do you require the visiting matrons to perform?—Certainly not much. They look after the girls' clothing, purchase the materials, and see that they are properly made up. They also look to the details of the housekeeping, give directions to the resident matron, and exercise a general superintendence over the whole establishment.

5223. Do they keep any minute, or requisition, book to be laid before the governors from time to time?—Yes; there is a Ward Book which is laid before us whenever they require anything, and we take any suggestion they make into consideration.

5224. What was the largest number you ever had in the Institution?—I think the largest number in any time has been fifteen.

5225. And what was the smallest?—I think twelve.

5226. The passage I read from the report of 1857 may be still regarded as a description of the Institution?—Yes.

5227. We could not carry out the expressed intentions of the founder locally. Street beggary making would now be beggary. They could not make it a day at that.

5228. The founder did not confine girls to street-begging making. He appears to have intended that it should be an industrial school?—I suppose our predecessors thought the next best thing was to educate them in government. We did not originate that, as you are aware.

5229. There is a great difference, too, in the class of children who receive the benefits of the charity?—Yes. We consider that there are many schools for the class for which, possibly, the charity was originally intended, but that there are very few for the children of professional and other respectable men when left in distress. I prefer the arrangement of selecting the children from that class in preference to a lower class, such as we have, for instance, in our parish schools.

5230. What number of applicants had you for the last vacancy?—About a dozen.

5231. How many could your house accommodate?—The house is so small and unsuitable that we could not accommodate more than we have at present. It was even under a protest from the doctor we took in the last one.

5232. The testator, by his will, enabled you to alter the house so far as might be necessary?—Except we pulled it down, and rebuilt it, nothing really useful could be done. Some time ago a lady in Belfast—Miss Fehris Bennett—into whose hands a portion of Mr. Plummer's property—the Zenith House, as it is called—had come, wished that we should have it. It was about £100 a year, with an accumulation of about £1,500. However, there were some proceedings in Chancery, and the Master of the Rolls decided to give the property to the Cook street Fever Hospital. We, actually, had got plans prepared, intending to expend that money on our present premises.

5233. Have you been successful in all cases in training the girls, and finding situations for them?—We have had more than average success. All the girls have turned out well.

5234. Are they allowed to remain in the Institution until they actually get situations?—Yes; except they leave at the special request of the mother. When a girl goes into a situation we provide her with an outfit.

5235. Do you publish any report?—No; we have no one to present it to.

5236. How many of the children now in the school are from St. Bride's parish?—I do not think there is one from St. Bride's at present. One left recently. I think all those in the Institution at present are from St. Peter's parish.

5237. Have you acted on the direction in the will to give a preference first to St. Bride's, and then to St. Peter's?—Since I have been a governor I have carried it out literally; but it had not been much regarded before that, as there were girls in the Institution from all parts of the kingdom.

5238. How many resident teachers have you?—One.

5239. Without saying that you are answerable for it—for the will is a very peculiar one—the result of the matter is that there are, in fact, a staff of ten to manage the education of thirteen or fourteen girls?—Yes.

5240. Three governors, two matrons, one resident matron, one resident teacher, a music teacher, a drawing teacher, and a French teacher?—That is so. The first five are not required by the will.

5241. It appears quite plainly from the will that Mr. Plummer intended to supplement the income of three estates, and to make a provision for two widows out of his property?—Yes. When the subject of the Institution was before the Master of the Rolls, some time since, he said that the governors and visiting matrons were just as much a part of the Institution as the girls who were educated there.

May 31, 1878.

Rev. John
J. MacMahon,
M.P.

5247. How are the accounts kept?—They are very accurately kept. We have not a secretary. Formerly there was one, but we now move the money which he used to receive, as well as the fee which was formerly paid to our solicitor for drawing the Chancery dividends. We discharge those duties ourselves now.

5248. Do you take any part in the teaching and examining of the children?—Yes; we are the examiners. Dr. MacMahon is the catechist, and teaches Scripture and catechism regularly. Mr. Fleming looks after the money, and keeps the accounts, and I take the secretaryship and write out the minutes.

5249. Your accounts show that you have £200 lodged in bank on a deposit receipt. Have you any other accumulation?—We have no accumulation whatever. The money on deposit receipt will be necessary to meet our current expenses until the dividends come in next July.

5250. You do not get your dividend till the 6th July, so you must carry forward £200?—Yes.

5251. On the accounts for 1878 you had a balance in your favour of about £30?—Yes, but when a girl leaves she usually gets an outfit. The only girl, however, who left last year went at the request of her mother, and in such a case we give no outfit.

5252. The accounts for washing and clothing are very high, and then there are servants' wages?—Formerly a maid in livery was kept, as the original minute book shows, but no such thing is done now.

5253. You have been reducing the expenses?—We have.

5254. It appears from the books of the Institution that in 1837 needle and drawing were taught?—Yes, we have continued the same class of teaching that was arranged by our predecessors.

5255. You keep your account in the Bank of Ireland?—Yes, and in order to make as much as we can on our dividends we do not immediately lodge the sums of them to our current account, but place a portion each half-year on deposit, for a time, thereby getting some small interest.

5256. Looking to your minute-book for 1856, I find that large sums were at that time given to girls as gratuities—£50 to one, £34 to another, and £16 to another. Do you still give girls sums of money in that way to start them in life?—No, that custom has been discontinued.

5257. Your account for 1878 shows a legacy from Miss La Touche of £17 3s. 9d., and interest thereon from 1873 £1 6s. 7d. Any such legacies usual?—No; that was a legacy left for the special purpose of purchasing books for the library, and the expenditure of it in that way appears on the other side of the account.

Rev. Robert
Fleming, M.A.

Rev. ROBERT FLEMING, M.A., examined.

5258. LOAN JEWELL FREECHURCH.—You are one of the governors of Flemons' Asylum?—I am.

5259. When were you elected a governor?—In September, 1871.

5260. What position did you hold in the Church at the time of your election?—I was curate of St. Michael's, and remained so until Mr. Roe got possession of the church for the purpose of erecting a Synod Hall.

5261. Since that time what post have you held in the Church?—I have not had any curacy, but I am chaplain to the Mountjoy Government Prison, and also to the County of Dublin Prison.

5262. Are you resident in Dublin?—I am.

5263. Have you attended regularly at Flemons' Asylum?—Yes. It is my habit to go through the house every Saturday.

5264. When was Mr. MacMahon elected?—I do not know exactly. He was a governor some years before my election.

5265. He was formerly curate of St. Werburgh's?—Yes, and continued so until Mr. McCarthy got that living. He is now an instructor at the Training School, Marlborough street.

5266. Is he also resident in Dublin?—He is.

5267. You look after the money and keep the accounts of the asylum?—I do. I generally write up the accounts every week.

5268. How do you check and vouch the expenditure?—We have a visit book, which is examined by the visiting matrons before it is submitted to the Board, and they state in that what things are required.

5269. How do you ascertain whether you are charged too much for goods supplied?—We get in our servants every three months, and check them. We have a kind of contract with a butcher to supply the house with beef and mutton, according as it is required, at so much per pound. The account is checked in the first instance by the visiting matrons.

5270. Who checks the management of the household?—The visiting matrons. They look very sharply after the clothing and furniture, and all things that are necessary, and report to us. If there is anything wrong they also report it.

5271. What is the staff of servants in the house?—A cook and a housemaid. The account charged under the head of servants' wages in last year's account includes payment to a charwoman who was employed for a time during the illness of one of the servants.

5272. Is there any regular time-table both for meals and teaching?—No, there is no time-table kept.

5273. What hours are kept in the school?—In winter the younger children are allowed to remain in their beds half an hour longer than the older children, who rise at half-past six. Then they have paynes and breakfast.

5274. Do they all breakfast together?—Yes. They are in the school-room from ten till about one o'clock, when they have half an hour for play.

5275. There is a piece of ground attached to the house?—Yes; considering it is in town, the garden is large.

5276. Is there any arrangement for the girls taking regular exercise?—Yes; they go out for a walk every five days with the teacher, for about an hour.

5277. What vacations do they get?—One at Christmas, a very short one at Easter, and one in summer.

5278. Do they go home to their parents for the vacations?—Yes; but some of them, occasionally, remain in the house: when they have no relative to go to.

5279. Could you tell what was the position in life of the father of each of the children in the school at present?—Not of all. I know one was in the Civil Service, and another was a doctor.

5280. Had he been resident in St. Peter's parish?—He had during his entire professional life, and the child himself was born in the parish. We do not consider a late comers into the parish as a parishier in such a sense as to entitle him to election.

5281. Must the child have been born in the parish of St. Peter?—Either in St. Brigid's or St. Peter's.

Captain George
S. Dyer, M.A.

Captain GEORGE S. DYER, M.A., examined.

5282. LOAN JEWELL FREECHURCH.—You desire to make a statement with reference to Flemons' Asylum?—I feel a deep interest in the education of the poor, and I am in the habit of visiting a great number of schools from time to time. I pass Flemons' Asylum almost daily. I have had a good deal to do with the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, and whilst there on one occasion I found that Archbishop Lee, the present incumbent of St. Peter's, the parish in which Flemons' Asylum is situated, had, some years ago, addressed a letter to the Commissioners stating that the inmates were not of that class of paupers that the trustees intended. I also found that Mr. MacDonnell, one of the secretaries, had written to the Hon.

Mr. MacDonell, on the 8th January, 1863, drawing his particular attention to the words "poor" and "manufacture" in the will, and that Mr. MacDonell had testified that the trustees had followed the example of these predecessors from the beginning. Now that is entirely opposed to what the report of the Endowed Schools Commissioners in 1857 states. I also learned that on the 3rd December, 1848, Mr. MacDonell wrote to Archbishop Lee stating that the Commissioners had asked the trustees of the charity to take advantage of the second section of 30 & 31 Vic., cap. 34, giving them power, if they had any doubt or difficulty about the proper mode of conducting the charity, to go before a judge in Chancery and ask his opinion, but that they had not availed themselves of the power.

5283. Can you tell us anything of the state of the Institution?—I see the inmates from day to day as I pass by, and I perceive they are not at all of the class that the trustees intended to benefit. The inmates, however, of the Female Orphan House, on the North Circular-road, one of the class for which the charity was intended.

5284. In 1857 it appeared that the directions in Flensted's will had not been followed in that respect, but the girls seem to have been poor when elected?—

REV. ALEXANDER LEITCH, D.D., examined.

Rev. Alexander
Leitch, D.D.

5285. LORD JUSTICE FRYER.—I believe you are now the incumbent of a union of three of the old parishes in the city of Dublin?—Yes, St. Andrew's, St. Nicholas Within, and St. Michael's.

5286. There is now no church of St. Michael's or St. Nicholas Within?—No.

5287. St. Nicholas Within has had no church for a long time?—No; but, when I went there, service was held, on Sundays, in a top room of the old school-house in Nicholas-street.

5288. St. Michael's church was removed, and the site is now that of the Synod Hall?—Quite so.

5289. In St. Andrew's parish the old church still remains?—Yes.

5290. Have you one school building or three?—We have actually three school buildings;—one in St. Andrew's, in which a Sunday school is held, and in which the master of the united school resides; a school-house in St. Nicholas Within, where one of the mistresses resides; and a large school-house, lately adapted, of St. John's and St. Werburgh's.

5291. Besides the union of which you are Incumbent, there is also a union of the parishes of St. John's and St. Werburgh's?—Yes.

5292. They had separate schools also?—Yes; but the schools of the five parishes are now united.

5293. How long is it since that union was completed?—A little more than a year.

5294. Where is the united school held at present?—In the old denary house of Christ Church in Fishamble-street.

5295. In there no school, now conducted in any of the five united parishes, representing the old parish schools, except the one in the denary house?—There is no other daily school. We have our distinct Sunday schools.

5296. Where are the St. Andrew's school buildings situated?—In St. Andrew's-arch, close to the church.

5297. Where is the old school-house of St. Nicholas's parish situated?—In St. Nicholas-street.

5298. Is there any school building for St. Michael's parish?—None.

5299. There are school buildings in St. Werburgh's adjoining the church?—Yes.

5300. How are they used at present?—As a residence.

5301. What was the property belonging to the schools in St. Andrew's parish?—It is all detailed in our various account-books which are here.

5302. In 1857, amongst the endowments returned

They are not of the description of persons to make straw bonnets, and so on. The testator distinctly says they are to be taught in some branches of industry that would likely qualify them to earn a livelihood after the stated time they are to remain in the school, such as in straw bonnet making, and fit them for working farmers' wives.

5293. Did you visit the school?—I did, on three occasions, and so far as I saw it, was creditably managed. The only addition they have made to the house is that they have built a very nice school-room, beside the dwelling-house, which was most necessary.

5294. What was your observation as to the girls themselves?—They are most steady and well-behaved as they go along the streets. They have not much of an effect to the school. Perhaps the Commissioners will allow me to express my opinion of the general want of recreation grounds, at such schools, in Ireland. To the Bethesda Orphanage, for instance, there is none at all, but the children go to the Rotunda Gardens. In England we never have a school without an outlet.

5295. Indeed you have? The old Charter-house is a very good instance of it?—Such a want exists, I know very well, and there is also a great want of promoting games in those schools.

by the Royal Commission as belonging to St. Andrew's parish schools was Southwell's bequest, then producing an annual income of £1 4s. How is that received?—We get it from the churchwardens of St. Werburgh's. It now produces only £1 2s. 3d.

5306. The other funds belonging to St. Andrew's, at that date, are stated in the same report thus?—

* Principal sum of £371 12s., now I pay out costs, now producing an annual income of £17 3s.; Tisdall's bequest, £46 5s. 3d., producing an annual income of £1 10s. 3d. The £371 12s. stock is the residue of direct bequests and donations made, from time to time, for the benefit of the school. A tablet or board, placed in the porch of the church records the names of the benefactors to the school, and the dates of their respective bequests and donations, amounting to £1,494 10s. 3d. It appears that from time to time the governors drew on the principal of the above funds, until ultimately they were reduced to the amount of £371 12s., now I pay costs."

What amount of stock now belongs to the school?—We have altogether £1,100 stock, including some which belongs to our almshouses. I cannot separate the amounts accurately. A few years ago Mr. John Vasey gave us £100, which was invested. I think the amount belonging to the schools is between £700 and £800. The interest the united schools received last year, from money in the funds, belonging to St. Andrew's, was £21 17s. 8d.

5307. In whose name is that money invested?—In the names of the minister and churchwardens of St. Andrew's.

5308. Prior to the passing of the Church Act the minister and churchwardens were a corporation. How have you been able to get the churchwards since?—They regard me as one of the older clergy.

5309. Were you incumbent at the time of the passing of the Act?—Yes; I have been so since 1859.

5310. The accounts show an annuity called Mrs. Carey's charity, amounting to £4 12s. 6d. How is that secured?—I get that from the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests.

5311. St. Michael's Schools formerly enjoyed Alderman Quinn's legacy, £3 8s., Southwell's, £1 6s.; Batchelor's, £6 10s.; Tisdall's, £1 10s. 3d.; and the rent of a house in High-street, £1 3s. 4d. Are those monies still available?—Although the schools received those sums, they had no real claim to some of them, as they were given originally to the poor of the parish. As many of the poor children got a portion of bread every day at the school, that was thought to be a proper allocation of the money. This certainly was the case with both Quin's and Batchelor's bequests.

 Lupton, &c.

5312. What has become of the rent of the house in High street?—It may have been some house connected with the old church, but I never heard of any such rent. I made inquiries of the former rector, and he knew nothing of any such endowment.

5313. The Report of the Commission in 1857 contains this further statement as to St. Michael's schools:—

"It appears that in 1846 the schools were possessed of two sums of £281 10s. and £360, respectively, Government Stock, which were sold out in that year, and produced £597 10s. 4d. cash. This sum was expended in the year 1845 in building the school-house in churchyard, which cost £493 9s. 3d., the balance being advanced by the Treasurer." Do you remember that school-house?—I do distinctly.

5314. It has been taken down?—Yes; Mr. Roe, I heard, was allowed whatever the value was. It was probably allowed for in the building of the Synod Hall. It was sold, I understand.

5315. Sold by whom or how?—I suppose the church owned it. All churches and school-houses are vested in the Representative Body.

5316. Your school ought to have a claim for this if there was any money. Do you know what became of any claim there was for a school-house, or whether there was any?—I do not know at all. I may say there is a property, connected with St. Michael's parish, vested in trustees, who had the power of paying a sum to the church. They were not, I believe, bound to expend the money in any particular parochial way; but I understand they contributed largely to building that school-house.

5317. What became of those trustees?—They exist still, and their property has been transferred to the Representative Body. I get an allowance every year from them.

5318. Could you tell us who the trustees are?—Mr. Charles Beier, Mr. Morrison, and Mr. William Digges La Touche.

5319. Do you know the origin of that trust?—A property which was a very small one originally, but is now a valuable one, was given to trustees for parochial purposes.

5320. It was probably the old parish estate?—That may be. The trustees always to give something to the clergy of St. Michael's. The same practice was continued after I took charge of the parish.

5321. Was there any trust for the schools upon that property?—None; but I understand that the trustees built the school-house.

5322. Was there any property belonging to St. Nicholas Within?—That parish was also entitled to a share of the Bentwell bequest, which produces £1 2s. 2d. per annum, and it has some money in the funds, which produces £3 6s. 3d. each half year.

5323. Does that money also stand in the names of the minister and churchwardens?—Yes.

5324. Were you originally appointed incumbent both of St. Andrew's and St. Nicholas Within?—Originally I was appointed only to St. Andrew's. Then St. Nicholas Within was added, and finally St. Michael's. I ought, perhaps, to say that from the time I went to St. Andrew's there was no school-house at St. Nicholas Within, but that parish paid £15 a year to the Governors of St. Andrew's schools for teaching their children.

5325. Has the bank recognized the churchwardens, in paying these dividends, once the disestablishment of the church?—Yes, our churchwardens have occasionally received the dividends.

5326. By stating themselves to be churchwardens?—As churchwardens of the parish.

5327. What evidence do they give of their appointment?—I am not aware.

5328. Has any practical inconvenience arisen, up to the present, from any question as to the appointment of churchwardens?—Not the slightest. In one case, some time ago, part of the funds of St. Nicholas Within stood in the names of "The chaplain and churchwardens," and the authorities of the bank did not admit the chaplain's position at all, but they did that of the churchwardens, who received the money accordingly.

5329. Is there any other property you know of in connection with St. Andrew's, St. Nicholas Within, or St. Michael's?—No.

5330. How is the management of the united schools conducted?—We have a Board of Governors, including the clergy, churchwardens, and three representatives (generally chosen from the Select Vestry), of each parish.

5331. Have you an Act of Parliament as they have in St. Catherine's?—No; St. Catherine's is, I believe, the only parish in Dublin which has a special Act of Parliament.

5332. Your schools are returned as having an attendance of 176 day scholars?—Yes; they are remarkably well attended.

5333. The pupils make a payment of one penny a week each?—Yes, as a rule, they do.

5334. Is there any rule that the school shall be a denominational one?—I know of no such rule, but it practically is so.

5335. Are there schools of other denominations in the district?—Yes; there is a National boys' school connected with the Roman Catholic church, attended by about 500 boys.

5336. What teachers are there in your schools?—A master, a mistress, and two mistresses in the infant school.

5337. What salaries do they receive?—The master of the boys' school has £70 a year; the mistress of the girls' school, £40; the mistress of the infant school, £40; and the assistant mistress in the infant school, £25; they also get allowances for coal.

5338. Are these primary schools?—Altogether; but still the boys are taught Euclid and algebra.

5339. How do you arrange for the inspection of the school—is it in connection with any Board?—No. The Rev. Hugh Hamilton is the diocesan inspector, and we employ him.

5340. Have the clergy themselves any rules as to visiting the schools?—No; but they are visited by them very regularly.

5341. Is there sufficient accommodation, in the building, for the children of the five parishes?—Excellent accommodation, and a good playground.

5342. Some of the teachers of the schools which existed prior to the amalgamation were pensioned off?—Yes, one of the teachers received a pension. Mr. Downey, master of St. Andrew's boys' school, was appointed master of the united boys' school; Miss Bagrell, mistress of St. Werburgh's girls' school, was appointed mistress of the united girls' school; Miss Hyson, mistress of St. Andrew's infant school, was appointed mistress of the united infant school; and Miss Moore, mistress of St. John's infant school, was appointed assistant mistress of the united infant school.

5343. Had your parishes of St. Andrew's, St. Michael's, and St. Nicholas Within any lease property?—Yes, St. Andrew's has a house in Ship-street, which produces about £30 a year, but it did not come into our hands until lately, for when the school of St. Nicholas was closed, long before my time, the master was superannuated, and got £30 a year as a pension, and when he died, about two years ago, we got the money.

5344. How is that house held?—I am not aware. The occupier had a lease which expired about three or four years ago.

5345. The occupier still pays the same rent?—Yes. That has altogether with the churchwardens.

5346. The report of the former Royal Commission showed that some money belonging to St. Nicholas' parish schools had been invested in house property, yielding £225 per annum?—I suppose that is the same.

5347. Who collects the rents?—One of our churchwardens, Mr. J. W. Gwent, who is also one of the school Governors.

5348. How have been any attempt to make the house?—No. It is occupied as before.

5349. Is that the only fixed property you know of belonging to the three parishes of which you are the incumbent?—I think so. We have the three success—what we get from this house, from the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, and from the funds.

5350. I see you are able to collect a good deal of money to supplement that?—Yes. I generally collect about £100 a year. We could not get on at all without subscriptions. The amount of stock is small.

Rev WILLIAM G. GWENT, A.M., examined.

Rev. William
G. Gwent, A.M.

5351. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are the incumbent of the united parishes of St. John's and St. Werburgh's?—I am.

5352. According to the report of the Royal Commissioners in 1867, St. John's schools were entitled to an annuity under the will of James Southwell, to a sum of £262 11s. Government Stock, to a sum of £181 10s. 6d. lent to St. John's parish, at interest, and to house property held from the Dean and Chapter of Christ's Church for 41 years from 1846, subject to a head-rent of £40 a year, the entire income amounting to £74 5s. 6d. from houses and land, and £30 10s. 9d. from money. What is it now?—Since the amalgamation of the schools the accounts have all been kept together; before that our accounts were kept by Mr. Maffett, who was the treasurer for the schools, and also the agent.

5353. The first item in Mr. Maffett's account in 1877 is "Cash received, out of Roman Catholic chapel of St. Michael and St. John for one and a-half years, £93 13s. 1½d." Are you the landlords of the chapel?—Yes.

5354. How is it held from you?—I really could not tell. It has been held since long before my time.

5355. Who has the title deeds of the school property?—Mr. Maffett had them until yesterday, when they were handed over to Mr. Hughes, who has taken the charge of them. They are at the school at present.

5356. The next item in Mr. Maffett's account is, "The representatives of the Rev. Michael Blake and others, the rent of the chapel house for one and a-half years, £37 5s. 7½d." That is the chapel-house of St. Michael and St. John's?—Yes, I believe it is held under a similar tenure with the chapel itself.

5357. Mr. Maffett also received one year's rent of 19, West Essex-street, £201?—Yes; that is let to a Mr. Taylor by lease.

5358. Have you any holdings belonging to St. John's Parish Schools beyond these two chapel holdings and 19, West Essex-street?—Yes, there is the old school-house of the parish, No. 1 and 2, St. John's-lane, which is let in tenements at weekly rents. There has been no variation in the property of the schools since the last Commission. Of course we have to pay head-rent for the property.

5359. You have a share of Southwell's bequest?—Yes, £1 2s. 3d. per annum.

5360. What provision did you make for the school-mistress of St. John's on the amalgamation?—We gave her £150, portion of some money which we had had by out of our funds.

5361. Have you done anything towards investigating the deeds and books which were handed over by Mr. Maffett?—Some of them go back to 1630. They were inspected into some years ago, but we could not make much out of them.

5362. Do you know anything about property belonging to St. Werburgh's Parish schools?—Very little, and I do not think anybody does, except that since the former Royal Commission Mr. Justice O'Brien's house in Stephen's-green was proved to be school property, and the rent received for it is now paid over to the schools.

5363. We have been informed that the Commissioners of Church Temporalities have given up all claim to the ancient parish estate of St. Catherine's. How have they acted as regards St. Werburgh's?—I believe the same thing will be done with regard to St. Werburgh's, except as to a sum of £645 in the funds, which they claim as Church property.

5364. Can you tell us the particulars of the feoffed property which belongs to St. Werburgh's schools?—The interest we received last year from the invested money of St. Werburgh's, in addition to the specific bequests of Southwell and others, was £37 5s. The property of St. Werburgh's parish got into very great confusion indeed, but it is now in hands, and will be looked after.

5365. What is your title to your present school-house?—It is in the hands of the Representative Body, having been transferred to them, with the church, by the Church Temporalities Commissioners.

5366. Though originally a dairy-house, it was used as a parish school-house at the time of the disestablishment?—Yes, and had been so for many years before that.

5367. How is it kept in repair?—By ourselves.

5368. Is it sufficient for the numbers attending it?—It is very old, and requires a good deal of outlay, but it is a very fine house, and the school-rooms are very good. We spent a considerable sum of money upon it, when we opened the joint schools for the two parishes.

5369. Do you look after the schools yourself?—I have a class there twice a week.

5370. Have any of the other clergymen made a similar arrangement?—Mr. Hughes also has classes regularly, and so have Dr. Leiper and Mr. McCready occasionally.

5371. What do you teach in your own classes?—First are Scripture classes, but I sometimes take a class in secular lessons, just to see how the children are getting on.

5372. Is the teaching good?—It has been excellent; but for the last three or four months Mr. Downey has been unwell, and, though he has provided a substitute, the teaching is not so good as it was when he was there himself. We hope to have him back again very soon, and I am certain that the school will then move on.

5373. Where did you get your teachers from?—Mr. Downey, Miss Bagnall, and Miss Byrne were all trained at Kildare-place. Miss Moore is not a trained teacher, she is only an assistant.

5374. Your schools are not in connexion with the National Board?—They are not in connexion with that Board, or with any Society. Both in St. Andrew's and St. John's there were formerly boys who used to receive one suit of clothes in the year, and their breakfast every day, but, of late years, that has been given up; we, however, are trying to revive it again, in the shape of giving premiums for regular attendance.

May 21, 1879.
Rev. Samuel
C. Hughes, M.A.

REV. SAMUEL C. HUGHES, M.A., examined.

5375. LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—What is your official connection with the united parishes?—I am curate of St. Werburgh's and St. John's.

5376. You act as hon. Secretary to the schools?—I do.

5377. From what parishes do the children who attend the united schools come?—Three hundred and ten was the entire number on the roll during 1878; of these 170 were from St. Werburgh's and St. John's; 90 from St. Andrew's, St. Nicholas Wilton, and St. Michael's; and 59 from the surrounding parishes.

5378. It is practically a parochial school?—Yes.

5379. To what class do the children belong?—Nearly all are the children of poor parents.

5380. The district is a very crowded one?—It is.

5381. Do you receive children of the poorer class?—Yes, and we give all who need it daily bread at their play hour, twelve o'clock.

5382. Are the children who attend all Protestants?—No. There have been about six Jews attending during the year; and, in the infant school, two or three Roman Catholics came for a few months, and then left.

5383. Do you ever attend at the school yourself?—Yes. I have a class in Scripture and catechism, once a week, in each of the three schools.

5384. Do you examine the children to test their progress in their secular education?—I do.

5385. You have an arrangement for giving the children prizes?—Yes, but, because of their poverty, the prizes frequently consist of clothes. Forty-five children, having an attendance last year exceeding two-thirds of the number of days on which the school was open, received suitable clothing; and six others, having an equally good attendance, but not requiring clothes, were awarded books.

5386. This school obtained second place, amongst the schools competing at the exhibition held by the Association for Promoting Christian Knowledge?—It did.

5387. The Sunday schools remain separate?—Yes; but the premiums awarded in them are paid for out of the general funds of the schools, and the school-houses are kept in repair.

5388. What is now done with St. Werburgh's schoolhouse?—We built a house in that parish, in which there are two comfortable rooms over the school-room, and we have let these rooms for £10 a year, which pays the headrent.

5389. How is what you call the school room used?—We hold parochial meetings there. It is not so large as the school room in St. John's parish, which we, therefore, selected for the school for the united parishes.

5390. What provision has been made for the clergy of these united parishes in the future?—The organ of St. Andrew's is to remain in it, and so is that of St. Werburgh's; and there is to be a rector and a curate of St. Werburgh's and St. John's, and a rector only of St. Andrew's and St. Michael's.

5391. Is the whole of the building in St. Werburgh's worth more than £16 a year?—Yes, it is worth considerably more; but, inasmuch as the two lower rooms are reserved, we could not get a higher rent for the upper rooms.

5392. You do not want the upper rooms for school or other purposes, and do not, in fact, keep a school in the building at all?—Just so.

5393. That house is not vested in the Church Body?—No.

5394. Is it held under a terminable lease?—I think it is held for 999 years.

5395. How is your Board of Governors of the united schools composed?—It consists of sixteen members—ten clergymen and twelve laymen, who are all parishioners of one or other of the unions.

5396. Do they attend regularly?—There is an average attendance of eight, out of the sixteen, at all the Board meetings.

5397. Have you a fixed time for your Board meetings?—Yes, the second Tuesday in the month, at eleven o'clock.

5398. Do the Governors appear to interest themselves in the school?—Very much.

5399. Does a meeting ever fall through, for want of a quorum?—Never. We fixed the quorum at five, and one day there was a party, as some members did not attend till late, and a notice was put on the books to reduce the quorum to three, but the change was not carried.

[Adjourned to Tuesday, May 27, at eleven, a.m.]

May 27, 1879.

SIXTEENTH DAY—TUESDAY, MAY 27, 1879; 11, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts, Dublin.

Present.—THE EARL OF ROSSE, Chairman; LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON, and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES ORRARD MERRITT, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

REV. WILLIAM GEORGE BOYCE, M.A., examined.

Rev. William
G. Boyce, M.A.

5400. CHAIRMAN.—Where positioned do you hold in connexion with Swords schools?—I am the curate of Swords, and deputy superintendent of the Swords Borough school.

5401. Who is the superintendent?—The Rev. Canon Twigg.

5402. He is also the local Governor?—Yes. There are five Governors.

5403. Are all the details of the management entrusted to you?—Nearly all. When I want advice I go to the superintendent.

5404. Who are the Governors?—His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin, the Lord Chancellor, the Dean of St. Patrick's, the Provost of Trinity College, and the Vicar of Swords.

5405. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are these Governors all members of the Irish Church?—Not necessarily—the Lord Chancellor need not be so.

5406. As a matter of fact they are all as at present?—Yes.

5407. Under what statute is this governing body constituted?—Under a charter of George the Third.

5408. CHAIRMAN.—Are the boys' and girls' schools in the same building?—Yes; but in different departments. The girls are in the upper part, and the boys in the lower.

5409. Is it all on one site?—Yes; with the exception of the infant school, which is in a separate building.

5410. What is the endowment at present?—£711 16s. per annum, the dividends on £24,000 Government 3 per cent. stock.

5411. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—From what source does that £24,000 arise?—Swords formerly returned two members to Parliament, and at the time of the Union, to compensate the people for the loss of their representation, they got £15,000, which I believe was allowed to accumulate.

5412. For how many years?—I could not say.

5413. What was the amount, when you were first appointed deputy superintendent?—The same as it is now—£25,000 had been sold out in 1803 and expended on the buildings.

5414. Do you keep the accounts?—I have done so from the year 1869.

5415. CHAIRMAN.—Has there been any recent expenditure?—No.

5416. What are the principal heads of expenditure?—They are salaries, capitation fees, apprentice fees, and school and house requisites.

5417. What do you give in salaries?—Between £375 and £389. The amount varies on account of the monitors.

5418. How much does the master get?—£80 a year, and a capitation fee of 6s. per head; the mistress gets £50 with capitation fees; and both master and mistress are allowed furnished apartments and coals; the infant school mistress gets £42 and an allowance of £5, for which she must keep the school in order, and supply meals and things of that sort; the deputy superintendent gets £80 a year, and the Rev. Dr. MacDonagh, of Trinity College, our examiner, £35 a year.

5419. What are his duties?—Twice a year he holds the public examinations, at which children of all persuasions may present themselves, and in fact they do so.

5420. For what does he examine?—For penmanship and appearance fees, amounting to a very considerable sum. Here are the rules, [reads Appendix, No. 6].

5421. The prices come out of the hands of the Governors?—Yes, small prizes are awarded varying from three shillings down to about three pence, but the real prizes are the apprentice fees, for which a very strict examination is held. It is my duty to superintend the successful competition to various trades.

5422. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How many do you apprentice after each examination?—Twelve at the June examination every year. At the Christmas examination there are no fees, but only small prizes.

5423. What is the average expenditure at each June examination?—With regard to the open fees, for those children who are not educated at the Borough schools, the amount is something like £30.

5424. And for those educated in the Borough schools?—About £105.

5425. CHAIRMAN.—Then you spend altogether £185 a year in apprentice fees?—Yes.

5426. Is there a different examination for the children in the school, and out of the school?—They are all examined together, and the examiner reports their answering to us.

5427. You give a certain number of fees?—Three for boys and three for girls educated in our own schools, and also three for boys and three for girls educated elsewhere.

5428. You said there was £375 for salaries. What other items does that include in addition to those you have stated?—The monitor gets £6 a year, each; there is a servant, who makes the whole place, and he gets 9s. a week—that is £33 8s.; and Dr. Davis, the dispensary doctor, is paid £30 a year, for which he is bound to attend girls, when desired by me, any one of the children belonging to our school. Then there is a man who does cleaning and mending, to whom we pay about £1 a quarter; and there is a person to a man named Moffatt, a former school master, of £30 a year.

5429. Have you power to grant pensions, under your charter?—The Governors did so in this instance. I do not know what their exact power may be.

5430. This is not a boarding school?—No.

5431. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What was the amount paid for house requisites last year?—£10 4s. 3d.

5432. That does not include coals?—No.

5433. Bread appears to have cost, in 1878, £36 14s. 6d.?—Yes; under the charter we are enjoined to give, what is called, a frugal meal. In the middle of the day we give each child a portion of bread.

5434. What are the other items of expenditure?—Coals, twenty-four tons, at 12s., £28 12s. We are obliged to get that from Malsbide, and the carriage is £3. Then there are the money prizes, £39 0s. 11d., pensions on marriage, £1 10s.; repairs of premises, £4 0s. 6d.

5435. Is that about the average sum?—I would say yes—one year I was obliged to break up an old sewer, and to paint the front of the house and buildings, and that came to £17 or £20, but last year I reduced the amount considerably. In the year 1875 the repairs came to £5 2s., but in 1876 only to 10s.

5436. Since you have been there have you been obliged to lay out any considerable sum?—No, not more than £20 at any one time.

5437. Are the buildings in such a state that they would require any considerable repair or attention?—They would not. I consider them in right good repair. They require a little painting.

5438. Were there any other expenses?—There is a small item—carriage of house requisites, 2s. 6d.; an allowance to the master of £1, which he gets every year, for writing up the examination book. There are postage and car hire, which amounted last year to £3 2s. 7d., an entertainment to the children at Christmas, £3 4s. 3d.; and there was—a hat must be put under the head of mistress—not of coal bags, £1; leaving a balance in hands at the close of the year of £11 8s. 3d.

5439. What was the average attendance of pupils last year?—Sixty-three, composed in this way—boys 28, girls 18, infants 16.

5440. Does that represent an increase?—It does not; it is rather a decrease. About five or six years ago it ran up to something like 70, in regular attendance.

5441. CHAIRMAN.—It is substantially the same as in 1858, when it was 21, 22, 20, making a total of 63?—Yes, the total is the same, but differently composed.

5442. Do any Roman Catholics attend those schools?—Not one has attended during my time.

5443. Are they all Church people?—We have two Presbyterians attending. It is my duty to see that they are not interfered with in any way.

5444. What is the course of instruction imparted?—Reading, writing, spelling, dictation, arithmetic, composition, grammar, geography, English history, and, for the girls, needlework, and the Protestant children of the school have Holy Scriptures.

5445. That is practically one of the regular subjects of instruction, since no Roman Catholics attend?—Exactly. We have this binding rule, that we have religious instruction daily, from two to three o'clock. Should a Roman Catholic be present it would be my bounden duty to see that he got timely warning to leave.

5446. Is that instruction given at the end of the school hours?—Yes.

5447. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you mean, that if a Catholic child were there and wished to go he might, but that you are not bound to force him?—I do not think I am.

5448. Under the National Board Rules you would be?—I am not aware of that.

5449. Might he stay if he liked?—Certainly; rule No. 7 says—

“Religious instruction shall be given from 2 to 3 o'clock p.m., or at such other time as the Deputy Superintendent shall appoint, and, before the commencement of such exercise, opportunity shall be given to those children to withdraw, whose parents or guardians may object to their receiving such instruction.”

5450. I may take it that, if Roman Catholic children by chance were present, and you had no idea that the parents or guardians did object, you would not consider it your duty to remove them?—I do not think I would be bound to do so, but the moment a child comes in, I must ascertain in what religion to enter it, in our book, and then, for my own part, I would not force the child out of the school, but I should give timely notice, that we were going to begin our Scriptural instruction, so that he or she, if a Roman Catholic, might retire.

5451. CHAIRMAN.—Would you communicate with their parents as to their wishes?—That is what I feel we should do, but we never got opportunity, because there never was a Roman Catholic at the school in my time.

5452. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Can you tell what was the rule prior to 1855, because this rule was evidently published in that year?—I do not know what rule existed before that time.

5453. In 1847 there was no rule regulating religious instruction. When did the former Royal Commissioners examine into the Swords Borough school?—I understand the 28th of October, 1853, was the date of their first inquiry.

5454. CHAIRMAN.—What steps are taken to apprentice the children sent out?—They go to various places. Some are in Swords, and some in Dublin, apprenticed to various trades. After the children pass the examination I report the matter to the Board, and, if they sanction the award, it is my duty to enter the names of the successful children in my apprentice book, to keep a debit and credit account for them, and to see that they are apprenticed to any trade they may select, provided I am satisfied that the master or mistress is a proper person to entrust them to.

5455. Do you see the pupils after they enter on their apprenticeships?—Repeatedly, and, whenever a dispute occurs, I try and arrange it. Thus, in a recent case, a master was about to dismiss an apprentice. I asked him to come to the Board-room, and there I made up the matter between them, and the boy went back again to his work.

5456. Do any of the other Governors take part in the management of the school, as it is left entirely to you and Canon Trigg?—I must bring all that has taken place at the examinations, and, in fact, everything connected with the schools, before the Board at their meetings.

5457. LORD R. CRUSCHILL.—When are the meetings of the Board held?—Generally twice a year. The Board would meet often if there was any question on which I could not adjudge.

5458. Where do they meet?—Generally in the Archbishop's Palace, Stephen's-green.

5459. They do not meet in the school?—They have never done so to my time.

5460. Did they ever hold a visitation of the school?—Not in my time, but I understand they have formerly done so.

5461. How long have you been there?—Ten years.

5462. And in your time the Governors never held any visitation, formally or informally?—Never. The local Governors were always present at the examinations.

5463. Do you recollect any of the other Governors coming to the school?—Never to my knowledge.

5464. Do the Governors meet twice a year to regulate the affairs of the endowment?—Yes, and to consider how the school is carried on. They judge from the report of the examiners.

5465. Do you make a report?—No, but they examine into my accounts.

5466. You do not make a formal report on the state of the school?—I do not; but, being present, I am asked by the Governors how things are going on.

5467. CHAIRMAN.—Is Dr. MacDonagh the only person who examines?—He is our paid examiner, and he comes down, with a staff of examiners, on the occasion of our public examinations, when the children of our own school, and those from the National schools, are examined together.

5468. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—The minutes of your Board of the 30th March, 1869, contain this entry—

“Ordered that the Board hold a Visitation of the school at Swords once every year.”

And of the 10th July, 1861, I find this minute—

“Ordered that a Visitation of the schools be held some time during the year.”

Do you know whether these good intentions of the Board have been carried out?—Not to my knowledge.

5469. LORD R. CRUSCHILL.—Instruction is given perfectly gratuitously?—Perfectly so.

5470. What is the religion of the schoolmaster?—He is a Protestant.

5471. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you know what the boundaries of the old Borough were?—I do not. However, I can answer for this—that it is necessary for children, coming in for examination, to produce to see a document proving that they were living within the boundary. It was directed by the charter that the money should be applied, in the first place, to the maintenance of schools for the daily education of the children of the inhabitants of the Borough, in reading, writing, and arithmetic, and so forth, but, I found much difficulty in ascertaining the Borough boundaries. I brought the matter before the Board, and they made a rule that, for the future, the Borough should be understood to be the Vicar's ecclesiastical parish. That was as close to the old Borough as they could get.

5472. LORD R. CRUSCHILL.—When did they make that rule?—9th April, 1873. [Vide Appendix, No. 6.] I thought it necessary to make some distinction, because some of the parents and I had acted improperly in admitting some who were not living in the Borough.

5473. I find the population of Swords is 1,400?—I thought it was more.

5474. Is there a National school in Swords?—There is.

5475. What number of children attend it?—I cannot say exactly, but I can give you the number of children they sent up to us, at the June and Christmas examinations to be examined, each year from 1866 to 1873, inclusive.

5476. How many children did they send, in 1873?—They sent me in the names of 117, but only 100 appeared.

5477. Do you think that partially they sent up the whole school?—I do.

5478. Is there any Roman Catholic school in Swords?—Not one.

5479. No day school?—Not one.

5480. Who is the patron of the National school?—The Parish Priest.

5481. Then, as a matter of fact, the children attending the National school are mostly Roman Catholics?—They are—distinctly so.

5482. And the children in the Endowed school are Protestants?—The children in the Borough school, as we call it, are all Protestants.

5483. So the Protestants get their education gratis, and the Catholics have to pay six penny per week each, at the National school?—Yes, if it be paid.

5484. CHAIRMAN.—Do you know what are the numbers of the two parishes in Swords?—The Protestants are something about 200.

5485. LORD R. CRUSCHILL.—Have there not been some dissatisfactions, among certain classes of the inhabitants of the Borough of Swords, about the management of this endowment?—I am, undoubtedly, aware that such has been stated.

5486. Would you mind stating to the Commission what you have heard?—To sum up all the objections I have heard from time to time:—the Roman Catholics consider that we—the Protestants—have the management of the entire fund. They consider that we have too much to say in the endowment, and that they have a right to at least one half of it, if not more.

5487. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—I apprehend that under the charter all the inhabitants of Swords, independently of religion, have a right to the benefits of the endowment?—Yes, if they wish to take of them.

5488. In 1864 an application appears to have been made to the Board, at which the Lord Chancellor presided, for a share of the endowment, but subject to the condition that it should be given to a school which was not to be under the control of the Board. Do you remember any proposal of that kind being made subsequently?—I do not remember.

5489. Or whether any attempt has been made to give a subvention to other schools?—The subject has been constantly talked of.

5490. LORD R. CRUSCHILL.—Are you aware of any formal application having been made, during your time, by the Roman Catholics of Swords, on any matter connected with the endowment?—I am.

5491. When?—It was the first year that Lord O'Hagan became Chancellor, and he was present

5492. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—This is the minute of April 9, 1844 :—

President.—His Grace the Archbishop, the Lord Chancellor, the Lord President of the Council, Sir Charles, and the Vice of Swords. The memorial of certain inhabitants of Sweden was read and considered, and the following answer ordered to be sent through the Secretary:—That the Commissioners do not feel themselves authorized to comply with the prayer of the memorial, it not being, in their apprehension, within their power as trustees to appropriate any part of the surplus of schools at the trust paid to the Commissioners, and that the schools not established by law be under their control?—

That was before my time.

5493. Lord R. CECILIA.—You recollect an application being made since that—in 1865?—Yes, in the time of Lord Chancellor O'Hagan, and it was sent through him.

5494. What was its substance?—Something of the same nature as the one mentioned in the margin which has been just read.

5425. Dr. CURTIS.—Are not the boys who compete for the extra apprentice fees presumed to be Roman Catholics?—They are.

5490. So in that way the Roman Catholics avail themselves of the endowment?—They do, to the amount, on an average, of £80 a year.

6487. Are these vices restricted entirely to them?—Entirely to children who are not educated in our schools, and, therefore, practically to Roman Catholics.

5498. There are two different competitions!—Yes, quite distinct, though they are examined in the same month.

5459. Local Justice Frequenter.—The reports of the examinations are entered fully on your minutes. Read for example that of 15th July, 1868:—

"Present:—His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin, the Very Rev the Dean of St. Patrick's, the Rev. Dr. MacDonagh, superintendent. . . . The Rev. Dr. MacDonagh's report of the school examinations, June, 1888. . . . The public examination open to the children of all the institutions of Swords was held on Tuesday, 26th June, 1888, by the following examinees:—Dr. Robert Wilson, Griffin, M.A., M.D., 38-38b, v.c.b., Mr. William R. Molloy (Roman Catholic), M.A., Inspector National Schools; Mr. Maurice J. Flood, v.c.b., Mr. Robert O'Malley (Roman Catholic), M.A., v.c.b., Messrs. Loe, Mr. 1982a Macdonagh, v.c.b., Mr. J. A. C. Coker (Roman Catholic), v.c.b., Mr. E. H. Taylor, M.A., 38c, v.c.b., Dr. J. Barry (Roman Catholic), M.A., v.c.b. (Queen's College); Mr. Charles H. Hall, M.A., v.c.b.; Mr. William Henson (Roman Catholic), Mr. E. J. Kennedy, M.A., v.c.b.; Mr. Michael Fitzgerald, Mrs. R. C. Madden, Miss J. D. H. Hutchinson, and Miss S. H. Hutchinson. 328 children presented themselves to compete for prizes (165 boys and 163 girls) of these 77 were pupils from the borough schools; 141 from the National schools, 69 boys and 41 girls were awarded prizes amounting to 49 sh. 5d. Of this was 44 16s. 11d. was given to 62 children from the borough schools, most of whom had already obtained prizes in the same subjects at the examinations on the previous Friday. There were also eleven candidates for apprentice fees (6 boys and 5 girls). Two of the boys and two of the girls belong to the borough schools, and have been awarded fees at the previous examination. . . . The report of Dr. Griffin, who examined the candidates for apprentice fees by printed papers, shows that the highest on his list of boys are three boys from the National schools, and of the girls the first is Jane Swane, who had already been successful at the borough school examinations."

5500. What sums were awarded as fees at that examination?—To the pupils of the borough schools, £79 2s, and to the candidates from the National schools, £75, making a total of £154 2s.

5501. Read the report of the December examinations of the same year:—

The examination of the pupils of the Swords Borough Schools was held on Thursday, 17th inst., by the following members:—Rev. P. J. Lucas, A.M.; Mr. W. Kennedy, A.B.; Rev. Thomas Twigg, A.M.; Rev. A. J. MacDonagh, A.B., ex-Sch.; and Dr. Griffin, A.B., ex-Sch. Seventy-three children composed for pupils (41 boys and 32 girls). Forty-eight of these were reported by the examiners as having answered creditably, and sixteen in various amounts.

ing to 455 St. St., were distributed among them. The public examination open to the children of all the inhabitants of Sweden was held on September 10th at 11 a.m., by the following persons: Robert Griffin, mod. q., ex-8th; Dr. P. J. Duvry, a.m., m.d., q.; Mr. W. B. Butherford, a.m., q.; Mr. J. S. Sorenson, Mr. J. Cleary, a.m., q.; Mr. A. H. Porter, a.m., q.; Mr. Michael Fitzgerald, Mr. M. R. Hill, a.m., q.. The ladies of the parish also kindly attended to examine the needlework of the girls, and some of the junior classes. Two hundred and fifty-eight pupils in all were present (114 boys and 144 girls). Of these, 78 were children educated at the borough schools and 180 from the National schools. They were arranged in 13 classes, and examined from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. At the close of the examination 103 children received prizes, ranging from 4s to 2s, and ascending in all to £10 5s. 2d. Of these, 41 were girls, and 62 were boys. Of the 78 of the borough school children, who came in at the public examination, the majority at both examinations was reported by the examiners, as of a very high standard, and evincing careful teaching on the part of the instructors."

5602. LORD R. CHURCHILL. — You have both school examinations and open examinations?—Yes.

5903. You give money prizes at the open examinations?—Yes. In addition to the apprentice fees, which are examined for separately, we give small prizes varying in amount from 5s. to 25s.

5604. You have twelve apprentices fees to dispose of each year. Would it be possible for children from the National schools to obtain them all?—Impossible; and it would be equally impossible for the children from the Barrow schools to do so.

3503. On what principle are they divided?—There are six pence for the children attending the Borough schools—three for girls and three for boys; and six for the children of the inhabitants of the Borough, who are not pupils of the Borough schools.

5506. Suppose the answering of the National school children was extremely superior to the answering of the children attending the Borough school, still that would not give the children of the National school more than three six feet. It would not.

5507. Dr. CURTIS — Nor vice versa? — Nor vice versa. The two are somewhat distinct.

5308. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—For the purpose of ascertaining efficiency, are they not examined together?—They are.

5009. The object of my question is to see whether—what I consider is a very valuable thing—the spirit of competition between an outside school and the Borough school is kept up or not?—It is kept up as strong as possible.

5610. You examine the children from both schools at the same time, and they are arranged in the order of merit, but the money is given in certain shares?—What is so.

5511. LORD R. CREWELL.—I suppose these apprehension fees are of great value to the people of Sweden.—I consider that they are of very great value.

5512. I suppose it would be impossible to lay out the money in a better way?—I think it would be impossible, because there is very strict supervision over the expenditure of the money.

5513. Are the children attending the Borough schools of the same class as those attending the National schools?—I would say, in some instances, that ours were superior in social position.

5514. Do the sons of the neighbouring farmers and the principal local tradesmen go to your school?—They do.

5615. Do the sons of the ordinary working men go to your schools?—They do.

5616. Do the children of the people of Swords, who are in the most circumstances, also attend the Borough schools?—I would say yes.

5617. According to your knowledge of Swedes, the Protestants, as a rule, are the people in the most circumstances?—I should say they are.

5618. The poorer classes are principally Catholics?
—Yes.

5519. Their children go to the National schools?—
They do.

May 25, 1870,
Rev. William
G. Rogers, M.A.

5520. CHAIRMAN.—I suppose there are a good many children educated at the Borough schools, who have no intention of competing for the apprentice fee?—I think every one of them entered the schools with a determination to compete.

5521. I suppose there are some rather above the class to require such fees?—There are some odd instances where they might safely give up the fee—where they do not want it; but still I think they would take it as a mark of honour.

5522. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You never give the apprentice fee, in money, to the winner?—Except in certain cases where the child wants to be further educated; for instance, if a child objects to take a trade, and wishes to become a monitor or monitoress, the Board allow the money to be given, in small instalments, for clothes or such things.

5523. Where has the child gone to, in such a case?—In one instance to Marlborough-street school, but cases in which the money is so given are very exceptional.

5524. To what trades are the children sent?—Some of the girls learn needlework. There are one or two of the boys blacksmiths; in fact they go to almost all trades.

5525. What do the girls chiefly learn?—Mostly needlework; but some go on nursery government.

5526. You do not pay an apprentice fee with them as nursery government?—That is one of the exceptional cases in which we pay the money to start them.

5527. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—The minutes seem to me to be important. As to the examination held on the 28th June, 1869, they record:—

“235 children presented themselves for examination, viz.—132 boys and 103 girls. Of these 78 were pupils of the Borough schools, 177 of the National schools. They were arranged in 23 classes, and examined from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Money (pence amounting to £5 10s. 3d.) was awarded to 145 children, whose answering was considered by the examiner satisfactory. The examination of the candidates for apprentice fees was conducted by Dr. Griffin, whose report is appended. Of the 12 candidates, 6 were pupils of the Borough schools, and had already been examined on the previous Tuesday. Three boys from the Borough schools attained the standard of answering (50 per cent.) laid down by the Governors, to entitle them to special honorary certificates, and a gratuity of £3 2s. each. Two girls, pupils of the Borough schools, have also answered above 50 per cent. Only one candidate from the National schools has reached the standard of 50 per cent.”

And as to the examination held on 26th December, 1869, the minutes are:—

“223 pupils (119 boys and 109 girls), presented themselves. Of these 43 belong to the Borough schools, and the remainder to the National schools. . . . 167 were reported by the examiner as answering premiums, and a sum of £8 10s. 9d. was distributed amongst them in prizes ranging from 3s. to 1s. In 19 of the 16 classes examined, the pupils of the Borough schools held the first place.”

The report of this examination held on 22nd June, 1870, is:—

“The total number returned for examination was 504 (157 boys and 147 girls), 226 from National schools, 78 from Borough schools. Of these, however, only 276 presented themselves. They were arranged in 22 classes, and examined in the same subjects (with the exception of Scripture and church government), as had been the programme on the previous Monday. The class of candidates for apprentice fees consisted of 16 (4 from Borough schools, and 12 from National schools). The answering in this class is higher than has been reached for many years, the very lowest on the list having scored nearly 50 per cent.”

In 1871 the numbers in attendance were 278 in June, and 216 in December. On the 3rd July, 1872, in reference to the non-attendance of the Governors, Dr. MacDonagh says in his report:—

“May I respectfully submit that it would add much to the interest attaching to the examination, if some members of your Board, in addition to the Resident Governor, would make arrangements occasionally to attend.”

Have any of the Governors ever come to the examination since?—Except the Lord Governor, none.

5528. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Which have the children from the National schools, or the children from the Borough schools, obtained the greatest number of fees in recent years?—The amount given as fees to children attending the Borough schools, in thirteen years, from 1846 to 1878 inclusive, was £1,206 11s.; the amount given to children educated at the National schools was, during the same period, £870.

5529. The children from the Borough schools got £539 more than the children from the National schools?—Yes.

5530. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—Dr. MacDonagh, in 1873, presented this report to the Governors:—

“I believe it would add very greatly to the interest attaching to the examination, and be of great permanent advantage to the schools, if some members of your Board could arrange to be sometimes present at the public examination, and observe the practical working of the present system, and judge whether any alterations or modifications of the existing rules are needed. At the recent public examination 53 boys from the Borough schools were present, and these 53, when judged by the standard attained in the National schools, were all recommended for and obtained prizes, whereas at the late or Borough schools' examination, on the previous Friday, 56 had attended, and 40 obtained prizes. At the public examination, 25 girls from the Borough schools were present, and of these 25, on the same principle, were awarded prizes; total—76 prizes—awarded among 98 pupils of the Borough schools who attended, value £2 10s. 10d. Of the 167 pupils from the National schools, 190 obtained prizes value £1 5s. 7d. The education given in the Borough schools is of a more advanced standard than that which can be reached in the several National schools. The pupils are generally higher in the social scale, and can be educated with greater regularity than the pupils of the National schools. Considerably a very intelligent boy from the National school comes on first at the public examination, but these cases are few and far between. As a rule, the pupils from the Borough schools distance by far their rivals from the National schools.”

Is that the result of your experience?—Most emphatically.

5531. Your school is open to all denominations?—It is.

5532. Is there, in your schools, according to the rules, the same protection for religion as in the National schools?—Most emphatically.

5533. What is the difference, if any, between the National Board rule and yours?—Our rule is simply this—that Protestants will be taught the Holy Scriptures; but if a Roman Catholic child was present, we would not feel ourselves bound in that way to teach the child, but on the contrary, to warn the child when we were about to commence Scriptural instruction.

5534. Is that at the conclusion of the scriptural teaching?—It is.

5535. So that at two o'clock the child has received the whole of the scriptural instruction for the day?—Yes.

5536. I believe, according to the National Board rule, there must be a board put up announcing that religious instruction is in progress?—We have the rule printed and put up in our schools.

5537. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do not you know perfectly well that it is the bounden duty of a master of a National School, subject to pain of dismissal or refusal of a grant by the Commissioners, to enforce the absence of any child who differs in religious belief?—I am not sure whether I am answering your question exactly; but I would not feel myself bound to take a child and put it outside the door, if that child wished to remain within, but I should warn the child, that now the scriptural education had commenced, and if he wished to go away he might.

5538. And the schoolmaster is bound to give an opportunity to the child to withdraw?—Most emphatically.

5539. Do any Protestants attend the National schools?—Not to my knowledge.

5540. LORD JUSTICE FRYDEMAN.—Can you give us any explanation, except the dislike of parents to mixed schools, and their preference for denominational schools, for the pupils having divided themselves, as they have done, at 8 weeks?—I cannot.

5541. Do you consider that any change in this conscience clause would attract Roman Catholic children?—I really do not think it would.

5542. This is the rule of the National Board:—

"No pupil who is registered by his or her parents or guardians as a Protestant is to be permitted to remain in attendance during the time of religious instruction, in case the teacher giving such instruction is a Roman Catholic; and no pupil who is registered by his or her parents or guardians as a Roman Catholic is to be permitted to remain in attendance during the time of religious instruction, in case the teacher giving such instruction is not a Roman Catholic; and, further, no pupil is to be permitted to remain in attendance during the time of any religious instruction to which his or her parents or guardians object."—

Yes.

5543. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The difference is essential. In the first place, if you had no objection from the parent or guardian of a Catholic child, you would not consider it your business duty, according to your rule, to remove the child from the room?—I would not.

5544. Under the National Board rule the master would be strictly bound to remove the child?—So I see.

5545. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIERSON.—According to your observations and judgment, would any change in the conscience clause that you set on, attract, or be likely to attract, any children of other denominations more than you have at present?—I really do not think it would.

5546. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—But you fully recognise the essential difference between your rule and that of the National Board?—Yes.

5547. Your rule admits of any amount of proselytism, but under the National Board rule there can be none?—I do not admit that.

5548. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIERSON.—What means of proselytism would there be if the rule be observed, that opportunity shall be given to the children to withdraw—how would you enforce that?—I would ask them to leave, but if a child refused to go out I would not feel myself bound to compel it to do so.

5549. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You set perfectly properly, but, as a matter of fact, there would be facilities if a person wished to influence a child?—There might be, but during my time I never had an opportunity of enforcing the rule, because there has been no Roman Catholic in the school.

5550. Do you think, that, if you were a Catholic, and the master of that school was a Protestant, and the Governors were Protestants, and the children Protestants, and you wanted to send your Catholic child there, that rule would appear to you sufficient security against your child's religious belief being influenced, or I will put it in this way—Suppose that the Borough schools of Swords were under Catholic management, and you a Protestant parent, knowing that the school was taught by a Catholic master, was religiously instructed, perhaps, by a Catholic priest, and that the children attending the school were Catholics, would you consider the existing rule sufficient security, to you as a Protestant parent, to prevent your child's Protestant belief from being tampered with?—I would rather that the Deputy Superintendent, or whoever was in charge, should compel the child to leave.

5551. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIERSON.—I have looked through the whole of the minutes, covering the period during which Lord O'Hagan was Chancellor, and I have not found any reference at all to that matter being brought forward. But I find that Dr. MacDonogh repeated, in his report on 8th July, 1874, what he had again and again stated in previous reports, that:—

"May I again respectfully direct the attention of the Governors to the great benefit a visit from them to the schools at the time of a public examination would confer. The Governors would then see the practical working of the rules under which the examinations are conducted, and also the manner in which the funds of the schools are applied."—

I read that report for the Board.

5552. What is the distance from Dublin to Swords?—About seven or eight miles by the high road.

5553. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you know whether there has ever been, since your connection with the schools, any public meeting of the inhabitants of Swords, in reference to this endowment?—I was not aware that there was any such meeting, except on the occasion that Lord O'Hagan was a member of the Board.

5554. What is your recollection of that meeting?—On reading the minutes of the previous meeting Lord O'Hagan, so well as I remember, presented a petition from parents in Swords; I think it was sent through the Rev. Father Keenan, who was then alive. They asked that the charter should be amended, so that they should get more than they were getting. A member of the Board told Lord O'Hagan that a similar petition had been brought forward on a previous occasion in the time of Lord Chancellor Brady; Lord O'Hagan stated he would like to see the opinion of his friend, Sir Monahan Brady; and that he would be greatly guided by it, as he was a sound lawyer. A copy of the petition, or the original, with Lord Chancellor Brady's opinion on the charter was sent to him; and Lord O'Hagan afterwards returned it, but made no comment upon it.

5555. What was the opinion?—That the charter could not be broken.

5556. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIERSON.—We are anxious to get from you the substance of that application. Was it that the schools, to which the Roman Catholics wished their share of the endowment to be applied, were to be schools not under the management of your Board?—I think the whole path of the petition was, that they should get a share of the fund, in order to outdo the school they had built for themselves, and which is now under the National Board.

5557. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Did you come from Swords this morning?—I did.

5558. Was it known there that this inquiry was to take place?—Certainly, I heard it spoken of on Sunday last.

5559. Do you know whether it was the intention of the inhabitants, or of the Catholic authorities, to appear here?—I do not.

5560. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIERSON.—Was there ever any proposal, by the Roman Catholic inhabitants of Swords, so to alter the arrangement of the existing Borough schools, as to make them mixed schools?—I never heard of it.

5561. That was not what they asked?—I do not think so.

5562. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—They wanted to divide the endowment?—That was what I understood.

5563. Can you tell why it is that the apprentices fees you award to the non-Borough school children are lower than those you award to Borough school children?—I cannot tell, except that it is the order of the Board.

5564. When was that arrangement made?—The last rules are dated April, 1874, but the amounts awarded before that were practically the same as the present.

5565. You do not know why there should be any difference made?—I do not.

5566. Can you get a better place for a child, if you pay £21 as a fee than if you pay £18?—Only a little. I find it is very difficult to get parties to take apprentices at all, at a fee less than £30.

5567. CHAIRMAN.—You get a better choice of masters for the higher fee?—Yes.

5568. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—So that £21 goes farther?—I should say farther, distinctly, than £18.

5569. LORD JUSTICE FRYGIERSON.—Your minutes contain references to an instance of the way the master worked, in June, 1877?—

"Five boys and eight girls completed the apprentice fees; of these, three boys and three girls were pupils of the borough schools, the others were pupils of the National schools." And I gather from reading the minutes that John Coleman answered 50 per cent, and Dr. Griffin answered with Dr. MacDonagh in recommending that he should get £21. John Butler answered 54 per cent, and they recommended that he should get £20. John McAllister answered 41 per cent, and was recommended for half 50, £10. James Knowl answered 40 per cent, and was recommended for £10. Butler and Knowl were boys from the Borough school, and Coleman and McAllister were boys from the village. The Board increased the award to Butler from £20 to £21, and Knowl, who was last on the list, got £20; while John Coleman only got £18, and John McAllister appears to have got nothing at all—I will explain that. The report was one from the examiners; but the Board did not see any reason why they should alter their usual scale. McAllister was disappointed, as he had not complied with the rules.

5549. In consequence of a rule of the Board, a boy from the village school, who answered 3 per cent, more than the best boy from the Borough school, got £1 less.—Exactly, because the fees were to be awarded according to the scale laid down.

5550. Again, I find from the same minute that the girls of the Borough schools were only second and ten th.—Margaret Day (National School), who answered 75 per cent, was recommended for £14; Margaret Long (Borough School), who answered 73 per cent, was recommended for £13; Mary Ann Murray (National School), who answered 63 per cent, was recommended for £13; Margaret Coghlan (Borough School), who answered 55 per cent, was recommended for £12; Theresa Howard (National School), who answered 54 per cent, was recommended for £11; Bridget Kieran (National School), who answered 52 per cent, was recommended for £10; and Eliza Hanlon (National School), who answered 51 per cent, was recommended for £10. Here the best girl, Margaret Day, got £14, and Margaret Long, who came next to her, got £13. They gave Mary Ann Murray £13 instead of £18, and Margaret Coghlan £15 instead of £12. They were reversed in consequence of the schools they came from.—Quite so.

5571. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Although the boys and girls from the National school may answer considerably more than the boys and girls from the Borough schools, still, under no circumstances, can they get equal prizes?—They cannot.

5572. In fact they get less?—They do.

5573. LORD JUSTICE FRANKENBERG.—As to the attendance of the members of the Board, I find that in 1857, meetings were held on January 21, March 29, June 24, July 15, July 21, October 28, December 2, and December 30. At the first meeting, by some mistake, the names of those who attended were omitted, but the minutes are signed by the Archbishop. At the March meeting there were present, the Archbishop, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Provost. At the June meeting there were the Archbishop, the Provost, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of Swords. On the 15th July, the Archbishop, the Lord Chancellor, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of Swords. On the 22nd July, the Archbishop, the Lord Chancellor, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of Swords. At the October meeting, the Archbishop, the Lord Chancellor, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of Swords. On the 2nd December, the Archbishop, the Dean of St. Patrick's, the Provost, and the Vicar of Swords. 30th December, the Archbishop, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of Swords. In 1867, ten years later, there seem to have been only three meetings—one on the 16th January, when there were present, the Archbishop, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of Swords; another on 22nd January, attended by the Archbishop, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of Swords; and the last on 2nd May, when there were present, the Archbishop, the Provost, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of Swords; and in 1877-8—I will take both years—there seems to be a very greater falling off. In 1877 there was a meeting on 21st February, at which the Archbishop, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of Swords attended, and another on 24th December, attended by the Archbishop, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of Swords; and there is no other meeting recorded upon the minutes until the 13th August, 1878—I was very ill, which was the reason that no meeting was sanctioned during the interval.

5574. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Who keeps the minutes?—I do.

5575. LORD JUSTICE FRANKENBERG.—The charter of the Corporation provides:—

"It shall and may be lawful for the members of the said Corporation, or a majority of them, duly assembled from time to time to elect from amongst themselves, by plurality of votes, a Treasurer."

Who is the Treasurer?—The Dean of St. Patrick's.

5576. The charter proceeds:—

"And also a Superintendent of the said charity."

Who is the Superintendent?—Canon Twigg is Superintendent or Local Governor.

5577. It continues:—

"Or either of them, as they shall judge necessary, and to appoint such other officers as they shall find needed. And further, their shall and may be lawful for any two members of the said Corporation to administer an oath or oaths to the said Treasurer and Superintendent, and other officers, which they shall be required to take for the due and faithful execution of their respective offices, in such form and form as shall be required from time to time by any by-law or by-laws of the said Corporation. And further, that it shall and may be lawful for the said Corporation to nominate and appoint any of the said body to be a committee or committees to superintend and carry into execution all such orders, rules, and directions as shall from time to time be made by the said Corporation."

Has there been any such Committee appointed?—Not to my knowledge.

5578. And you have told us that, except attending the meetings held at the Archbishop's Palace, none of the members, but Canon Twigg, does anything?—That is so.

5579. The charter enacts that the Corporation shall consist of the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Archbishop of Dublin, the Dean of Christ Church, the Provost of Trinity College, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and the Vicar of the parish of Swords for the time being?—Yes.

5580. Since the date of the charter the Lord Archbishop of Dublin has become Dean of Christ Church?—Exactly. And, therefore, there has been a loss of one member on the Board.

5581. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—When was that?—When the bishopric of Kilmore was voided.

5582. LORD JUSTICE FRANKENBERG.—Was Canon Twigg Vicar of Swords, at the passing of the Church Act in 1869?—Yes.

5583. Then no vacancy has occurred, amongst the Church dignitaries, since the passing of the Church Act?—None.

5584. Do you know whether any legal opinion has been taken, as to whether your Corporation will continue to be represented in any way by those holding analogous positions in the Disestablished Church?—I am not aware that anything has been done in reference to that.

5585. There is no fixed quorum, but you appear to have always had a large attendance for such a small Board?—During the last ten years we have always had three members present, except on one occasion, when only the Archbishop and the Vicar attended.

5586. In the Report of the Royal Commission of 1857 there was an objection taken, that there was no public audit of the accounts of the endowment. Has that been remedied?—Yes, the accounts are now regularly audited every year. You will see at the end of the cash book the certificate of Messrs. Craig and Gardner, public accountants.

5587. What further account do you keep beside your cash book?—That is really my only account, but I keep an account between our children and their apprentices fees when they pass their examination.

5388. I observe, on the debit side of your account, only a certain number of cheques. By whom are those cheques drawn?—I fill up the cheques, which must be signed by two of the Governors before they can be cashed.

5389. Is that a bank regulation?—I got that direction from the Local Governor, when I was appointed, and I did not ask further as to it.

5390. The cheques are not signed at meetings or the Board?—They are not. Whenever I require money for the schools I fill up a cheque for whatever sum I think will meet the present requirements, and send it to the Treasurer, the Dean of St. Patrick's, for signature, and it is then usually signed by Canon Twigg. I have got the Provost to sign cheques in the absence of the Dean.

5391. On the money being placed in your hands you make the necessary disbursements, and vouch them when you come to audit the account of the end of the year?—Yes.

5392. The whole endowment is in Government stock in the Bank of Ireland, and therefore you are simply checking against dividends?—Just so.

5393. There is one item to which I want to call your attention. You received £11 for one year's rent of a field from Canon Twigg. What is that?—There is a field near Swords, belonging to the Governors, out of which there is a net rent of about £2 a year. It was originally intended for the benefit of the Deputy Superintendent.

5394. You pay a head-mart of £8 2s 6d. to Col. Hanbury. Is that for the same field?—It is.

5395. When was the letting to Canon Twigg made?—About the year 1858. It was before my time, at all events.

5396. The abstract of the accounts for 1869 contains "Half-year's rent of field from R. Gore, esq., £5 10s."—Yes, Mr. Gore, who was the Sub-Inspector, was the tenant for that field, and on his giving up the possession Mr. Twigg applied for it. The interest in that field has, however, lapsed, by reason of the death of the last life in the lease under which the Governors held it. There has been no reference to it in the accounts for some time past.

5397. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Have the Governors power to spend the capital fund of the endowment?—I think they have.

5398. Could they do so, if, for instance, they wanted to build a new school-house?—I think they have the power, and that they did sell out some stock at one time, but that was considerably before my time.

5399. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Do you know when or how the system arose of apprenticing children who were not educated at the school?—That was before my time; but I think Canon Twigg was the person who induced the Board to open the door to children that were not attending the Borough schools.

5400. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are you aware that the Report of the Commissioners of Education (1867 to 1873) gives the number of pupils in Swords school as 241?—I was not exactly aware; but I think that may be accounted for in this way, at that time all the children, Roman Catholics as well as Protestants, were attending those schools, as there was no National school.

5401. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—The attendance at the Borough schools continued very large for some time afterwards, but eventually declined to a very insignificant number, owing to the withdrawal of the Roman Catholic pupils, in 1853?—Yes.

5402. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you know why the Roman Catholic pupils were suddenly withdrawn in 1853?—I am not well acquainted with the matter.

5403. The present master of your school is a Protestant?—He is.

5404. Is he saying also in the parish?—We call him the vestry clerk. He was appointed to that office since our Church was disestablished.

5405. What duties does he perform?—He keeps all the accounts of the parish.

5406. Is he directly connected with the Church?—He is.

5407. Does he get any remuneration for those duties?—£10 10s. a year.

5408. As schoolmaster he gets £200 a year, and furnished apartments?—Yes. And six tons of coal.

5409. The apartments and coals are, I suppose, worth at least £16 a year?—Certainly.

5410. What else does he get?—He gets capitation fees.

5411. How much do they amount to?—The amount varies, they come, at a rough calculation, to about £8 a year.

5412. Where did he come from?—I think he was teacher at St. Anne's parish school, Dublin, before he came to Swords.

5413. What salary does the schoolmaster of the National school get?—I do not know.

5414. Do you think his place is worth as much as that of your schoolmaster?—I dare say he makes more, by reason of the rental fees.

5415. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Is not the effect of the existence of the Swords endowment, from the old days of the disestablishment of the borough, simply to save so much to the National Board?—Of course, that must be so.

5416. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The Inspector from Trinity College states that the education in your school is much higher than that in the National school?—I think that our children at one time, and especially when he reported, showed a very large amount of difference. I do not think the education in itself was very much better, but I think the children were all of a better class, and attended more regularly, and wished to work. When the children from the two schools came together, you would immediately recognise the difference.

5417. Suppose the Borough School did not exist, would the Protestant children go to the National school?—Some few might, but I do not think the majority would do so. I think they would get up a school of their own.

5418. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Which they could put in connexion with the National Board?—I think they would do that.

5419. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you think it possible that any scheme could be drawn up, by which the Protestant and Catholic children of Swords could participate conjointly in the instruction to be given by means of this endowment?—I dare say something might be done by revising the rules—the inequality of the fees, for instance, might be altered—but I do not think so on any other ground.

5420. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Let me ask you, in your opinion, as a gentleman of position, do you think that it would be an improvement to the education of either the Protestants or Roman Catholics that they should be educated conjointly?—I do not.

5421. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Are you aware that in 1,146 schools in Ireland 405,000 Roman Catholic pupils, and 100,000 Protestant pupils, are at this moment receiving the benefits of united education?—I was not aware of it.

5422. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—Now are you aware, that if two or three stray Protestants happen to be attending a large National school, in a convent or monastery, or an equally small number of Catholics attending a Church National school, all are alike put down and counted as "receiving the benefits of united education"?—I am not.

5423. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is not this the case, that the Protestants of Swords have the main share of this endowment?—They have.

5424. And they are the minority of the population?—They are.

5425. Do you yourself then, as a Protestant, and an inhabitant of Swords, consider that to be a result which is altogether satisfactory?—I do not think it so.

May 27, 1876.

Rev. Thomas G. Dwyer, M.A.

May 27, 1853.

Rev. W. Dunn,
St. Boyer, &c.

5625. You would be glad to see it more equally divided?—I would.

5627. And it might be, if the rules were altered?—I think it could. Of course, this is only my own suggestion; but I would distinctly equalise the division of the fund, and make no difference between the children.

5628. Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—Which fund do you allude to?—The apprentice fees.

5629. Are you aware that to give apprentice fees at all, to children not educated in the schools, is a breach of the charter?—Then we have been breaking it all through.

5630. Your suggestion would not be in accordance with the Charter, which provides—

"That the surplus of the accruing interest, after paying all expenses of maintaining the establishment for education, should be applied in apprenticing the children educated in said school to useful trades and occupations."—

The Charter was for many years scrupulously carried out, but when the Roman Catholic children were withdrawn, and the Protestants alone adhered to the school, it seemed to some of the Governors, if not all, that they ought to do something for the others, and they opened up what were called those Non-Borough School Apprentices Fees.

5631. Do not for one moment suppose I do not thoroughly approve of all parties getting a share of the endowment, but I want to point out that altering your rules will not legally carry out your views. You must alter the charter?—Certainly.

5632. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—They never think of the charter?—They think a great deal of it. I do not think they would give it up.

5633. Do you think that all the money is sensibly expended—for instance, the £26 a year for bread?—I think it is. The bread is a great boon, as many of the children are very poor.

5634. Are there many who do not get a proper meal at home?—Some of them do not.

5635. Do you give bread to all the children?—Those who live outside the Borough, but attend the school, do not get any.

5636. Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—Are you aware, that your charter directs that the children educated in the school

"shall be provided with one wholesome but frugal meal, at the school-house, and that they should not be taken from their parents' residence to be lodged in the school"?—

I am. I believe the frugal meal is one of the primary clauses.

5637. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—In these days charters are very easily altered?—I understand they are.

5638. Do you consider that the money laid out in dispensing bread is well laid out?—I think it is.

5639. You only give it to Protestant children?—Yes.

5640. Are there not Catholic children to whom it would be an equal benefit?—I am sure there are, but they do not attend the school, and they therefore cannot participate in the bread.

5641. They do not attend, in consequence of the rules?—That is what they say, fearing religious instruction, I think.

5642. Are you aware that the charter does not prescribe that there should be any religious instruction at all?—

Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—Pardon me. The children shall be instructed as the trustees

"Should think would most effectually tend to promote the Christian religion and morality, good order, sobriety, cleanliness, industry, and health within the said Borough."

Lord R. CHURCHILL.—The Commissioners of 1854 were

"Of opinion that the charter of incorporation does not prescribe the use of the Scriptures, nor impose any restriction on the religion of the teachers."

Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—That was the opinion of only three Commissioners. One, a distinguished lawyer, dissenting, and pointed out that the conclusions of the other Commissioners, in point of law, were wrong; and another, the then Solicitor-General, declined to sign the report.

5643. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Are you of opinion that it is incumbent upon you, under your charter, to give religious instruction?—I think it is.

5644. You think that the terms of the charter would not be fulfilled, unless the children were educated in religious, as well as in secular, subjects?—That is my belief.

5645. At the same time there would be great difficulty, if all the inhabitants of Swards were to partake in the endowment, in carrying out that idea?—I think there would be difficulties.

5646. Do not you think that it would be better for the borough of Swards, if all the inhabitants were able to participate in this endowment, and that religious instruction were left to be obtained elsewhere?—If they got religious instruction elsewhere it would be done for their benefit to get secular education.

5647. Is the mode of education in the Borough school the same as that adapted in the National schools?—It is.

5648. Do you use the National school-books?—Mainly, but not necessarily.

5649. CHAIRMAN.—Who selects the books?—Generally myself, but subject to the approval of the governors.

5650. Is there any restriction at all on pupils, in reference to the limits of the borough?—If living within the borough they can attend our school if recommended by a magistrate, or by a clergyman of any denomination.

5651. You spoke of children from outside the borough?—They can attend if the local governors approve of it; but if they compete successfully in apprentice fees, they only obtain one-half the usual fee.

5652. Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—This rule was passed so far back as the 17th of January, 1845:

"The superintendent having reported that many of the residents in the neighbourhood of Swards, being beyond the limits of the borough, were desirous of obtaining for their children admission to the schools, for the purpose of receiving education, without any view to their enjoying father privileges—Ordered: That this request be granted."

Are there at present children attending the school from outside the borough?—There are.

5653. Is there any limit as to them?—Only the one I have mentioned; that they can obtain only half the regular amount, if they gain apprentice fees.

5654. To give even that would be a breach of the charter?—So it appears.

5655. The discussion of the question of religious instruction, in the school, appears to have been commenced by the then Lord Chancellor, on the 18th of July, 1855. The minutes of that day record—

"The Lord Chancellor proposed, that the trustees carry out the intention of the charter, it be hitherto made a rule of the schools, that no child, whose parents or guardians may object, shall be obliged to read the Scriptures or to hear their read. Ordered: That the superintendent be instructed to communicate with the absent members of the Board, in order to ascertain their opinion as to this important proposal of the Chancellor."

Accordingly the minutes of 10th October, 1855, show that a letter had been written, stating that—

"At the meeting of the Board referred to above, the Lord Chancellor said that, considering the present entire ordinary state of the schools, and that during the last two years they had been used by a small proportion only of those inhabitants of Swards for whom they were founded; and considering that it was the duty of the Board so to administer the trust as to make the schools as generally useful as possible for educational purposes to the inhabitants of the borough; and considering that it was evident to the Board the Roman Catholics have always objected to the reading of the Scriptures as a school-book, whilst the reading of them was not enjoined by the charter as a necessary part of the educational course; and considering that it was highly probable that if the Board would no longer insist upon its being a necessary part of the general education, the Roman Catholics would again use the schools, he proposed that it be made a rule of the schools, that no child be forced to read, or hear read, the Scriptures, whose parents or guardians may object. His Grace the Archbishop fully concurred in the reasoning and the proposal of the Chancellor, and considered further that he felt himself bound, as a member of the Board, to carry out the intentions of the charter, rather than his own private notions of what would be the best system of education."

Mr. Howard (the Rector of Swords), it appears, objected . . . and the Dean of St. Patrick's wrote:—

"For half a century these schools worked admirably well under the system now pursued. There has not been the presence of a single instance of either delinquency or of any questionable result. It is clear, therefore, to me that those who remonstrate against the schools do so because they have not power over their regulations. This is what the Act of Incorporation does not contemplate or admit. Were the Board to change the system on which they have hitherto acted, and allowed the parents to dictate as to the adoption or rejection of Scriptural instruction, it does not follow that the Roman Catholic children would at once return to the schools. My impression is that they would not do so, having found by experience that nothing short of full control—that is, the passing of all authority into the hands of such complaisance—with ever meet their wishes. With these reasons, I coincide with the dissenters of Swords, and think we ought to hold on to our usual course. I am convinced that change would gain nothing, and if, in the teeth of their own experience, the dissenters have altered their views, the Board cannot help it."

And the Provost wrote:—

"I perfectly agree in the reasoning of the Rector, Chancellor, and in the decision that Swords school should be so modified that it be made a rule of the schools that no child shall be forced to read, or hear read, the Scriptures, whose parents or guardians may object."

These letters having been read, the Chancellor proposed:—

"That it be made a rule of the schools, That no child shall be compelled to receive, or be compelled to be present at, any religious instruction to which he or her parents or guardians object; and that the time for giving religious instruction shall be so fixed that no child shall be thereby, in effect, excluded, directly or indirectly, from the other advantages which the schools afford. Ordered: That the rule, as proposed by the Chancellor, be made and published as one of the regulations of the schools."

"The Hon. and Rev. F. Howard dissented from the decision of the Board, and read the following protest, which was ordered to be inserted as the minutes:—

"I dissent from the decision of the Board to remove the reading of the Scriptures from the place it now holds in the system of education in the schools at Swords, because I conscientiously object to any system of education which would sanction the exclusion of any child from reading the Scriptures in school, and because, although the charter does not expressly require the Scriptures should be read in the schools at Swords, I consider the omission to have arisen from the circumstance that, at the time of the granting of the charter, the Legislature did not contemplate the existence of any other than Scriptural schools. Also because during the period to which my own experience extends, now about twenty-five years, and as far as I am ascertain by inquiry, from the first establishment of the schools, no objection has been made, by the children or their parents, to the reading of the Scriptures; also because I do not believe that removing the Scriptures from their place in the schools will tend to the return of the children who have deserted themselves, while it will give ground and just offence to those who have continued their attendance."

I believe the history of the change will show, that there was no return of the Roman Catholic children, and, on the other hand, that there was no abjuring of themselves on the part of the Protestants.—Quite so.

5636. You have sixteen infants attending your school?—That is the regular attendance.

5637. How many infants would it accommodate?—Fifty or sixty. The infant school is a very fine room,

REV. THOMAS TWISS, M.A., examined.

REV. THOMAS
TWISS, M.A.

5638. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Rector of Swords?—I am.

"NOTICE.—SWORDS BOROUGH SCHOOLS.

"The Governors of Swords Schools being anxious, as they always were, that the Schools should be as generally useful as possible to the inhabitants of the Borough, and that all ground of plausible objection against the present system may be removed, now publish as the regulation of the Schools what has been found as popular in other parts of Ireland, namely:—

"That no child shall be compelled to receive, or compelled to be present at, any religious instruction to which he or her parents or guardians object; and, that the time for giving religious instruction shall be so fixed that no child shall be thereby, in effect, excluded directly or indirectly from the other advantages which the schools afford."

"The Governors have also resolved to allow the children of all persons who have been, during the three years immediately preceding the time of construction, householders within the borough, to go in for apprenticeship, from which are now school to the amount of £36.

"The Governors will also take means to apply their surplus funds in promoting habits of industry, cleanliness, and sobriety in the place."

"Signed by order of the Board, Wm. STEVENSON KENNEDY, Superintendent.—DUBLIN, 10th October, 1855."

5640. LEON JENNIE FRINGGRO.—Had that any effect in bringing the school back, from being a Protestant to be a mixed school?—Since I became Vicar of Swords, in 1860, we have occasionally had Roman Catholic children at the schools, but they never continued as regular pupils. They were always removed after a short time.

5641. CHAIRMAN.—Was the National school in existence at that time?—Yes. Finding that the children did not return to our schools, the Board thought that by holding an open examination, and by permitting certain apprentices free open to all, they might extend the benefits of the foundation, and they have been doing so for the last fifteen years.

5642. LEON JENNIE FRINGGRO.—When was that system first commenced?—About December, 1853.

5643. LEON R. CHURCHMAN.—Do you not perceive that there is an essential difference between the rule of the Borough School, with regard to religious instruction, and the present rule of the National Board?—The active persons making the change in our rules were two gentlemen, who were thoroughly acquainted with the working of National schools, and who took an active part in their management—one was Archbishop Whately, and the other Sir Matthew Brady.

5644. LEON JENNIE FRINGGRO.—They were two active members of the National Board of Education?—They were.

5645. To what do you attribute the separation that has taken place, in education, of the Catholic from the Protestant children?—I believe that a great number of the Catholic inhabitants would be willing to send their children to the Borough Schools, except for clerical restraint. I have often heard people say that they thought it a great hardship that they could not send them.

5646. Could any alteration be made, in the rules of the Swords Borough School, so as to bring it back to being a mixed school, and, if such a change were made, would it be beneficial to Catholics, or Protestants, or both?—I do not think we could even make such a change.

5647. CHAIRMAN.—Do you think the Roman Catholic hierarchy have any objection to the school, or that it is simply an objection on the part of the clergy?—I am not prepared to say that there are not Roman Catholic laymen who do object, but I know there are a great many Roman Catholic laymen who do not personally object, and who think that it is a great hardship to be obliged to withdraw their children.

5655. Pressure was brought to bear upon them?—Yes.
5656. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You have been acquainted, I suppose, with the management of the funds of this endowment for some years?—Yes, for twenty years.

5670. In the year 1856 the Board sold out about £500 of their capital; what was that for?—The school-house, which was very large, and the residence of the master and mistress, had not been painted for a long time. We had a good deal done to them to make them comfortable, and, when we came to pay the bills, we found they were a great deal more than we had anticipated, and it was necessary, therefore, to sell out some of our stock.

5671. Did you consider that the Governors had power to sell out their capital, for repairs or additions?—The capital is now very much larger than it was. The original capital was only £15,000, and I think the Governors regard the rest as accumulations.

5672. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—I find that on the 3rd January, 1866, you got a report from Messrs. Brown and Craig, in which they recommended that a ledger account should be kept, exhibiting the original foundation as a primary capital account, to remain intact, and that the accumulations, arising from all sources of revenue, should be carried to a new capital account. There was also, at that time, a direction to sell out £800 of the New Three per Cent., part of the accumulations, and £350 was subsequently?—We made some alterations in the front of our building, and pulled down an old wall, which improved the appearance very much.

5673. Have you invested any money lately?—No.
5674. You had a balance of £40 more to your credit at the end of that year than at the beginning. Do you measure your expenditure by your income?—Yes.

5675. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The total amount of your endowment is about £721 a year. How much of that do the Catholic population of Swords actually receive amongst themselves?—Their children receive, in money prizes, and in apprentice fees, fully £20 a year.

5676. That represents the total benefit which the Catholic population of Swords derive from this endowment?—Indirectly they receive much more, as the school is there if they would attend it; but educationally I think that is all they get.

5677. How many children would there be room for in the buildings of the Swords Borough school?—I think we could accommodate 360 or 400.

5678. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—It is, in point of fact, the building that at one time was the primary school of Swords for the whole population; but the Roman Catholics having withdrawn, it is now too large for the Protestants?—Yes; at one time there were nearly 400 children attending. The population, however, was larger then than it is now.

5679. Is it a building capable of being divided into two schools?—We have divided it. We have the boys' school on the ground story, and over that a large girls' school; each of those schools would accommodate 160 children. Besides that, we have an infant school at some distance, in a distinct building.

5680. CHAIRMAN.—The boys' and girls' school are in one building?—They are.

5681. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—The object of my question was to ascertain whether, if such a thing were desirable, it would be possible to have a Roman Catholic master and mistress, and a Protestant master and mistress, there at the same time?—There has been a large National school built close by.

5682. Was that built at the expense of the National Board?—I think it was built chiefly by local subscriptions, but the Board assisted.

5683. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—In what year was it built?—About 1854. The attendance at the Borough schools has, from some cause, been decreasing. Our average is now only 65; it was 66 last year, and was 84 about six years ago.

5684. Had you any Catholic children at that time?—No. There were 84 Protestant children.

5685. Do any Protestant children attend the National schools?—To the best of my knowledge, not one has ever attended during the last twenty years. I heard, on one occasion, many years ago, of a Protestant threatening to send his children there, because he took some offence with the then clergyman.

5686. What sum of money did the Catholics expend on building the school you have mentioned?—I should say about £1,000.

5687. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—The National Board, I believe, sometimes pay two-thirds of the expense?—I do not know.

5688. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—I suppose if the old arrangement, which existed in 1807, had continued, there would have been no necessity at all for the National school?—No.

5689. LORD JUSTICE FRANKLIN.—And also now, if you had a Protestant National school at Swords, there would be no necessity for a Borough school?—Just so. With respect to the visits of the Governors, I may say that the Archbishop of Dublin, one of our most active Governors, has several times attended the Board, and spoken of coming down, but the Governors are men who have many calls upon their time.

5690. I believe you are an ex officio Governor, as Visor of Swords?—Yes.

5691. Have you any regular system of attending the school, for the purpose of superintendence?—I used formerly to go and examine the children once a week, but since I have had Mr. Boyce I only go occasionally; I cannot say that I now attend very regularly.

5692. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How often does the deputy superintendent attend?—He is generally there every day.

5693. Have you any other assistants?—Yes, a curate.

5694. Do you examine the children as to their religious instruction?—Yes, occasionally.

5695. By whom is the daily religious instruction given?—By the schoolmaster.

5696. Does the deputy superintendent examine the children in religious subjects?—Yes.

5697. Suppose you knew that a Catholic child was attending the Swords school, would you insist on his withdrawing at the time fixed for religious instruction?—The school is a very large one, and I have assumed when there were Roman Catholic children there, it is quite possible for them to be in the school and not be receiving instruction.

5698. If you were going to insist on religious at Swords would you, first of all, make inquiries as to whether there were any Catholic children present?—If I were giving religious instruction, and if my parents or guardians had certified to me that they did not wish their children to be present thereof, I should see that they were removed.

5699. But in the absence of any such certificate you would not make any inquiries, before giving religious instruction, as to whether any of the children were not of the Protestant persuasion?—I certainly should not ask any child to leave the school; but it does not follow because I did not do so that I should insist on instructing them, because in a large school you may take a class of children to one part of the room and instruct them there.

5700. Would it be possible for you to be imparting religious instruction to a Roman Catholic child, without knowing that you were doing so?—It would not, because I know the parishioners very well.

5701. Do you think that the Catholics of Swords are perfectly assured, that, if they send their children to the Borough school, they would not be in the slightest danger of having their religious opinions interfered with?—That is a very difficult question to answer; because the very atmosphere of a school has a certain influence upon children, and, if you send one child where there are a number of children of another way of thinking, a certain degree of influence must exist.

and it would be very hard to say what impression might be produced on a child's mind; but there has never been an instance, during the more than fifty years that the schools have been established, of a single case of proselytism.

5706. What was the origin of the objection to the schools, on the part of the Roman Catholic population?—For a great many years all the children attending were expected to read the Scriptures.

5707. Do you think that this had been the practice of the school since it was originally founded?—I think that fix probably forty years after the origin of the endowment there was no rule of the kind. Then the deputy superintendent, Mr. Omsley, drew up extracts from those portions of the Scriptures in which we thought people were generally agreed about, and the children used to read them.

5708. Was that during the time the Catholics attended the school in large numbers?—It was.

5709. You think that was the cause of their leaving?—I think it was to a certain extent, at any rate—but they left under duress, hardly.

5710. I suppose you are aware that there is a great deal of dissimulation on the subject of the schools, in the neighbourhood?—I am not.

5711. Have any rumours of dissimulation reached you?—I think that the people are very much gratified.

5712. Do you think that £50 out of an endowment of £750 could be a qualifying share to the Catholics?—They withdrew in the year 1853, and from that until 1863 they got no benefits at all, the alteration which was then made gave them a great deal more than they had before it.

5713. But before 1853 they got considerably more than the Protestants?—They did.

5714. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—But all they got before 1853, in addition to freedom from religious instruction, would be as open to them now as then, except that they object, as they have a perfect right to do, to the system of education that was prevailing before that?—I think so.

5715. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Have not public meetings of the inhabitants of Swords been held, resolutions drawn up, and petitions sent to members of Parliament, with respect to this endowment?—Yes, the full Board attended a public meeting at Swords in March, 1860.

5716. Was that in response to any memorial?—It was in consequence of dissatisfaction with the deputy superintendent of the time, against whom several complaints were made. A public meeting was held, and a deputation was appointed to wait upon the Governors, which they did, and they then expressed their views.

5717. What claims did that deputation put forward?—They asked for two things—first, to be reimbursed the money expended upon the building of the National schools; and secondly, for a share of the endowment, estimated on the proportion of Roman Catholics to Protestants.

5718. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The result of that visitation appears upon your minutes, thus:—

"Ordered:—That the Board, according to their charter, cannot comply with any of the requests presented to them at the visitation, except that relating to the account of the Borough Fund, in respect of which the Board is of opinion that the account of the Borough Corporation Fund, its amount, source, location, several income and disbursements, should be duly recorded and audited in each year, that the minutes of the borough should have the means of inspecting these accounts, and they shall make such arrangements as may appear to them to be necessary for the purpose of effecting these, so far as at present they may not be accomplished."

Sir Matthew Brady was Lord Chancellor at that time. There was another public meeting when Archbishop Trench became Archbishop of Dublin, and an application was made to him, and another to Lord O'Hagan when he became Lord Chancellor; and each of them brought the matter again before the Board.

5719. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—The deputation in 1860 asked for the reimbursement of their outlay on the National Schools?—Yes—and for an endowment of the National schools.

5720. The Board of the Swords Borough school has practically endowed the National schools. Does not it give £300 a year?—We have appointed certain apprentice fees.

5721. Having gone so far do you think it would be against the policy of the Board to increase that endowment to a more proportionate share. You would not be violating your charter any more by giving £160 to the National school, than you have been doing by giving £300?—I think not; but according to our charter we are bound in the first place to provide properly for children attending our own schools; and it is nearly as expensive to educate 43 children properly, as it would be to educate the whole number in the borough.

5722. You admit that the National school is already practically endowed with £300 a year?—The children of the Roman Catholic inhabitants get that.

5723. And, however willing you might be to increase that endowment, you would not be able to do so, because your present funds are swallowed up in educating 63 children, and in maintaining the staff and buildings?—For ten years the average attendance has not been so low as it is at present. We have required substantially all our funds.

5724. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Has the population of Swords diminished lately?—There are a number of families which the young people have grown up.

5725. Is it then only a temporary fluctuation?—I think that is all.

5726. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Six years ago, when you had an average attendance of 84, you were still giving £300 a year?—Yes.

5727. The attendance having decreased by 26, the expense of the school ought to be somewhat diminished?—Very slightly.

5728. If there be a still further falling off, say of another 20, there ought to be a very considerable margin?—Only if there are not children enough left to compete for the apprentice fees, which would then fall into the hands of the Governors.

5729. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You do not give an apprentice fee to any child who does not answer fifty per cent?—That is the recommendation of the examiners.

5730. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Have you tried to get any information as to how your apprentices turn out?—Yes, we do that as much as we can; and sometimes we get very satisfactory accounts, but at other times not so.

5731. I suppose that depends a great deal on the master?—Yes, and a good deal on the lad himself. We do not pay the apprentice fee in one sum, but generally try to keep a portion of it, to the end of the term of apprenticeship. I think it is a very important thing, indeed, to watch over both the master and the apprentice.

5732. Who has the selection of the masters to whom the boys are to be apprenticed?—We consult the parents in the first instance; and, if they have no particular wish on the subject, Mr. Boyce and myself look about for a master.

5733. All reasonable precautions are taken that proper masters may be found for the boys?—Certainly.

5734. So far as the information you have got goes, you believe that the masters, as a rule, have been satisfactory?—I do not think that any failures which may have occurred were owing to the masters; but our term of apprenticeship for the majority of our boys is not very long, only about three years.

5735. Do you think that the most beneficial way of using this endowment is in the payment of apprentice fees?—I think so. When first I was appointed Vice of Swords the Governors used to apply their surplus in giving a donation to an agricultural society, and they used also to give prizes for tidy houses, for pigs, and for cattle; but, as those prizes were specially raised for the people of the borough, it often happened that a very inferior animal got a prize. We worked that system for several years, until the farming society ceased.

5738. Lord Justice Fitzgerald—Do you still keep up a dispensary for the inhabitants of Swords?—No. We used to pay the doctor £100 a year, but we have lately reduced that to £25, which is the salary of the present doctor, and for that he is bound to attend any poor persons whom Mr. Boyce may recommend, and also any of the children belonging to the school.

5739. Do you still distribute money for coats?—We do not now keep a regular coat store, as we used formerly to do, but we collect private subscriptions for the purpose.

Rev. Ralph
Sedley, Esq.

REV. RALPH SEDLEY, D.D., CHURCHMAN.

5734. Lord Justice Fitzgerald—You are the Rector of Carleton?—Yes, I have been so since 1848.

5735. It appears from the report of the Royal Commission of 1837 that the parochial school, which is endowed, was founded in 1790, by a former rector of the parish, and was entitled to an annual rentcharge of £9 in 7d., the grant of William Conestable; and that under the will of William Tisdall, proved in 1831, it was also entitled to 68 acres of land and to £630 New Three per Cent; and, under the will of Alice Tisdall, to a further sum of £80 3s 5d. What lands belong now to the school?—The estate of Pellenstown. (See note.)

5736. How do the tenants hold these lands?—One tenant, Matthew Duffy, has, as I understand, a lease for ever, and the other is a yearly tenant.

5737. Your returns state that Matthew Duffy has a lease for ever of 62a. 0s. 50r. at a rent of £184 12s 4d., the valuation being £178 5s. Have you ever seen Duffy's lease?—No, I do not think I ever saw it.

5738. How do you know that he holds under a lease for ever?—I merely know what I have been told.

5739. Have you any deeds or papers belonging to the property of the school?—None whatever. The Commissioners of Charitable Donations have some deeds about it.

5740. Have you ever asked the tenant or his lease?—Never.

5741. What would be the present letting value of the property?—I have not the remotest idea.

5742. Your returns also show that John Rathbunne is a yearly tenant of 11a. 1s. 37r. at a rent of £30 a year, the valuation of his holding being £25 15s. By whom was the land let to him?—By me.

5743. At what date?—In 1853. The former tenant paid a much higher rent, and used the land as a crop-walk; but he found in 1853 that the last life in his lease had died in 1843, and he gave up the land, and then his brother, who is the present tenant, offered £30 a year, and I accepted it.

5744. Did you take any step to ascertain whether £30 a year was a fair letting price for the land?—I put in advertisements, and received offers, at which Rathbunne's was the highest.

5745. Have you never asked for any increase of the rent, notwithstanding the great change in the times since 1833?—No, never.

5746. Lord R. Chalmers—Is that land still let from year to year?—Yes.

5747. Lord Justice Fitzgerald—What foundation have you for the allegation that Duffy has a lease for ever?—I was given to understand so, when I was appointed rector of the parish, either by the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests or by the selector who was acting at the time.

5748. I believe you are yourself the only trustee of the endowment?—I am, as rector of the parish. The property was left in trust for the Protestant parish school.

5749. In 1831 William Tisdall left 68 acres of land and £630 New Three per Cent. Stock to the school?—Yes.

5750. Is that money now forthcoming?—No; the sum handed to me by the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests when the whole matter was wound up on the 28th July, 1855, was £191 11s. 8d. cash, and in the following October they transferred to me £493 1s. 3d. New Three per Cent. stock. The money remained so invested for about eight years. In 1853

£400 stock was sold out, in order to repay me money advanced for the school, which I thought I ought to be paid. It produced £268 5s. 3d.

5751. In whose name was the stock standing?—In my name.

5752. How long had the debt to you been accruing?—About eight years.

5753. How had the money been spent?—On the current expenditure of the school. You will find every item entered in my account book.

5754. Did you look to Mr. Tisdall's will to ascertain whether you had any power to sell out the stock?—I must have known at the time that I had the power of selling out the stock, as it represented money which had been recovered by the Commissioners to recompense the charity for interest on a mortgage to Mr. Leffring, which I had been obliged to pay for several years.

5755. I find in your accounts for the year 1851 these items:—9th January, carriage of children, £20; 6th April, carriage of children, £20; 26th July, carriage of children, £20; and 6th October, carriage of children, £20. What are those charges for?—£80 a year is paid for the carriage of the children to the school, as the parish is very large.

5756. Do you mean that you pay £80 a year for vehicles?—I do. I have two vans which go to different parts of the parish. The van is about six times as large as old Dublin, and few children would attend the school if they were not collected in this way. Some of them come five miles to the school, namely from the further end of Mullbracket parish.

5757. How is the £80 spent?—On the support of those two vans. Perhaps I should mention that I receive a great deal of money in subscriptions towards the schools, and I considered the subscribers, who wished that the vans should be employed.

5758. In the accounts for 1856 this item occurs, "Dunne, at Morgan's to August 1856, £12." Were you paying for a child at Morgan's school out of the funds of the charity?—I was. It was done in the case of orphans, when there were no means of supporting in our own school.

5759. The last charge for the carriage of children which I find in the accounts is on the 6th May, 1856, for the quarter to 31st March, £20. Yes. In my book this note appears before that entry:—

"The Commissioners of Education having refused us all help from Posters from in consequence of there not being the required number in attendance, it was thought to expedite the attempt to maintain it, and to get two vans for Carleton; and as 2s. a day is the cost of a man and horse, £10 a quarter is a very low charge.—2s. 6d. a day each day the school is open."

5760. Who owns the vans?—They are the property of the school. Lord Annull and Mr. Kirkpatrick owned the parish of Clonsilla between them, and they subscribed largely, on the condition that I got the vans. It was not so much to the school they subscribed as to the vans.

5761. To what amount do they subscribe?—Lord Annull personally gives £10 a year.

5762. The accounts appear to show a balance to the credit of the schools, at the close of each year, until 1851, when the balance is for the first time turned against the school. The accounts for that year included amongst other things this item, "Bentley's quarter's account, £25"—what is that for?—For school repairs and his own salary. He was the schoolmaster.

5763. In the same account I find this entry, "Fund instalment for iron rails, £40?—What does that mean?—We were obliged to put up some kind of fence to secure the school when it was open to the road.

5764. Is the account for the next year £80 for carriage of children is again charged, and a considerable amount for repairs, and the account for the year closes thus:—£196 11s. 6d. due to me and against the school. Interest on £100 advanced, £5? In whose favour was that credit?—I suppose that was to pay for money I had to pay for.

5765. But the credit you took for yourself?—I suppose so.

5766. Are you aware that as a trustee you are not entitled to charge interest?—I had to pay it myself.

5767. In the succeeding year, 1863, you sold out the £400 stock, and in the same year you charge interest on £200 advanced, £8. How did it happen that you had to pay interest in the year in which you sold stock?—I suppose that was before the money to clear off the debt on the school was realized.

5768. Has there been any further sum sold since?—Yes, in 1865 I had to sell the remainder.

5769. Having sold out the last of the stock in 1865 there was at the close of 1878 a balance against the school of £52 12s. 7d.—I think at present I have about £11 in hand.

5770. I find that Miss Alice Tisdell's bequest is in the following words:—

"I leave to the rectors of Charlton St. in the County of Dublin, for the Protestant school of and parish, £200—of per cent Government stock."

£10 of that stock it appears was sold out, in 1845, for the building fund?—That £10 was sold out in the time of my predecessor, Bishop Hindle, and I sold out the remainder when the school required it. (See note.)

5771. The will of Mr. Tisdell, executed in 1851, does not describe those kinds of Fellowship as being in the hands of anyone for ever. Have you any documents belonging to the trust?—None whatever, except letters written to me by the solicitor.

5772. What solicitor?—Either Mr. MacDonnell, who is the secretary to the Board of Charitable Bequests, or Messrs. Guinness and Mahon, who were agents for a mortgagee who had a claim on the property for £1,500 which had to be paid.

5773. Was that charge paid off before Mr. Tisdell's death?—No, afterwards.

5774. Your accounts for 1879 include the cost of a mortgage, and in 1877 a sum of £4 7s. is charged on interest on a mortgage, and a similar charge occurs in 1878, what was that for?—I purchased for the school, from the Church Temporalities Commissioners, a field belonging to the glebe, which the schoolmaster used to cut from me. I was advised that the best way to accomplish the purchase was to let a certain part of the purchase money remain out on mortgage, and I have paid the interest upon that.

5775. LORD E. CHURCHILL.—Although the charity was in debt to you, you made an additional purchase?—Yes, it was in debt to a very small amount at that time, as by the sale of the stock we had hope partly paid, and I thought that it would be a pity to allow this £4 to be taken away from the master, as it was of great benefit to him.

5776. What did the master pay for that field?—I think £5 a year.

5777. What did you give the Church Commissioners for it?—The sum they demanded was £140, and on paying down £86 they proposed that the remaining £54 might remain out at 4 is a year interest. The £5 which the schoolmaster pays goes into the school account, and more than pays the £4 4s.

5778. What does it cost to carry on the school?—Something about £200 a year.

5779. What is the income of the endowment?—At present it is more than equal to the expenditure.

5780. What is the rest of the school property?—About £310 a year, net.

5781. How much of that are you able to apply to the support of the school?—The entire of it.

5781. If the expenses are only £200 a year, and the income of the endowment from land alone is £310, why was it necessary to sell out the stock?—Because the expenses of the school were, at that time, infinitely more than they are now.

5782. Why?—We formerly paid larger salaries, but when we found we were spending beyond our income we had to reduce them.

5783. What salary did you formerly pay your master?—£150 a year.

5784. What do you pay him now?—£80 a year.

5785. What other reductions did you make?—That was the principal reduction. The former master was a very competent man, and when engaging a new master I thought it a fair time to retrench.

5786. CHAIRMAN.—Do you still pay £80 a year for the vestry?—Yes.

5787. LORD E. CHURCHILL.—How much do the subscriptions you receive come to?—About £50 a year.

5788. Has the school any further sources of income now?—There are some school fees charged.

5789. Do you still receive Conchobair's annuity?—Yes, that yields £2 6s. 8d. a year.

5790. Is that paid out of an estate, or derived from money in funds?—It is a charge on the estate of the Hon. Mrs. Corbally, of Cullinstown.

5791. There is no prospect, at the present rate of management, of the school getting into debt again?—No, it cannot become in debt again, and I am at hopes of gradually increasing the teacher's payment.

5792. You are the sole manager of the endowment?—Yes.

5793. Who has got the title deeds of the property?—The title deeds cannot be found. A gentleman wrote to me, some time ago, a kind of anonymous letter, saying that, if I gave him a few sacs of money, he would produce the title deeds. I said I did not know anything about the title deeds. (See note.)

5794. Suppose Duffy should not to pay the rent, what steps could you take to compel him?—Only what the lawyers told me to do. That very thing occurred some time ago.

5795. What did you do then?—I employed Mr. Byrne, a valuator, to value the lands, which he did at £167, in December, 1851, and Mr. Goyne, the lawyer, advised me that I might accept that reduced rent for a time, in consequence of the famine, and I did so for two years.

5796. Was there not a lawsuit about this endowment?—There was one carried on by the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests.

5797. They must be in possession of the title deeds of the property?—I suppose so.

5798. Did it never occur to you to make inquiries?—I made inquiries at the time, but I could get no documents from anyone connected with the property, but a short time ago a gentleman in the parish, who had heard me complaining of not having the title deeds, said, "I have an impression that a certain gentleman, who is very badly off, knows something of them, and I think that, if you write to him, he will make a good bargain for them." I wrote to this gentleman, and he wrote back that, if I sent a certain sum of money to a certain place, perhaps they might be left there.

5799. You had the name and address of this gentleman?—I had.

5800. Had he any right to those deeds?—I do not know.

5801. Did it ever occur to you that you could have proceeded against him to recover them?—I did not think that it was my business to get title lawsuits in that way.

5802. It was the business of the trustee of the property to possess himself of the title deeds?—I had made every inquiry, and if I got into a lawsuit I should pay the costs.

5803. Now, if you won it?—That is the question.

5804. Would you not be in a better position with the title deeds than without them?—I never found any hint at all about them.

Rev. Ralph
Adair, C. C.

May 27, 1876.
Rev. Ralph
Baker, Esq.

5805. I suppose you are aware that the land belonging to the school is let for £120 a year less than it would bring in the market?—Yes, I believe it is.

5806. CHAIRMAN.—Did you take counsel's opinion as to what you ought to do, in reference to those little deeds?—No, I did not.

5807. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—It would be very advisable that you should furnish us with the names and address of the gentlemen you have referred to in connection with the little deeds?—I have not the least idea of it. (See note.)

5808. CHAIRMAN.—You wrote to him?—Yes. At that time I must have had his address, but I do not recollect it now. I may, however, be able to find it in some of my books.

5809. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How long ago did you write to him?—I dare say fifteen years ago.

5810. Who gave you the information?—Mr. Kirkpatrick, who is, unfortunately, dead.

5811. CHAIRMAN.—What is the actual number of pupils attending the school at present?—There are 73 on the roll, but 68 is about the average number in attendance.

5812. Are the pupils entirely limited to the Protestants?—No one attends now but Protestants.

5813. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is it limited, by the will, to Protestants?—No. At one time we had a very large number of Roman Catholics attending it. Until the priests established their schools, it was the only school in the parish. (See note.)

5814. CHAIRMAN.—Practically, it is attended by Protestant children only, but there is no restriction?—We take anybody that comes. Lately a Roman Catholic insisted on sending his three children, saying he did not care for anybody's objection, but ultimately pressure was brought on him, and he was obliged to take them away.

5815. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is there a Catholic school in the neighbourhood?—There is one within a few yards, under the National Board.

5816. CHAIRMAN.—What are your school fees?—One penny a week.

5817. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is your school regularly inspected?—No, our school is not in connection with any Board, but the Rev. Hugh Hamilton has examined it occasionally, and reported very highly of it.

5818. CHAIRMAN.—In 1857 there were 37 children on the roll of this school, and the average attendance was 34, so there has been an increase?—Yes, considerable.

5819. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How is the £80 a year, which you pay your present teachers, divided?—The master gets £40, and his sister £30. The former teachers were a man and his wife.

5820. Are the buildings in good repair?—In very good repair.

5821. CHAIRMAN.—It is entirely a day school?—It is. At one time we opened a night school, to try and induce the Roman Catholic inhabitants of the village to attend, which succeeded for a while.

5822. Do the children bring their dinners with them, or do you give them anything in the middle of the day?—At one time we gave some of them breakfast, as they came fasting; but we had to give that up, and now they bring bread themselves.

5823. The instruction given in 1857 comprised reading, writing, grammar, geography, and arithmetic. Is the course the same now?—We also teach them the Latin grammar, mathematics, Euclid, algebra, mensuration, bookkeeping, phonetic shorthand, English history, drawing, and needlework.

5824. Have you any special master for teaching those subjects?—Not now, we had at one time.

5825. What rank of life do the children principally come from?—They are generally very respectable; such as the children of farmers or stewards. The children of the Royal Engineers, in the Phoenix Park, also attend the school.

5826. What pursuits in life do the pupils generally follow, when they leave the school?—Many of the boys go into the Mountjoy Barracks as draughtsmen, others go as school teachers.

5827. Do any of them go on to the Middleborough street school?—Yes.

5828. I suppose there are none of such a class as would go on to the University?—No; they do not remain long enough. We are sending up some children to the Intermediate Education Examination.

5829. Are there any gentlemen in the neighbourhood who take an interest in the school, and assist in looking after it, or are you solely responsible?—I am solely responsible, but I constantly invite the gentry to visit the school. Mrs. Hamilton, the wife of the member for the county, frequently teaches in the school. The children are generally of a superior class, and very well conducted.

5830. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How long is it since you changed your school-master?—About twelve months.

5831. Will the lower salary, you now give, have any effect on the school?—None whatever. I hope to be able to give the master an addition that very year. We give him result fees besides his regular salary.

5832. Was the school in operation in 1848?—Certainly.

5833. What was its financial position then?—In December, 1844, there was due to me £26 16s. 4d.

5834. How had you been carrying on the school previous to 1855?—From 1851 I had been receiving the rents of the Fellenstown property.

5835. Were you receiving anything from the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests?—In 1849, shortly after my appointment, I received a half a year's interest on Mrs. Tisdall's bequest of £20 1s. 5d., and I continued to receive that regularly, but it was the only money I was receiving at the time. The first money I received from Fellenstown was £185 10s. 5d. in 1851.

5836. Who was receiving that rent in 1849?—I think it was paid over to the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests. I have an account which was handed to me by Guinness and Mahon, who were the agents for the mortgages at that time.

5837. Was a man named Clarke the tenant of Fellenstown at the time?—I suppose so, but I do not recollect him myself.

5838. At that time the school was mainly supported by subscriptions collected by your master?—Yes, they disbursed whatever sums they received, and merely called upon me to make up any deficiency.

5839. Do you know whether the mortgage for £1,500 on the Fellenstown property was paid off out of the ready estate of Mr. Tisdall?—I believe so.

5840. From 1851 you received the rents yourself?—Yes, and for some time I had to pay six per cent. interest upon the mortgage.

5841. Is the system of management by estates going on still?—No; I manage the whole thing myself now.

5842. What was the master's salary in 1851?—It was something very small; but I do not know exactly the amount. For many years he only got £13 a year, but when I found we had money in hand we increased his salary.

5843. CHAIRMAN.—In the report of 1857 the Commissioners do not speak very highly of the school. They say—

“Nothing is taught but the ordinary branches of reading, writing, grammar, geography, and arithmetic; no mathematics, mensuration, or bookkeeping.”

With the increase in the expenditure you have improved the status of the school?—The state of things which then existed is entirely altered, and we have improved the status of the school very much. We also had to rebuild the school-house.

5844. In what year did you rebuild the school-house?—Very soon after the money came in from the Com-misnomer. Charitable Bequests. The whole place was in a most dilapidated state when I became Rector, and a great deal of money had to be expended upon it. With reference to our vans, I may mention that Mr. Colles, of Newbridge, told me he kept vans himself, at his own expense, for a school in his parish.

5844. Your vans go to certain central places?—Yes, they go in two circles, one to the east, and the other to the west, of the school.

5845. Do you recollect a tenant of the name of Flanagan on the Pelletstown estate?—Yes.

5846. How did he become tenant?—He purchased the interest of the former tenant, bunkered me the rent, and I asked no questions. It did not matter who had the farm as long as he paid the rent.

5847. In 1854 there was another change of tenants, and Luke Duffy came in?—Yes; Pate Duffy was the name of the present tenant. I suppose he is the son of Luke.

5848. When did you first hear that Luke Duffy had a lease for ever?—I could not possibly say. I suppose the question was fully gone into when the original tenant, whose name I forget, refused to pay the rent.

5849. When was that?—About the time of the famine. I had to take the opinion of counsel as to what I was to do. The tenant said, "Make me a reduction and I will pay; but I will not, and cannot pay otherwise."

5850. Is there any reference to that in your accounts?—There is the expense incurred in consulting counsel; and the advice I got was that I should reduce the rent.

5851. Have you got a copy of that opinion?—I do not know that I have. (See note.)

5852. You treated the £191 per received from the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests, in 1855, as income?—I treated it as money given to me to spend for the school.

5853. It did not occur to you to treat it as part of the capital trust fund of the school?—Never.

5854. Was your former master of a higher class than the present one?—Yes; he had a University education, and has been ordained.

5855. The present master has not had a University training?—He has not.

5856. Was the previous master's salary £130 a year from the time he was appointed?—No, it was gradually increased as we could afford it, because he took much very good pains, and the school showed such very good results.

5857. Was he a graduate when he was appointed?—Not then. He went through college while he was the master of the school.

5858. How many vans have you got?—Two.

5859. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Why two?—Because one goes down to the Under-Secretary's Lodge to bring the children from Blackhorse-lane, and the other goes to Lord Anson's gate.

5860. CHAIRMAN.—Is there no school near those places?—None except National schools.

5861. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—I suppose it was the outcry on the vans that, first of all, got the school into debt?—Of course it contributed towards it.

5862. If you had confined the school entirely to Castleknock and the neighbourhood there would have been no necessity for the vans?—No, but there would have been scarcely any children attending the school.

5863. CHAIRMAN.—You never thought of applying to the Court of Chancery for authority to sell out the stock?—No; I thought the whole money was given to me to expend for the benefit of the school. In fact no question ever occurred to me at all about it. It is a thing that is constantly being done with different charities in Dublin.

5864. Suppose the school got into debt in the future, would you consider yourself at liberty to sell the land?—I do not know as to the land. That is a different thing.

5865. Who supplies the horses for the vans?—The horses are sales.

5866. Are the vans yours also?—No; they belong to the school.

5867. Do you hire out the horses to the charity?—Yes.

5868. At 3s. 6d. a day each?—Yes; 5s. 6d. a day for each man and horse. I undertook to do so, because we could not get it done at all otherwise.

5869. What sort are the horses?—They are used as farm horses when they are not doing anything else; but the school-work is never interfered with. If I could get a farmer to supply horses I would employ him; but no farmer would do it, so he would not allow his own work to be interrupted for that.

5870. For how many hours in the day are the horses employed at this work?—They are generally out for at least two hours in the morning, and two in the afternoon.

5871. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—If there were not these vans would you keep the horses?—I would not. I have not sufficient work for them; but I could get no farmer to supply horses for the vans in that way without paying something ahead.

5872. I suppose the £80 a year pays for the keep of the horses?—It does not do anything like paying for horses and men. The men take out nearly that. I pay the two men 14s. a week each, which comes to £73 16s.

5873. Then you are really giving the charity the horses?—I am anxious to do what I can for the school.

5874. It comes to this, that if somebody else were incumbent, who was not as generous as yourself, the schools could not afford to keep the vans?—They could not afford the same payment to the teacher.

5875. At present the school funds are only paying you for the rent?—Well, they are paying only £3 a year for the two horses, and neither horses nor vans would be kept but for the school.

5876. Do you recollect from what counsel you obtained the opinion as to the reduction of the rent?—I do not recollect. (See note.)

[Dr. Sullivan subsequently applied to add an explanatory statement. Vide Appendix No. 10.]

Mr. THOMAS GIBB, examined.

Mr. Thomas Gibb.

5877. CHAIRMAN.—You are an officer of the Clermont Institute for the Deaf and Dumb?—I am the Secretary.

5878. How long have you held that position?—About ten years and a half.

5879. You are acquainted with the history of the institution, for the last twenty years?—Yes.

5880. Its endowment was notated, in 1837, as consisting of £3,165 4s. 10d. New three per cent. Stock, the bequest of the Rev. Dr. Barrett, and of some other sums invested in 1857 5s. 5d. like stock, producing together rather more than £30 a year, of an annuity of £39 under the will of Matthew Barry Mahon, and of a rent-charge of £5 under the will of Cordelia Cuy. How does it stand now?—None of that property has been parted with, but the money invested in the funds, in addition to Barrett's fund, now consists of £7,050 4s. 4d. New three per cent. Stock. The Committee have, from time to time, invested the money in what they call "The Clermont Rent Fund," under rule No. 13 of the institution, which provides—

"That all legacies shall be placed in the public funds in the names of three trustees, until the interest of the same shall amount to the annual rent payable for the lands of Clermont."

That, however, can hardly be called an endowment, because the Committee would be able to cancel the 18th rule by complying with the 14th, which provides—

July 27, 1878.
 Mr. Thomas
 Gals.

"It shall not be competent for any meeting of the Association to make, alter, or revoke any fundamental law unless notice shall have been given at a previous meeting."

1881. What is the amount of that annual rent?—£203 11s. 4d. The object was to extinguish the rent.

1882. The interest on the accumulation is now sufficient to clear the rent?—Yes. There is another fund which was transferred to the committee by Mr. Douglass M'Connell, q.c., and Dr. Hart, which we sell the Boyd fund. It amounts to £138 14s. 8d. stock, and produces about £4 10s. a year. That fund is subject to any claim which may be established in respect of it.

1883. What was the date of that transfer?—It was made in 1871. I should mention that two of the trustees, in whose names the funds of the Institution are invested, are dead, and the third was not able to act. A bill was, therefore, filed in Chancery on the 26th October, 1877, and the whole scheme for the management of the Institution will be settled by that Court.

1884. Dr. CURTIS.—Who is the surviving trustee?—Mr. Frederick Hogan. The others were Mr. Macneil and Dr. Hingford.

1885. CHAIRMAN.—Are there any other endowments?—None.

1886. Have any steps been taken with a view of purchasing the rent to which the Institution is liable?—We made inquiries about it, but we find there are obstacles in the way.

1887. I suppose the Governors consider themselves at liberty to spend the interest of the Rent Fund since it has arrived at the sum required?—Yes.

1888. Dr. CURTIS.—Has notice been served on the bank, not to pay out the trust funds to the surviving trustee?—No, but I have been informed by the law agent that unless we obtain an order from the Court of Chancery no sums will be paid.

1889. CHAIRMAN.—That fund is accumulating still?—Mr. Hogan was lately better, and he gave a power of attorney, to draw the three years' dividends which had accrued, to his solicitors, who, at the request of Mr. Johnson, the solicitor acting for the committee, lodged them with the Trustees.

1890. Dr. CURTIS.—The names placed in your report for 1878 as trustees are—Very Rev. H. H. Dickinson, Dean of the Chapel Royal; Rev. Henry George Carroll, and John Noewood, Esq., M.D., but the last named is scored out?—Yes, another is to be put in his place, and the three are to be suggested, to the Court of Chancery, to be appointed as trustees.

1891. CHAIRMAN.—How often does the committee meet?—Regularly on the second Friday in each month, and there are also special meetings whenever necessary.

1892. Are the patrons or patronesses subscribers?—Some of them are, but not necessarily so.

1893. What do you receive from subscriptions?—The donations and subscriptions generally amount to £240 or £250 a year, but the contributions from benefactors, which include card collections and the collections after public meetings, vary from £800 to £1,000 a year.

1894. That is by far the largest part of your income, and it depends chiefly on collections?—Exactly.

1895. What is the average total income?—Something over £2,000 a year, including legacies, which, of course, vary.

1896. Benefactors. The legacies have gone into the Clements Rent Fund?—Yes.

1897. How is the payment for pupils regulated?—There are fifteen pupils paid for by the Boards of Guardians of the different unions, the payments varying from £10 to £15 a year. Then there are occasional pupils paying from £17 to £20, of whom there are private pupils, paying £20. We have besides thirteen free pupils.

1898. Your charge is not a fixed cost?—It varies according to the means of the parents. In some cases, where the parents are unable to give anything, we apply to the Board of Guardians, but are at times refused.

The Dublin Boards, from whom the largest number are received, invariably grant assistance in cases of destitute dead mothers.

1899. Almost all the paupers in my neighbourhood are Roman Catholics, and the Guardians often send such as are suitable to the Croke Institution, where there is always a fixed charge to the Guardians of £15 a year. It is difficult in the Clements institution?—Yes. If the parents are only able to give £3 a year that is all that is asked. In addition to the pupils I have mentioned, the head master has four private pupils, whose parents are in better circumstances. That makes a total of fifty five.

1900. What do the private pupils pay?—Mr. Chisley, the head master, pays £10 to the committee for each of them towards the funds of the Institution. He provides them with board, and makes his own arrangements as to time with their parents. The total income receivable from pupils at present is £201 11s., which is a little under the amount received last year, but, of course, that is subject to variations.

1901. Your accounts show this item, "Furniture of sum, £177 14s. 7d." How is that arranged?—The fields about the institution are let to two persons, who pay £147 a year in the aggregate. They are yearly tenants.

1902. Dr. CURTIS.—You do not farm any part of it yourself?—Only a very small portion, which supplies vegetables for the use of the institution.

1903. CHAIRMAN.—Do the trustees work as the firm themselves?—Sometimes they do, after school hours, but never so as to take them away from their studies.

1904. Not enough to effect the profit and loss account of the firm?—Not materially.

1905. At what age do the pupils usually come to the institution?—From six to twelve.

1906. Dr. CURTIS.—What is the greatest age to which you keep them?—They are never kept beyond sixteen or seventeen.

1907. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any change made, in the yearly charge, according to age?—None.

1908. Dr. CURTIS.—You have both boys and girls in the school?—We have.

1909. CHAIRMAN.—Your accounts for last year include an item for interest on deposits of £14 3s. 6d. What amount of cash do you keep at your bankers?—The sum varies very much, as the principal part of the income of the institution is received between October and the end of February; and, therefore, as the money lies in the bank, they give a certain deposit interest upon the daily balance.

1910. Your account of expenditure for last year includes, "Repairs, £65 13s. 8d." How are the repairs done?—By workmen, pursuant to an order by the committee.

1911. Do the committee obtain tenders?—If the work be considerable, they do; but, if it be only a small matter, the head master gets it done.

1912. You do not reside in the institution yourself?—No, I am very rarely at the institution except when required there. The office is at 8, Dawson-street.

1913. Is it any part of your duty to inspect the institution?—No.

1914. Your accounts show an expenditure, for salaries of officers and servants, of £388 3s. 1d. What salaries are given?—The head master gets £260 a year, but it must be remembered that his wife, Mrs. Chisley, has the supervision of the whole institution, for which there is no salary given. The assistant, male and female, receive sums varying from £15 to £40 a year.

1915. How many assistants are there?—Five.

1916. Dr. CURTIS.—Your bank book contains a record of a lodgment by W. G. Hogan and Son, in the month of January last, of £549 8s. 8d. What was that for?—That sum was the dividends which had accrued during the preceding three years on the Clements Rent Fund.

1917. Are your dividends free of income-tax?—Yes. Until lately the trustees received them, and lodged them in the bank. I thought they got them free of income-tax, but I found that it was not so, and I had to apply for a return. A few years back you will see a return of the income-tax in the receipts.

5913. CHAIRMAN.—Do you get back the income-tax on all your dividends?—No, Le Touche acts on behalf of attorney, and I suppose he does so. It does not pass through my hands.

5919. What was the cost of food last year?—For the nuns, servants, and pupils, it came to £513 6s. 1d.

5920. Is there a medical man attached to the establishment?—Yes, but he is only paid a small fee, whenever he is required to attend. We found it much more economical to pay by fees than by a yearly salary.

5921. There is an item in your expenditure for conveyance and pupils' excursion, £4 0s. 1d. 1s.—Yes; we give them an excursion once a year.

5922. Pupils' clothing cost £135 5s. 5d. Is any of that made in the institution?—No.

5923. I suppose it has been found impossible to trust the pupils radically for the cure of deafness?—Almost impossible.

5924. How are the masters and assistants chosen?—By the committee.

5925. Have they to undergo any training?—There is a special training required. In some cases the Committee have got youths, about 17 or 18, whom they educate as masters for the deaf and dumb. We have one at present.

5926. As a sort of monitor?—Yes, but it takes a long time before a youth can become really useful.

5927. Do your pupils ever become teachers in other institutions?—One, Benjamin Payne, is now principal at Swansea.

MR. EDWARD JAMES CHURCH, examined.

Mr. Edward James Church

5928. CHAIRMAN.—You are the head master of the Clarendon Deaf and Dumb Institution?—I am.

5929. How long have you held that position?—For twenty-three and a half years.

5930. Did you come in as head master?—Yes.

5931. Where were you educated?—At the London Institution, in the Old Kent-road, London.

5932. Were you one of the under masters there?—Yes, for about 15 years.

5933. Are you a native of England?—I am.

5934. Have any of your present assistants been educated in England?—No; they have all been trained by myself, or rather in the institution, as one was trained before my time. The system we pursue is very much the same as that pursued in England.

5935. How many pupils would the institution accommodate?—About 100.

5936. Is the number of pupils limited, only by the number of applications, or is the fact of the house not being full owing to any deficiency of funds?—We take in all that apply.

5937. What is the course of instruction?—We teach reading, writing, geography, history, and, of course, a very good knowledge of Scripture.

5938. What usually becomes of the pupils when they leave the institution?—They are apprenticed to any trade, such as shoemakers, saddlers, printers, and one to lithography.

5939. How do you manage in selecting the masters?—We leave it, in a great measure, to the parents, to look out for masters in their own neighbourhoods, and if we find those suggested are respectable and of good character, we give a fee, always payable in instalments. Our pupils have generally done very well.

5940. What proportion of those who leave are able to earn their own living?—Of all who have left during my time, I do not know of more than one or two who are not earning their own living.

5941. I suppose there is a certain proportion that cannot be taught anything useful?—There are very few, indeed, that we cannot teach something to. We 5928. Have any of your staff been in similar institutions in England?—None; with the exception of the headmaster.

5929. Dr. CURRIE.—What generally becomes of the boys, after they are educated in the institution?—They are apprenticed in some cases to shoemakers and printers, and the committee give apprenticeships varying from £8 to £10, but they find very great difficulty in obtaining masters or mistresses willing to take them.

5930. The girls are apprenticed to milliners?—Yes; they are taught the use of the sewing machine, and in some cases a sewing machine is presented, in lieu of an apprentice fee, when a girl is leaving, to enable her to make her living by it in her own home.

5931. CHAIRMAN.—Your accounts contain an item for "Separation allowances, £20 5s. 7d."—Yes, there are three very old deaf nuns, two of whom were formerly teachers, and the third a pupil, and the committee gave that sum to be distributed between them.

5932. Farm expenses are put down as £50 10s. 8d. What is the extent of the farm?—The land about the institution is 184 acres, but those expenses only refer to the portion which is cultivated for the benefit of the institution.

5933. Do the masters all live in the institution?—They do.

5934. It appears by your minutes that a legacy was left by the late Lady Headfort to the Deaf and Dumb Institution, Dublin. Has that been received by your institution?—Yes; I brought forward considerable evidence that the money was intended for our institution. Lady Headfort was a subscriber for many years, which, with other circumstances, satisfied the committee that the legacy belonged to this institution, and they paid it over to us.

very seldom reject any on the score of deficiency of intellect.

5943. Occasionally, if children are deficient in intelligence, you are obliged to send them back to their parents or friends?—Yes, sometimes.

5944. Is there any provision made for instructing the intended masters of apprentices to speak on their fingers?—The boys generally instruct themselves.

5945. Dr. CURRIE.—Is it usual to admit pupils into the institution except from Ireland?—We admitted one child whose father was employed on board a steamboat, but it was very doubtful whether he resided in England or Ireland, because he was sometimes in Holyhead and sometimes in Kingstown, and so the committee gave him the benefit of the doubt and admitted the child.

5946. Since the establishment of the Roman Catholic institution, there is not the same competition at elections as there used to be?—I should say not.

5947. Your minute book for March, 1878, records—

"A meeting was summoned for this day at three o'clock. Rev. J. A. Dickson in the chair. In the absence of a quorum, the members of the committee present, in order to carry on the business of the institution, inspected the accounts and vouchers, and signed a cheque. The cheque was also signed by the Rev. Robert Fleming."

How was that done?—The cheque requires three signatures, and sometimes in the summer months, when it is difficult to obtain a quorum, two members go over the accounts and vouchers, and sign a cheque, and it is understood that they, having signed the cheque, have been satisfied that the accounts are correct, and a third member will then sign the cheque, and at the following meeting the minute is read and confirmed.

5948. So it would be, if the former had been a legal meeting. You will find there was an irregularity in the case referred to?—No institution could be carried on otherwise for some months in the year, especially during the vacation. The accounts must be paid, as the tradesmen cannot wait for their money.

5955 The same thing appears to have occurred on August 9th, 1878. On the 14th September, 1877, the only member present was the Rev H G Carroll, who inspected the accounts and vouchers, and signed a cheque for £153 7s 6d. What would happen if no member of the commission attended?—The accounts could not be paid. We have now a very good working committee.

5956 CHAIRMAN.—Your rules provide:—

"The association shall consist of a patron, a patroness, a president, vice-patron, vice-patroness, six governors, members for life, annual members, committee, three honorary secretaries, a treasurer, an auditor, honorary and corresponding members of committee. Every subscriber of 10s., or collector of £1 yearly, shall be a member."

Is there any list of members?—Only a list of life members, because the other members change every year.

5957. Practically the right of voting is not in use, as there is no competition for places?—Exactly. The committee are able to admit every eligible candidate.

5958. Your expenditure for last year included "Deputation Secretary's salary and expenses"? Does he go about and preach on behalf of the institution?—Yes, he used to hold meetings, but we have no permanent deputation Secretary now. We had one only for about five months last year.

5959 Did he go to different parts of the country each year?—He visited towns in different divisions, with the exception of the Province of Ulster, which we do not interfere with.

5960. There is a separate institution there?—Yes, the Ulster institution.

5961. The institution, so far as we can, appears to be well managed, and in good order. Does there appear to be any falling off in the legacies since the Church Act passed?—No, nothing considerable.

May 28, 1879.

SEVENTEENTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, MAY 28, 1879: 11 o'CLOCK, A.M.

At the Commissioners' Office, Four Courts.

Present.—THE EARL OF ROOSE, Chairman; LORD RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, M.P.; LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON; RICHARD O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M.P.; WILLIAM WILSON, Esq., M.P.; ANDREW SCARLE HART, Esq., LL.D.; and ARTHUR HILL CURTIS, Esq., LL.D.; with JAMES CHIEF MCKENNEY, Esq., LL.D., Secretary.

Mr. ROBERT W. SHAKELTON, Q.C., attended.

Mr. Robert W.
 Shakleton, Q.C.

5962 CHAIRMAN.—You are one of the Governors of the Protestant Orphan School?—Yes. I desire in the first place to mention that those schools do not, strictly speaking, come within the scope of this Commission, because they have no endowment, properly so called. They merely possess some legacies, which, according to our rules, have been funded, but we have no special endowment for keeping up the schools themselves. Having received a letter from your Secretary, I attend here as the representative of the schools, but I have no authority from the Governors of the schools to do so. The Boards of Governors of the two schools will meet in a few days, and, if the Commissioners desire, I shall apply to those Boards. At present the only authority the officers of the schools have for attending here to-day are resolutions passed by sub-committees of the school.

5963 LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—Of course you are aware that we have no compulsory powers, but we are anxious, so far as possible, to be able to present a report that would give a true and full account of the condition of the various institutions which possess any property, whether derived from public or private sources.—As far as I am concerned, both personally and on behalf of the majority of the Governors to whom I have spoken, I am anxious to give every information.

5964 The Commissioners in 1857 returned only the girls' school. Was there, at that time, any school for boys in connection with your society?—No; the boys' school was only founded in 1867.

5965 CHAIRMAN.—What endowment is there for the girls' school?—There is, strictly speaking, no endowment whatever. The funds consist of annual subscriptions and donations, and legacies. By the rules of the school any donation of £10 or upwards, is invested, unless otherwise specially directed by the donor; and all legacies, unless specially directed not to be invested, are invested; in order to constitute a fund for the purpose of keeping up the school.

5966 I do not understand how you make out that the school has no endowment?—Because nothing has been given specially for the purpose of keeping up the school.

5967 LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON.—As I understand, you have no fund which you are bound to preserve?—We can apply all or any of the funds of the school to any purpose of the school we think fit. We are not bound to preserve any portion.

5968 CHAIRMAN.—Must you apply the funds to educational purposes, or might you?—and then in any other way?—They were given for the purpose of the girls' school, and we could only spend them for that purpose.

5969. Could you spend anything except the interest of the funds you have accumulated?—We can spend the capital, if we think fit, on anything connected with the education of the girls. We may buy ground for our school, as we did the other day.

5970. Have there been any special funds given in grants?—Yes. Three.

5971. What were those sums?—£100 was subscribed by the members of Lodge 101, Athlete, a memory of Brother Fennell, and handed over to the Governors of the girls' school, on condition that two pence, one of £5, and one of £1, should be given every year to the best answerer in French and English. Another sum of £100 was left by the late Brother Arley to provide annual prizes in the same way for the best answerers in English. And a third sum of £100 was subscribed by the brethren of Byrle Lodge, a memory of Dr. Nagle, the interest on which is to be applied in prizes for general proficiency in school. These sums are invested, and bear five per cent interest, and could not be applied to any purpose except these prizes.

5972. The report of a former Royal Commission stated that the school had received £500, part of the property of Dr. John Barrett, A.M.?—Yes. Dr. Barrett left a considerable sum for charities. Our school applied for, and was granted, £500, as one of the charity schools of Dublin.

5973 In 1857 your school was reported to have £463 Government Stock derived from small donations and bequests, and £1,000 invested in building. Have you that still?—We have the building still, and our stock is very largely increased. Our last report contains a list of the various legacies that have been given to the school from time to time.

5974 LORD JUSTICE FITZGIBBON. The sums so mentioned amount to a little over £4,000. Is any of that invested as capital?—The whole is so invested.

5975 CHAIRMAN.—How is the institution managed?—The Board of Governors appoint, from amongst themselves, three committees—education committee, a finance committee, and an expenditure committee, and in addition there is a ladies' committee, which is composed of the wives or widows of Governors of the Institution. They look after the internal arrangements of the school. As Deputy Grand Master I am an office chairman of all the committees connected with the schools, or with the Order; and the honorary secretary is also, an office, a member of all the committees; but the other members are elected annually.

5972. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Of whom do the Board of Governors consist?—Of the Vice-Patrons, Vice-Presidents, and Life and Annual Governors. Vice-Patrons are donors of £50, Vice-Presidents of £30, and Life Governors of £10. Every Freemason who subscribes £1 annually is an annual Governor.

5973. A great number are entered in the report as official Governors?—Yes. Grand Lodge pays £100 a year to the school, and all the officers of the Grand Lodge, and the Masters of the Dublin Lodges are an office Governors during their term of office. A number of subordinate lodges have also contributed out of their own funds to make particular officers of their lodges, for the time being, Governors of the school.

5974. How are those officers appointed?—They are elected by the lodges themselves. When I say lodges I include the different orders—the Prince Masons, the Knights Templar lodges, and the Royal Arch Chapters.

5975. Are all those, who appear in the report as official Governors, representatives selected by the different lodges or lodges?—They are.

5976. What was the date of the original foundation of the school?—1792. At that time it was in North Richmond-street. It was moved from thence to Brompton-road about 1839.

5977. In the reports of 1857 your premises are stated to be held, under the Right Hon. Sydney Herbert, by lease for 100 years from 1831 at an annual rent of £4. Is that simply the ground rent?—Yes.

5978. How was the buildings erected?—By the Masonic Order. Originally the house was much smaller than it is at present, but additions have been made to it, from time to time. Within the last three years we purchased the tenant's interest in an adjoining piece of ground, and got a new lease from the Earl of Pembroke.

5979. Whatsum was expended on that purchase?—£1,000 was paid for that extra ground, in addition to what had been spent on the building.

5980. What sums have been expended upon permanent buildings?—I could not say; as until I became Deputy Grand Master, about ten years ago, I had nothing to say, except as an ordinary Governor, to the management of the school. Since then, however, I have taken a most active part in it.

5981. The present value of your invested stock is stated in your report to be £11,764 15s. 7d. Is that—Yes.

5982. Of that sum you derived £4,000 13s. 10d. from legacies, which leaves over £7,760 of accumulations?—Yes.

5983. How long have you been accumulating that amount?—It has been received actively since 1837 from the payments made by Vice-Patrons, Vice-Presidents, and Life Governors.

5984. In whose names are the funds of the school invested?—In the names of three trustees appointed by the Board of Governors. The Duke of Leinster, Judge Townsend, and Rev. Dr. Westly, were originally the trustees. After the death of the Duke of Leinster, I was appointed a trustee in conjunction with Judge Townsend and Dr. Westly, and we are the three trustees at present.

5985. Are the legacies also invested in the names of these three trustees?—They are. Some of the stocks have not yet been transferred to the names of the present trustees.

5986. Your investments, in addition to Government and Indian Stock, consist of Preference and Debenture Stock of the Midland Great Western and the Great Southern and Western Railways?—Yes.

5987. You appear also to have £1,565 in Masonic Hall Company's Shares. What is the nature of that security?—The Masonic Hall Company built the Hall in Molesworth-street, which they have let, at £600 a year, to the Grand Lodge. The capital of the company was £10,000, and the interest on that in £500 a year, which is paid out of the £600 received as rent.

5988. What is the security for the £600 a year rent?—The income of the Grand Lodge, which is over £1,000 a year.

5989. Is that income derived from subscriptions?—Yes, and from the Lodges, and payments from officers.

5990. Of whom does the company consist?—Of members who subscribed for the shares, which were £5 each. The directors must have subscribed at least £50.

5991. CHAIRMAN.—Are all the shareholders Freemasons?—Originally they were all Freemasons, but some have died, and their shares have passed into the hands of their representatives.

5992. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—The income from trust funds, which, in 1857, was returned at £35 4s. 1d., appears to be now £458 7s. 10d.?—Yes. That includes the three prize funds of £5 each.

5993. The total income of the school last year is returned in your report at £3,760 13s. 10d.?—Yes, but that includes £63 balance from 1877. Life donations amounting to £327, and bequests, £1,297.

5994. Do the life donations and bequests in substance go to the capital account?—They do, but those were not all invested. There was only £604 10s. invested last year, as the expenses were very heavy. The balance on hand at the end of 1878 amounted, however, to £330 18s. 11d.

5995. Who has the control of the expenditure upon the school?—There is a Finance Committee, before whom all the accounts are laid. They investigate the items, and recommend to the Board what cheques should be drawn. The salaries of the teachers are settled by the Education Committee.

5996. It appears that, in 1857, the mistress was paid £42 a year, with apartments and partial board, and an English master received £35 a year. These appear to have been the only salaries paid at that time. What teachers have you now?—First, the mistress, Miss Richards.

5997. Does she manage the domestic arrangements?—Yes, she has the entire superintendence of the school.

5998. Has she anything to do with the teaching?—Only to superintend it.

5999. Who are the actual teachers?—Miss Leech is our resident governess. We also have a pupil teacher, Anne Capeland, and a visiting governess, Miss Lloyd; M. Duffie teaches French, Miss Jackson music, and Miss Julian drawing.

6000. Salaries, wages, &c., are returned in your report for last year at £539 17s. 10d. That is a large amount?—It includes the salary of the assistant secretary, and the wages of the domestic servants, in addition to the teachers' salaries.

6001. What staff of servants is kept?—I think there are three or four.

6002. Who has the superintendence and employment of them?—The mistress is charged with the superintendence of, and has the power to hire and dismiss, the servants.

6003. The number of children returned as in the Institution, in 1857, was 29. In your last report it is 38?—Counting the pupil teacher, who is still virtually a pupil, it is 37.

6004. What number are your buildings suitable for?—I think not for more than 40, but we have had 44.

6005. Your report shows that 10 of the pupils in the school on the 1st January last came from Ulster, 13 from Leinster, 9 from Munster, and 6 from Connaught. How are the children cloased?—They are clothed by the Board of Governors. The mother, or some other relative or friend, sends in a memorial, stating the full particulars of the case—the number of children the father left, how long he was a subscribing member of his lodge, the income the family possess, the ages of the children, and certain particulars with regard to their health. The father's Grand Lodge certificate must also be produced, as well as recommendation by the officers of the father's lodge, and a certificate from the usual medical attendant of the family; the certificate of the marriage of the child's parents, a certificate of the age of the child, and a certificate of the death or burial of the father, are also required.

6010. In the school exclusively confined to children whose fathers had been Masons?—Certainly; and the children must be orphans whose father is dead, but not necessarily the mother.

6011. One of your rules provides—

"No child shall be eligible for election who shall be under eight or over twelve years of age upon the day of election; nor can any child remain a pupil in the institution after attaining the age of sixteen, unless permitted to do so by a resolution of the Board?"—

Yes.

6012. What becomes of the children after the age of sixteen?—We try, so far as we can, to ascertain what they are fit for.

6013. What course do you pursue?—Before each election for admission to the school, we get as many of the candidates as possible to attend before the Education Committee, where we give them a preliminary examination in reading and geography, in order to report to the Governors as to the state of their instruction. After her election each child is again examined by the committee, who decide the class into which she should be put. We have three classes. One taught by Miss Lloyd, the head governess; another by Miss Leach, and the third by Annie Copeland, the pupil-teacher. The girls are promoted from one class to another, according to their merit. They are also examined as to their capabilities for music and drawing, and, if we find that any child has a talent for either, we cultivate that talent. We further have reports from time to time of the progress made by each girl, and examinations are held every year by such men as the Rev. Joseph Galbreath, F.R.C.S.; Mr. Hunter, of the National schools; Mr. Wilkinson, of the Kildare-street schools; and others.

6014. Do they report on each child?—They send us the result of their examinations, with the number of questions put, and the number answered by each child. We also see the papers set, and some of the questions are exceedingly difficult. Then, when the time comes for a girl to leave the school, if she is to be a governess we look out for a school abroad, to which, as station is too young an age at which to place a child out as a governess, we can send her, with the sanction of her parent or guardian, to qualify her for her profession.

6015. Where do you generally send them to?—Some to Switzerland, and some to Remagen on the Rhine.

6016. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Are these also Masonic schools?—No, they are not. Some of our girls have gone up for the Trinity College examinations, and have got certificates. This year two were going up, but, unfortunately, illness broke out in the school.

6017. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—When the girls' education is finished do you take any steps to get them situated?—We do so, as far as we can. If we find a girl has no capabilities for teaching, we apprentice her out. Many of them are in millinery establishments and places of that sort. We always exercise a strict supervision as to the class of house they go to.

6018. In your last report I find an item for apprentice fees, £183 14s. 1.—Yes.

6019. Was that paid for girls who had been in the school?—Yes.

6020. There is also an item of £315 12s. 10d. for outfit—what does that mean?—Each girl, when leaving the school, gets an outfit. The children, while in the school, are required to wear a uniform dress.

6021. There is a charge of £35 15s. 6d. for travelling expenses. How is that incurred?—That was chiefly paid for sending home, for their vacations, children whose mothers were not able to bear the expense.

6022. What steps do you take, before apprenticing the girls, to ascertaining the position of the people you send them to?—The Apprentices' Commission makes very strict inquiries. That committee consists, with the exception of the two ex-officio members, entirely of gentlemen in business. They are—Mr. Denry, who has a large connexion; Mr. Grove, Mr. Whitstone, Mr. Woodworth, and Mr. Siddons. Alderman Manning also devotes great attention to that subject.

6023. The school having been so many years in operation, you have an opportunity of looking back over the career in life of a large number of children. As a rule, how have they succeeded?—They have all turned out remarkably well. There has not been a disappointment, since the foundation of the institution, in which anything wrong has happened with regard to any of the girls. We constantly get letters from former pupils, expressing themselves in the strongest terms of affection and gratitude. Many of them hold very high positions as governesses, both at home and on the continent. Some are engaged, in Russia, as English teachers, and they get from £80 to £100 a year as resident governesses.

6024. Are all the pupils boarders?—Yes.

6025. Is the number of children from each part of Ireland regulated by the number of Masons in the different parishes, or by the classes that appear on the returns?—So far as the members of the Order are, they select the most deserving ones.

6026. Have you a large number of children through the country?—We have a very large number both in the south and in the north—in fact, in every part of Ireland.

6027. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—I suppose whenever a lodge has a candidate they do their best to secure her election?—Certainly; they make the strongest case they can.

6028. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Has the number of governors increased since 1857?—Yes; it has more than doubled.

6029. Have the children, as a body, been able, after leaving the school, to earn their own livelihood?—They have.

6030. Have many of them had relatives able to support them?—Very few. Nearly all have been able to support themselves.

6031. As the result of the education they receive in the school?—Yes.

6032. What classes are the pupils in the school generally taken from?—They are rather above the middle class. Many of them are the children of gentlemen who were very well off.

6033. Have the girls, in every case, been in reduced circumstances before being elected?—They have.

6034. Is there any qualification as to poverty?—None whatever. The Board, however, can refuse to allow the name of a child to be placed on the list of candidates when the relatives are well off, and they have done so—for instance, where a mother had a good income. In one case, because the mother had not truly stated her income, they postponed the election.

6035. Lord R. CHURCHILL.—Candidates are obliged to get a certificate from the father's lodge?—Yes.

6036. I suppose the lodge would not give a certificate except in a deserving case?—As a rule, they do not.

6037. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Do the girls all leave at sixteen?—As a rule we do not send them away at sixteen. If the Education Committee finds that a girl is likely to benefit by remaining longer, they recommend that she should be continued, and then she is allowed to remain for a year, or perhaps two years longer.

6038. What is the average number of vacancies each year?—At the election, which is now pending, three girls will be elected; and at the close of this year there will be at least two more vacancies. We had eight last year.

6039. What amount of competition is there usually for those places?—We have twelve or fourteen, and sometimes sixteen candidates at each election.

6046. What proportion of the pupils get the higher education to fit them for becoming teachers?—I should say about three-fourths.

6051. You appreciate those who have failed to qualify for teaching?—Yes.

6052. The Report of a former Royal Commission, upon this Institution was—

—This is an admirable establishment, and in all material appliances, decidedly the best with which I have met. The house is very good in a plain but occasionally attractive, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Great Canal. The rooms are well ventilated, lighted, and warmed, and its natural accommodation, generally, is of a first-rate character. In point of discipline it cannot be surpassed. The Mistress (Mrs. Noble) has established a high degree of order and discipline in the house, and virtual silence is almost the perfection of its instruction. The Governors, and a Committee of ladies associated with them, exercise a careful and constant superintendence over the working and management of the Institution. The state of instruction, however, at the school, although not bad, did not correspond with the general excellence of the establishment in other respects. I examined the children in reading, grammar, geography and English history. Their reading was tolerable, but they had a very imperfect acquaintance with grammar and geography. In English history they answered well, and their writing was fair. I would strongly urge on the Governors the propriety of attending a higher class of education to some, if not all, of the inmates of the Institution. The question of improving the character of the education given in this school has, I was informed, already occupied the attention of the Governors, but owing to want of funds its consideration has, for the present, been deferred.

Has the education been improved?—It is completely changed in every branch alluded to in that report. I should not now be ashamed to put the children in competition with the children of any other school. With regard to writing, I have never seen better done by any children.

6043. The same report continues——Bearing in mind that the children are for the most part selected from the respectable middle class, it does seem to suggest that the introduction of a higher degree of education might in many cases be attended with advantage. That has been adopted?—We have introduced French, music, and drawing, and a much higher class of English education.

6044. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Practically, you have acted on the recommendations contained in that report?—We have.

6045. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROVE.—Are the children taught foreign languages now?—They all learn French, but, if we find a child has no great taste for it, we do not keep her at it.

6046. How does the expenditure come to be so high?—The children's feeding is as good as can possibly be. I may mention that in the expenditure is included the cost of breakfast for the Governors, who meet once a month at the school and breakfast there. They pay for their breakfasts 1s. each, but it costs something in excess of that. The Education Committee meet twice a month, and they, too, pay for their own breakfasts.

6047. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—At what time do they meet?—At half past eight on the second and fourth Monday in each month, when they breakfast and go to work at nine.—The Ladies' Committee do not breakfast there. They go in whenever they like.

6048. What do they do?—They go through the school, see after the internal arrangements, examine the clothing, &c., and direct the mistress to get such articles as are required.

6049. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROVE.—There are nine members of your Education Committee?—Yes.

6050. Have you any quorum?—Strictly speaking, there is no fixed quorum, but the members were very regular in their attendance; for instance, the Vice-Chancellor attended constantly while he was living in town.

6051. How many members usually attend?—Generally speaking, from three to five.

6052. How often do the Board meet?—Once a month at the school-house.

6053. Can any Governor attend those meetings?—Yes.

6054. What is the usual attendance of Governors at the Board meetings?—On an average, over thirty.

6055. Is the business of the school conducted at those meetings?—Yes; the Governors meet at half past eight for breakfast, and at nine o'clock they commence the work of the school. The reports from all the committees come before the Board, and are confirmed or not as they see fit.

6056. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do any of the members of the committee, or any of the Governors, examine the children?—Yes; and at the meeting of the Education Committee the first thing we do is to have the judgments awarded by the various teachers, during the preceding fortnight, submitted to us, and, if we find that any girl has not been answering satisfactorily, we reprimand her, either in the schoolroom before the other children, or in private. In case of any report with regard to misconduct, we call in the girls complained of, and admonish them.

6057. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROVE.—In your report for 1878 reference is made to a falling off in the receipts of £463 5s. 11d. Was that falling off been continuous, or is it only so compared with a particularly good year?—It is only so compared with 1877. We had no report of a falling off before. Last year, as every one knows, there was great depression in the commercial world.

6058. Does the depression extend to Manxury as well as to everything else?—Manxury is considered, to a certain extent, a luxury.

6059. CHAIRMAN.—Is the examination you have mentioned, by persons selected from other institutions, such as the Church Education Society and the Board of National Education, merely for those pupils who are leaving?—We have two examinations annually, for the entire school.

6060. ARE PRIZES GIVEN TO THE PUPILS?—Yes. We generally have a meeting every year at the Exhibition Palace, at which the prizes, which had been awarded according to the results of the examinations, are given away.

6061. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What do you consider the cost of each child in the school to be?—It is about £23 a year, which includes the servants, the teaching, and the house rent and expenses.

6062. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROVE.—Does it include also the expenses of the girls in Germany and Switzerland?—No. They are in addition to the cost of the pupils in the school.

6063. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Have they not greater comforts and luxuries in your school than they have elsewhere?—I do not think they have. I think the girls who are sent out as apprentices, would be as well fed, at the places where we send them to, as they are at the school.

6064. Do you think the governesses are as well off as the apprentices?—Certainly. In private families I should suppose they would be as well fed. I do not say they might be as well treated.

6065. Do you find their first attentions for those who go out as governesses?—We try to do so. Some of them go to schools in England, where their relatives wish them to go, as finishing schools. One or two are in London. They get certificates and situations in England.

6066. Do you not, in a great number of cases, get situations for them yourselves?—We do in a great number of cases. Our former assistant secretary, Mr. Odgers, who was connected with the schools for a great many years, takes a great interest in their skill, and he and many others look out for situations for the girls.

6067. LORD JUSTICE FRYGROVE.—Does the item for salaries and wages include anything for a paid officer, for managing the financial business of the school?—It includes the salary of our assistant secretary.

6068. What does he get?—£100 a year.

6069. Does he give his whole time for £100 a year?

Aug 18, 1878.
Mr. Robert W.
Skelton, &c.

—He is also assistant secretary of the Masonic Orphan Boys' School, and gives his entire time to the two institutions.

6070. Your report states that the necessary expenses of the institution increased last year by £254 3s. 9d. To what was the increase attributable?—To the increased price of provisions and other things.

6071. The bill-fare, &c., last year, was £18 3s. 7d. Was not the children's health good?—It was not.

6072. Is that a usual thing?—It is not.

6073. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Was there any epidemic?—There were a few cases of small-pox in the school this year.

6074. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Were any of them severe?—They were very mild, and the sufferers were removed at once to hospital. Scarioline, also of a very mild type, supervened, but all are quite well now. Every year we take a place in the country for the children.

6075. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Is the locality—on the banks of the Grand Canal—a healthy one for your school?—The medical man says the locality itself is healthy, but that we have not sufficient ground, and the Governors have taken a lease of nine acres of ground, on the Simeon's-court-road, from the Earl of Pembroke, on which they intend to build a new school-house, and to move the school there.

6076. Are they going to sell the present house?—I suppose so.

6077. Are the sanitary arrangements of the present house inspected?—Yes. They have all been set to rights. They had been very good until last year, but things went out. Our last report contains an item for the improvement of the premises of £83 1s.

6078. CHAIRMAN.—What tannet have you of the new piece of ground you have taken?—350 years. The medical man advised us to have a large playground for the children.

6079. You will have to incur considerable expenditure in building a school-house on it?—Yes, because the plans must be approved of by the Penitentiary Estate Office, and it is supposed the expense will be about £12,000.

6080. You will get something for the old premises?—Yes. In addition to the ground that was attached to the school, at the time of the report of 1857, about three-quarters of an acre adjoining was purchased since, and thrown into our ground.

6081. Mr. WILSON.—Do you require certificates of successful vaccination?—Every child must be vaccinated before she comes in. The moment the small-pox made its appearance we had every child re-vaccinated. Our medical officers are Surgeon Smyly, Dr. Banks, and Dr. Kidd.

6082. Did you ever think of putting your pupils forward for clerkships in the Post Office and Savings Banks?—No.

6083. Your attention has never been turned to that?—No. Many of them have sprung from the better classes, and the relatives of some object to their going out as governesses, and of others to their going out as apprentices to millinery establishments. We do not like to place a child in any situation except with the consent of the mother or guardian.

6084. CHAIRMAN.—Is there any female school belonging to the Penitentiary except this one?—No. It is now the only one. There was formerly another in Cork, but it was amalgamated with the Dublin one.

6085. Then you have no institution in which a lower class of education is given?—No. As a rule, the Masons set all of the better classes. We never let a child go out as a servant. They have sprung from a better class than that.

6086. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Do you get any assistance from Masons outside Ireland for those schools?—Some very few Masons in England do subscribe.

6087. Do any Continental or American Masons subscribe?—No.

6088. You said you were about taking a lease from Lord Pembroke. Are there any legal difficulties in the way of your holding land?—None whatever. The lease is made to three trustees for the school.

6089. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are not an incorporated body?—No.

6090. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—Does it appear in the lease that it is for the purpose of a school?—It does.

6091. I suppose all the children in your schools, both boys and girls, are Protestant of one denomination or another?—They are.

6092. There is no lack of Protestant children looking for admission?—No. At present, although some members of the Roman Catholic persuasion are members of the Order, still, as a rule, there are not many, and their children would not come into the school. There are some children in the school whose fathers were Roman Catholic Masons.

6093. On whose application were they admitted?—On the mother's; but they had been baptised and brought up as Protestants.

6094. Previous to the father's death?—Certainly, as far as we knew.

6095. You make no attempt to induce surviving Catholic parents to bring up their children as Protestants, for the purpose of obtaining their admission?—Certainly not. We never interfere in the slightest degree with the religion of the children. We hold out no offer whatever to a parent to alter the religion of a child.

6096. CHAIRMAN.—As a matter of fact, it is a Church institution, and the children come in as Church people?—They are Protestants.

6097. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What are the denominations of your pupils in the girls' school?—Church of Ireland, Presbyterian, and Methodist.

6098. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—I presume you have a considerable proportion Presbyterian?—Yes, from the North.

6099. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—How do you manage about religious instruction?—Master MacSorley attends to that. There has never been any objection made to any of the girls receiving religious instruction from him. Any children, who are either Presbyterians or Methodists, are not brought up for confirmation; but only the members of the Church of Ireland.

6100. They are all taught the Church catechism?—Yes.

6101. Mr. WILSON.—You do not make any attempt to exclude Roman Catholics?—None whatever. Any child brought forward may be elected, if she is a fit and deserving object. Religion does not enter into our consideration at all. Perhaps I might state here, as the verbal head of the Order in Ireland, that Masonry does not recognise any distinction in religion at all.

6102. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—But the fact you teach is Protestant?—Because it so happens that all the pupils are Protestant. No child has come up, so long as I have been connected with the school, who is not a Protestant.

6103. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—If such a case should occur as the children of a Roman Catholic Mason being left destitute, would they, being Roman Catholics, be eligible for your school?—Certainly.

6104. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—What would be the mode of dealing with the religion of such children?—I do not know what arrangements might be made with regard to them, but, of course, they would not be required to receive the religious instruction, or to attend the Protestant service.

6105. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—The object of the school would be to preserve the child's religion?—Certainly not to interfere with it in the slightest degree.

6106. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Are the votes informed of the religious denomination to which each child belongs?—Certainly not. Masonry knows no difference with regard to religion.

6107. The qualifications required have reference to the temporal condition of the children, and to the fact of the father having been a Mason?—Yes.

6108. And for some time past, at all events, you have not had any Roman Catholic candidates.—We have not.

6109. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—Suppose the mother of any child—say a Methodist—objected to the child being taught any religious doctrine by the chaplain, would the Governors attend to that objection?—No child is ever taken into the school without the mother being informed as to what religious education is given.

6110. CHAIRMAN.—As a matter of fact, there is a very small number of Roman Catholics amongst the Pioneers?—At present very small.

6111. Fewer than formerly?—Yes.

6112. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Do you make any provision, out of your general funds, or otherwise, to give charitable assistance to the children of poor Masons?—We do.

6113. Have you a large number of applicants?—A committee meets once a month to distribute charity from a special charity fund. Applications for relief from that fund may be made either by a distressed Mason himself, or by the widow or children of a Mason, and, according to the merits of each case, an award may be made.

6114. In fact, the boarding school is the part of the charitable institution of the whole body, the benefit of which is given to the children of the higher class?—Yes.

6115. And the few belonging to the lower class are assisted?—There are very few of the lower class Masons. There is a certain amount of expense connected with becoming members of the Order.

6116. Have you had many cases of the orphans of Masons, who have been themselves members, getting into the school?—We have not had many such cases. As a rule, the children of persons who have been subscribers have not sought admission.

6117. Is that because of their not becoming poor enough?—That may be one reason.

6118. Have you an office for the school?—The assistant secretary has at present a room in the Grand Lodge buildings, and by that means he receives subscriptions from persons coming there to transact business. In future there will be a charge of £25 a year for that. I may mention with regard to the Presbyterians, that the Rev. S. G. Morrison, who is a well-known Presbyterian Minister, was formerly, for many years, one of the Grand Chaplains of the Order.

6119. Among the Dublin Governors have you any large number of Presbyterians?—Yes, a great number, both clergymen and laymen: a good number of Jews are also subscribers.

Rev. JOHN J. MACDONALD, M.A., recalled.

Rev. John J. Macdonald, M.A.

6120. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—What arrangements are there for the religious instruction of the children in the Masonic Orphan Girls' School, and what steps, if any, do you take to provide for any objection on the part of Dissenters?—Before a Dissenter is taken into my class the mother or guardian is written to, without whose consent the child is not instructed in any catechism or distinctive religious teaching, or brought to confirmation.

6121. Have you had any cases in which the parent did object?—Yes.

6122. Has any provision been made, in a case of that kind, for teaching by a clergyman of their own particular denomination?—No. They are permitted to attend the Scripture class, which is not denominational.

6123. The expenses of each child in the Masonic school appear to come to about £55 a year, and in Pioneers' Asylum, of which you are also a governor, they come to about £50. Both these sums are very much in excess of the cost of each child in the Bethesda Orphanage. What is the reason for the increased expense?—I could not give any reason, except that there is a desire to have the girls well clothed, well fed, and well taken care of.

Mr. CHAWORTH J. FERGUSON, J.P., examined.

Mr. Chaworth J. Ferguson, J.P.

6124. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Honorary Secretary to the Masonic Girls' School?—Yes.

6125. How are the elections of pupils arranged?—Every half-year advertisements are published that an election will be held in the following June or December. Parties who desire to apply for the admission of children then send in memorials, which must be on a prescribed form, before a given day.

6126. LORD B. CHURCHILL.—Are those advertisements published in the country papers as well as in the Dublin papers?—Certainly. The memorials are laid before the Education Committee, who exercise their discretion as to the poverty or necessitous condition of the children—whether they are suitable to be placed on the list of candidates or not. This is not in any way affected by their religious belief. The number of candidates fluctuates from twelve to eighteen. The election is made by the votes of the Governors, and the most numerous and deserving candidates are almost always elected.

6127. Mr. WILSON.—If a Presbyterian or a Methodist minister wished to visit any of the children, would he be permitted to do so?—There is nothing in our rules to prevent it, and if an application were made to one of the committees it would be sanctioned at once.

Mr. ROBERT O'BRIEN FURLONG, M.A., examined.

Mr. Robert O'Brien Furlong, M.A.

6128. CHAIRMAN.—You are the Honorary Secretary of the Masonic Orphan Boys' Schools?—I am.

6129. How long have you held that appointment?—Only four months, but I have been a Governor of the school for four or five years, and I was a member of the Education Committee for one year.

6130. When was the school established?—On the 20th April, 1867.

May 25, 1878.
Mr. Robert
O'Brien
Parling, &c.

6136. What is the constitution of the school?—It is precisely similar to that of the girls' school.

6137. Is being a governor of one school a disbarment from being a governor of the other?—Totally.

6138. What is the qualification for governorship?—Annual governors pay £1 a year, life governors £10, vice-presidents £10, and vice-patrons £10.

6139. What is the present income of the school?—I have made out an abstract, but I desire to say that what Mr. Shackleton stated about our appearing here without the authority of the Board applies to the boys' school as well as to the girls'. We stand here only as individuals, to give what information we possess. The income of the school for the last four years was, in 1875, £1,106; in 1876, £1,883; in 1877, £1,816; and in 1878, £2,387. The large increase in 1878 is due to legacies, amounting to upwards of £1,200.

6140. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you treat legacies as income, or as capital?—As a matter of fact, we treat them as capital, but they appear in our accounts as income. At present our expenditure is less than our income.

6141. CHAIRMAN.—Like other charities, when you receive more subscriptions than you require, you invest the surplus?—Yes.

6142. Mr. O'BRIEN.—The income of your accumulated subscriptions is not sufficient to keep up the school?—No. Our fixed income is supplemented by life and annual subscriptions.

6143. CHAIRMAN.—Are you at liberty to expend your capital?—Yes, the funded capital is entirely under the control of the Board. There is nothing to prevent them spending any part thereof.

6144. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Your annual subscriptions are rather falling off?—Last year there was a slight falling off. In 1875 the annual subscriptions amounted to £206, in 1876 to £755, in 1877 to £745, and in 1878 to £735.

6145. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Is this exclusively a boarding school?—Exclusively.

6146. Have you any school premises?—At present we board the boys with a gentleman at Merion, but we have entered into an agreement with him to purchase the premises and become the owners ourselves.

6147. What was the origin of the Institution?—There was a meeting of Friends held on 26th April, 1867, at which a motion was adopted declaring that such an institution should be established, and then persons were asked to give subscriptions. It took nearly two years to collect money enough to start upon.

6148. You had no premises at that time?—No; we commenced by boarding out our boys at the Incorporated Society's School at Santry.

6149. What did you pay for them there?—At first £25 a year, for each boy.

6150. At that rate you got part of the benefit of the Santry Endowment?—I assume we did. The first pupils on the foundation of this school were admitted to Santry on the 1st February, 1869, when five pupils were elected.

6151. How long did you continue sending the boys to Santry?—Until January, 1873.

6152. What was the largest number you sent to Santry?—I cannot say exactly. In 1870 the rate of payment at Santry was increased from £25 to £30, and at that time we had ten boys there.

6153. What was done with the boys after you removed them from Santry?—They were sent to the school they are in at present, Adelaide Hall, Merion, kept by the Rev. Mr. Skeen, who receives about sixty boarders, including our boys. We paid him £60 per head per annum for everything, including board, education, and clothing; but that rate was found to be insufficient, and we advanced it first to £65, and afterwards to £70.

6154. Was the rest of Mr. Skeen's establishment a mere private school?—Yes. Our arrangement with Mr. Skeen is to terminate on the 30th June next.

6155. What is to be done then?—We intend to open the school at Adelaide Hall as our own establishment, with our own master. We have engaged a master and mistress.

6156. What will become of Mr. Skeen?—He has accepted a living in the county Clon.

6157. In fact, you have purchased his interest?—We have merely purchased his interest in the house, and three and a half acres of land, which is held for eleven years, at a rent of £100 a year.

6158. What number of boys in the house suited for?—Forty, and we hope to open school with thirty.

6159. What have your numbers been up to the present?—In 1869 we began with five, in 1870 we increased to ten, which number was gradually raised, in 1876 we had twenty-three; and at present we have twenty-six.

6160. CHAIRMAN.—Have you more candidates than you are able to admit?—Yes. At the last election, in May, there were eighteen applicants for four vacancies.

6161. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Were they all eligible?—All eligible and deserving.

6162. The whole amount you have received from bequests has been £2,070 &c. 6d., whereas your invested capital amounts to £10,890 &c. 7d. Where have you got all that money from?—From donations, and the income of our income over expenditure.

6163. Do you mean donations from the Masonic body?—Yes. Our rule is—"Every donation of £50 and upwards shall, the donor so desiring, be invested in the names of the trustees."

6164. You have in Masonic Hall Co's. shares £1,510. Are those shares in the same company mentioned by Mr. Shackleton?—They are.

6165. What is the authority for selecting this investment?—It is specially authorized by our rules.

6166. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—In your last account I find under the head of bequests—"Rev. W. H. Higginbotham on account, £938 18s. 6d."—what does that mean?—The Rev. Mr. Higginbotham left a share of the residue of his property between the two Masonic schools. Each school has already received £938 18s. 6d., and we shall get a few pounds more, when the executors close their accounts.

6167. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—Your report shows that nine of the boys in your school on 1st January last were from Ulster, six from Leinster, six from Munster, and three from Connaught. Does that distribution arise in any way from your Government being unequally divided over the Island?—I believe it arises entirely from the urgency of the cases. Speaking as an individual Governor, I do not care where boys come from. I always select the most deserving cases.

6168. Do governors in particular localities, as a rule, vote for candidates belonging to their own districts?—I think not. I may mention incidentally that I went to Belfast last month, on a deputation for this school, and our brethren there expressed themselves strongly opposed to that idea; they said they did not think Cork men should, without further reason, vote for a Cork boy, or Belfast men for a Belfast boy.

6169. There were nine pupils from Ulster, out of twenty-four in the school, on 1st January last?—That is not due to a preponderance of votes in the northern province; in Belfast alone there are only forty-six annual Governors.

6170. The Santry school, to which you formerly sent the boys, was principally a commercial school. In your school commercial or classical?—Classical, mathematical, and general. I find by the minutes that the Board did not consider the style of education at Santry school sufficiently high. I do not myself consider that the education we are giving at present is sufficient for the class of boys we have, and that is one of our reasons for making the change.

6171. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—They take a lower class at Santry?—I think so.

6172. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—What is the present course of education, and how do you manage to provide for the boys?—The education at present is general. There is nothing very special about it. The boys are principally apprentices, but we have not turned out very many yet. We have now engaged a distinguished graduate of the London University, and we propose to give a thoroughly sound commercial education that would fit the boys for the Civil Service, or for business; but not a University education.

6175. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Will you not teach dancing?—I think not unless the master sees a boy particularly efficient.

6176. LORD JUSTICE FRERES.—Have you any system, like that in the girls' school, of ascertaining whether the boys are suited more to one class than the other?—There is an Education Committee, but it meets at the Freemason's Hall, and as we are not brought personally into contact with the boys. At Christmas some members of the Committee—myself amongst the number—have gone out for the last two years, and examined at the school.

6177. Your last report says—

"In conclusion, the Board must express a hope that the monthly meetings of the Governors will be, in future, more numerously attended; and request the Brothers to note that these meetings are held at the Freemason's Hall, Holborn-street, on the second Tuesday in every month, at four o'clock, P.M., when the reports from the several committees are received, and the general business of the Institution transacted."

You do not hold your meetings so regularly as in the girls' school?—Not hitherto; the system of monthly Boards has only recently been introduced. Formerly the affairs of the school were managed entirely by a committee. We now appoint two stewards every month, whose duty it is to inspect the school, and report to the next meeting of the Board. You must remember that, at present, the school is not our own.

6178. Is it proposed to have a regular system of visitation?—It is.

6179. How do you intend to carry out the domestic arrangements?—The wife of the head master will act as matron, and will have the control of the domestic arrangements. The head master himself will have supreme control of the education. He is a first-class one, and has got very good testimonials. We selected him out of seventy-three candidates.

6180. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What salary are you to give him?—The joint salary of Mr. and Mrs. Sparks will be £300 a year, with apartments and retinue.

6181. LORD JUSTICE FRERES.—What are the arrangements for the expenditure of the establishment?—All it is under the control of the master or of the committee?—Under the control of the Finance and Education Committees.

6182. What has become of those boys who have completed their education at your school?—Some have gone to the medical profession. The last boy who left was apprenticed to a doctor.

6183. Have you done anything for boys who have shown a proficiency in any particular branch?—In the case of a boy who showed great proficiency in drawing, I myself was so much impressed by it, that I urged on the Board to pay for him in the School of Design, which they did.

6184. The boys elected to this school must be all sons of Masons?—Yes; sons of deceased Masons.

6185. What is the number of the body from whom the children might be drawn?—I should say about 12,000 or 13,000.

6186. Have you any English Masons in the school?—No, the father must have been a member of a lodge under the Irish constitution.

6187. Would that extend to the sons of Irishmen who had gone to the colonies?—Yes, because we have a number of lodges in the colonies holding warrants under the Grand Lodge of Ireland.

6188. Are these confined to the British possessions?—The British possessions merely;—Canada, India, Australia, and New Zealand.

6189. Then if an Irish Mason who emigrated to any of the British colonies died, leaving his family destitute, his sons would be eligible?—Yes; we have at this moment one boy from Australia, and another from America. A number of regiments in the army, too, hold warrants under the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and the children of Masons belonging to these Regiments' Lodges would be eligible.

6190. Has that number increased or diminished since 1857?—It has increased considerably during the last seven or eight years.

6191. What do you calculate will be the annual cost of keeping each boy?—I estimate it roughly at £60, of which about £32 is for board, clothing, and education, and expenses of the school, and the residue for the expenses of management, salary of assistant secretary, and office expenses. I have been informed that in the Masonic Boys' School in London, where they have 210 boys, the cost is only £45 per head.

6192. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—What would the clothing cost?—The expenditure for clothing, while our boys were at Sentry school, was £7 a year each.

6193. LORD JUSTICE FRERES.—Does the £45, which you say is the cost per head at the Masonic School in London, include any allowance for house rent?—No. I believe they have the house for nothing, while we have to pay £100 a year for our house.

6194. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Do you think that the boys in your school are kept in exactly the same way as the boys in the Royal schools?—At present I do not think they are kept so well.

6195. In what respect do they differ?—The boys do not look as if they were so well clothed.

6196. Do they get the same comforts in the way of food and accommodation?—I do not think they do at present, but I hope they will.

6197. Does your estimate of £60 a year include your paying £100 a year for the house?—It includes that—the salary of the assistant secretary and every other expense.

6198. What salary has the assistant secretary?—He has £170 a year altogether—£70 from the boys' school and £100 from the girls' school.

6199. Are you acquainted with the upper middle-class schools in England, where comfortable farmers send their sons?—Merely by visiting some of them.

6200. Do you know whether the boys get the same sort of board and education where only £40 a year is paid?—No; but these schools are generally endowed.

6201. I know of a very large private school close to Oxford, built as a speculation, where only £45 is charged?—The parents pay for the clothing there.

6202. What is your calculation for the actual feeding of your boys?—We have put down £750 a year for food, calculating for thirty boys, the masters, matron, and servants.

6203. LORD JUSTICE FRERES.—What are the other figures of your estimate?—Clothing, £200; medicine, £10; books, £40; salaries of assistant teachers and assistants, £500; servants, £30; rent and taxes of school-house, £120; assistant secretary, £70; printing and stationery, £35; rent of office, £20; advertisements, £10; postage, £25; coals and gas, £40; and incidentals, £50.

6204. Two of your items appear high—namely, £35 for printing and stationery, and £30 for postage?—We have to print and post a very large number of voting papers, and, unfortunately, the return papers are liable to a stamp of one penny. They used to come for a halfpenny.

6205. Do you charge that to the funds of the school?—We must do so.

6206. What is the item for advertisements for?—The half yearly elections are advertised in the principal papers in Dublin, Belfast, Derry, Sligo, Cork, and Liverpool.

6207. Then £160 of the expenditure—namely, £70 for the assistant secretary, £35 for printing, £25 for rent of office, £10 for advertisements, and £20 for postage—is peculiar to the management of your school?—Yes.

6208. CHAIRMAN.—If you were to calculate on chaises as a part of the course, would you not require an additional master?—Yes. Some objected to the salary of our head master, but you cannot get a good master for less. We intend to have an assistant at £80, but we have not selected one as yet, and we also intend to have a visiting professor, if necessary, to teach French and drawing.

6207. Mr. WILSON.—I suppose the pupils in the boys' school are of the same class of life as those in the girls' school?—Very much the same.

6208. Very few from the humbler classes?—Yes, very few.

6209. We have had some little evidence as to the religious teaching in the girls' school. Have you had any experience at all of the religious difficulty, if we may call it so?—None whatever.

Mr. Richard
L. Whitty.

6210. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—You are the assistant secretary of both the Mincin Orphan Schools?—Yes.

6211. And a paid officer of both institutions?—Yes.
6212. CHAIRMAN.—What are the salaries connected with the girls' school?—They are—assistant secretary, £160 a year; the matron (who lives in the house), £70; the senior teacher, £75; the second teacher (who is also resident), £40; the pupil-teacher (resident), £30; visiting drawing-master, £25; French master, £25; and visiting music teacher, £70.

6213. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Explain your system of book-keeping?—As to receipts—any gentleman coming in to pay money gets a receipt, of which I keep a counterpart, and from time to time, as my duties will permit, I enter from the counterparts into the cash-book.

6214. CHAIRMAN.—How often do the governors meet?—The Board meets monthly; the Finance Committee also meets monthly—seven days before the Board. They examine the accounts and report to the Board. The Education Committee meets fortnightly.

6215. What attendance is there usually at the Finance Committee?—The attendance is usually from three to five. That Committee consists of seven elected and two ex-officio members.

6216. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—What is the system of auditing the accounts?—The Finance Committee check, from the counterparts, the entries in the cash-book.

6217. How is the expenditure vouched?—The bills for payment are produced to the committee, and, if approved by them, they recommend the Board to draw cheques, payable, generally speaking, to the order of the parties to whom money is due. There is an imprest account for incidental expenses.

6218. Where do you bank?—At the Munster Bank for the Girls' school, and at the Royal Bank for the Boys' school.

6219. Are the accounts entirely separate?—Yes.

6220. Do you balance your accounts regularly?—Yes, a balance-sheet is presented monthly.

6221. The report for the boys' school shows that 6210. What religious do the boys belong to?—I believe, as a matter of fact, all the boys are Protestants, but there is nothing to prevent our receiving a Catholic if he was elected.

6211. That is unlikely to happen?—I am afraid it is unlikely at present, as the Catholic members of my Order are very few.

6212. Have you any rule in contemplation with regard to religious instruction?—No. The question has not been considered yet. The head master whom we have elected is not in Orders.

6213. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Mr. Sloan is?—Yes.

6214. Mr. O'DONOGHUE.—He is a member of the Church of England?—He is.

Mr. RICHARD L. WHITTY examined.

you have £700 on deposit in the Royal Bank. How does so much money on deposit account?—When that sum had accumulated it was proposed to invest it, but as the money would be shortly required, for the purchase of the new premises and the expenses attending the change about to be made in the constitution of the school, it was thought better to place it on deposit receipt in the names of the trustees.

6217. Is that money still lying on deposit receipt?—Yes.

6218. On the 31st December, 1878, the boys' school had £518 4s 3d to the credit of their cash account in the Royal Bank?—Yes.

6219. Was that required for immediate use at that time?—Yes. Our engagement was to pay the Rev. Mr. Sloan, at whose school the boys were kept, quarterly, and under that arrangement over £500 was payable to him in the beginning of January, 1879.

6220. Have you any fixed time of the year for receiving subscriptions?—They become due on the 1st January, but as a rule the greater number are paid in at the first election, which is held in the month of May.

6221. I presume you apply the analogy of a professor who cannot vote, unless he has paid his fees, to a governor unless he has paid his subscription?—That is one of the rules in each school.

6222. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—Who signs the cheques?—Two of the trustees and myself.

6223. How many trustees are there?—Three.

6224. Can you always get two trustees to sign them?—There is sometimes a little difficulty, but not much.

6225. CHAIRMAN.—Do the trustees sign the cheques at the regular meetings?—No. The plan adopted is this: The finance committee present a report, signed by their chairman, recommending that certain cheques be drawn. If the Board confirm that report, which prescribes circumstances the order for the drawing of the cheques, and that is the authority for the trustees to sign them.

6226. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Is there a pay sheet?—Yes. After the cheques are ordered it is the duty of the Finance Committee to see that the accounts are paid, and they transmit the vouchers for each payment

Rev. William
T. Martin, U.S.A.

6227. CHAIRMAN.—You are Convener of the General Assembly?—I am Convener of the Committee of the General Assembly, intrusted with watching over the interests of the Assembly in the matter of intermediate education.

6228. How long have you held that office?—I was first appointed by the Assembly four years ago.

6229. Is it a permanent office?—The appointment is made from year to year, but it is usually continued.

6230. What is the nature of the evidence you wish to bring before us?—The Committee have instructed us to tender a statement of the views which the Assembly has expressed, from time to time, upon this question of the endowed schools in general.

Rev. WILLIAM TORD MARTIN, U.S.A., examined.

6231. I suppose specially with reference to Ulster?—Yes, but not exclusively.

6232. The General Assembly has under its control all matters connected with the Presbyterianism in nearly all over Ireland?—It has.

6233. It has the appointment of the ministers?—It judges of their qualifications and ordains them, but they are selected by the people.

6234. LORD R. CHURCHILL.—You have prepared a written statement?—Yes, and if you allow me I should prefer to give it, as a continuous statement. It is as follows:—

‘I have been instructed, by the Committee of the General Assembly appointed to watch over the interests of the Church in the matter of intermediate education, to submit to the Commission the views of the Assembly on the question of the Endowed Schools, which form the subject of this inquiry. The Assembly has hitherto dealt with the Endowed Schools as part of the larger question of intermediate education in Ireland. The Presbyterian Church has desired to see established, on the non-sectarian principle, a complete system of schools, bringing the advantages of secondary education, within the reach of the entire population, and, by the superior instruction given in them, elevating the standard of education in all departments. The Education Act of last session, proceeding on a different method, precludes the hope of the realization of so comprehensive a project. It is not now likely that the State will undertake the organization and endowment of schools. It is, therefore, the more important that existing endowments should be utilized to the fullest extent, and that such as are of a public nature shall not be allowed to remain, as at present, practically derelict. It is, I presume, generally acknowledged that the endowed grammar schools of Ireland have not been so efficient, in promoting higher education, as might have been expected from the liberality of their endowments. I do not mean, for an instant, to cast any reflection on the ability or devotion to their duty of the distinguished teachers who are at the head of these schools. Causes beyond the control of the masters have sadly contributed to this result. The progress of the schools has been hindered by their identification with one denomination, by their relation as tributary to Trinity College, Dublin, and by the want of an efficient governing authority, having the appointment and dismissal of masters, and invested with discretionary power to divide the revenues or transfer them to other localities, where the interests of education might be better served by doing so. The Endowed Schools are commonly regarded as connected with the Protestant Episcopal Church. The Royal and Donnan schools, e.g., such of the Diocesan schools as are now in existence, are, no doubt, open to pupils of all denominations, and there is no charge, as far as I am aware, of interference with the religious convictions of any pupils; but they are not, on that account, free from a distinctly denominational character in the eyes of members of the Presbyterian Church. Their head masters are, with only one exception, clergymen of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Even in this generation education was, I understand, considered by the Government as a necessary qualification for appointment to the mastership of a Royal school. This denominational character is a hindrance to their popularity, and usefulness. Look to it that these schools belong equally to all denominations; that in their government, their teaching staff, and all their arrangements, there is no predominance of any one Church; that they are open to all persons, irrespective of creed who may desire the education which they offer, and a very important step will be taken towards greatly increased prosperity. The establishing to Trinity College, Dublin, of all the exhibitions, obtainable from these endowments, has also tended to narrow their usefulness. In Ulster a very large proportion of the students looking forward to a university curriculum, have to view matriculation in one of the Queen's Colleges. It would tend very much to widen the educational relations of the schools if the exhibitions were allocated on examinations held in connection with the schools, and if, when won, they were tenable by students pursuing the course for graduation in any college in Ireland. It would also tend to render more effective the stimulus to study which these valuable prizes afford if the competition were not restricted to individual schools, but opened to all Endowed-school boys, without distinction as to the place in which they may have studied. To affect any change which will be of real value in promoting the success of the Endowed schools, it is indispensable that they be placed under an efficient management—a management which will command the confidence of all sections of the community. Under such government, severed from all denominational considerations, and no longer attached exclusively to one university, these schools might be made to serve the interests of education in a much larger measure than heretofore.

6245. I suppose in alluding to the Endowed schools you are alluding to the Royal schools?—The Royal schools specially.

6246. Not to the Erasmus Smith's schools?—No; I will refer to these separately.

6247. You are aware that the Erasmus Smith's is an exclusive foundation?—Yes.

6248. Proceed with your statement?—

"The operation of the Irish Church Act has diminished, to a considerable extent, the provision for intermediate education. It is understood that the revenues formerly devoted to educational purposes should be restored out of the surplus funds in the hands of the Church Temporalities Commissioners, and the schools sustained under the management having charge of the Endowed schools. The schools, on the foundation of Erasmus Smith, have been the subject of frequent complaint on the part of the Assembly. The grounds of complaint are briefly these,—that the Presbyterian Church has been unfairly excluded from all share in the benefits derivable from the foundation, and that the endowment which was originally designed to promote grammar school education chiefly, has been in great part diverted to the support of elementary English schools, the maintenance of Fellowships and Lectureships in Trinity College, Dublin, and grants to the Mayo Coast Hospital. To make clear the grounds of complaint as to exclusion from this endowment, it is necessary that I should ask attention to the history of the foundation. The original instrument, which was not before the former Commission (after they had adopted the draft Report, as they state in a note on page 64 of their Report, is essential to the formation of a just opinion as to the intention of the donor of these large endowments. This instrument was executed on 1st December, 1642, between Erasmus Smith of the one part and Henry Jones, Esq., Samuel Wintour, Esq., Thomas Harrison, Esq., James Wootton, Samuel Mather, Robert Chambers, clerics, William Lloyd, Esq., His Highness's Attorney-General of Ireland, John Byatt, Esq., Recorder of the City of Dublin, Thomas Harcourt, Esq., Clerk of the Council of Ireland, Colonel Jerome Barker, Colonel John Bridges, Major Anthony Morgan, Edward Roberts, Esq., Auditor-General of Ireland, James Stenish, Esq., Recorder-General of Ireland, Daniel Hutchinson, John Pearson, Richard Tygh, and Thomas Bockle, Aldermen of the City of London, of the other part. To these trustees Erasmus Smith conveyed certain lands 'that out of the annual profits of the said tenements shall raise five schools, for the teaching of grammar and the original languages, and to write, read, and cast accounts, to be built in the places following, viz.,—One in the town of Sligo, one upon his lands about Galway, one upon his lands in the Barony of Clanchuan, county Tipperary, one upon his lands in the Barony of Donagh, county Antrim, and one whose lands that are sufficient (which is £2,500) shall be fixed, each schoolmaster to be allowed £40 a year salary, and not under, on 1st November and 1st May, for teaching the poor children; the premises to read, write, and cast accounts, and grammar, as they shall be found capable, without any other allowance for the same; and that such other tenements on the lands, their children, or shall be made fit for the University or Trinity College near Dublin, shall have towards their maintenance £10 a year apiece, for the first four years after their entrance, and not longer, and, for none of such, for the relief of such other poor scholars as the said trustees, or some of them, shall think fit to receive the same.' These trustees, into whose hands Erasmus Smith entrusted his lands, for the uses specified, were all noted Protestants. He could not have chosen men more heartily opposed to Presbytery, yet the Presbyterian Church, whose exclusion of itself in that drawn up at Westminster by the Puritan division of that period, and approved by Parliament, and whose form of worship is identical with that observed by those original trustees, has been excluded from the educational benefits accruing from the foundation."

6249. Mr. O'BRIENMENT.—You omitted the portion of the deed of trust in which he specified the catechism to be used. It was the catechism drawn up by the assembly of divines—I have quoted from the only copy of the deed I could lay my hands on.

6250. Proceed with your statement?—

"Surely in this the Church has suffered injustice. In answer an appeal may be made to the provisions of the charter granted in 1642, during the lifetime of the donor. But a great political change had meanwhile taken place. The Episcopal Church had been re-established. If a charter was to be obtained at all there must be the recognition of the altered state of things. Provisions more favourable to Protestants, outside the Established Church, could not be expected than those which the charter contains. The only occasion which it requires are that the masters shall be approved by the bishop of the Diocese, and that they shall sign the first six canons of the United Church. There are no requirements that the scholars shall attend the parish church, while they are to be taught doctrine identical with that of the Presbyterian Church—the doctrine of Archbishop Usher's catechism. It is only in 1719 that we find the governors making rules which require the use, at daily worship, of prayers out of the English Liturgy, attendance at the parish church, the use of Dr. Moore's catechism, and the preparation of the scholars for confirmation. It is very certain that Erasmus Smith did not in any way contemplate or support the dominion and rule which distinguish the Episcopate from the Presbytery and the service. The exclusion of all except members of the Episcopal Church from the administration and enjoyment of his endowments is clearly inconsistent with his intention. This valuable endowment has been also diverted from its original use by the expenditure of its revenues so largely in the multiplication of English schools. The provision that the pupils should be taught "to read and write and cast accounts" was apparently intended as a direction of the course of study in the grammar schools, and not as an instruction to found schools for the teaching of these branches alone. Before the establishment of the primary system of National Education in this country there may have been good reason for extending the means of elementary instruction, but since the establishment of the National system there has been no sufficient ground for expending their trust funds on the maintenance of rural schools. Yet from the year 1830 to 1843 the government increased the number of English schools by 32, making 149 in all. The multiplication of Elementary schools, in the face of the efforts of Government to supply the want, was not a use which can be vindicated as in accordance with the purpose of the trust."

6251. CHAIRMAN.—It is now only 1864.—The number I have mentioned is taken from the Report of the Commission in 1857.

6252. Proceed with your statement?

"At the present time, when the National system is so largely taken advantage of by the Protestant Episcopal Church, there can be no shadow of reason for the maintenance of these rural schools. The funds should be withdrawn from them, and devoted to the more urgent and important work of grammar-school education. The grants made to two or three of these in any district would form a very valuable addition to the local contributions, by which the recently-organised intermediate schools are maintained. The provision in the charter that a Hebrew or other Lectureship should be founded in Trinity College has been expended into a very considerable annual grant. The annual contribution to the Royal Coat Hospital is another charge which is objectionable. That institution is costly, and Episcopalian. If it is, indeed, a valuable charity, but the trust funds of Bresson's Foundation should not be made contributory to its support. I am aware that this annual grant, as well as other charges to which I have taken exception, is by authority of Act of Parliament, but an Act of Parliament may need to be revised and repealed. In the present state of education in Ireland, all revenues available for the maintenance of grammar schools should be devoted strictly to that purpose. The Presbyterian Church has an indisputable claim to an equal share with the Protestant Episcopal Church in all the educational benefits derivable from the liberal endowment of Bresson's Beath. The Presbyterian Church is the only body in this country representing the Puritan Creed and the mode of Divine Service to which the donor was attached. In carrying out Protestant objects, the Legislature, acting through the Established Church, has in past times made over to the members of that church the revenues of this foundation. Such disposal of them, at no time fair to Presbyterians, is without plausible defence now that the State has withdrawn its sanction and support by disestablishment. Presbyterians ask only what is equitable when they say that they shall no longer be excluded from the benefits to which they have been all along justly entitled. If it should seem good to the Legislature to employ these funds solely for educational purposes, without regard to religious distinction, and so convert the schools into open schools on the strictly non-sectarian principle, the Presbyterians would offer to this course no objection. It is only educational advantages which she seeks out of the revenues of the foundation. My attention has been directed to the Drury school of Magherafelt. The history of this school is recorded in the report of 1853. The donor was an elder in the Presbyterian Church, and provided in his will that the Presbytery, or the Synod of Ulster, should have the nomination of the master. The proceeds of his liberality are employed to educate poor children, Presbyterians or others, in the faith of the Episcopal Church. The Presbyterians Church is deeply interested in this question. In Ulster, in which the greater part of her members are found, the proportion, according to the report of the Census Commissioners, of Presbyterians and others attending schools of superior instruction in Ulster was, in 1851, 41; in 1871, 55. The proportion of Roman Catholics was, at the same dates, 10; and of Protestant Episcopalians, 48 in 1851, and 33 in 1871. It will thus be seen, that, among the Roman Catholic population, the attendance on schools of superior education in Ulster made no progress during these ten years; among Episcopals it very greatly declined; while among Presbyterians and others it made a very considerable advance."

6253. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—The decimals may be deceptive if we do not know the entire numbers. Do you know what the totals were?—This is in proportion, as I read the Commissioners' report, to the total of each separate denomination.

6254. You state that the attendance of Protestant Episcopalians has diminished from 41 to 35. The numbers would convey what I believe is contrary to the fact, if taken to mean that the number of children attending the large schools had diminished in the ten years. Read it again.—Let me say that these proportions are in relation to the total population of each denomination.

6255. What I want to call attention to is that there is no evidence of declension unless you have compared the total number of children, although the decimal may have altered. For example, if you have a total of 100 children attending in 1851, and 500 in 1871, according to your figures the attendance might appear to be declining?—As I understand these are the proportions which the scholars attending superior schools bear to the total number of the denomination.

6256. Dr. HARR.—That is impossible. 43 per cent. of the whole denomination can not be attending schools.—Not attending schools, but attending schools of superior instruction.

6257. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—I understand it perfectly if the part of which these are decimal fractions is the total number of children attending superior schools?—My point is this,—that the Presbyterians have been taking more and more advantage of superior instruction.

6258. Read the sentence again?—

"The proportion, according to the report of the Census Commissioners, of Presbyterians and others attending schools of superior instruction in Ulster was, in 1851, 41; in 1871, 55. The proportion of Roman Catholics was, at the same dates, 10; and of Protestant Episcopalians, 48 in 1851, and 33 in 1871. It will thus be seen, that, among the Roman Catholic population, the attendance on schools of superior education in Ulster made no progress during these ten years; among Episcopals it very greatly declined; while among Presbyterians and others it made a very considerable advance."

6259. That is what does not follow at all; because your decimals are not decimals of total attendance at all, but decimals of proportion?—I should have inserted the "proportionate attendance." That was the point of my argument.—

6260. I will ask you to correct the expression, and insert "proportionate attendance." I would be sorry it went abroad—because we believe and hope it is contrary to the fact,—that the gross amount of higher education has diminished?—That was not in my mind, and I am sorry that in the haste of writing I omitted the words.

6261. Continue your statement.—

"This desire for higher education deserves to be commended by the State. At the least, it should not be impeded by obstacles which are fair and liberal ones have placed in the way. In laying before the Commissioners these views on the matter which form the subject of inquiry, I have brought forward nothing which I have not good reason to know to be accurate, and the views entertained by the General Assembly, here as that Court is to hold its annual meeting during the next and following week, which I shall submit to its judgment all the parties on which I have represented its views, if I have fallen into any error, or made any omission of importance, the Rev. L. E. Burleigh, who is to be examined at a subsequent stage of your proceedings, will be able to amend or replace any statement."

6262. CHAIRMAN.—That is the whole of your statement?—Yes.

6263. LORD JUSTICE FRYGEMAN.—The first matter that you dealt with was with regard to the identification of the Royal schools with one denomination. I suppose you are aware that the work of the schools, whether rightly or wrongly, has become principally the work of boarding schools?—I am aware of that.

6264. You used this expression—"The progress of the schools has been hindered by their identification with one denomination." And again you said—"Let it be felt that these schools belong equally to all denominations . . . and a very important step will be taken towards greatly increased prosperity." I wish to lay aside, for a moment, the question of the relative advantages of day schools as against boarding schools. Do you know any such thing anywhere as a boarding school, not identified with one denomination, which has been prospering?—Yes; I think the Belfast Academic Institution.

6265. Is that a boarding school?—The masters have with a boarding house.

6266. Do the boys, who reside in those houses, belong to different religions?—I cannot give you information that is reliable on that point.

6267. Then you can give no information of the existence of a mixed boarding school where Catholic, Episcopalian, and Protestant boys are all boarding together and being educated together?—I would not be prepared to advocate an institution, or a boarding house, established on that principle.

6268. Then I understand that where you recommend that these schools should belong equally to all denominations, and say that a very important step would be thereby taken to promote their prosperity, you begin by depriving them of the character of boarding schools?—Not necessarily. It would be possible to have two boarding schools in connexion with the same day school teaching.

6269. But you know we have to deal with actually existing structures. Take Portora. It is not in a neighbourhood that will supply a sufficient number of boys to fill the buildings they have. Armagh is similarly circumstanced. How do you propose to show that a very important step would be taken to promote the prosperity of these institutions in depriving them of that character of boarding schools?—I have suggested that the governing body should have authority to use the endowments as they might see best in promoting secondary education.

6270. I want to know from you, as a practical gentleman, representing a very important body, how you would propose to use such institutions as Portora and Armagh schools?—My proposal would be this—that if it be necessary to maintain schools in full operation there, I would appoint a master—say a Presbyterian, in addition to the Episcopalian, and allow him to have a boarding school in which he would take charge of the Presbyterian pupils.

6271. That is, the sort of institution you propose would be one in which the boys should live in separate houses, according to their denominations, and during the day should receive their education in school together?—I should think that would meet the necessities of the case, if it be considered of prime importance that the schools be maintained on boarding schools.

6272. For the present, lay that question aside, because it is quite a separate one—whether the endowment of boarding schools is a proper thing or not, as contrasted with day schools. Do you know of any school where boys of different denominations live in separate houses, and meet in the same school-room during the day?—I do not know of any such.

6273. Do you not know, as a matter of fact, that both Catholics and Church people would object to any such arrangement?—I should think they would.

6274. Do you know any denomination that would like it?—I do not think that our General Assembly would disapprove of an arrangement of that kind.

6275. Do you think they would prefer it to an arrangement of having boarding schools for Presbyterians, separate from boarding schools for Episcopalians?—I do not think that that point arises. You see we are dealing with the question of the public endowment.

6276. I am dealing with your statement, that if the existing Royal schools belonged equally to all denominations, a very important step would be taken to promote their prosperity. I want to see how you would propose, practically, not to promote the prosperity, but even to preserve the existence, of boarding schools, if belonging equally to all denominations?—My statement contemplates the application of those endowments in day schools.

6277. And diverting them altogether from being boarding schools?—Not altogether; but I should prefer to see the boarding department made of less consideration, and the benefits of the endowment extended to the residents of the locality in which the schools are placed.

6278. Still bear in mind that I am at present asking you about boarding schools separately. You represent the body that has been almost the leader in advocating what is called united education. Does your approval of the system of united education extend to boarding schools?—No. We do not consider that the question of united education involves the conclusion that boarding houses are to be united, containing members of different denominations.

6279. The vast majority of people, who have not to look to endowments at all, send their children to boarding schools. Supposing boarding school education to be a very large part of education, if any endowment is to be provided for boarding schools, do you advocate mixed boarding schools?—I have already said I should not approve of a mixed boarding school. I do not think it would be practicable.

6280. Is that your conclusion also as to the views of the General Assembly, or the majority of the denomination you represent?—I should think that the majority would object to the establishment of mixed boarding schools, but that is a different point from the establishment of the same day school, with separate boarding houses conducted by the different masters.

6281. Contrast your proposed group of denominational houses, round a central day school, with the ordinary boarding school where the boarding and teaching go on in the same institution—what advantage, do you think, there would be in the former proposal?—I think there would be the advantage of a larger institution.

6282. CHAIRMAN.—By having a larger institution you could work it more economically?—Yes—and have a higher class of teaching.

6283. LORD JERVIS FREDERICK.—Why a larger institution?—Because under the arrangement by which you have one boarding house, of a denominational kind, and in connexion with that a day school, the tendency is to have a school of only one denomination; but if in connexion with the same teaching there were different boarding houses you might gather a large proportion of other denominations.

6284. That is begging the question I asked you. I wanted to know what advantage the lodging house system would have over the other, and the answer you gave me was that the school would be larger. There are in Armagh, at present, nearly 200 boys substantially of one denomination in a single boarding school. There are several Roman Catholic schools with even larger numbers. I want to know what advantage you propose to gain, by uniting separate boarding schools into one day school, for separate denominations?—I have already pointed out the educational advantage in the larger school, and, consequently, more varied and efficient teaching. That is one advantage. But there is an objection to the scheme of endowed boarding houses, which would be very strongly pressed by the Assembly, and that is, the Assembly objects in this form to the endowment of separate denominations.

6285. What do you call "this form"?—In the form of endowing denominational schools at all.

6286. MR. O'SHEAPHREY.—Even in the shape of boarding houses?—Even in the shape of boarding houses.

6287. LORD JERVIS FREDERICK.—With regard to the size of the school, do you think there is any limit of size at which a school ceases to be improved by enlargement?—I have not much practical experience of schools, so I can only answer that by what seems to be probable. An overgrown school might be a disadvantage.

6288. I may refer you to the evidence of Rev. Dr. Weir, of Raphoe, a witness of practical experience, who stated that he thought 60 boys in a boarding school was about the number that could be managed best by the master. Others have had more than double that number. If you had a school of, say, from 70 to 150 boys, what advantage do you see in uniting several institutions of different denominations?—The advantage which seems to me to arise from it is, that in this way you would give the opportunity of secondary education to those who at present are, at least practically, deprived of it.

6289. Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—You mean Presbyterians?—Yes; supposing that in connexion with one of these endowments there was a Presbyterian master, and a Presbyterian boarding house, and a mixed day school, there would be an increase in the opportunities of education afforded to the Presbyterian Church.

6290. LEAN JEFFRIES FRINGROVE.—But can you suggest any reason why you prefer a Presbyterian master and a Presbyterian boarding house, connected with a mixed day school, to a Presbyterian master and a Presbyterian boarding school of the ordinary type, except that the logical conclusion of preferring the last would be that you ought to allow the Roman Catholics to have one, too?—No, I should only offer objection to the endowment.

6291. Then I understood you to say that the General Assembly objects to giving endowments to denominational institutions?—Yes.

6292. But that objection does not extend to a Presbyterian master, established in a Presbyterian boarding house, provided he be joined on to a mixed day school?—There is a wrong impression as to the point of view from which the Assembly deals with that matter. The Assembly is not contemplating the opening of a boarding house at all.

6293. Or of the application of any public endowment to the endowment of boarding houses?—Precisely. What the Assembly contemplates is payment for education in day schools. Boarding schools would be simply admissions to them, of a voluntary kind.

6294. You are aware that almost without exception, the leading English endowed establishments for the teaching of boys—Eton, Harrow, Rugby, Winchester, Charterhouse, and the like—are boarding schools?—Yes.

6295. Can you suggest any reason why the Irish are not to have the same, except that you tell us that the General Assembly does not approve of them?—We object not to the having of those boarding houses, but to their maintenance out of the public funds.

6296. But such schools in England are largely endowed. I want to know why the General Assembly objects to our having such institutions as Eton, Harrow, Rugby, Winchester, and Charterhouse, in Ireland?—Our objection lies on the ground that the Church holds very strongly the principle of supporting, out of public funds, only those objects which are common to all subjects of the State, resident in the locality.

6297. But you know you have applied that principle in the portion of your report that deals with Erasmus Smith's schools, which are not endowed out of public funds. Would not the logical result of this preference of the General Assembly's be, to prevent our having in Ireland any endowed boarding schools at all?—I think not. I always mark this distinction—our Assembly looks for the use of those endowments for teaching purposes, not for boarding, but for the pupils attending the classes in the day school. It is for that teaching that the Assembly would have the money paid.

6298. That is to say the Assembly would apply all the Irish endowments to day schools?—Directly to day schools.

6299. Then I must press you to favour us with your reason why we are not to have any endowed boarding schools in Ireland?—There arises in Ireland, of course, at once the difficulty of religion. With the difference in creed you must have one of two things, either common education, in which the secular education is paid for by the State, or denominational education, paid for by the State. The Assembly has maintained the former very strongly, and objected to the latter.

6300. Then you perceive that the result of living in a country where denominations differ is, according to the view of the General Assembly, that you must abandon the hope of getting any help from endowment, if you want to send your son to a boarding school?—The endowment would indirectly subsidise the boarding school, because the master would be permitted to take in boarders. The master who is appointed to a day school would, of course, have the privilege of taking in boarders.

6301. Then is the objection of the General Assembly removable, by doing what they object to, indirectly?—I do not think so.

6302. The Erasmus Smith's Governors object to allow the master of their High School to take any boarders; but, being paid to educate day boys, he should be situated away from them by the more remunerative boarders. Does not your indirect way of getting over the denominational difficulty hang you into this practical one?—Yes, if it be a real one.

6303. The principle of the General Assembly being diametrically opposed to any endowment for boarding schools of any denomination in Ireland, you propose to meet the difficulty, indirectly by allowing a man, employed and endowed to teach day boys, to keep boarders; or directly by having groups of denominational boarding houses round central mixed day schools. These are the only two possible ways, and the latter alternative would be inapplicable to the existing establishments?—As the establishments exist, yes.

6304. And not merely as regards the buildings, but also, I presume, their constitution?—As to the enlargement of the day schools, in several instances clearly it would be, because the locality does not afford a very large number of pupils of the class that would send themselves of the advantage.

6305. With regard to Erasmus Smith's schools, you are aware, of course, that at the date when the Assembly of Divines' Catechism was adopted by Erasmus Smith, it was the only one to which Protestants had the opportunity of giving their adherence?—Yes, it was part of the established religion.

6306. You want, as I understand, now to prefer the scheme which Erasmus Smith proposed at that date, to the one which he subsequently adopted, when he obtained his charter?—That was not precisely the point. I take that as an indication of what he preferred.

6307. And I understood you to attribute his subsequent adoption of Private Unster's Catechism to the political change that had taken place in the intervening period?—Private Unster's Catechism is quite in accord with that of the Westminster Divines.

6308. But would not your argument, so far as it attributes to Erasmus Smith, a preference for the Catechism of the Assembly of Divines over Private Unster's Catechism, extend also to attribute to him a preference for Oliver Cromwell over King Charles II.?—And I have no doubt he had.

6309. Now, do you know how long the regulations of 1712 as to teaching the two first Articles of the United Church, and Bishop Mann's Catechism, were enforced; or, rather, do you know how many years it is since any Episcopal teaching has been required in Erasmus Smith's schools?—I am quite aware that those regulations of 1712 were not long in operation. I only quoted them to show the direction in which the changes were going.

6310. But is it not the fact that, at all events, for 150 years back, the evidence you quote has ceased to have operation, and no Presbyterian child at Erasmus Smith's schools has been obliged to learn anything of which the parents would disapprove?—I would not be prepared to question that at all; I cannot tell of the internal discipline of the schools during that time.

6311. But you are aware that the Episcopal regulations of 1712 were very soon abandoned?—They were not enforced.

6312. The next matters you objected to were the extension of the bursarships in Trinity College, the establishment of certain fellowships there, and the connexion with the Bona Coat Hospital—you are aware that those changes were all made by Act of Parliament?—I am aware of that.

6313. And in 1793?—I am aware of that.

6314. Is there any objection, so far as you are aware, on the part of the General Assembly, to the constitution of Trinity College, as it stands now?—There is no objection.

6315. You are aware, of course, that new Trinity College fellowships and teaching are open to Presbyterians as well as to all other denominations?—I am quite aware of that fact.

6316. What is your objection to the connexion of the schools with Trinity College, if they are to prepare boys for a university?—The General Assembly would not object to connexion with Trinity College further than this, that it tends to divert those pains from a very considerable number of boys in the north of Ireland, who will not be looking to Trinity College, but to the Queen's University. The suggestion is, that instead of making the examinations for those institutions college examinations, they should be school examinations; and then, when was, the pupils should have the opportunity of taking them to whatever university they pleased.

6317. I believe a considerable proportion of the Presbyterian scholars in acts go to the Queen's University?—A very large proportion.

6318. Could you approximate to the proportion of Presbyterians going to the Queen's University as compared with that going to Trinity College?—I could not do so, but I can easily obtain statistics on that point, and send them to your secretary.

6319. Between the system of the Queen's University and Trinity College, as it stands now, is there any preference, on the part of the General Assembly, to one over the other?—I cannot say that there is. I do not remember that the question has been before us recently. The question was considered at the time Mr. Fawcett's bill was before the House of Commons; and the objection on the part of some of the members of the Presbyterian Church was raised in that case, that the operation of the Bill, while it opened all the bursars, would not for a very long period of time make it possible for Presbyterians to have any weight in the government of the university. That objection has been raised, but has never been pressed by the Church as a body.

6320. That is, of course, on account of the length of time it takes to attain a position on the governing body of the college, after getting a fellowship?—Yes.

6321. May I take it, that as far as constitution and management go, Trinity College and the Queen's University are not disapproved of by the Presbyterians?—They are not disapproved of.

6322. And no proposal has been made to alter either of them?—None.

6323. You have used an expression—I would like to know whether it rests on anything beyond enthusiasm. You said in effect you looked forward to great advantage to the Endowed schools, if placed under a management which would command the confidence of all denominations. Do you know any existing management that does that?—I think if they were placed—

6324. I beg your pardon. I want first the historical fact. Do you know any existing system of management, of any school or university, that does command the confidence of all denominations?—I do not.

6325. Now, you were going to tell us how to construct one, that you thought would do so?—If those schools were placed directly under Government control, or if they were placed in charge of a united board—

6326. I presume by "united board" you mean a board differing in religion?—Yes—differing in religion and in which due weight was given to the various interests of the community. I think that would fairly meet the justice of the case.

6327. As you are not able to refer me to any existing board, I must ask you to tell me how you propose to act about constructing a united board, out of members which are so to differ in religion, interests, as ultimately to arrive at unanimity, and obtaining the confidence of all denominations?—First in giving "due weight" to the various interests. To whom would you give the majority, for example?—I think a board fairly representing the different interests of the community, in addressing itself to the promotion of education in those schools, would fairly command the support of the different denominations.

6328. How would you set about forming one that would fairly represent the different interests of the community. Try population: There are in Ireland, in round numbers, seven Roman Catholics for two of other denominations. Do you think a board of nine, of whom seven should be Roman Catholics, would command the confidence of the Protestant denominations?—I do not think that would fairly represent the different interests of the community.

6329. Try property or education: Do you think a board containing a number of Protestants proportionate to the value of the property, or to the number of university degrees, held by Protestants, would command the confidence of the Catholics, or how otherwise would you propose to constitute such a board?—I could not venture to lay down a scheme for a board of this sort. It has not occurred to me to weigh the matter in that point of view.

6330. Then may we regard your suggestion, that the Endowed schools should be placed under a management which would command the confidence of all denominations, as a speculative rather than a practical proposition?—It is speculative, in so far as it deals with this question in the way of theory—proposing changes, but it is practical in this respect, that at present the weight of those schools is entirely connected with one denomination. A board on which there was due weight given to the various denominations would, I think, remove that objection, and increase the confidence of the various divisions of the community in the administration of the endowments.

6331. But you have not endeavoured to consider the question, practically, as to whether that could be obtained?—As to numbers, I have not.

6332. Have you considered whether it would be practicable to do it, in any way, except by dividing the institutions and schools into separate denominational schools?—I think it would be possible to meet all reasonable objections by putting the endowments in the hands of a board in which there was no undue weight given to any party. There might be objection raised to the Board.

6333. You say "meet all reasonable objections." I would like to take matter of this sort by an instance. Would you think it reasonable for Protestant parents to object to send their children to a school in which Roman Catholic emblems were displayed?—I would.

6334. Would you think it unreasonable, on the part of a Roman Catholic, to object if he was not allowed to have religious emblems in the school-room?—I think it would be an unreasonable objection.

6335. Therefore, you would not be able to meet the objections of all parties, except by calling those of the parties to which you do not happen to belong unreasonable?—I do not think that is the just conclusion, from the point of view in which I have been looking at the matter. This is a question of the education of such of the community as look for an education higher than the elementary schools give. The Assembly thinks that if the Government touch that at all, to deal with it, it should deal with it doing fairly by all interests, and open the advantages of this system of education to the members of all denominations.

6336. Assuming that I agree with you fully that it is the duty of the Government, if it at all, to do fairly by all the interests, and open the advantages to all denominations, does not the outcome of the Assembly, according to you, exclude from the modes of doing that, giving anything separately to any one interest, or to any one denomination?—It does.

6337. And you have not considered the practical question—how, with that alternative, the thing can be carried out?—The Assembly has not had any difficulty in the case, for example, the National system. In it there is a united administration of public funds. In the case of the Queen's Colleges and Queen's University there has been the same. In Trinity College we have now the same. The Assembly has maintained that this principle should be carried through, in the public education of the country, in regard to those schools which are the subject of inquiry, so far as they are of a public nature, as well as in regard to the colleges and elementary schools.

6338. I take the two instances you have first given. Among the National schools, you are aware that there are a great number in connection with convents and monastic institutions, and held in buildings belonging to religious communities?—Yes.

6339. And you are aware that, in many such schools, a few Protestant children, among great numbers of Roman Catholics, may be attending on scholars. Do you consider these few Protestants, and many Roman Catholics, are fairly put down as "all receiving the benefits of united education"?—I do not.

6340. Do you think that such a united school, as I have mentioned, would satisfy the General Assembly, as a school for Presbyterian children?—At first the General Assembly did object to the adding of any schools of a religious character to the elementary system; but those schools are under the united government of the Board, and their school-books are all such as the Board has approved, and although they are not in full accord with the principles of united education, still they are under the inspection and government of the State; and if any child chooses to take advantage of them, that child is protected.

6341. But I must ask you to answer my question directly, and I therefore put it in this form. Do you, as the representative of the General Assembly, and a minister of the Presbyterian Church, approve of a Presbyterian child attending a convent school?—I do not think I should.

6342. Would your disapproval be affected by the fact that, although a convent school, it was made the National Board?—If there was a Presbyterian school and a convent school under the National Board, clearly the child would attend the Presbyterian school.

6343. Would attendance at the convent school be approved?—I do not know that the Church would take any active step.

6344. I ask you: would the Church approve?—I do not think it would approve of it.

6345. Now take your other instance—the Queen's Colleges. When you say the Presbyterian approves of the Queen's Colleges, have you any reason to suppose the Roman Catholics do?—They have expressed disapproval of them.

6346. Then that system does not command the confidence of all denominations?—It has been objected to, decidedly, by the Roman Catholics.

6347. You know the model schools under the National Board?—Yes.

6348. Those are schools in which they give a higher education than in the others?—Nothing higher, but they are a more efficient class of schools than the ordinary ones.

6349. And although more efficient, you are aware that those schools are also disapproved of by the Roman Catholics, and that their children have been wholly withdrawn from many of them?—Yes.

6350. What is the distinction between the model schools and the other schools of the Board, which has led to their being disapproved by the Roman Catholics?—The disapproval is based on the fact that they are the complete example of united education under the Board.

6351. Therefore we are to understand, that under the National system, which you cite as the proof, that united education may be made to command the confidence of all denominations, what most nearly approaches to a perfect example in the eyes of the General Assembly, is entirely disapproved of, and denounced, by the Roman Catholics?—They disapprove of it.

6352. And to such an extent that they withdraw their children from the most efficient of the State schools?—Yes; I understand so.

6353. Dr. Haire—You alluded to the Academic Institute in Belfast as approximating in some degree to your views?—Yes.

6354. What is the nature of that institution?—It is under a board of management, which is constituted from the presbytery of the school, and represents different denominations. There is no distinction of denominations.

6355. Are there any boarders there?—Yes.

6356. How are they managed?—The masters have boarders in their own houses.

6357. Of what denominations?—I could not say what denominations are at present attending.

6358. Are there Episcopalian and Presbyterian?—Episcopalian, Presbyterian, and Unitarian.

6359. Are there any Roman Catholics?—I do not know; I could not answer that question.

6360. The Protestants in attendance are all trained in different boarding houses?—I do not think they are definitely divided according to denominations; I should think that in some of the boarding houses there would be members of denominations different from the master, but I presume that generally speaking they are of the same denomination as the master. I am not acquainted with the facts of the case. It is with the general character of the school that I am acquainted.

6361. You seem to prefer having day schools to boarding-schools, in order to avoid the difficulty?—Yes.

6362. How would you do in country places, where it would be absolutely impossible to get a sufficient number?—They would stand towards those schools in precisely the same relation that they stand in now, as to the Belfast institution. They would go to the boarding house, and live under the care of whatever master their parents approve of.

6363. Then, as I understand, you would allow no portion of the endowment to be paid, except indirectly, for the purpose of the boarding school, and accordingly, the parent should pay the full price?—The arrangement would be simply this—the master would be paid a salary. If persons want to board, as at present, they would have to pay the master for their board. It would be quite an advantage that a portion of the funds, expended in exhibitions, should be available for the education of the boys in the school stage, and those exhibitions they could take in the boarding house to pay their expenses there.

6364. LOAN JEROME FRYSTON—But would not your plan break down, at the initial step of providing a building for them to live in, as I presume you would object to spending the money on the erection of the houses for residences?—That would be pressing the objection to an unreasonable extent.

6365. Then would you approve of the expenditure of State endowment on the erection of denominational seminaries?—I do not say that.

6366. MR. O'SHEA—But you object that the Endowed Schools as they at present stand—the Royal and Diocesan schools, which derived their money from the State—are virtually Episcopalian?—Yes.

6367. And the object which the Assembly would wish to carry out would be to make those endowments available for all denominations?—Certainly.

6368. You would like to see that done in a manner which would command the confidence of all sections of the community?—Yes.

6369. As I understand, you believe it to be impossible, in a united boarding school, to devise a plan by which those endowments will be so managed, under one roof, as to command the confidence of all sections of the community?—Under one roof, I think so.

6370. Going a little further, as I understand the scheme of establishing boarding houses for each religion—the Roman Catholic, the Presbyterian, and the Episcopal—would also fall to meet with the approval of the Assembly—to endorse a separate boarding-house for each of those religions?—I do not quite understand how that comes practically to endorsement of boarding houses. I should contemplate the payment of masters.

6371. Do you mean in the boarding houses?—The payment of masters whose business would be to carry on the teaching in the school.

6372. Do you mean in the common school?—I do.

6373. CHAIRMAN.—Is your idea that in each school there should be a Presbyterian master appointed by the governing body, and that he should have a boarding-house, as a private establishment?—Yes.

6374. But that he should get his salary, in respect of tuition, out of the endowment?—That is it precisely.

6375. Mr. O'BRIEN.—So far as the boarding-house goes, the Presbyterian Assembly, although it would approve of endowing the master, would disapprove of endowing a boarding school for Catholics, Protestants, or Presbyterians separately?—Yes; but allow me to say that the endowment of boarding houses would practically be accomplished through endowments given to boys, who might use them either in a private house or in the boarding house of the master.

6376. Then, as I understand, you would not object to the indirect endowment of those boarding houses, by prices given to the boys?—No, I would not.

6377. In point of fact, you would not object to the keepers of those denominational boarding houses being indirectly endowed, by being paid, by the boys, the sums which they had won as prizes?—No; the boys are perfectly free to spend the money.

6378. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Would not that plan give the endowment, intended for the purposes of teaching, to the boys who had already been richly taught to get prizes, leaving those who had not yet been educated without any means of getting the education necessary to enable them to win a share of the endowment?—That is not the conclusion to which, as it seems to me, the arrangement would lead. I do not know that there is, in those schools, such a large generous boarding of boys as would be implied in the difference you suggest.

6379. There is not much gratuitous boarding, but at present practically all the endowment, except so far as it is applied for the benefit of day-boys, goes in remuneration of the cost of boarding?—That endowment is the salary of the master.

6380. The whole endowment goes. Take Armagh school, for example. There is there £2,500 a year, which is all spent on the boarding school—in salaries, in buildings, &c.—and the Master tells us it reduces the cost £10 per head?—My suggestion reaches the practical result in this way:—The master receives his salary, and there is a building provided for the purposes of education. The boys attend, and make such payment as may be arranged by the managers of the system, who give such advantages in the way of prizes as they see fit. Those prizes, which the boys receive, they use for payment of their expenses in connection with the school, and in this way there would be an increasing amount of money passing into the hands of the masters, which would maintain the institution in a state of vigour.

6381. Mr. O'BRIEN.—That would be an indirect endowment of the boarding house which the master managed?—Every payment to boys, indirectly, an endowment of whoever ought to be at the expense of his education—say his father, or an endowment, if you like, of the master.

6382. Do many of your Presbyterian young men intend competing under the Intermediate Education Act?—Yes; a considerable number.

6383. You have got a good many Presbyterian schools, in the north of Ireland, about to compete under that Act?—Yes; a number of schools.

6384. Is it safe to say that all the intermediate schools, competent to try their chance under the Act, will do so?—I should think so.

6385. The Act therefore appears practically to find favour with Presbyterian schools?—Certainly; they will take all the advantage they can of it.

6386. Are there many endowed schools, among the intermediate Presbyterian schools, in the North?—Scarcely any.

6387. When I use the term "endowed," I mean, endowed with lands, or with money, payable, from land or otherwise, to the master. From your experience of the Episcopal Endowed Schools, do you think that those endowments have been productive of commensurate value?—I think they have not.

6388. Even to the Episcopal class who have used them?—As to that, I can scarcely offer an opinion; but I do think that they might have done, even for the members of the Episcopal Church, a great deal more than they have done.

6389. Do not you think that, assuming it is properly worked, the system of utilizing the endowments, created by the Intermediate Education Act, serves to stimulate both masters and boys, and is more likely to promote hard work and produce good results, than this direct endowment, such as we see in the Episcopal schools?—Yes, I think it will call forth a very great deal of work; but there is a grave defect. I think that it is, in many places, extremely difficult to maintain a school, with a sufficient staff of teachers, so the precious results which will be derivable from the Act.

6390. Apart from that difficulty, do you think that the system of giving the endowments, for the purpose of stimulating the boys and stimulating the masters by competition, is more likely to be effective, with the boys that come under it, than the system of direct endowment to the master?—If you make the alternative one or other, I say "yes," but I should think that still better would be a combination of the two—some permanent income not depending upon the varying results of attendance and teaching, and a sufficient amount, depending upon the actual work done, to create a stimulus.

6391. I am now comparing the two, and of the two, the one most likely to produce most work is, what we call, the present intermediate scheme?—Yes.

6392. You are aware that there is, on the part both of Protestants and Catholics in the community, a strong disposition to make use of boarding schools, and that Presbyterian, Protestant, and Catholic parents, residing in places where a day-school is an impossibility, are driven of necessity to send their children to boarding schools?—Yes.

6393. Do you not therefore think that boarding schools are, in the present state of our education, necessitated for the great body of the middle classes?—It is necessary that there should be places for boys to board in, in connection with these schools; but it is not necessary that there should be a school organized exclusively as a boarding school.

6394. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Does not that just come to this again, that if we adopt the views of the General Assembly, the endowment, unless it be indirectly done, is not to be given at all for boarding?—I would preserve the endowment, as I have already indicated, for the payment of his salary to the master who teaches, and, over and above that, allow the boarding to be carried on as between him and the parents of the children. Of course, the master would have the advantage, indirectly, of any prices which any of the boys under his charge should win.

6395. Mr. O'BRIEN.—These very Royal schools, which have now dwindled into mere boarding schools, were started as day-schools, but the boarding element has become predominant in them; and the same thing would happen again?—Scarcely so; I am not so clear as to that conclusion. My impression is this, that they have become boarding schools chiefly because they have been confined to one denomination. If they had been schools that in the past years were fully available for all denominations, they would have had a very considerable attendance of day boys, and the boarding establishment would never have predominated.

6395. Learn Justice Freethought—Is that opinion founded merely on speculation—because we have had the evidence of the masters, which is substantially to this effect—that substantially all the Presbyterian and Methodist, as well as Episcopalian boys who are to be found in the neighbourhood attend those schools; that there are Roman Catholics in some of them, but that there are very few in the positions where they are, and that, practically, they have got all the day-boys they could expect to get, except in one or two instances where there is a Roman Catholic day-school, which is attended by the Roman Catholic boys. Have you investigated the question whether the neighbourhood of the Royal schools would keep them supplied with day-boys?—I believe several of them are situated where it would not, but I do not think that the endowments ought to be so tied up to a locality as that they could not, at least in part, be used elsewhere. I think the choosing of the locality led in some of these cases almost necessarily to a distribution of the day-school.

6397. Then the change that you recommend—and we doubt rightly so—as the one which would give more general benefit, would involve the actual removal of the schools?—In some cases.

6398. Mr. O'Brian—Then, as I understand, the only plan you can suggest in the shape—we will not call it of boarding schools, but in the shape of the boarding system—is that there should be an endowment of a master, and that then there should be prizes, and that these should be endowments to the different masters of various schools to set up boarding-houses. You are aware that there has been no experience of such a system, and that, therefore, it rests merely in theory. Take the Belfast institution, how many boarding houses are there attached to that?—I know there are two, but I think there are three.

6399. Is each of these distinctly belonging to one creed?—I do not think that in those schools the distinction of creed is so exactly defined as that; but I should think that, in the main, the people boarding in any one house are of the same religious creed as the master of it.

6400. Do you happen to know what are the different religious creeds of the masters who have boarding-houses there?—The classical master is a Presbyterian.

6401. Do you know his boarding house?—I have never been there.

6402. Do you know whether his boarders are mainly Presbyterians?—I think they are.

6403. Who are the other masters?—I think the mathematical master has a boarding-house.

6404. Of what religion is he?—I think he is a Unitarian.

6405. Do you know whether the body of his boarders are Unitarians?—I really do not. I have not examined the facts as to the different divisions of the school, so that I can only give you a conjecture.

6406. Then the only experience you have of a school with boarding houses attached is the one in which, so far as you know, the results are sectarian, and you cannot speak as to the Unitarian house at all?—They are not sectarian in the sense of each school, being definitely attached to one denomination, or being unfavourably attended by one denomination.

6407. There is actually no example, for the system you suggested of a day-school, with boarding houses connected with it, attended by boys of one denomination?—I am not aware of it.

6408. At any rate, such a solution as that is the only one which you can suggest of bringing boys together under the boarding system?—Under the boarding system, that is all I can suggest.

6409. If that be so, what you think the main object is, after all, that these Royal and State endowments should be available for all denominations?—Yes.

6410. You have got a great many Presbyterian schools in the North that are still carried on, doing their duty without direct endowment?—Yes.

6411. We all know there are a large number of Roman Catholic schools, through the country, similarly circumstanced, and there are some Protestant ones that are practically without endowment. What would you think, then, of solving the difficulty, as we have gone into suggestions, by taking the State and Royal endowments, either in their quality of land or turning them into money, and having their income used as prizes, and compelled for in the same manner as the Intermediate fund is compelled for—do you think that would be a removal of the denominational character of these endowments?—I think there would be the one strong objection to that—that there is a great need for some permanent assistance to the school, distinct from what the Intermediate Education Act would afford.

6412. Is that your only objection?—That is my chief objection.

6413. Have you any other?—I cannot say that there is any other on the score of principle. If those funds were distributed in prizes to boys, I do not see that that would contravene any principle which has been advanced by the General Assembly.

6414. And whatever objections there may be on other grounds it would remove the denominational character of these endowments?—It would.

6415. Learn Justice Freethought—You have now referred, with approval, to the system of prizes under the Intermediate Education Act, as an indirect mode of endowment. In addition to the difficulty of forcing a boy to give up a prize he has won, is not that open to the objection that year boy must be taught, before you endow the teacher with the means of teaching him—that the boy, before he can get the prize, must be sufficiently educated to secure it, and, therefore, that the endowment is applied, not to create the product of education, but is, in fact, given to the finished article. Can you endow a school at all by giving prizes to the boy?—I do not think it is an endowment of a school, but the same objection precisely lies to the Intermediate Education scheme.

6416. Let us see whether it does or not. You know the difference between prizes and results fees?—Yes.

6417. Does your objection to endowments of denominational education apply to paying results fees to masters of denominational schools?—It does.

6418. I understood you to state, in Mr. O'Shaughnessy's speech, that the scheme of the Intermediate Education Act was approved of by the General Assembly?—No, the General Assembly object to the very point you have noticed—to the payment of results fees to denominational schools.

6419. Have you considered how the funds of the Intermediate Education Act are applied?—Yes.

6420. The endowment is one million sterling. The Act of Parliament entitled the Commissioners either to take this sum in rents, charges, which, I presume, they would have got at 2½ per cent per annum, producing, say, £250,000 a year; or to put it in the Government funds, producing, say, £31,500 a year. For some reason known to themselves, they have taken the Government Stock, reducing their gross income to £31,500 a year. Now, if you take the average results fee of £5, as payable for every scholar who passes in a certain number of subjects, and if even 4,000 scholars avail themselves of the Act, £20,000 a year will go in results fees; and allowing so little as £5,000 for expenses of management, salaries, and other matters, you will have but little over £5,000 left to go in prizes. When you say that you and the General Assembly approve of the system of the Intermediate Education Act, of which I am glad to hear your Presbyterian scholars are prepared to avail themselves so vigorously, is it present to your mind that, upon the arithmetic, only one-sixth of the endowment is applicable to prizes, and two-thirds to the payment of results fees to denominational schools?—You must have misunderstood me, as I did not mean to express approval in that way.

6421. We must get this clear, for I understood Mr. O'Shaughnessy to ask you, whether you thought that an application of the endowments of the Royal and other schools, similar to that of the funds under the Intermediate Act, would meet the approval of the General Assembly. I want to know whether it would or not.—That was not the question I understood Mr. O'Shaughnessy to ask.

Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—I did not point to results here.

6422. LORD JUSTICE FITZGERALD.—Now that I have pointed out that the results first see the substantial part of the whole thing, would a similar arrangement, with regard to the Endowed schools, meet the approval of the Presbyterians?—My answer would be that it would not. The General Assembly expressly objected to the payment of results fees to denominational schools.

6423. And equally to the endowment, in any other form, of denominational schools?—Yes.
